THE STATESMAN'S YEARBOOK
2004

Statesmen are but men; and more than in any other calling, they embody the defects of their merits. The imperious leader who appears to dictate the future is at the mercy of unpredictable events and the impersonal forces of history; at the mercy too of the hesitations and doubts of those he has to trust to carry out his commands. On the other hand, the sagacious, rational conciliators see their humane plans swept aside by crude demagogues, and are unable, precisely because they appeal to reason, to defeat the emotional slogans of opponents who know how to play on the prejudice of their compatriots.

ISO COUNTRY CODES

Below is a list of the codes of sovereign states produced by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO). There has been widespread use of these ISO codes as TLDs ('top level domains') in Internet applications (used in lower case), managed by the Internet Assigned Numbers Association (IANA), to denote 'national' domains in addition to the common TLDs such as '.com' and '.org'. There are some IANA codes used in preference to the above on the Internet (eg. '.uk' rather than '.gb').

ARMENIA. Parliamentary elections were held on 25 May. The Republican Party of Armenia (HHK) won 23 of the 131 seats, ahead of Justice with 14, Rule of Law Country with 12 and the Armenian Revolutionary Federation with 11.

AUSTRALIA. Governor-General Peter Hollingworth stood down from 11 May but refused to resign after he was accused of mishandling a child abuse scandal in his time as Archbishop of Brisbane. He had also been investigated over a rape claim from the 1960s. The case was subsequently dismissed. Sir Guy Green, Governor of Tasmania, took over the duties of Governor-General. Hollingworth resigned on 25 May.

BENIN. After their election to parliament which precludes them from government office, Foreign Minister Antoine Kolawolé Idji and Interior Minister Daniel Tawéma were replaced by Pierre Osho and Joseph Gnonlonfoun as acting ministers on 20 May.

CANADA. In Quebec's provincial elections on 14 April, Jean Charest's Liberal Party won 76 of the 125 Assembly seats with 45·9% of the vote. The Parti Québécois won 45 seats (33·2%) and the Action Démocratique won 4 seats (18·3%). Charest was sworn in as Premier on 29 April.

CHAD. Abderahman Moussa became Interior Minister on 6 May.

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO. Abdoulaye Yerodia Ndombasi, a former minister, was named on 21 April as the first of four Deputy Presidents to President Joseph Kabila as part of a two-year transitional government. Jean-Pierre Bemba, the leader of the Congolese Liberation Movement (MLC), was named on 24 April. Arthur Zahidi Ngoma, of the non-military opposition, was nominated on 3 May but was rejected by other opposition elements which have nominated Etienne Tsishekedi wa Mulumba of the Union for Democracy and Social Progress (UDPS). The RCD-Goma rebel group nominated its secretary-general, Azarias Ruberwa, on 7 May.

Protestant Bishop Marini Bodo was appointed Senate President on 8 May.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC. On 26 March Foreign Minister Hugo Tolentino Dipp resigned and was succeeded by Frank Guerrero Prats. Finance Minister José Lois Malkum was replaced by Rafael Calderón.

EUROPEAN UNION. On 26 May the European Union began publishing its draft constitution. Proposals included an elected president and foreign affairs minister, common foreign and security policies, closer integration of judicial and social security systems and the establishment of a single legal status for the EU. Other provisions included a charter of fundamental human rights and the election by the European Parliament of a president of a reduced European Commission. The plans were subject to ratification by each member state and, if accepted, would come into force after the EU expansion of 2004. European Commission President Romano Prodi described the document as lacking vision.

GEORGIA. President Vladislav Ardzinba of separatist Abkhazia appointed Raul Khadjimba as Prime Minister on 22 April.

GERMANY. Elections were held in Bremen on 25 May. The Social Democratic Party won 40 of the 83 seats with 42·3% of the vote, the Christian Democratic Union 29 seats (29·9%), the Greens 12 seats (12·8%), the Free Democratic Party

1 seat (4·2%) and the German People's Union also 1 seat (2·3%). The Partei Rechtsstaatlicher Offensive took 4·3% of the vote but won no seats. Turn-out was 61·4%.

GHANA. A cabinet reshuffle on 1 April saw the Foreign Minister Hackman Owusu-Agyeman become Interior Minister. He was replaced by Nana Akufo-Addo.

GIBRALTAR. Sir Francis Richards, KCMG CVO, was sworn in as Governor on 27 May.

GUINEA-BISSAU. On 19 April Fernando Correia Landim was appointed Interior Minister. On 23 April Filomena Mascarenhas Tipote was made Defence Minister.

INDIA. On 2 May the following state G*overnors* were appointed: Gujarat, Kailashpati Mishra; Himachal Pradesh, Vishnu Sadashiv Kokje; Jammu and Kashmir, S. K. Sinha; Madhya Pradesh, Ram Prakash Gupta; Punjab, Om Prakash Verma; and Rajasthan, Nirmal Chandra Jain.

On 13 May the following Governors were transferred: Vinod Chandra Pande (Bihar) to Arunachal Pradesh; M. Rama Jois (Jharkhand) to Bihar; Krishna Mohan Seth (Tripura) to Chhattisgarh; Ved Prakash Marwah (Manipur) to Jharkhand; Arvind Dave (Arunachal Pradesh) to Manipur; and Dinesh Nandan Sahaya (Chhattisgarh) to Tripura.

KIRIBATI. The first of two rounds of parliamentary elections took place on 9 May. A third round will elect a president. President Teburoro Tito was re-elected in Feb. but lost a no-confidence vote on 28 March. The Council of State, chaired by Tion Otang, will govern until the next government is formed.

LEBANON. Prime Minister Rafiq al-Hariri was re-appointed on 16 April having resigned the previous day. On 17 April Jean Obeid was named Foreign Minister in place of Mahmoud Hammoud, who became Defence Minister.

LITHUANIA. Interior Minister Juozas Bernatonis resigned on 24 April. He was replaced with Virgilijus Vladislovas Bulovas.

A referendum was held on 10 and 11 May. Approximately 91% of voters approved accession to the European Union. Turn-out was approximately 63%.

NAURU. Parliamentary elections took place on 3 May. 15 non-partisans and three members of the Nauru First party were elected. Speaker Godfrey Thoma resigned on 7 May one day after his appointment.

HAS NATO A FUTURE?

Alyson Bailes, Director of SIPRI and former British ambassador to Finland, charts the possible ways forward.

NATO has survived more supposedly fatal blows than Rasputin. Even so, the years 2001–03 have given it a bumpier ride than most people can remember from any time in modern history.

The dramatic invocation of Article 5 of the Washington Treaty in support of the USA on 12 September 2001, the day after the Al-Qaeda attacks, turned sour in retrospect when the USA failed to ask for any follow-up. Nevertheless, NATO persevered in 2002 with the effort to adapt itself to the new security challenges preoccupying the USA in particular. At the November Prague Summit the Alliance invited seven new Central European members to join, while avoiding damage (contrary to expectations) to the NATO/Russia partnership. It agreed on a streamlined command structure, a new Response Force and a new tightly-focused Capabilities Commitment, and adopted policy documents underlining that these instruments were designed (inter alia) to give NATO a potential role in the world-wide fight against terrorism. To crown the annus mirabilis, a political blockage involving Greece and Turkey, which had prevented NATO and the European Union from collaborating as they were meant to do in the development of the new EU military capacity for crisis management, was lifted in December. Yet hardly had 2003 begun than the Alliance was thrown back in turmoil by a vicious split between France, Belgium and Germany on one side and the US and other members on the other regarding contingency planning to protect Turkey in the event of fall-out from possible military action against Iraq.

As often in the past, this chain of events has exposed the mutual dependence between NATO and the course of US/European relations more generally. The last couple of years have been a time of serious strain in the latter. Not only have differences emerged, quite soon after the attacks of September 11, on the most effective way to suppress and defend against terrorism; not only have the US and some leading Europeans been at odds over the use of military force to stop weapons of mass destruction proliferation in Iraq and elsewhere; but the two sides of the Atlantic have at least temporarily lost their consensus over handling such global issues as climate change, population control and the International Criminal Court. During the twentieth century when Euro-Atlantic relations were tense elsewhere—for instance, over trade—NATO was often able to correct the balance by demonstrating Atlantic unity over issues even more critical for life and death. In present circumstances, NATO is arguably failing to function either as the principal arena for debate over new security challenges, or as a kind of corrective ballast for the turbulence arising. This should not simply be blamed on a lack of concrete NATO achievement. The problem is rather that success in the agenda of the Cold War and the 1990s tends to be already filed as 'completed business', while it is still hard to be sure that the instruments NATO is preparing for the new age will be (in material terms) usable or (for political reasons) used.

It is natural in these conditions to question whether NATO has a future and if so, in what shape and role. The considerations involved are extremely complex but may be separated into two groups. First, what are the prospects for NATO's success in its inherited agenda—the refinement of military capability for crisis-busting, the improvement of burden sharing between the full Alliance and Europe, and the consolidation of stability and partnership to the East? Is success on these fronts sufficient to satisfy all players, notably the US, that the Alliance is earning its keep (and justifying the resources devoted) in the new circumstances? If not—and we may already hint that the answer is No—a second set of questions comes into play about the role that NATO can play as a forum for re-building consensus across the Atlantic on the new global security agenda, and/or as a tool-box for pursuing joint action on an agenda perhaps pieced together elsewhere.

The adaptation of NATO's military plans and potential is an unfinished agenda dating back to the end of the Cold War. During the latter, most Allies were organized primarily to defend their own territory in Europe, with only the US, UK and Canada having a significant part of their troops stationed abroad in peace-time (and reinforcement duties in war). In spite of the 'flexible response' doctrine, the Alliance's conventional forces were never expected to do the whole job anyway because they were backed by nuclear weapons. With the shift of prevailing demands during the 1990s towards active conflict management, and now in the 2000s to intervention in other parts of the world, the context for military planning has radically changed. Countries are judged by how much capability they can 'export' to foreign fields, how quickly they can get it there and how well they sustain it. Both the men and machines involved have to be adaptable, multi-functional, tough, self-sufficient and 'interoperable' to a degree formerly expected only from NATO elites. As a further complication, and in contrast to NATO's former multi-national forces, a national contingent will never know in advance with whom it may need to operate and under whose command. New-style intervention tasks are essentially voluntary, and are likely to draw—for both technical and political reasons—on a different 'coalition' of states each time.

Operations in the Balkans during the 1990s showed that NATO could not only cope with such tasks, but achieve a level of convincing military superiority—a 'hardness'—in doing them which no other institution could match. Ironically, however, these and other real-life preoccupations slowed down the pace of systemic change in NATO's doctrines and structures, so that a scheme (Combined Joint Task Forces) devised in 1994 for creating suitable command headquarters for coalition-based interventions was still incomplete by the century's end. Meanwhile, some nations like the US, UK and France had re-styled their own forces and equipment programmes to meet the needs of overseas deployments, while others had not. European Allies' defence spending was not only uneven, and often too low, but also ill-coordinated so that while spending in total some 60% of what the US spent the Europeans got only a fraction of the same 'bang for the buck'. The results were exposed at several points in the Balkan campaigns, notably during the bombing phase of the action over Kosovo where an overwhelming share of the air-power required had to be supplied by the US.

The Prague Summit decisions of end-2002 are NATO's most determined effort yet to dictate a transformation that actually has some chance of being carried out. The new Capabilities Commitment (PCC) tells each ally exactly what it must do to raise the quality of its assets earmarked for actions abroad, but it deliberately concentrates on these assets alone and on just four dimensions of their suitability. Meanwhile, the new NATO Response Force (NRF) is designed to intervene quickly but also finish its task quickly, leaving less capable units (and possibly other nations) to take over. It would take 20,000 men at most of which the majority could come from larger nations, allowing smaller ones to make specialized 'niche' contributions. Experts seem to agree that these are good prescriptions and capable of being fulfilled within the couple of years' deadline given—if all countries do what they are told. The main doubts remain over whether the more sluggish Europeans can squeeze out more resources even for such narrow targets: but also, over whether the US will be ready in any real emergency to place its crack troops in an NRF framework with all the institutional checks and disciplines involved. One may also wonder how far Europeans' performance will slip in those areas of their defence not spotlighted by the PCC and NRF. The famous 'capabilities gap'—a difference both in technological levels and fighting techniques—between the Americans and Europe may be papered over within the NRF, but can only yawn wider across the field of defence as a whole.

Since the Helsinki Summit decisions of December 1999 there has been another organization in Europe goading European States to improve their capabilities for military deployments abroad: the European Union. The EU's 'Common European Security and Defence Policy' (CESDP) aims to create a joint capacity for military crisis management tasks, ranging from military-assisted evacuations to the tougher end of the 'peace enforcement' spectrum. Since it does not involve guaranteed common defence, all the EU's members including four non-members of NATO can take part equally. The CESDP sprang from a British-French initiative in which Britain was particularly keen to find another lever to boost its neighbours' defence output; Britain and France were both interested in having a self-led option for the use of European forces especially in situations mainly affecting Europeans' interests, or playing to their comparative advantages; and France was also following a long-term dream of an autonomous European defence as an alternative (or successor) to NATO. Since Helsinki, the EU has set up politico-military and military institutions to run the new policy and has worked to develop its civilian intervention capabilities in parallel. One of the scheme's main features, however—the possibility for the EU to draw upon planning services and command structures from NATO, thus avoiding duplication—could not be activated until the end of 2002 due to the Greek/Turkish blockages mentioned earlier.

At the time of writing, the EU has its first collective police deployment under way in Bosnia, is preparing to take over a peace-keeping mission from NATO in Macedonia, and has its sights on bringing the SFOR military operation in Bosnia under an EU flag. On the face of it, this is just the kind of new burden-sharing which the CESDP was meant to achieve, offering the scope inter alia for NATO to focus more on the 'harder' new operational challenges outside Europe. There are, however, worries beneath the surface that the EU may be biting off more than it can chew in the still fragile state of the Balkans. Others question whether it is wise for the Europeans to hasten the withdrawal of US elements from these missions while there seems to be so little other guarantee of trans-Atlantic togetherness in defence. Beyond these specifics, there are deeper ambiguities in the NATO/CESDP relationship that are hard to banish because so much depends on the point of view. A united European defence community can be seen as a stronger pillar for NATO or as a divisive caucus within it. Equally serious conundrums apply to the place of CESDP within the EU's overall integrative enterprise. Do all the EU's members really share a common vision of what their community's strategic interests are and when and how they should contemplate using force to defend them? Can even a fragmentary common defence policy exist without a true common foreign policy, and hasn't the basis for the latter been further weakened by the latest flagrant divisions over Iraq?

Since 1989/90 there has been relative unity among all NATO members on the Alliance's new opportunity, and duty, to spread its own values of security and democracy eastward in Europe through the medium both of enlargement and partnership. During the 1990s, NATO's Partnership for Peace (later supplemented by the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council) provided the framework both for training up and assessing prospective new members, and for pursuing stabilization and reform with those not ready or willing to join. The main difficulty lay in Russia-NATO relations, which at times grew very tense—leading at one point e.g. to a Russian boycott of PFP—due to Russia's antagonism to enlargement, but also to disagreements over the Balkans. Against this background, the Alliance's double achievement in 2002 was truly remarkable. Not only were seven new Central European members accepted for membership in 2004, but Russia quietly drew back from its former opposition and instead accepted a new format for the NATO/Russian Council, permitting a significant amount of decision-taking 'at 20'.

If NATO's self-congratulation over this feat was muted, this was not only a reflection of long-term worries that such large expansion might 'dilute' and or overstretch the Alliance. Such concerns had been somewhat blunted, by 2002, not just by the (political) reliability of the first three Central Europeans admitted in 1999, but also by the continuing strategic shifts that made the direct military contribution and 'defensibility' of new members less relevant. The problem is rather that, as hinted at above, the strategic absorption of the eastern half of Europe is the type of achievement that gets discounted as soon as (or even before) it is complete. Ironically, the less challenging the issues of European security are seen to be, the stronger the temptation for the US to shift its resources elsewhere. The trouble is that this may be, at the least, somewhat premature: conflict may be dead within Central Europe proper but democracy, including democratic defence, is a still fragile new growth. One thing that might shake it is a perception among the new allies that NATO's guarantees and values are not as solid as they seemed, or not worth the price paid to win them—which is precisely the impression left with many by the latest intra-allied spats. On top of this comes the challenge of trying to spread stability further to the areas beyond NATO's new borders where traditions of democracy and cooperation are weaker and conflict still very much alive: and on top of this comes the conundrum of Russia. President Putin's choice of rapprochement with NATO seems to be based on solid pragmatic reasoning, and to some degree also on a genuine perception of shared threats (notably terrorism). It is, however, very much a policy of the leadership rather than of the nation as a whole and is not yet backed by any significant assimilation of Russian military planning and behaviour (or indeed, Russian security behaviour in general) to western norms. Precisely because Putin's vision is a realist one, he may lose interest in cooperating with NATO—and care less about provoking it—if he sees the Alliance as starting to decline both in unity and authority. In short, NATO has problems when it looks too strong to Moscow, but also when it looks too weak.

Even if NATO could be confident of completing its military transformation, achieving fruitful symbiosis with the EU and consolidating its new eastern territories and partnerships, it would not even have started to make its mark on the issues that really matter for the US today. For some time, but especially since 9/11, US policy has seen its main challenges in those 'asymmetrical' threats that bypass traditional security structures, elude deterrence and strike at American lives even on American territory: terrorism, the spread of mass destruction weapons, and the growing arsenals and unfathomable agendas of dictators in 'rogue' States. Feeling itself so directly at risk, the administration of President Bush has been guided also by its political philosophy to adopt a forward and active stance. The US's declared strategy now proclaims that the US has and intends to maintain unrivalled power and has the will to use it on its own authority against patent threats—pre-emptively, if need be. A very difficult challenge for NATO flows from these developments, at two levels. First, in general terms the new US strategy leaves less room for alliances, attributing value to them only where they can provide backing for the US's policies and added value for its actions. Secondly, the things that the US would like to obtain from the Alliance in accord with this logic are all quite difficult for NATO to give. As a matter of observation there is no complete consensus among the 19 allies on what terrorism is or how to combat it, and even to the extent that common lines of policy development are agreed, NATO has not the right tools and competences (as compared, e.g., with the UN and EU) to execute them. Similarly on weapons of mass destruction, the relevant international legal instruments, inspection capabilities, export controls, and political sticks and carrots needed to tackle the problem all lie somewhere else than NATO. One issue of truly direct relevance, the development of missile defence shields in Europe as well as the US, was put firmly back on the NATO agenda at Prague but other WMD-related initiatives there were on a very modest scale.

What NATO does have, and aspires to develop further, are force capabilities that could be used with and in support of US forces in military actions to strike at terrorist and WMD-related targets, in 'rogue States' and elsewhere. The development of NATO doctrine in 2002 allows for such use in principle, by linking capabilities' development with 'new' as well as 'old' threats to Allied interests, and by implicitly dropping the previous geographical limitation on actions under a NATO flag. The trouble is, as suggested above, that making such capacities more useable is no guarantee that they will be used. The upheaval caused in NATO by an attempt to gear up Alliance assets for a purpose even indirectly related to a US strike on Iraq makes clear how serious the obstacles are, on both sides. The other members of NATO are uncertain and divided over the political and legal justification for using military force against 'new threats', and generally question whether NATO can do this on its own say-so. The US for its part seems increasingly impatient of acting within the harness of multilateral organizations and legal mandates, and is unlikely to pick up a NATO instrument unless it comes easily to the hand and without strings. This is why some Europeans suspect that their elite capacities identified and trained for the NRF are more likely to be 'cherry-picked' by the US for use under its own leadership in ad hoc coalitions.

Two different ways could be imagined for NATO to respond to these problems. One would be to tackle them head-on at the highest political level, by making the Alliance once more a forum for thrashing out fundamental US/European differences over the meaning of security, threat, and legitimate defence, and reaching out for a new consensus. There are just two problems about this, the first being that consensus could prove elusive and the baring of US/European divisions might then simply deepen the rift beyond healing. A more practical objection is that the essence of today's US/European arguments concerns not European security but world governance, including some completely non-defence challenges like how to handle climate change and population growth: NATO is too narrow a forum to operate both functionally and to negotiate anything like a comprehensive settlement. An alternative approach would be for NATO, as in certain kinds of therapy, to build up confidence by doing things and achieving a string of successes, however modest, that prove its added value in the new environment. One such test would be for NATO to make a good job of providing support to international peace-keepers in Afghanistan, where agreement has now been reached that it should co-ordinate the ISAF force directly after the next rotation. This would leave further options open, for NATO to go on building its image and capacity as a 'tool-box' for executing decisions made elsewhere, or for it to come back and tackle the big 'strategy' debate at some later point from a foundation of renewed solidarity. But given the depth of some Europeans' resistance to any overtly NATO-led operation outside Europe, even this step-by-step approach has real obstacles to overcome.

In NATO's history so far, the only regular feature has been the unpredictable. The organization's political, inter-governmental, non-legalistic character makes it ultimately frailer than the European Union but also far more flexible. Dramatic shifts in aim and structure have been made several times, with success, provided only that the US and leading Europeans knew what they wanted. That could still happen today, as both sides move on from their current antagonisms or try to compensate for them. Perhaps the main difference now is that NATO's fate depends more on the re-balancing of other relationships—the US and Europe in world forums, the US/Europe/Russia triangle, European unity in the EU—than any of these relationships can rely on salvation by NATO.

Alyson Bailes has been Director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, SIPRI, since July 2002. She spent 33 years in the British Diplomatic Service including postings to Budapest, Bonn, Beijing, Oslo and the UK Delegation to NATO, and culminating in an appointment as HM Ambassador at Helsinki. During sabbaticals she has also worked in the UK Ministry of Defence, for the European Union and Western European Union, and for think-tanks in London and New York. She is known mainly as a writer on issues of European and Atlantic security policy, Central Europe and Nordic affairs. SIPRI was founded in 1966 as an independent international institute for research into problems of peace and conflict, especially those of arms control and disarmament. Its current main fields of research are data collection and analysis on military expenditure and armaments; arms control, export controls and non-proliferation; and trends in Euro-Atlantic and regional security.

THE UNITED NATIONS (UN)

Origin and Aims. The United Nations is an association of states which have pledged themselves to maintain international peace and security and co-operate in solving international political, economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems towards achieving this end. The name 'United Nations' was devised by United States President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was first used in the Declaration by United Nations of 1 Jan. 1942, during the Second World War, when representatives of 26 nations pledged their Governments to continue fighting together against the Axis Powers.

The United Nations Charter, the constituting instrument of the UN, was drawn up by the representatives of 50 countries at the United Nations Conference on International Organization, which met in San Francisco from 25 April to 26 June 1945. Those delegates deliberated on the basis of proposals worked out by the representatives of China, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States at Dumbarton Oaks (Washington, D.C.) from 21 Aug. to 28 Sept. 1944. The Charter was signed on 26 June 1945 by the representatives of the 50 countries. Poland, which was not represented at the Conference, signed it later and became one of the original 51 member states. Nothing contained in the Charter authorizes the organization to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state.

The United Nations officially came into existence on 24 Oct. 1945, with the deposit of the requisite number of ratifications of the Charter with the US Department of State. United Nations Day is celebrated on 24 Oct. each year.

Today, 80% of the UN's work is devoted to helping developing countries build the capacity to help themselves. This includes promoting the creation of independent and democratic societies, which it is hoped will offer vital support for the Charter's goals in the 21st century; the protection of human rights; saving children from starvation and disease; providing relief assistance to refugees and disaster victims; countering global crime, drugs and disease; and assisting countries devastated by war and the long-term threat of landmines.

Members. New member states are admitted by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council. The Charter provides for the suspension or expulsion of a member for violation of its principles, but no such action has ever been taken. It has 191 member states. (For a list of these, see below.)

Finance. Assessments on member states constitute the main source of funds. These are in accordance with a scale specified by the Assembly, and determined primarily by the country's share of the world economy and ability to pay, in the range 22%–0·001%. The Organization is prohibited by law from borrowing from commercial institutions.

A Working Group on the Financial Situation of the United Nations was established in 1994 to address the long-standing financial crisis which has come about because of the non-payment of assessed dues by many member states, severely threatening the Organization's ability to fulfil its mandates. As of 31 Dec. 2002 member states owed the UN a total of US$1,684m., of which the USA owed US$738m. (43·8%). Total debts outstanding to the UN regular budget as of 31 Dec. 2002 were US$304·8m., of which the USA's share was US$190·3m. (62·4%).

Official languages. Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish.

Structure. The UN has six principal organs established by the founding Charter. All have their headquarters in New York except the International Court of Justice, which has its seat in The Hague. These core bodies work through dozens of related agencies, operational programmes and funds, and through special agreements with separate, autonomous, intergovernmental agencies, known as Specialized Agencies, in order to provide an increasingly cohesive programme of action in the fields of peace and security, justice and human rights, humanitarian assistance, and social and economic development. The six principal UN organs are as follows:

1. The General Assembly, composed of all members, is the main deliberative body; each member has one vote. It meets once a year, commencing on the first Tuesday following 1 Sept., and the general debate is organized over a period of two weeks, beginning the 3rd week of Sept. (The 57th Session opened on 10 Sept. 2002.)

At the start of each session, the Assembly elects a new President, 21 vice-presidents and the chairmen of its six main committees, listed below. To ensure equitable geographical representation, the presidency of the Assembly rotates each year among the five geographical groups of states: African, Asian, Eastern European, Latin American and the Caribbean, and Western European and other States. Special sessions may be convoked by the Secretary-General if requested by the Security Council, by a majority of members, or by one member if the majority of the members concur. Emergency sessions may be called within 24 hours at the request of the Security Council on the vote of any nine Council members, or a majority of United Nations members, or one member if the majority of members concur. Decisions on important questions, such as peace and security, new membership and budgetary matters, require a two-thirds majority; other questions require a simple majority of members present and voting.

The work of the General Assembly is divided between six Main Committees, on which every member state is represented. These are: Disarmament and International Security Committee (First Committee); Economic and Financial Committee (Second Committee); Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee (Third Committee); Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee); Administrative and Budgetary Committee (Fifth Committee); Legal Committee (Sixth Committee).

There is also a General Committee charged with the task of co-ordinating the proceedings of the Assembly and its Committees, and a Credentials Committee. The General Committee consists of 28 members: the president and 21 vice-presidents of the General Assembly and the chairmen of the six main committees. The Credentials Committee consists of nine members appointed by the Assembly on the proposal of the President at each session. In addition, the Assembly has two standing committees—an Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and a Committee on Contributions; and may establish subsidiary and ad hoc bodies when necessary to deal with specific matters. These include: Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations (100 members), Human Rights Committee (18 members), Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (65 members), Conciliation Commission for Palestine (3 members), Conference on Disarmament (66 members), International Law Commission (34 members), Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (21 members), Special Committee on the Situation with Regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (24 members), and Commission on International Trade Law (36 members).

The General Assembly has the right to discuss any matters within the scope of the Charter and, with the exception of any situation or dispute on the agenda of the Security Council, may make recommendations on any such questions or matters. Occupying a central position in the UN, the Assembly receives reports from other organs, admits new members, directs activities for development, sets policies and determines programmes for the Secretariat, appoints the Secretary-General, who reports annually to it on the work of the Organization, and approves the UN budget.

Under the ‘Uniting For Peace’ resolution adopted by the General Assembly in Nov. 1950, the Assembly is also empowered to take action if the Security Council, because of a lack of unanimity of its permanent members, fails to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in any case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace or act of aggression. In this event, the General Assembly may consider the matter immediately with a view to making appropriate recommendations to members for collective measures, including, in the case of a breach of the peace or act of aggression, the use of armed force when necessary, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

2. The Security Council has primary responsibility, under the Charter, for the maintenance of international peace and security. It is so organized as to be able to function continuously. A representative of each of its members must be present at all times at UN Headquarters, but it may meet elsewhere as best facilitates its work.

The Presidency of the Council rotates monthly, according to the English alphabetical order of members' names. The Council consists of 15 members: five permanent and ten non-permanent elected for a two-year term by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly. Each member has one vote. Retiring members are not eligible for immediate re-election. Any other member of the United Nations may participate without a vote in the discussion of questions specially affecting its interests.

Decisions on procedural questions are made by an affirmative vote of at least nine members. On all other matters, the affirmative vote of nine members must include the concurring votes of all permanent members (subject to the provision that when the Council is considering methods for the peaceful settlement of a dispute, parties to the dispute abstain from voting). Consequently, a negative vote from a permanent member has the power of veto, and all five permanent members have exercised this right at one time or other. If a permanent member does not support a decision but does not wish to veto it, it may abstain. Under the Charter, the Security Council alone has the power to take decisions which member states are obligated to carry out.

The Council has two standing committees—the Committee of Experts on Rules of Procedure and the Committee on the Admission of New Members. It may establish ad hoc committees and commissions, such as the Committee on Council Meetings away from Headquarters.

When a threat to peace is brought before the Council, it may undertake mediation and set out principles for a settlement, and may take measures to enforce its decisions by ceasefire directives, economic sanctions, peacekeeping missions, or in some cases, by collective military action. For the maintenance of international peace and security, the Council can, in accordance with special agreements to be concluded, call on the armed forces, assistance and facilities of the member states. It is assisted by a Military Staff Committee consisting of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Council or their representatives.

The Council also makes recommendations to the Assembly on the appointment of the Secretary-General and, with the Assembly, elects the judges of the International Court.

In Nov. 2002 the Security Council adopted Resolution 1441, holding Iraq in 'material breach' of disarmament obligations. Weapons inspectors under the leadership of Hans Blix (Sweden) returned to Iraq four years after their last inspections, but US and British suspicion that the Iraq regime was failing to comply led to increasing tension, resulting in the USA, the UK and Spain declaring that they reserved the right to disarm Iraq without the need for a further Security Council resolution. Other Security Council members, notably China, France, Germany and Russia, opposed the proposed action, resulting in a major split in the Security Council. On 20 March 2003 US forces, supported by the UK, launched attacks on Iraq, and initiated a war aimed at bringing an end to Saddam Hussein's rule.

Non-Permanent Members. Bulgaria, Cameroon, Guinea, Mexico and Syria (until 31 Dec. 2003); Angola, Chile, Germany, Pakistan and Spain (until 31 Dec. 2004).

Finance. The budget for UN peacekeeping operations in 2002–03 was US$2·6bn. The estimated total cost of operations between 1948 and 2002 was US$26bn. In Dec. 2002 outstanding contributions to peacekeeping totalled US$1·3bn.

3. The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) is responsible under the General Assembly for co-ordinating the functions of the UN with regard to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters. The year-round work of the Council is carried out by related organizations, specialized agencies, and subsidiary bodies, commissions and committees, which meet regularly and report back to it.

It consists of 54 member states elected by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly for a three-year term. Members are elected according to the following geographic distribution: Africa, 14 members; Asia, 11; Eastern Europe, 6; Latin America and Caribbean, 10; Western Europe and other States, 13. A third of the members retire each year. Retiring members are eligible for immediate re-election. Each member has one vote. Decisions are made by a majority of the members present and voting.

The Council holds one five-week substantive session a year, alternating between New York and Geneva, and one organizational session in New York. The substantive session includes a high-level meeting attended by Ministers, to discuss economic and social issues. Special sessions may be held if required. The President is elected for one year and is eligible for immediate re-election.

The subsidiary machinery of ECOSOC is as follows:

Nine Functional Commissions. Statistical Commission; Commission on Population and Development; Commission for Social Development; Commission on Human Rights (and Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities); Commission on the Status of Women; Commission on Narcotic Drugs (and Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East); Commission on Science and Technology for Development; Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice; Commission on Sustainable Development.

Five Regional Economic Commissions. ECA (Economic Commission for Africa, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia); ESCAP (Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, Bangkok, Thailand); ECE (Economic Commission for Europe, Geneva); ECLAC (Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, Santiago, Chile); ESCWA (Economic Commission for Western Asia, Beirut, Lebanon).

Nine Standing Committees and Subsidiary Expert Bodies. Committee for Programme and Co-ordination; Commission on Human Settlements; Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations; Committee on Natural Resources; Committee for Development Planning; Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; Committee on New and Renewable Sources of Energy and on Energy for Development; Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Co-operation in Tax Matters; Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods.

Other related operational programmes, funds and special bodies, which report to ECOSOC (and/or the General Assembly) include: the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR); United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD); United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and Population Fund (UNFPA); United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP); World Food Programme (WFP); International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW); United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (ODC).

In addition, the Council may make arrangements for consultation with international non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and, after consultation with the member concerned, with national organizations. There are over 1,600 non-governmental organizations which have consultative status with the Council. Non-governmental organizations may send observers to the Council's public meetings and those of its subsidiary bodies, and may submit written statements relevant to its work. They may also consult with the UN Secretariat on matters of mutual concern. The term of office of the members listed below expires on 31 Dec. of the year mentioned after the country.

Members. Andorra (2003), Argentina (2003), Australia (2004), Azerbaijan (2005), Benin (2005), Bhutan (2004), Brazil (2003), Burundi (2004), Chile (2004), China (2004), Congo, Republic of (2005), Cuba (2005), Ecuador (2005), Egypt (2003), El Salvador (2004), Ethiopia (2003), Finland (2004), France (2005), Georgia (2003), Germany (2005), Ghana (2004), Greece (2005), Guatemala (2004), Hungary (2004), India (2004), Iran (2003), Ireland (2005), Italy (2003), Jamaica (2005), Japan (2005), Kenya (2005), South Korea (2003), Libya (2004), Malaysia (2005), Mozambique (2005), Nepal (2003), Netherlands (2003), Nicaragua (2005), Nigeria (2003), Pakistan (2003), Peru (2003), Portugal (2005), Qatar (2004), Romania (2003), Russia (2004), Saudi Arabia (2005), Senegal (2005), South Africa (2003), Sweden (2004), Uganda (2003), Ukraine (2004), United Kingdom (2004), USA (2003), Zimbabwe (2004).

Finance. In 2000, US$6,450m. in socio-economic development assistance grants was provided through the organizations of the UN system.

4. The Trusteeship Council was established to ensure that Governments responsible for administering Trust Territories take adequate steps to prepare them for self-government or independence. It consists of five permanent members of the Security Council. The task of decolonization was completed in 1994, when the Security Council terminated the Trusteeship Agreement for the last of the original UN Trusteeships (Palau), administered by the USA. All Trust Territories attained self-government or independence either as separate States or by joining neighbouring independent countries. The Council formally suspended operations on 1 Nov. 1994 following Palau's independence. By a resolution adopted on 25 May 1994 the Council amended its rules of procedure to drop the obligation to meet annually and agreed to meet as occasion required.

The proposal from UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan, in the second part of his reform programme, in July 1997, is that it should be used as a forum to exercise their 'trusteeship' for the global commons, environment and resource systems.

Members. China, France, Russia, UK, USA.

5. The International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the UN. It has a dual role: to settle in accordance with international law the legal disputes submitted to it by States; and to give advisory opinion on legal questions referred to it by duly authorized international organs and agencies.

It operates under a Statute, which is an integral part of the United Nations Charter. Only States may apply to and appear before the Court. The Member States of the United Nations (at present numbering 191) are so entitled. The Court is composed of 15 judges, each of a different nationality elected with an absolute majority to nine-year terms of office by both the General Assembly and the Security Council. The composition of the Court must also reflect the main forms of civilization and principal legal systems of the world. Elections are held every three years for one-third of the seats, and retiring judges may be re-elected. Members do not represent their respective governments but sit as independent magistrates in the Court, and must possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or be jurists of recognized competence in international law.

Candidates are nominated by the national panels of jurists in the Permanent Court of Arbitration established by the Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907. The Court elects its own President and Vice-President for a three-year term, and is permanently in session.

Decisions are taken by a majority of judges present, subject to a quorum of nine members, with the President having a casting vote. Judgement is final and without appeal, but a revision may be applied for within ten years from the date of the judgement on the ground of a new decisive factor. When the Court does not include a judge possessing the nationality of a State party to a case, that State has the right to appoint a person to sit as judge ad hoc for that case, on equal terms with Members.

While the Court normally sits in plenary session, it can form chambers of three or more judges to deal with specific matters. Judgements by chambers are considered as rendered by the full Court. In 1993, in view of the global expansion of environmental law and protection, the Court formed a seven-member Chamber for Environmental Matters.

Judges. The nine-year terms of office of the judges currently serving end on 5 Feb. of the year indicated next to their name: Shi Jiuyong, President (China) (2012), Raymond Ranjeva, Vice-President (Madagascar) (2009), Gilbert Guillaume (France) (2009), Abdul G. Koroma (Sierra Leone) (2012), Vladlen S. Vereshchetin (Russian Federation) (2006), Rosalyn Higgins (UK) (2009), Gonzalo Parra-Aranguren (Venezuela) (2009), Pieter H. Kooijmans (Netherlands) (2006), José F. Rezek (Brazil) (2006), Awn Shawkat Al-Khasawneh (Jordan) (2009), Thomas Buergenthal (USA) (2006), Nabil Elaraby (Egypt) (2006), Hishashi Owada (Japan) (2012), Bruno Simma (Germany) (2012), Peter Tomka (Slovakia) (2012).

Competence and Jurisdiction. In contentious cases, only States may apply to or appear before the Court, which is open only to parties to its Statute, which automatically includes all Members of the UN. The conditions under which the Court will be open to other states are laid down by the Security Council. The jurisdiction of the Court covers all matters which parties refer to it, and all matters provided for in the Charter or in treaties and conventions in force. Disputes concerning the jurisdiction of the Court are settled by the Court's own decision. The Court may apply in its decision:

(a) international conventions;

(b) international custom;

(c) the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;

(d) as subsidiary means for the determination of the rules of law, judicial decisions and the teachings of highly qualified publicists. If the parties agree, the Court may decide a case ex aequo et bono.

Since 1946 the Court has delivered 76 judgments on disputes concerning inter alia land frontiers and maritime boundaries, territorial sovereignty, the non-use of force, non-interference in the internal affairs of States, diplomatic relations, hostage-taking, the right of asylum, nationality, guardianship, rights of passage and economic rights.

The Court may also give advisory opinions on legal questions to the General Assembly, the Security Council, certain other organs of the UN and 16 specialized agencies of the UN family.

Since 1946 the Court has given 24 advisory opinions, concerning inter alia admission to United Nations membership, reparation for injuries suffered in the service of the United Nations, territorial status of South-West Africa (Namibia) and Western Sahara, judgements rendered by international administrative tribunals, expenses of certain United Nations operations, the applicability of the United Nations Headquarters Agreement, the status of human rights informers and the threat or use of nuclear weapons.

Finance. The expenses of the Court are borne by the UN. No court fees are paid by parties to the Statute.

6. The Secretariat services the other five organs of the UN, administering their programmes and carrying out the Organization's day-to-day work with its increasingly streamlined staff of some 8,900 at the UN Headquarters in New York and all over the world.

At its head is the Secretary-General, appointed by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council for a five-year, renewable term. The Secretary-General acts as chief administrative officer in all meetings of the General Assembly, Security Council, Economic and Social Council and Trusteeship Council. An Office of Internal Oversight, established in 1994 under the tenure of former Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali (Egypt), pursues a cost-saving mandate to investigate and eliminate waste, fraud and mismanagement within the system. The Secretary-General is assisted by Under-Secretaries-General and Assistant Secretaries-General. A new appointment of Deputy Secretary-General was agreed in principle by the General Assembly in 1997 and was announced in Jan. 1998.

Finance. The financial year coincides with the calendar year. The budget for the two-year period 2002–03 is US$2,890,818,700, compared to US$2,533,125,400 in 2000–01.

UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

On 10 Dec. 1948 the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted and proclaimed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Preamble

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief and freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of the common people,

Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations,

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have in the Charter reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas Member States have pledged themselves to achieve, in co-operation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Whereas a common understanding of these rights and freedoms is of the greatest importance for the full realization of this pledge,

Now, Therefore THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY proclaims THIS UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.

Article 1. All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Article 2. Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3. Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 6. Everyone has the right to recognition everywhere as a person before the law.

Article 7. All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law. All are entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this Declaration and against any incitement to such discrimination.

Article 8. Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the constitution or by law.

Article 9. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.

Article 10. Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him.

Article 11. (1) Everyone charged with a penal offence has the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law in a public trial at which he has had all the guarantees necessary for his defence.

(2) No one shall be held guilty of any penal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a penal offence, under national or international law, at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the penal offence was committed.

Article 12. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence, nor to attacks upon his honour and reputation. Everyone has the right to the protection of the law against such interference or attacks.

Article 13. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each state.

(2) Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country.

Article 14. (1) Everyone has the right to seek and enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution.

(2) This right may not be invoked in the case of prosecutions genuinely arising from non-political crimes or from acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 15. (1) Everyone has the right to a nationality.

(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality nor denied the right to change his nationality.

Article 16. (1) Men and women of full age, without any limitation due to race, nationality or religion, have the right to marry and to found a family. They are entitled to equal rights as to marriage, during marriage and at its dissolution.

(2) Marriage shall be entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

(3) The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

Article 17. (1) Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others.

(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property.

Article 18. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

Article 19. Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

Article 20. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association.

(2) No one may be compelled to belong to an association.

Article 21. (1) Everyone has the right to take part in the government of his country, directly or through freely chosen representatives.

(2) Everyone has the right of equal access to public service in his country.

(3) The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this will shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.

Article 22. Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security and is entitled to realization, through national effort and international co-operation and in accordance with the organization and resources of the State, of the economic, social and cultural rights indispensable for his dignity and the free development of his personality.

Article 23. (1) Everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favourable conditions of and to protection against unemployment.

(2) Everyone, without any discrimination, has the right to equal pay for equal work.

(3) Everyone who works has the right to just and favourable remuneration ensuring for himself and his family an existence worthy of human dignity, and supplemented, if necessary, by other means of social protection.

(4) Everyone has the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.

Article 24. Everyone has the right to rest and leisure, including reasonable limitation of working hours and periodic holidays with pay.

Article 25. (1) Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control.

(2) Motherhood and childhood are entitled to special care and assistance. All children, whether born in or out of wedlock, shall enjoy the same social protection.

Article 26. (1) Everyone has the right to education. Education shall be free, at least in the elementary and fundamental stages. Elementary education shall be compulsory. Technical and professional education shall be made generally available and higher education shall be equally accessible to all on the basis of merit.

(2) Education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. It shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups, and shall further the activities of the United Nations for the maintenance of peace.

(3) Parents have a prior right to choose the kind of education that shall be given to their children.

Article 27. (1) Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.

(2) Everyone has the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from any scientific, literary or artistic production of which he is the author.

Article 28. Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realized.

Article 29. (1) Everyone has duties to the community in which alone the free and full development of his personality is possible.

(2) In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to such limitations as are determined by law solely for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others and of meeting the just requirements of morality, public order and the general welfare in a democratic society.

(3) These rights and freedoms may in no case be exercised contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 30. Nothing in this Declaration may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE WINNERS: 1978–2002

When the scientist, industrialist and inventor Alfred Nobel died in 1896, he made provision in his will for his fortune to be used for prizes in Physics, Chemistry, Physiology or Medicine, Literature and Peace. A prize for Economics was added later. The Norwegian Nobel Committee awards the Nobel Peace Prize, and the Nobel Foundation in Stockholm (founded 1900; Mailing address: Box 5232, SE-10245, Stockholm, Sweden) awards the other five prizes. The Prize Awarding Ceremony takes place on 10 Dec., the anniversary of Nobel's death. The last 25 recipients of the Nobel Peace Prize, worth 10m. Sw. kr. in 2002, are:

2002 – Jimmy Carter (USA) for his decades of untiring effort to find peaceful solutions to international conflicts, to advance democracy and human rights, and to promote economic and social development.

2001 – the United Nations and Kofi Annan for a better organized and more peaceful world.

2000 – Kim Dae-jung for his work for democracy and human rights in South Korea and in East Asia in general, and for peace and reconciliation with North Korea in particular.

1999 – Médecins Sans Frontières (Doctors Without Borders) in recognition of the organization's pioneering humanitarian work on several continents.

1998 – John Hume and David Trimble for their efforts to find a peaceful solution to the conflict in Northern Ireland.

1997 – ICBL (International Campaign to Ban Landmines) and Jody Williams for their work for the banning and clearing of anti-personnel mines.

1996 – Carlos Felipe Ximenes Belo and José Ramos-Horta for their work towards a just and peaceful solution to the conflict in East Timor.

1995 – Joseph Rotblat and the Pugwash Conferences on Science and World Affairs for their efforts to diminish the part played by nuclear arms in international politics and eventually to eliminate such arms.

1994 – Yasser Arafat (Chairman of the Executive Committee of the PLO, President of the Palestinian National Authority), Shimon Peres (Foreign Minister of Israel) and Yitzhak Rabin (Prime Minister of Israel) for their efforts to create peace in the Middle East.

1993 – Nelson Mandela (Leader of the ANC) and Fredrik Willem De Klerk (President of the Republic of South Africa).

1992 – Rigoberta Menchú Tum (Guatemala) for his campaign work for human rights, especially for indigenous peoples.

1991 – Aung San Suu Kyi (Myanmar), opposition leader and human rights advocate.

1990 – Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev (president of the USSR) for helping bring the Cold War to an end.

1989 – The 14th Dalai Lama (Tenzin Gyatso) for his religious and political leadership of the Tibetan people.

1988 – The United Nations Peace-Keeping Forces.

1986 – Elie Wiesel (USA), author and humanitarian.

1985 – International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, Boston, USA.

1984 – Desmond Mpilo Tutu (South Africa, Bishop of Johannesburg) for his work against apartheid.

1983 – Lech Wałęsa (Poland), founder of Solidarity and human rights campaigner.

1982 – Alva Myrdal (Sweden) and Alfonso García Robles (Mexico) for their work as delegates to the United Nations General Assembly on Disarmament.

1981 – Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Geneva, Switzerland.

1980 – Adolfo Pérez Esquivel (Argentina), human rights leader.

1979 – Mother Teresa (India), leader of the Order of the Missionaries of Charity.

1978 – Mohammad Anwar Al-Sadat (President of Egypt) and Menachem Begin (Prime Minister of Israel) for jointly negotiating peace between Egypt and Israel.

UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

Operational Programmes and Funds. The total operating expenses for the entire UN system, including the World Bank, IMF and all the UN funds, programmes and specialized agencies, come to US$18,200m. a year. Some 53,300 people work in the UN system, which includes the Secretariat and 28 other organizations.

Social and economic development, aimed at achieving a better life for people everywhere, is a major part of the UN system of organizations. In the forefront of efforts to bring about such progress is the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the world's largest agency for multilateral technical and pre-investment co-operation. It is the funding source for most of the technical assistance provided for sustainable human development by the UN system, and in 2000 helped people in 174 countries and territories, supporting some 5,000 projects, which focus on poverty elimination, environmental regeneration, job creation and the advancement of women.

UNDP assistance is provided only at the request of governments and in response to their priority needs, integrated into overall national and regional plans. Its activities are funded mainly by voluntary contributions outside the regular UN budget. 87% of the UNDP's core programme funds go to countries with an annual per capita GNP of US$750 or less, which are home to 90% of the world's poorest peoples. Headquartered in New York, the UNDP is governed by a 36-member Executive Board, representing both developing and developed countries.

Administrator: Mark Malloch Brown (UK).

UN development programmes include the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). It was established in 1946 by the United Nations General Assembly as the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, to meet the emergency needs of children of post-war Europe. Guided by the Convention on the Rights of the Child, UNICEF supports community-based programmes in immunization, nutrition, education, HIV/AIDS, water supply, environmental sanitation, gender issues and development, and child protection in more than 160 countries and territories. In 2001, with the assistance of UNICEF, WHO and other key partners, a record 575m. children were vaccinated against polio. UNICEF is the largest supplier of vaccines to developing countries, providing 40% of the world's doses of vaccine for children. UNICEF also provides relief and rehabilitation assistance in emergencies.

UNICEF served as the substantive secretariat for the UN General Assembly Special Session on Children held in New York from 8–10 May 2002, and supported a wide range of consultations and events around the world to ensure that children and young people had a voice in the process and in the Session itself. The Special Session adopted the outcome document, 'A World Fit For Children', setting 21 concrete time-bound goals for children on four key priorities: promoting healthy lives; providing quality education for all; protecting children against abuse, exploitation and violence; and combating HIV/AIDS. Over 400 young delegates participated in the Children's Forum and unanimously agreed to a message calling for a world fit for children that was delivered to world leaders at the Special Session.

UNICEF's work from 2002 to 2005 focuses on: girls' education; early childhood development; immunization 'plus' (strengthening health systems and outreach); HIV/AIDS; improved protection of children against violence, exploitation and abuse.

Executive Director: Carol Bellamy (USA).

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) was established in 1969 and is the world's largest multilateral source of population assistance. About a quarter of all population assistance from donor nations to developing countries is channeled through UNFPA. The fund extends assistance to developing countries at their request to help them address reproductive health and population issues, and raises awareness of these issues in all countries.

In 2000 UNFPA provided assistance to 142 developing nations, with special emphasis on increasing the quality of reproductive health services, ending the gender discriminations and violence, formulating effective population policies and reducing the spread of HIV/AIDS.

UNFPA's three main areas of work are: to help ensure universal access to reproductive health, including family planning and sexual health, to all couples and individuals on or before the year 2015; to support population and development strategies that enable capacity-building in population programming; to promote awareness of population and development issues, and to advocate for the mobilization of the resources and political will necessary to accomplish its area of work. UNFPA's The State of World Population report is published annually.

Executive Director: Thoraya Obaid (Saudi Arabia).

The UN Environment Programme (UNEP), established in 1972, works to encourage sustainable development through sound environmental practices everywhere. UNEP has its headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya and other offices in Paris, Geneva, Bangkok, Washington, D.C., New York, Osaka, Manama and Mexico City. Its activities cover a wide range of issues, from atmosphere and terrestrial ecosystems, to the promotion of environmental science and information, to an early warning and emergency response capacity to deal with environmental disasters and emergencies. UNEP's present priorities include: environmental information, assessment and research; enhanced coordination of environmental conventions and development of policy instruments; fresh water; technology transfer and industry; and support to Africa. Information networks and monitoring systems established by the UNEP include: the Global Environment Information Exchange Network (INFOTERRA); Global Resource Information Database (GRID); the International Register of Potentially Toxic Chemicals (IRPTC); and the recent UNEP.net, a web-based interactive catalogue and multifaceted portal that offers access to environmentally relevant geographic, textual and pictoral information. In June 2000 the World Conservation and Monitoring Centre (WCMC) based in Cambridge, UK became UNEP's key biodiversity assessment centre. UNEP's latest state-of-the-environment report is the Global Environment Outlook 3 (GEO-3).

Executive Director: Klaus Töpfer (Germany).

Other UN programmes working for development include: the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), which promotes international trade, particularly by developing countries, in an attempt to increase their participation in the global economy; and the World Food Programme (WFP), the world's largest international food aid organization, which is dedicated to both emergency relief and development programmes.

The UN Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), which assists over 600m. people living in health-threatening housing conditions, was established in 1978. The 58-member UN Commission on Human Settlements (UNCHS), Habitat's governing body, meets every two years. The Centre serves as the focal point for human settlements action and the co-ordination of activities within the UN system.

In addition to its regular programmes, the UNDP administers various special-purpose funds, such as the UN Capital Development Fund (UNCDP), a multilateral donor agency working to develop new solutions for poverty reduction in the least developed countries, the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) and the UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), whose mission is the empowerment of women and gender equality in all levels of development planning and practice. Its three areas of immediate concern are: strengthening women's economic capacity; engendering governance and leadership; and promoting women's rights. Together with the World Bank and UNEP, the UNDP is one of the managing partners of the Global Environment Facility (GEF), a US$2,000m. fund to help countries translate global concerns into national action so as to help fight ozone depletion, global warming, loss of biodiversity and pollution of international waters.

The United Nations Development Programme is active in 166 countries. At country level, it is responsible for all UN development activity. The head of each country office acts as Resident Co-ordinator for UNDP.

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (ODC) educates the world about the dangers of drug abuse; strengthens international action against drug production, trafficking and drug related crime; promotes efforts to reduce drug abuse, particularly among the young and vulnerable; builds local, national and international partnership to address drug issues; provides information, analysis and expertise on the drug issue; promotes international co-operation in crime prevention and control; supports the development of criminal justice systems; and assists member states in addressing the challenges and threats posed by the changing nature of transnational organized crime.

Executive Director: Antonio Maria Costa (Italy).

The UN work in crime prevention and criminal justice aims to lessen the human and material costs of crime and its impact on socio-economic development. The UN Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders has convened every five years since 1955 and provides a forum for the presentation of policies and progress. The Tenth Crime Congress (Vienna, 2000) discussed how to promote the rule of law and to strengthen the criminal justice system and also international co-operation in combating transnational organized crime. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, a functional body of ECOSOC, established in 1992, seeks to strengthen UN activities in the field, and meets annually in Vienna. The interregional research and training arm of the UN crime and criminal justice programme is the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) in Rome. An autonomous body, it seeks through action-oriented research to contribute to the formulation of improved policies in crime prevention and control.

Humanitarian assistance to refugees and victims of natural and man-made disasters is also an important function of the UN system. The main refugee organizations within the system are the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).

UNHCR, created in 1951, was charged primarily with resettling 1·2m. European refugees left homeless in the aftermath of the Second World War. It was initially envisioned as a temporary office with a projected lifespan of three years. Today, with some 19·8m. persons of concern in over 150 countries, it has become one of the world's principal humanitarian agencies. Its Executive Committee currently comprises 61 member states. With its Headquarters in Geneva, UNHCR has around 5,000 staff working through offices in 114 countries across the globe, and has twice been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. The High Commissioner is elected by the UN General Assembly, to which he reports annually through ECOSOC.

The work of UNHCR is humanitarian and non-political. International protection is its primary function. Its main objective is to promote and safeguard the rights and interests of refugees. In so doing UNHCR devotes special attention to promoting a generous policy of asylum on the part of Governments and seeks to improve the legal status of refugees in their country of residence. Crucial to this status is the principle of non-refoulement, which prohibits the expulsion from or forcible return of refugees to a country where they may have reason to fear persecution. UNHCR pursues its objectives in the field of protection by encouraging the conclusion of intergovernmental legal instruments in favour of refugees, by supervising the implementation of their provisions and by encouraging Governments to adopt legislation and administrative procedures for the benefit of refugees. UNHCR is often called upon to provide material assistance (e.g. the provision of food, shelter, medical care and essential supplies) while durable solutions are being sought. Durable solutions generally take one of three forms: voluntary repatriation, local integration or resettlement in another country.

UNHCR works in tandem with governmental and non-governmental organizations, and within the UN framework its closest partnership is with the World Food Programme (WFP). Other partners include UNICEF, WHO, UNDP, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the International Organization for Migration (IOM), the Red Cross Movement Institutions (ICRC and IFRC), and many non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Office also liaises closely with the IMF, the World Bank and affiliated institutions, particularly in helping refugees to rebuild their lives and communities once they have returned home. At present, UNHCR is funded almost entirely by voluntary contributions. In 2002 UNHCR's expenditure amounted to approximately US$1bn.

High Commissioner: Ruud Lubbers (Netherlands).

UNRWA was created by the General Assembly in 1949 as a temporary, non-political agency to provide relief to the nearly 750,000 people who became refugees as a result of the disturbances during and after the creation of the State of Israel in the former British Mandate territory of Palestine. 'Palestine refugees', as defined by UNRWA's mandate, are persons or descendants of persons whose normal residence was Palestine for at least two years prior to the 1948 conflict and who, as a result of the conflict, lost their homes and means of livelihood. UNRWA has also been called upon to help persons displaced by renewed hostilities in the Middle East in 1967. The situation of Palestine refugees in south Lebanon, affected in the aftermath of the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon, was of special concern to the Agency in 1984. UNRWA provides education, health, relief and social services to eligible refugees among the 3·7m. registered Palestine refugees in its five fields of operation: Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Its mandate is renewed at intervals by the UN General Assembly, and has most recently been extended until 30 June 2005. The projected budget for 2002 was US$279·3m., funded entirely by donor countries.

Commissioner-General: Peter Hansen (Denmark).

The UN's activities in the field of human rights are the primary responsibility of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, a post established in 1993 under the direction and authority of the Secretary-General and currently held by Sergio Vieira de Mello (Brazil). The High Commissioner is nominated by the Secretary-General for a four-year term, renewable once. The principal co-ordinating human rights organ of the UN is the Commission on Human Rights, set up by ECOSOC in 1946. It has 53 members elected for three-year terms, meets for six weeks in Geneva each year, and is aided in its task by a Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, composed of 26 experts from all over the world. The implementation of international human rights treaties is monitored by six committees (also called treaty bodies): the Human Rights Committee; the Committee against Torture; Committee on the Rights of the Child; Committee on Economic, Cultural and Social Rights; Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination; Committee on Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

Training and Research Institutes. There are six training and research institutes within the UN, all of them autonomous.

United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR). Established in 1965 to enhance the effectiveness of the UN in achieving its major objectives. Recently, its focus has shifted to training, with basic research being conducted only if extra-budgetary funds can be made available. Training is provided at various levels for agencies and institutions of UN member states, diplomatic personnel, universities, public interest groups and the private sector. By mid-2000 almost 47,000 participants from 200 countries had attended UNITAR courses, seminars or workshops.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR). Established in 1980 to undertake research on disarmament and security with the aim of assisting the international community in their disarmament thinking, decisions and efforts. Through its research projects, publications, small meetings and expert networks, UNIDIR promotes creative thinking and dialogue on both current and future security issues, through examination of topics as varied as tactical nuclear weapons, refugee security, computer welfare, regional confidence-building measures and small arms.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD). Established in 1963 to conduct multidisciplinary research into the social dimensions of contemporary problems affecting development, it aims to provide governments, development agencies, grassroots organizations and scholars with a better understanding of how development policies and processes of economic, social and environmental change affect different social groups.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). Established by ECOSOC and endorsed by the General Assembly in 1976, INSTRAW provides training, conducts research, and collects and disseminates information to promote gender equality and stimulate and assist women’s advancement. Its 11-member Board of Trustees, which reports to ECOSOC, meets annually to review its programme and to formulate the principles and guidelines for INSTRAW’s activities.

Address: POB 21747, Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

United Nations University (UNU). Sponsored jointly by the UN and UNESCO, UNU is guaranteed academic freedom by a charter approved by the General Assembly in 1973. It is governed by a 28-member Council of scholars and scientists, of whom 24 are appointed by the Secretary-General of the UN and the Director-General of UNESCO. Unlike a traditional university with a campus, students and faculty, it works through networks of collaborating institutions and individuals to undertake multidisciplinary research on problems of human survival, development and welfare; and to strengthen research and training capabilities in developing countries. It also provides postgraduate fellowships and PhD internships to scholars and scientists from developing countries. The University focuses its work within two programme areas: peace and governance, and environment and sustainable development.

Address: 53–70 Jingumae 5-chome, Shibuya-ku, Tokyo 150-8925, Japan.

University for Peace. Founded in 1980 to conduct research on, inter alia, disarmament, mediation, the resolution of conflicts, preservation of the environment, international relations, peace education and human rights.

Address: POB 138, Ciudad Colon, Costa Rica.

Information. The UN Statistics Division in New York provides a wide range of statistical outputs and services for producers and users of statistics worldwide, facilitating national and international policy formulation, implementation and monitoring. It produces printed publications of statistics and statistical methods in the fields of international merchandise trade, national accounts, demography and population, gender, industry, energy, environment, human settlements and disability, as well as general statistics compendiums including the Statistical Yearbook and World Statistics Pocketbook. Many of its databases are available on CD-ROM, diskette, magnetic tape and the Internet.

SPECIALIZED AGENCIES OF THE UN

The intergovernmental agencies related to the UN by special agreements are separate autonomous organizations which work with the UN and each other through the co-ordinating machinery of the Economic and Social Council. 18 of them are 'Specialized Agencies' within the terms of the UN Charter, and report annually to ECOSOC.

FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION OF THE UNITED NATIONS (FAO)

Origin. In 1943 the International Conference on Food and Agriculture, at Hot Springs, Virginia, set up an Interim Commission, based in Washington, with a remit to establish an organization. Its Constitution was signed on 16 Oct. 1945 in Quebec City. Today, membership totals 183 countries. The European Union was made a member as a 'regional economic integration organization' in 1991.

Aims and Activities. The aims of FAO are to raise levels of nutrition and standards of living; to improve the production and distribution of all food and agricultural products from farms, forests and fisheries; to improve the living conditions of rural populations; and, by these means, to eliminate hunger. Its priority objectives are to encourage sustainable agriculture and rural development as part of a long-term strategy for the conservation and management of natural resources; and to ensure the availability of adequate food supplies, by maximizing stability in the flow of supplies and securing access to food by the poor.

In carrying out these aims, FAO promotes investment in agriculture, better soil and water management, improved yields of crops and livestock, agricultural research and the transfer of technology to developing countries; and encourages the conservation of natural resources and rational use of fertilizers and pesticides; the development and sustainable utilization of marine and inland fisheries; the sustainable management of forest resources and the combating of animal disease. Technical assistance is provided in all of these fields, and in nutrition, agricultural engineering, agrarian reform, development communications, remote sensing for climate and vegetation, and the prevention of post-harvest food losses. In addition, FAO works to maintain global biodiversity with the emphasis on the genetic diversity of crop plants and domesticated animals; and plays a major role in the collection, analysis and dissemination of information on agricultural production and commodities. Finally, FAO acts as a neutral forum for the discussion of issues, and advises governments on policy, through international conferences like the 1996 World Food Summit in Rome and the World Food Summit: five years later, held in Rome in 2002.

Special FAO programmes help countries prepare for, and provide relief in the event of, emergency food situations, in particular through the setting up of food reserves. The Special Programme for Food Security, launched in 1994, is designed to assist target countries to increase food production and productivity as rapidly as possible, primarily through the widespread adoption by farmers of available improved production technologies, with the emphasis on high-potential areas. FAO provides support for the global co-ordination of the programme and helps attract funds. The Emergency Prevention System for Transboundary Animal and Plant Pests and Diseases (EMPRES), established in 1994, strengthens FAO's existing contribution to the prevention, control and eradication of diseases and pests before they compromise food security, with locusts and rinderpest among its priorities. The Global Information and Early Warning System (GIEWS) provides current information on the world food situation and identifies countries threatened by shortages to guide potential donors. The interagency Food Insecurity and Vulnerability Information and Mapping System initiative (FIVIMS) was established in 1997, with FAO as its secretariat. More than 60 countries have nominated national focal points to co-ordinate efforts to collect and use statistics related to food insecurity more efficiently. Together with the UN, FAO sponsors the World Food Programme (WFP).

Finance. The budget for the 2002–03 biennium is US$651·8m. FAO's Regular Programme budget, financed by contributions from member governments, covers the cost of its secretariat and Technical Co-operation Programme (TCP), and part of the costs of several special programmes.

FAO continues to provide technical advice and support through its field programmes in all areas of food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. In the 2000–01 biennium, expenditures in the field totalled US$687·2m., of which US$325·3m. went to FAO's emergency assistance programme and US$361·9m. was spent on development and technical support. The programme was funded from FAO's regular budget, trust funds and the UN Development Programme. In addition, during 2000–01, 90 projects prepared with the FAO Investment Centre's assistance were approved for financing for total investments of US$3·7bn., including support loans from financing institutions of US$2·5bn.

Organization. The FAO Conference, composed of all members, meets every other year to determine policy and approve the FAO's budget and programme. The 49-member Council, elected by the Conference, serves as FAO's governing body between conference sessions. Much of its work is carried out by dozens of regional or specialist commissions, such as the Asia-Pacific Fishery Commission, the European Commission on Agriculture and the Commission on Plant Genetic Resources. The Director-General is elected for a renewable six-year term.

INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT (IBRD) — THE WORLD BANK

Origin. Conceived at the UN Monetary and Financial Conference at Bretton Woods (New Hampshire, USA) in July 1944, the IBRD, frequently called the World Bank, began operations in June 1946, its purpose being to provide funds, policy guidance and technical assistance to facilitate economic development in its poorer member countries. The Group comprises four other organizations (see below).

Activities. The Bank obtains its funds from the following sources: capital paid in by member countries; sales of its own securities; sales of parts of its loans; repayments; and net earnings. A resolution of the Board of Governors of 27 April 1988 provides that the paid-in portion of the shares authorized to be subscribed under it will be 3%.

The Bank is self-supporting, raising most of its money on the world's financial markets. In the fiscal year ending 30 June 2002 it achieved a net income of US$2,778m. Income totalled US$7,876m. and expenditure US$5,952m.

In the fiscal year 2002 the Bank lent US$11·5bn. for 96 new operations in 40 countries. Cumulative lending had totalled US$371bn. by March 2003. 89% of borrowers took advantage of the new single-currency loans which became available in June 1996 to provide borrowers with the flexibility to select IBRD loan terms that are consistent with their debt-managing strategy and suited to their debt-servicing capacity. In order to eliminate wasteful overlapping of development assistance and to ensure that the funds available are used to the best possible effect, the Bank has organized consortia or consultative groups of aid-giving nations for many countries. These include Bangladesh, Belarus, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Egypt, Ethiopia, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, Macedonia, Malaŵi, Mauritania, Moldova, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Peru, Romania, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, the [Palestinian] West Bank and Gaza Strip, Zambia, Zimbabwe and the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development.

For the purposes of its analytical and operational work, in 2000 the IBRD characterized economies as follows: low income (average annual per capita gross national income of $755 or less); lower middle income (between $756 and $2,995); upper middle income (between $2,996 and $9,265); and high income ($9,266 or more).

A wide variety of technical assistance is at the core of IBRD's activities. It acts as executing agency for a number of pre-investment surveys financed by the UN Development Programme. Resident missions have been established in 64 developing member countries and there are regional offices for East and West Africa, the Baltic States and South-East Asia which assist in the preparation and implementation of projects. The Bank maintains a staff college, the Economic Development Institute in Washington, D.C., for senior officials of member countries.

The Strategic Compact. Unanimously approved by the Executive Board in March 1997, the Strategic Compact set out a plan for fundamental reform to make the Bank more effective in delivering its regional programme and in achieving its basic mission of reducing poverty. Decentralizing the Bank's relationships with borrower countries is central to the reforms. The effectiveness of devolved country management and the bank's promotion of good governance and anti-corruption measures to developing countries are likely to be key policies of the new strategy.

Organization. As of March 2002 the Bank had 183 members, each with voting power in the institution, based on shareholding which in turn is based on a country's economic growth. The president is selected by the Bank's Board of Executive Directors. The Articles of Agreement do not specify the nationality of the president but by custom the US Executive Director makes a nomination, and by a long-standing, informal agreement, the president is a US national (while the managing director of the IMF is European). The initial term is five years, with a second of five years or less.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (IDA)

A lending agency established in 1960 and administered by the IBRD to provide assistance on concessional terms to the poorest developing countries. Its resources consist of subscriptions and general replenishments from its more industrialized and developed members, special contributions, and transfers from the net earnings of IBRD. Officers and staff of the IBRD serve concurrently as officers and staff of the IDA at the World Bank headquarters.

In fiscal year 2002 disbursements totalled US$6,603m. for 813 operations. Pakistan was the single largest recipient of disbursements from adjustment lending.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE CORPORATION (IFC)

Established in July 1956 to help strengthen the private sector in developing countries, through the provision of long-term loans, equity investments, guarantees, standby financing, risk management and quasi-equity instruments such as subordinated loans, preferred stock and income notes. It helps to finance new ventures and assist established enterprises to expand, improve or diversify, and provides a variety of advisory services to public and private sector clients. To be eligible for financing, projects must be profitable for investors, must benefit the economy of the country concerned, and must comply with IFC's environmental guidelines.

About 80% of its funds are borrowed from the international financial markets through public bond issues or private placements, 20% from the IBRD. Its authorized capital is US$2,450m.; total capital at 30 June 2002 was US$6,304m. IFC committed US$3·9bn. in total financing in 2001 and committed 205 new projects in 75 developing countries. It has 175 members.

MULTILATERAL INVESTMENT GUARANTEE AGENCY (MIGA)

Established in 1988 to encourage the flow of foreign direct investment to, and among, developing member countries, MIGA is the insurance arm of the World Bank. It provides investors with investment guarantees against non-commercial risk, such as expropriation and war, and gives advice to governments on improving climate for foreign investment. It may insure up to 90% of an investment, with a current limit of US$50m. per project. In March 1999 the Council of Governors adopted a resolution for a capital increase for the Agency of approximately US$850m. In addition US$150m. was transferred to MIGA by the World Bank as operating capital. By Dec. 2002 it had 160 member countries and a further 11 countries in the process of fulfilling membership requirements. It is located at the World Bank headquarters (see above).

Headquarters: 1818 H Street, NW, Washington, D.C., 20433, USA.

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR SETTLEMENT OF INVESTMENT DISPUTES (ICSID)

Founded in 1966 to promote increased flows of international investment by providing facilities for the conciliation and arbitration of disputes between governments and foreign investors. It does not engage in such conciliation or arbitration. This is the task of conciliators and arbitrators appointed by the contracting parties, or as otherwise provided for in the Convention. Recourse to conciliation and arbitration by members is entirely voluntary.

In March 2003 its Convention had been signed by 153 countries. 72 cases had been concluded by it and 45 were pending. Disputes involved a variety of investment sectors: agriculture, banking, construction, energy, health, industrial, mining and tourism.

ICSID also undertakes research, publishing and advisory activities in the field of foreign investment law. Like IDA, IFC and MIGA, it is located at the World Bank headquarters in Washington (see above).

Secretary-General: Kaarina Pohto (Finland).

INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION ORGANIZATION (ICAO)

Origin. The Convention providing for the establishment of the ICAO was drawn up by the International Civil Aviation Conference held in Chicago in 1944. A Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization (PICAO) operated for 20 months until the formal establishment of ICAO on 4 April 1947. The Convention on International Civil Aviation superseded the provisions of the Paris Convention of 1919 and the Pan American Convention on Air Navigation of 1928.

Functions. It assists international civil aviation by establishing technical standards for safety and efficiency of air navigation and promoting simpler procedures at borders; develops regional plans for ground facilities and services needed for international flying; disseminates air-transport statistics and prepares studies on aviation economics; fosters the development of air law conventions and provides technical assistance to states in developing civil aviation programmes.

Organization. The principal organs of ICAO are an Assembly, consisting of all members of the Organization, and a Council, which is composed of 33 states elected by the Assembly for three years, which meets in virtually continuous session. In electing these states, the Assembly must give adequate representation to: (1) states of major importance in air transport; (2) states which make the largest contribution to the provision of facilities for the international civil air navigation; and (3) those states not otherwise included whose election would ensure that all major geographical areas of the world were represented. The budget approved for 2002 was US$57·5m.

INTERNATIONAL FUND FOR AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT (IFAD)

The idea for an International Fund for Agricultural Development arose at the 1974 World Food Conference. An agreement to establish IFAD entered into force on 30 Nov. 1977, and the agency began its operations the following month. IFAD's purpose is to mobilize additional funds for improved food production and better nutrition among low-income groups in developing countries through projects and programmes directly benefiting the poorest rural populations while preserving their natural resource base. In line with the Fund's focus on the rural poor, its resources are made available in highly concessional loans and grants. By March 2003 the Fund had invested US$7·7bn. in loans and US$35·4m. in grants financing 628 projects in 115 developing countries.

Organization. The highest body is the Governing Council, on which all 163 member countries are represented. Operations are overseen by an 18-member Executive Board (with 17 alternate members), which is responsible to the Governing Council. The Fund works with many co-operating institutions, including the World Bank, regional development banks and financial agencies, and other UN agencies; many of these co-finance IFAD projects.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATION (ILO)

Origin. The ILO was established in 1919 under the Treaty of Versailles as an autonomous institution associated with the League of Nations. An agreement establishing its relationship with the UN was approved in 1946, making the ILO the first Specialized Agency to be associated with the UN. An intergovernmental agency with a tripartite structure, in which representatives of governments, employers and workers participate, it seeks through international action to improve labour and living conditions, to promote productive employment and social justice for working people everywhere. On its fiftieth anniversary in 1969 it was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. In Oct. 2001 it numbered 175 members.

Functions. One of the ILO's principal functions is the formulation of international standards in the form of International Labour Conventions and Recommendations. Member countries are required to submit Conventions to their competent national authorities with a view to ratification. If a country ratifies a Convention it agrees to bring its laws into line with its terms and to report periodically how these regulations are being applied. More than 6,900 ratifications of 184 Conventions had been deposited by 30 Sept. 2001. Procedures are in place to ascertain whether Conventions thus ratified are effectively applied. Recommendations do not require ratification, but member states are obliged to consider them with a view to giving effect to their provisions by legislation or other action. By 30 Sept. 2002 the International Labour Conference had adopted 193 Recommendations.

The ILO's programme and budget set out four strategic objectives for the Organization at the turn of the century: i) to promote and realize fundamental principles and rights at work; ii) to create greater opportunities for women and men to secure decent employment and income; iii) to enhance the coverage and effectiveness of social protection for all; iv) to strengthen tripartism and social dialogue.

Activities. In addition to its research and advisory activities, the ILO extends technical co-operation to governments under its regular budget and under the UN Development Programme and Funds-in-Trust in the fields of employment promotion, human resources development (including vocational and management training), development of social institutions, small-scale industries, rural development, social security, industrial safety and hygiene, productivity, etc. Technical co-operation also includes expert missions and a fellowship programme.

In 1994 the technical services offered by the ILO to its tripartite constituents came under scrutiny leading to a re-affirmation of technical co-operation as one of the principal means of ILO action. Since 1994 the process of implementing the new Active Partnership Policy made significant progress and today 16 multidisciplinary advisory teams are engaged in a dialogue with ILO constituents centred on the identification of Country Objectives to form the basis of the ILO's contribution.

In June 1998 delegates to the 86th International Labour Conference adopted a solemn ILO Declaration in Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, committing the Organization's member states to respect the principles inherent in a number of core labour standards: the right of workers and employers to freedom of association and the effective right to collective bargaining, and to work toward the elimination of all forms of forced or compulsory labour, the effective abolition of child labour and the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation.

In June 1999 delegates to the 87th International Labour Conference adopted a new Convention banning the worst forms of child labour. The International Labour Conference 2001 adopted a budget of US$434bn. for the 2002–03 biennium. In 2001 delegates to the conference adopted the first international standard on safety in agriculture.

Field Activities. In 2000 extra-budgetary expenditure on operational activities totalled US$82·5m., compared to US$78·2m. in 1999, representing an increase of 5·5%. The leading field of activity in terms of annual expenditure (representing 46% of total expenditure) was the employment sector (US$37·7m.) and included activities in the Employment-intensive Investment Programme (US$9·9m.) and the Infocus Programme on Boosting Employment through Small Enterprise Development (US$7·4m.). The next largest field of activity was the Standards and Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work sector (representing 28% of total expenditure), which included the Infocus Programme on Child Labour (US$21·2m.). Social Protection and Social Dialogue related activities accounted for 9% and 13% respectively of total expenditure. The latter included Workers' Activities (US$4·9m.) and Employers' Activities (US$1·6m.). Interregional and global activities accounted for some US$19m. In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 31% of total expenditure (US$25·5m.), Asia and the Pacific for 23% (US$19·3m.) and Latin America and the Caribbean for 15% (US$12·6m.). Expenditure in Europe showed a decrease of 14% to US$4·5m. in 2000 and the Arab States programme decreased by 49% to US$1·5m. in 2000.

The ILO's International Institute for Labour Studies promotes the study and discussion of policy issues. The core theme of its activities is the interaction between labour institutions, development and civil society in a global economy. It identifies emerging social and labour issues by opening up new areas for research and action; and encourages systematic dialogue on social policy between the tripartite constituency of the ILO and the international academic community, and other public opinion-makers.

The International Training Centre of the ILO, in Turin, was set up in 1965 to lead the training programmes implemented by the ILO as part of its technical co-operation activities. Member states and the UN system also call on its resources and experience, and a UN Staff College was established on the Turin Campus in 1996.

Organization. The International Labour Conference is the supreme deliberative organ of the ILO; it meets annually in Geneva. National delegations are composed of two government delegates, one employers' delegate and one workers' delegate. The Governing Body, elected by the Conference, is the Executive Council. It is composed of 28 government members, 14 workers' members and 14 employers' members. Ten governments of countries of industrial importance hold permanent seats on the Governing Body. These are: Brazil, China, Germany, France, India, Italy, Japan, Russia, UK and USA. The remaining 18 government members are elected every three years. Workers' and employers' representatives are elected as individuals, not as national candidates. The ILO has a branch office in London (for UK and Republic of Ireland), and regional offices in Abidjan (for Africa), Bangkok (for Asia and the Pacific), Lima (for Latin America and the Caribbean) and Beirut (for Arab States). The ILO budget for 2002–03 was US$472m.

INTERNATIONAL MARITIME ORGANIZATION (IMO)

Origin. The International Maritime Organization (formerly the InterGovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization) was established as a specialized agency of the UN by a convention drafted in 1948 at a UN maritime conference in Geneva. The Convention became effective on 17 March 1958 when it had been ratified by 21 countries, including seven with at least 1m. gross tons of shipping each. The IMCO started operations in 1959 and changed its name to the IMO in 1982.

Functions. To facilitate co-operation among governments on technical matters affecting merchant shipping, especially concerning safety at sea; to prevent and control marine pollution caused by ships; to facilitate international maritime traffic. The IMO is responsible for convening international maritime conferences and for drafting international maritime conventions. It also provides technical assistance to countries wishing to develop their maritime activities, and acts as a depositary authority for international conventions regulating maritime affairs. The World Maritime University (WMU), at Malmö, Sweden, was established in 1983; the IMO

International Maritime Law Institute (IMLI), at Valletta, Malta and the IMO International Maritime Academy, at Trieste, Italy, both in 1989.

Organization. The IMO has 159 members (and three associate members). The Assembly, composed of all member states, normally meets every two years. The 40-member Council acts as governing body between sessions. There are four principal committees (on maritime safety, legal matters, marine environment protection and technical co-operation), which submit reports or recommendations to the Assembly through the Council, and a Secretariat. The budget for 2000–01 amounted to £36·6m.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND (IMF)

The International Monetary Fund was established on 27 Dec. 1945 as an independent international organization and began financial operations on 1 March 1947; its relationship with the UN is defined in an agreement of mutual co-operation which came into force on 15 Nov. 1947. The first amendment to the IMF's Articles creating the special drawing right (SDR) took effect on 28 July 1969. The second amendment took effect on 1 April 1978. The third amendment came into force on 11 Nov. 1992; it allows for the suspension of voting and related rights of a member which persists in its failure to settle its outstanding obligations to the IMF.

Aims. To promote international monetary co-operation, the expansion of international trade and exchange rate stability; to assist in the removal of exchange restrictions and the establishment of a multilateral system of payments; and to alleviate any serious disequilibrium in members' international balance of payments by making the financial resources of the IMF available to them, usually subject to economic policy conditions to ensure the revolving nature of IMF resources.

Activities. Each member of the IMF undertakes a broad obligation to collaborate with the IMF and other members to ensure orderly exchange arrangements and to promote a system of stable exchange rates. In addition, members are subject to certain obligations relating to domestic and external policies that can affect the balance of payments and the exchange rate. The IMF makes its resources available, under proper safeguards, to its members to meet short-term or medium-term payment difficulties. The first allocation of SDRs was made on 1 Jan. 1970. A total of SDR 21·4bn. has been allocated to members in two allocations, completed in 1981.

To enhance its balance of payments assistance to its members, the IMF established a Compensatory Financing Facility on 27 Feb. 1963; temporary oil facilities in 1974 and 1975; a Trust Fund in 1976; and an Extended Fund Facility (EFF) for medium-term assistance to members with special balance of payments problems on 13 Sept. 1974. In March 1986 it established the Structural Adjustment Facility (SAF) to provide assistance to low-income countries. In Dec. 1987 it established the Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF) to provide further assistance to low-income countries facing high levels of indebtedness. In Oct. 1999 the ESAF was renamed as the Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility (PRGF) to reflect the increased focus on poverty reduction. Because of the importance of continuing concessional ESAF support, the IMF in 1996 endorsed proposals for a continuation of ESAF operations beyond 2000, when ESAF/PRGF resources were expected to be fully committed. There is to be an interim period of operations from 2001–04 for which new financing will be mobilized. This will be followed in 2005, or earlier, by a self-sustained PRGF. In Dec. 1997 the Supplemental Reserve Facility (SRF) was established to provide short-term assistance to countries experiencing exceptional balance of payments problems owing to a large short-term financing need resulting from a sudden disruptive loss of market confidence, reflected in pressure on the capital account and the member's reserves. Contingent Credit Lines (CCL) were established in April 1999 as instruments of crisis prevention to counter problems of international financial contagion.

Capital Resources. The capital resources of the IMF comprise SDRs and currencies that the members pay under quotas calculated for them when they join the IMF. A member's quota is largely determined by its economic position relative to other members; it is also linked to their drawing rights on the IMF under both regular and special facilities, their voting power, and their share of SDR allocations. Every IMF member is required to subscribe to the IMF an amount equal to its quota. An amount not exceeding 25% of the quota has to be paid in reserve assets, the balance in the member's own currency. The members with the largest quotas are: 1st, the USA; joint 2nd, Germany and Japan; joint 4th, France and the UK.

An increase of almost 60% in IMF quotas became effective in Nov. 1992 as a result of the 9th General Review of Quotas. Quotas were not increased under the 10th General Review. In the 11th General Review, the IMF's Executive Board adopted a resolution at its 1997 annual meeting, approving a one-time equity allocation of SDRs of SDR 21,400m., which would equalize all members' ratio of SDRs to quota at 29·3%. The Board also agreed to recommend a 45% increase in IMF quotas, which would raise total quotas from SDR 145,300m., in Sept. 1997, to SDR 209,500m.; an 85% majority of member countries is required for the quota increase to take effect. As of Jan. 1999 the 85% majority had been met. As of Feb. 2001 with an ad hoc quota increase for China, total quotas were SDR 212·4bn.

Borrowing Resources. The IMF is authorized under its Articles of Agreement to supplement its resources by borrowing. In Jan. 1962 a four-year agreement was concluded with ten industrial members (Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Sweden, UK, USA) who undertook to lend the IMF up to US$6,000m. in their own currencies, if this should be needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. Switzerland subsequently joined the group. These arrangements, known as the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), have been extended several times. In early 1983 agreement was reached to increase the credit arrangements under the GAB to SDR 17,000m.; to permit use of GAB resources in transactions with IMF members that are not GAB participants; to authorize Swiss participation; and to permit borrowing arrangements with non-participating members to be associated with the GAB. Saudi Arabia and the IMF have entered into such an arrangement under which the IMF will be able to borrow up to SDR 1,500m. to assist in financing purchases by any member for the same purpose and under the same circumstances as in the GAB. The changes became effective by 26 Dec. 1983.

Surveillance. In order to oversee the compliance of members with their obligations under the Articles of Agreement, the IMF is required to exercise firm surveillance over members' exchange rate policies. In conjunction with the need for up-to-date reliable data to support its surveillance activities, it encourages member countries to make available to the public and to financial markets core financial and economic data. In April 1996 the IMF established the Special Data Dissemination Standard (SDDS) to improve access to reliable economic statistical information for member countries that have, or are seeking, access to international capital markets. In Dec. 1997 it established the General Data Dissemination Standard (GDDS), which applies to all member countries and focuses on improved production and dissemination of core economic data. Information on both are available on the IMF's website.

The IMF works with the IBRD (World Bank) to address the problems of the most heavily indebted poor countries (most in Sub-Saharan Africa) through their Initiative for the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs). The HIPC Initiative is designed to ensure that HIPCs with a sound track record of economic adjustment receive debt relief sufficient to help them attain a sustainable debt situation over the medium term. The HIPC Initiative was enhanced in late 1999 to provide deeper and more rapid debt relief to a larger number of countries.

Organization. The highest authority is the Board of Governors, on which each member government is represented. Normally the Governors meet once a year, and may take votes by mail or other means between meetings. The Board of Governors has delegated many of its powers to the 24 executive directors in Washington, who are appointed or elected by individual member countries or groups of countries. Each appointed director has voting power proportionate to the quota of the government he or she represents, while each elected director casts all the votes of the countries represented. The managing director is selected by the executive directors and serves as chairman of the Executive Board, but may not vote except in case of a tie. The term of office is for five years, but may be extended or terminated at the discretion of the executive directors. The managing director is responsible for the ordinary business of the IMF, under the direction of the executive directors, and supervises a staff of about 2,600. Under a long-standing, informal agreement, the managing director is European (while the President of the World Bank is a US national). There are three deputy managing directors. As of Dec. 2002 the IMF had 184 members.

The IMF Institute is a specialized department of the IMF providing training in macroeconomic analysis and policy, and related subjects, for officials of member countries, at the Fund's headquarters in Washington, the Joint Vienna Institute, the Joint Africa Institute, the Singapore Regional Training Institute, the IMF-Arab Monetary Fund Regional Training Program, the Joint China-IMF Training Program and the Joint Regional Training Center for Latin America. In addition, the IMF operates regional training centres: the Pacific Financial Technical Assistance Center (PFTAC), the Caribbean Regional Technical Assistance Center (CARTAC) and the Regional Technical Assistance Center in Africa (AFRITAC). Since its establishment in 1964 the Institute has trained more than 10,900 officials from 181 countries.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION UNION (ITU)

Origin. Founded in Paris in 1865 as the International Telegraph Union, the International Telecommunication Union took its present name in 1934 and became a specialized agency of the United Nations in 1947. Therefore, the ITU is the world's oldest intergovernmental body.

Functions. To maintain and extend international co-operation for the improvement and rational use of telecommunications of all kinds, and promote and offer technical assistance to developing countries in the field of telecommunications; to promote the development of technical facilities and their most efficient operation to improve the efficiency of telecommunication services, increasing their usefulness and making them, so far as possible, generally available to the public; to harmonize the actions of nations in the attainment of these ends.

Organization. The supreme organ of the ITU is the Plenipotentiary Conference, which normally meets every four years. A 46-member Council, elected by the Conference, meets annually in Geneva and is responsible for ensuring the co-ordination of the four permanent organs at ITU headquarters: the General Secretariat; Radiocommunication Sector; Telecommunication Standardization Sector; and Telecommunication Development Sector. The Secretary-General is also elected by the Conference. ITU has 189 member countries; a further 576 scientific and technical companies, public and private operators, broadcasters and other organizations are also ITU members.

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION (UNESCO)

Origin. UNESCO's Constitution was signed in London on 16 Nov. 1945 by 37 countries and the Organization came into being in Nov. 1946 on the premise that: 'Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed'. In Jan. 2003 UNESCO had 188 members including the UK, which rejoined in 1997. They include six Associate Members with no single member status in the UN (Aruba; British Virgin Islands; Cayman Islands; Macao; Netherlands Antilles; Tokelau). In 2002 the USA announced its decision to return after an 18-year absence. East Timor has also declared its intention to join.

Aims and Activities. UNESCO's primary objective is to contribute to peace and security in the world by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science, communication and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, the rule of the law, human rights and fundamental freedoms, affirmed for all peoples by the UN Charter.

Education. Various activities support and foster national projects to renovate education systems and develop alternative educational strategies towards a goal of lifelong education for all. The four main areas of focus, today, are: to provide basic education for all; expand access to basic education; improve the quality of basic education; and education for the 21st century. There are regional and sub-regional offices for education in 57 countries.

Science. UNESCO seeks to promote international scientific co-operation and encourages scientific research designed to improve living conditions and to protect ecosystems. Regional science co-operation offices have been set up in Cairo, Jakarta, Montevideo, Nairobi and Venice. A Sciences in the Service of Development programme aims to provide support to member states in the fields of higher education, advanced training and research in natural and social sciences, and in the application of these sciences to development. It focuses on questions concerning issues such as man and the biosphere, oceanography, geological correlation and hydrology.

Social and Human Sciences. UNESCO works to advance knowledge and intellectual co-operation in order to facilitate social transformations conducive to justice, freedom, peace and human dignity. It seeks to identify evolving social trends and develops and promotes principles and standards based on universal values and ethics, such as the International Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights (1997).

Communication. Activities are geared to promoting the free flow of information, freedom of expression, press freedom, media independence and pluralism. Another priority is to bridge the digital divide and help disadvantaged groups in North and South access the emerging knowledge societies created thanks to the new information and communication technologies. To this end, UNESCO promotes access to public domain information and free software, as well as encouraging the creation of local content.

Culture. In the cultural field, UNESCO's focus areas are research on the link between culture and development, and action to conserve and protect the world's cultural inheritance, by assisting member states in studying and preserving both the tangible and intangible heritage of their societies.

Organization. The General Conference, composed of representatives from each member state, meets biennially to decide policy, programme and budget. A 58-member Executive Board elected by the Conference meets twice a year and there is a Secretariat. In addition, national commissions act as liaison groups between UNESCO and the educational, scientific and cultural life of their own countries. The budget for the biennium 2002–03 was US$544·4m.

There are also seven separate UNESCO institutes: the International Bureau of Education (IBE), in Geneva; the UNESCO Institute for Education (UIE), in Hamburg; the International Institute for Educational Planning (IIEP), in Paris; the International Institute for Capacity Building in Africa (IICBA), in Addis Ababa; the International Institute for Higher Education in Latin America and the Caribbean (IESALC), in Caracas; the UNESCO Institute for Information Technologies in Education (IITE), in Moscow; and the UNESCO Institute for Statistics (UIS), in Montreal.

UNITED NATIONS INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION (UNIDO)

Origin. UNIDO was established by the UN General Assembly in 1966 and became the 16th UN specialized agency in 1985.

Aims. UNIDO helps developing countries, and countries with economies in transition, in their fight against marginalization and poverty in today's globalized world. It mobilizes knowledge, skills, information and technology to promote productive employment, a competitive economy and a sound environment. UNIDO focuses its efforts on relieving poverty by fostering productivity growth and economic development.

Activities. As a global forum, UNIDO generates and disseminates knowledge relating to industrial matters and provides a platform for the various actors—decision makers in the public and private sectors, civil society organizations and the policy-making community in general—to enhance co-operation, establish dialogue and develop partnerships in order to address the challenges ahead. As a technical co-operation agency, UNIDO designs and implements programmes to support the industrial development efforts of its clients. It also offers tailor-made specialized support for programme development. The two core functions are both complementary and mutually supportive. On the one hand, experience gained in the technical co-operation work of UNIDO can be shared with policy makers; on the other, the Organization's analytical work shows where technical co-operation will have the greatest impact by helping to define priorities.

Organization. As part of the United Nations common system, UNIDO has the responsibility for promoting industrialization throughout the developing world, in co-operation with its 169 member states. Its headquarters are in Vienna, Austria, and with 28 smaller country and regional offices, 13 investment and technology promotion offices and a number of offices related to specific aspects of its work, UNIDO maintains an active presence in the field. The General Conference meets every two years to determine policy and approve the budget. The 53-member Industrial Development Board (membership according to constitutional lists) is elected by the General Conference. The General Conference also elects a 27-member Programme and Budget Committee for two years and appoints a Director-General for four years.

Finance. UNIDO's financial resources come from the regular and operational budgets, as well as contributions for technical co-operation activities, budgeted at US$133·7m., US$22·0m. and US$193·6m. respectively, totalling US$349·3m. for 2002–03. Administrative costs represent 7·6% of the total budget estimates. The regular budget derives from assessed contributions from member states.

Technical co-operation is funded mainly from voluntary contributions from donor countries and institutions as well as UNDP, the Multilateral Fund for the Implementation of the Montreal Protocol, the Global Environment Facility, and the Common Fund for Communities.

UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION (UPU)

Origin. The UPU was established in 1875, when the Universal Postal Convention adopted by the Postal Congress of Berne on 9 Oct. 1874 came into force. It has 189 member countries.

Functions. The aim of the UPU is to assure the organization and perfection of the various postal services, and to promote the development of international collaboration in the field. To this end, UPU members are united in a single postal territory for the reciprocal exchange of correspondence. A Specialized Agency of the UN since 1948, the UPU is governed by its Constitution, adopted in 1964 (Vienna), and subsequent protocol amendments (1969, Tokyo; 1974, Lausanne; 1979, Rio de Janeiro; 1984, Hamburg; 1989, Washington; 1994, Seoul; 1999, Beijing).

Organization. It is composed of a Universal Postal Congress which meets every five years; a 41-member Council of Administration, which meets annually and is responsible for supervising the affairs of the UPU between Congresses; a 40-member Postal Operations Council; and an International Bureau which functions as the permanent secretariat, responsible for strategic planning and programme budgeting. The budget for the biennial period 2003–04 is 71·4m. Swiss francs.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION (WHO)

Origin. An International Conference convened by the UN Economic and Social Council to consider a single health organization resulted in the adoption on 22 July 1946 of the Constitution of the World Health Organization, which came into force on 7 April 1948.

Functions. WHO's objective, as stated in the first article of the Constitution, is 'the attainment by all peoples of the highest possible level of health'. As the directing and co-ordinating authority on international health, it establishes and maintains collaboration with the UN, specialized agencies, government health administrations, professional and other groups concerned with health. The Constitution also directs WHO to assist governments to strengthen their health services; to stimulate and advance work to eradicate diseases; to promote maternal and child health, mental health, medical research and the prevention of accidents; to improve standards of teaching and training in the health professions, and of nutrition, housing, sanitation, working conditions and other aspects of environmental health. The Organization is also empowered to propose conventions, agreements and regulations, and make recommendations about international health matters; to revise the international nomenclature of diseases, causes of death and public health practices; to develop, establish and promote international standards concerning foods, biological, pharmaceutical and similar substances.

Methods of work. Co-operation in country projects is undertaken only on the request of the government concerned, through the six regional offices of the Organization.

Worldwide technical services are made available by headquarters. Expert committees, chosen from the 55 advisory panels of experts, meet to advise the Director-General on a given subject. Scientific groups and consultative meetings are called for similar purposes. To further the education of health personnel of all categories, seminars, technical conferences and training courses are organized, and advisors, consultants and lecturers are provided. WHO awards fellowships for study to nationals of member countries.

Activities. The main thrust of WHO's activities in recent years has been towards promoting national, regional and global strategies for the attainment of the main social target of the member states: 'Health for All in the 21st Century', or the attainment by all citizens of the world of a level of health that will permit them to lead a socially and economically productive life. Almost all countries indicated a high level of political commitment to this goal; and guiding principles for formulating corresponding strategies and plans of action were subsequently prepared.

The 50th World Health Assembly which met in 1997 adopted numerous resolutions on public health issues. The World Health Report, 1997: Conquering suffering, enriching humanity focused on 'non-communicable diseases'. It warned that the human and social costs of cancer, heart disease and other chronic diseases will rise unless confronted now.

The number of cancer cases was expected to double in most countries by 2020. There will be a 33% increase in lung cancers in women and a 40% increase in prostate cancers in men in European Union countries alone by 2005. The incidence of other cancers is also rising rapidly, especially in developing countries. Heart disease and stroke, the leading causes of death in richer nations, will become more common in poorer countries. Globally, diabetes will more than double by 2025, with the number of people affected rising from about 135m. to 300m., and there is likely to be a huge rise in some mental disorders, especially dementias and particularly Alzheimer's disease. Already an estimated 29m. people suffer from dementia, and at least 400m. suffer from other mental disorders ranging from mood and personality disorders to neurological conditions like epilepsy, which affects some 40m. worldwide.

These projected increases are reported to be owing to a combination of factors, not least population ageing and the rising prevalence of unhealthy lifestyles. Average life expectancy at birth globally reached 65 years in 1996. It is now well over 70 years in many countries and exceeds 80 years in some. In 1997 there were an estimated 380m. people over 65 years. By 2020 that number is expected to rise to more than 690m.

The ten leading killer diseases in the world are: coronary heart disease, 7·2m. deaths annually; cancer (all sites), 6·2m.; cerebrovascular disease, 4·6m.; acute lower respiratory infection, 3·7m.; perinatal conditions, 3·6m.; tuberculosis, 2·9m.; chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, 2·9m.; diarrhoea and dysentery, 2·5m.; HIV/AIDS, 2·3m.; malaria, 2·1m. Tobacco-related deaths, primarily from lung cancer and circulatory disease, amount to 3m. a year. Smoking accounts for one in seven cancer cases worldwide, and if the trend of increasing consumption in many countries continues, the epidemic has many more decades to run.

In response, WHO has called for an intensified and sustained global campaign to encourage healthy lifestyles and attack the main risk factors responsible for many of these diseases: unhealthy diet, inadequate physical activity, smoking and obesity.

World Health Report, 2000: The theme of the report was Health Systems: Improving Performance. It provided an expert analysis of the influence of health systems in the lives of people worldwide, debating the way in which their performance can be measured and improved. The results of the report found France to be the leading country in terms of health care, followed among major countries by Italy, Spain, Oman, Austria and Japan. The US health system was found to spend a higher portion of its GDP than any other country whilst ranking 37th out of 191 countries according to its performance.

The report stated that the main failings of many health systems were:

—Many health ministries focus on the public sector and often disregard the frequently much larger private sector health care.

—In many countries, some if not most physicians work simultaneously for the public sector and in private practice. This means the public sector ends up subsidizing unofficial private practice. Many governments fail to prevent a 'black market' in health, where widespread corruption, bribery, 'moonlighting' and other illegal practices flourish. The black markets, which themselves are caused by malfunctioning health systems, and low income of health workers, further undermine those systems.
—Many health ministries fail to enforce regulations that they themselves have created or are supposed to implement in the public interest.

Cloning in human reproduction. The 1997 Assembly adopted a resolution affirming that the use of cloning for the replication of human individuals is ethically unacceptable and contrary to human integrity and morality. In accepting the resolution delegates recognized the need to respect the freedom of ethically acceptable scientific activity and to ensure access to the benefits of its applications.

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). In 1996 the Assembly reviewed implementation of the global strategy for the prevention and control of AIDS, and progress of the Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), which became operational in 1996. The impact of the HIV/AIDS epidemic is seen to be expanding and intensifying, particularly in developing countries, and new resource mobilization mechanisms were called for to support countries in combating HIV/AIDS. The Assembly requested WHO to facilitate the incorporation of UNAIDS-specific policies, norms and strategies into the activities of WHO at global, regional and country levels, and to collaborate in all aspects of resource mobilization for HIV/AIDS activities.

World Health Day is observed on 7 April every year. The 2003 theme for World Health Day was Healthy Environments for Children; the theme for 2002 was Move for Health. World No-Tobacco Day is held on 31 May each year; International Day Against Drug Abuse on 26 June; World AIDS Day on 1 Dec.

Organization. The principal organs of WHO are the World Health Assembly, the Executive Board and the Secretariat. Each of the 192 member states has the right to be represented at the Assembly, which meets annually in Geneva. The 32-member Executive Board is composed of technically qualified health experts designated by as many member states as elected by the Assembly. The Secretariat consists of technical and administrative staff headed by a Director-General, who is appointed for not more than two five-year terms. Health activities in member countries are carried out through regional organizations which have been established in Africa (Brazzaville), South-East Asia (New Delhi), Europe (Copenhagen), Eastern Mediterranean (Alexandria) and Western Pacific (Manila). The Pan American Sanitary Bureau in Washington serves as the regional office of WHO for the Americas. It is the oldest international health agency in the world and is the secretariat of the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO).

Finance. The global programme budget for 2002–03 submitted to the Executive Board in Jan. 2001 was US$2,222·7m.

WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ORGANIZATION (WIPO)

Origin. The roots of the World Intellectual Property Organization go back to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, adopted in 1883, and the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works (adopted 1886). The Convention establishing WIPO was signed at Stockholm in 1967 by 51 countries, and entered into force in April 1970. WIPO became a UN specialized agency in 1974.

Aims. To promote the protection of intellectual property throughout the world through co-operation among member states; and to ensure administrative co-operation among the intellectual property unions created by the Paris and Berne Conventions.

Intellectual property comprises two main branches: industrial property (inventions, trademarks and industrial designs) and copyright and neighbouring rights (literary, musical, artistic, photographic and audiovisual works).

Activities. There are three principal areas of activity: the progressive development of international intellectual property law; global protection systems and services; and co-operation for development. WIPO seeks to harmonize national intellectual property legislation and procedures; provide services for international applications for industrial property rights; exchange intellectual property information; provide training and legal and technical assistance to developing and other countries; facilitate the resolution of private intellectual property disputes; and marshal information technology as a tool for storing, accessing and using valuable intellectual property information.

New approaches to the progressive development of international intellectual property law. The development and application of international norms and standards is a fundamental part of WIPO's activities. It administers 21 treaties (15 on industrial property, six on copyright). The Organization plays an increasing role in making national and regional systems for the registration of intellectual property more user-friendly by harmonizing and simplifying procedures.

Global protection systems and services. The most successful and widely used treaty is the Patent Co-operation Treaty (PCT), which implements the concept of a single international patent application that is valid in many countries. Once such application is filed, an applicant has time to decide in which countries to pursue the application, thereby streamlining procedures and reducing costs. In 2001 the PCT system recorded 103,947 applications.

The treaties dealing with the international registration of marks and industrial designs are, respectively, the Madrid Agreement (and its Protocol) and the Hague Agreement. In 1999 there were more than 20,000 registrations of marks under the Madrid System, an equivalent of over 264,000 national trademark registrations. In 1999 WIPO registered 4,093 international deposits of industrial designs.

Co-operation for development. On 1 Jan. 2000 many developing and other countries, as members of the World Trade Organization, brought their national legislative and administrative structures into conformity with the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS). WIPO and WTO agreed, in the framework of a Co-operation Agreement which entered into force on 1 Jan. 1996, and a Joint Initiative launched in July 1998, on a joint technical co-operation initiative to provide assistance to developing countries to meet their obligations to comply with the TRIPS Agreement. This represented a major step in the international harmonization of the scope, standards and enforcement of Intellectual Property rights.

The newly created WIPO Worldwide Academy co-ordinates training activities, originates new approaches and methods to expand the scope, impact and accessibility of WIPO programmes, and creates more effective training tailored for diverse-user groups. The Academy has also launched an Internet-based distance-learning programme.

Impact of digital technology on intellectual property law. WIPO takes a range of initiatives to tackle the implications of modern digital and communications technology for copyright and industrial property law, and in electronic commerce transcending national jurisdictions. The WIPO Arbitration and Mediation Centre was established in 1994 to provide online dispute-resolution services. The Centre developed an operational and legal framework for the administration of disputes, including those relating to new technologies such as Internet Domain Name Disputes.

Organization. WIPO has three governing bodies: the General Assembly, the Conference and the Co-ordination Committee. Each treaty administered by WIPO has one or more Governing Bodies of its own, composed of representatives of the respective member states. In addition, the Paris and Berne Unions have Assemblies and Executive Committees. The executive head of WIPO is the Director-General, who is elected by the General Assembly. In March 2003 WIPO had 179 member states, with an international staff of around 850 from 86 countries. The budget for 2002–03 was 678m. Swiss francs, the majority of which was covered by revenue earned by the Organization's international registration and publication activities.

WORLD METEOROLOGICAL ORGANIZATION (WMO)

Origin. A 1947 (Washington) Conference of Directors of the International Meteorological Organization (est. 1873) adopted a Convention creating the World Meteorological Organization. The WMO Convention became effective on 23 March 1950 and WMO was formally established. It was recognized as a Specialized Agency of the UN in 1951.

Functions. (1) To facilitate worldwide co-operation in the establishment of networks of stations for the making of meteorological observations as well as hydrological or other geophysical observations related to meteorology, and to promote the establishment and maintenance of meteorological centres charged with the provision of meteorological and related services; (2) to promote the establishment and maintenance of systems for the rapid exchange of meteorological and related information; (3) to promote standardization of meteorological and related observations and ensure the uniform publication of observations and statistics; (4) to further the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other human activities; (5) to promote activities in operational hydrology and to further close co-operation between meteorological and hydrological services; and (6) to encourage research and training in meteorology and, as appropriate, to assist in co-ordinating the international aspects of such research and training.

Organization. WMO has 179 member states and six member territories responsible for the operation of their own meteorological services. Congress, which is its supreme body, meets every four years to approve policy, programme and budget, and adopt regulations. The Executive Council meets at least once a year to prepare studies and recommendations for Congress, and supervises the implementation of Congress resolutions and regulations. It has 36 members, comprising the President and three Vice-Presidents, as well as the Presidents of the six Regional Associations (Africa, Asia, South America, North and Central America, South-West Pacific, Europe), whose task is to co-ordinate meteorological activity within their regions, and 26 members elected in their personal capacity. There are eight Technical Commissions composed of experts nominated by members of WMO, whose remit includes the following areas: basic systems, climatology, instruments and methods of observation, atmospheric sciences, aeronautical meteorology, agricultural meteorology, hydrology, oceanography and marine meteorology. A permanent Secretariat is maintained in Geneva. There are three regional offices for Africa, Asia and the Pacific, and North and Central America and the Caribbean. The budget for 2000–03 is 252·3m. Swiss francs.

OTHER ORGANS RELATED TO THE UN

INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY (IAEA)

Origin. An intergovernmental agency, the IAEA was established in 1957 under the aegis of the UN and reports annually to the General Assembly. Its Statute was approved on 26 Oct. 1956 at a conference at UN Headquarters.

Functions. To accelerate and enlarge the contribution of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world; and to ensure that assistance provided by it or at its request or under its supervision or control is not used in such a way as to further any military purpose. In addition, under the terms of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, the Treaty of Tlatelolco, the Treaty of Rarotonga, the Pelindaba Treaty and the Bangkok Treaty: to verify states' obligation to prevent diversion of nuclear fissionable material from peaceful uses to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices.

Activities. The IAEA gives advice and technical assistance to developing countries on nuclear power development, nuclear safety, radioactive waste management, legal aspects of atomic energy use, and prospecting for and exploiting nuclear raw materials. In addition, it promotes the use of radiation and isotopes in agriculture, industry, medicine and hydrology through expert services, training courses and fellowships, grants of equipment and supplies, research contracts, scientific meetings and publications. During 2000 there were over 1,000 operational projects for technical co-operation. These activities involved 5,600 expert assignments while 2,263 persons received training abroad.

Safeguards are the technical means applied by the IAEA to verify that nuclear equipment or materials are used exclusively for peaceful purposes. IAEA safeguards cover more than 95% of civilian nuclear installations outside the five nuclear-weapon states (China, France, Russia, UK and USA). These five nuclear-weapon states have concluded agreements with the Agency which permit the application of IAEA safeguards to all their civil nuclear activities. Installations in non-nuclear-weapon states under safeguards or containing safeguarded material at 31 Dec. 2000 were 196 power reactors, 156 research reactors and critical assemblies, 13 conversion plants, 42 fuel fabrication plants, six reprocessing plants, 11 enrichment plants and 316 other installations. In 2000, 2,467 inspections were conducted under the safeguard agreements at 900 nuclear installations in 65 non-nuclear-weapon states. By Dec. 1999 a total of 224 safeguard agreements were in force with 140 states. A programme designed to prevent and combat illicit trafficking of nuclear weapons came into force in April 1996.

Organization. The Statute provides for an annual General Conference, a 35-member Board of Governors and a Secretariat headed by a Director-General. The IAEA had 135 member states in March 2003.

There are also research laboratories in Austria and Monaco. The International Centre for Theoretical Physics was established in Trieste, in 1964, and is operated jointly by UNESCO and the IAEA.

WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION (WTO)

Origin. The WTO is founded on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which entered into force on 1 Jan. 1948. Its 23 original signatories were members of a Preparatory Committee appointed by the UN Economic and Social Council to draft the charter for a proposed International Trade Organization. Since this charter was never ratified, the General Agreement remained the only international instrument laying down trade rules. In Dec. 1993 there were 111 contracting parties, and a further 22 countries applying GATT rules on a de facto basis. On 15 April 1994 trade ministers of 123 countries signed the Final Act of the GATT Uruguay Round of negotiations at Marrakesh, bringing the WTO into being on 1 Jan. 1995. As of Feb. 2003 the WTO had 145 members.

The object of the Act is the liberalization of world trade. By it, member countries undertake to apply fair trade rules covering commodities, services and intellectual property. It provides for the lowering of tariffs on industrial goods and tropical products; the abolition of import duties on a variety of items; the progressive abolition of quotas on garments and textiles; the gradual reduction of trade-distorting subsidies and import barriers; and agreements on intellectual property and trade in services. Members are required to accept the results of the Uruguay Round talks in their entirety, and subscribe to all the WTO's agreements and disciplines. There are no enforcement procedures, however; decisions are ultimately reached by consensus.

Functions. The WTO is the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system. Surveillance of national trade policies is an important part of its work. At the centre of this is the Trade Policy Review Mechanism (TPRM), agreed by Ministers in 1994 (Article III of the Marrakesh Agreement). The TPRM was broadened in 1995 when the WTO came into being, to cover services trade and intellectual property. Its principal objective is to facilitate the smooth functioning of the multilateral trading system by enhancing the transparency of members' trade policies. All members are subject to review under the TPRM, which mandates that four members with the largest share of world trade (European Union, USA, Japan, Canada) be reviewed every two years; the next 16, every four years; and others every six, with a longer period able to be fixed for the least-developed members. Also, in 1994, flexibility of up to six months was introduced into the review cycles, and in 1996, it was agreed that every second review of each of the first four trading entities should be an interim review. Reviews are conducted by the Trade Policy Review Body (TPRB) on the basis of a policy statement by the member under review and a report by economists in the Secretariat's Trade Policy Review Division.

The International Trade Centre (since 1968 operated jointly with the United Nations through UNCTAD) was established by GATT in 1964 to provide information and training on export markets and marketing techniques, and thereby to assist the trade of developing countries. In 1984 the Centre became an executing agency of the UN Development Programme, responsible for carrying out UNDP-financed projects related to trade promotion.

Organization. A two-yearly ministerial meeting is the ultimate policy-making body. The 144-member General Council has some 30 subordinate councils and committees. The Dispute Settlement Body was set up to deal with disputes between countries. Appeals against its verdicts are heard by a seven-member Appellate Body. In 2003 it was composed of representatives of Egypt, the European Union, Japan, Brazil, Australia, USA and India. Dispute panels may be set up ad hoc, and objectors to their ruling may appeal to the Appellate Body whose decision is binding. Refusal to comply at this stage can result in the application of trade sanctions. Each appeal is heard by three of the Appellate Body members. Before cases are heard by dispute panels, there is a 60-day consultation period. The previous GATT Secretariat now serves the WTO, which has no resources of its own other than its operating budget. The budget for 2002 was 143,129,850 Swiss francs.

WORLD TOURISM ORGANIZATION (WTO)

Origin. Established in 1925 in The Hague as the International Congress of Official Tourist Traffic Associations. Renamed the International Union for Official Tourism Organizations after the Second World War when it moved to Geneva, it was renamed the World Tourism Organization in 1975 and moved its headquarters to Madrid the following year.

The World Tourism Organization became an executing agency of the United Nations Development Programme in 1976 and in 1977 a formal co-operation agreement was signed with the UN itself.

Aims. The World Tourism Organization exists to help nations throughout the world maximize the positive impacts of tourism, such as job creation, new infrastructure and foreign exchange earnings, while at the same time minimizing negative environmental or social impacts.

Membership. The World Tourism Organization has three categories of membership: Full membership which is open to all sovereign states; associate membership which is open to all territories not responsible for their external relations; and affiliate membership which comprises a wide range of organizations and companies working either directly in travel and tourism or in related sectors. In 2003 the World Tourism Organization had 140 full members, seven associate members and more than 350 affiliate members.

Organization. The General Assembly meets every two years to approve the budget and programme of work and to debate topics of vital importance to the tourism sector. The Executive Council is the governing board, responsible for ensuring that the organization carries out its work and keeps within its budget. The World Tourism Organization has six regional commissions—Africa, the Americas, East Asia and the Pacific, Europe, the Middle East and South Asia—which meet at least once a year. Specialized committees of World Tourism Organization members advise on management and programme content.

PREPARATORY COMMISSION FOR THE COMPREHENSIVE NUCLEAR-TEST-BAN TREATY ORGANIZATION (CTBTO)

The Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO Preparatory Commission) is an international organization established by the States Signatories to the Treaty on 19 Nov. 1996. It carries out the necessary preparations for the effective implementation of the Treaty, and prepares for the first session of the Conference of the States Parties to the Treaty.

The Preparatory Commission consists of a plenary body composed of all the States Signatories, and the Provisional Technical Secretariat (PTS). Upon signing the Treaty a state becomes a member of the Commission. Member states oversee the work of the Preparatory Commission and fund its activities. The Commission's main task is the establishment of the 337 facility International Monitoring System and the International Data Centre, and the development of operational manuals, including for on-site inspections. The Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty prohibits any nuclear weapon test explosion or any other nuclear explosion anywhere in the world. As of March 2003, 166 States had signed the CTBT and instruments of ratification had been deposited by 98 States.

ORGANIZATION FOR THE PROHIBITION OF CHEMICAL WEAPONS (OPCW)

The OPCW is responsible for the implementation of the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC), which became effective on 29 April 1997. The principal organ of the OPCW is the Conference of the States Parties, composed of all the members of the Organization.

Given the relative simplicity of producing chemical warfare agents, the verification provisions of the CWC are far-reaching. The routine monitoring regime involves submission by States Parties of initial and annual declarations to the OPCW and initial visits and systematic inspections of declared weapons storage, production and destruction facilities. Verification is also applied to chemical industry facilities which produce, process or consume dual-use chemicals listed in the convention. The OPCW also when requested by any State Party conducts short-notice challenge inspections at any location under its jurisdiction or control of any other State Party.

The OPCW also co-ordinates assistance to any State Party that falls victim of chemical warfare as it fosters international co-operation in the peaceful application of chemistry.

By March 2003 a total of 151 countries were states parties to the Chemical Weapons Convention.

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT (ICC)

Origin. As far back as 1946 an international congress called for the adoption of an international criminal code prohibiting crimes against humanity and the prompt establishment of an international criminal court, but for more than 40 years little progress was made. In 1989 the end of the Cold War brought a dramatic increase in the number of UN peacekeeping operations and a world where the idea of establishing an International Criminal Court became more viable. The United Nations Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court took place from 15 June–17 July 1998 in Rome, Italy.

Aims and Activities. The International Criminal Court is a permanent court for trying individuals who have been accused of committing genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity, and is thus a successor to the ad hoc tribunals set up by the UN Security Council to try those responsible for atrocities in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda. Ratification by 60 countries was required to bring the statute into effect. The court began operations on 1 July 2002 with 139 signatories and after ratification by 76 countries. By March 2003 the number of ratifications had increased to 89.

Judges. The International Criminal Court's first 18 judges were elected in Feb. 2003, with six serving for three years, six for six years and six for nine years. Every three years six new judges will be elected. The 18 judges elected in 2003, with the year in which their term of office is scheduled to end, were: René Blattmann (Bolivia, 2009); Maureen Harding Clark (Ireland, 2012); Fatoumata Dembele Diarra (Mali, 2012); Adrian Fulford (United Kingdom, 2012); Karl Hudson-Phillips (Trinidad and Tobago, 2012); Claude Jorda (France, 2009); Hans-Peter Kaul (Germany, 2006); Philippe Kirsch (Canada, 2009); Erkki Kourula (Finland, 2006); Akua Kuenyehia (Ghana, 2006); Elizabeth Odio Benito (Costa Rica, 2012); Georghios Pikis (Cyprus, 2009); Navanethem Pillay (South Africa, 2009); Mauro Politi (Italy, 2009); Tuiloma Neroni Slade (Samoa, 2006); Sang-hyun Song (South Korea, 2006); Sylvia Helena de Figueiredo Steiner (Brazil, 2012); Anita Usacka (Latvia, 2006).

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION (NATO)

Origin and History. On 4 April 1949 the foreign ministers of Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, the UK and the USA signed the North Atlantic Treaty, establishing the North Atlantic Alliance. In 1952 Greece and Turkey acceded to the Treaty; in 1955 came the Federal Republic of Germany; in 1982 Spain; in 1999 the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland, bringing the total to 19 member nations.

Functions. The Alliance was established as a defensive political and military alliance of independent countries in accordance with the terms of the UN Charter. It provides common security for its members through co-operation and consultation in political, military and economic as well as scientific and other non-military fields. The Alliance links the security of North America to that of Europe. NATO is the organization which enables the goals of the Alliance to be implemented.

Reform and Transformation of the Alliance. Following the demise of the Warsaw Pact in 1991, and the improved relations with Russia, NATO has undertaken a fundamental transformation of structures and policies to meet the new security challenges in Europe. Attention has focused in particular on the need to reinforce the political role of the Alliance.

An essential component of this transformation has been the establishment of close security links with the states of Central and Eastern Europe and those of the former USSR through the North Atlantic Co-operation Council (NACC), established in Dec. 1991 as an integral part of NATO's new Strategic Concept, which was adopted by heads of state and government at a summit in Rome earlier that year. The NACC was replaced by the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council (EAPC) in 1997. The EAPC brings together NATO's 19 member countries and 27 partner countries (the 27 members of Partnership for Peace).

The Partnership for Peace (PfP) programme. The PfP builds on the momentum of co-operation created by the North Atlantic Co-operation Council. It was launched at the 1994 Brussels Summit and is expanding and intensifying political and military co-operation throughout Europe. In 1997 Allied Foreign and Defence Ministers launched a wide range of enhancement measures to PfP, which have strengthened it in political, security, military and institutional fields. Its core objectives are: the facilitation of transparency in national defence planning and budgeting processes; democratic control of defence forces; members' maintenance of capability and readiness to contribute to operations under the authority of the UN; development of co-operative military relations with NATO (joint planning, training and exercises) in order to strengthen participants' ability to undertake missions in the fields of peacekeeping, search and rescue, and humanitarian operations; development, over the longer term, of forces better able to operate with those of NATO member forces. NATO will consult with any active Partner which perceives a direct threat to its territorial integrity, political independence or security; and active participation in the Partnership is to play an important role in the process of NATO's expansion.

PfP has been a key factor in promoting the spirit of practical co-operation and commitment to the democratic principles which underpin the Alliance. One of the most tangible aspects of the PfP has been the holding of joint peacekeeping exercises. PfP exercises take place on a regular basis in both NATO and Partner countries. A large number of nationally sponsored exercises in the spirit of PfP have also been set up. In March 2003 NATO had 27 PfP partners: Albania, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Bulgaria, Croatia, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Ireland, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Moldova, Romania, Russia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine and Uzbekistan. Many of these countries have accepted the Alliance's invitation to send liaison officers to permanent facilities at NATO Headquarters in Brussels and to the Partnership Co-ordination Cell in Mons, Belgium, where the Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) is located.

Other key reforms undertaken include a reduced and more flexible force structure, development of increased co-ordination and co-operation with other international institutions (EU, UN, OSCE), development of the European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI), and the agreement to make NATO's assets and experience available to support international peace enforcement operations.

Efforts to strengthen the security and defence role of NATO's European Allies (the European Security and Defence Identity) were initially organized through the Western European Union (WEU). In 2000 the crisis management responsibilities of the WEU were increasingly assumed by the European Union (EU). A number of milestones can be identified in the development of ESDI between NATO, the WEU and the EU; the signing of the Maastricht Treaty in 1992, which allowed for the development of a common European security and defence policy; the endorsement of the concept of Combined Joint Task Forces in 1994 and of 'separable but not separate forces' that could be made available for European-led crisis response operations other than collective defence; the Berlin decisions in 1996, which included the building up of ESDI within the alliance; the EU Summits in Cologne and Helsinki in 1999, which led to important decisions on strengthening the ESDP and the development of an EU rapid reaction capability, and recent developments in NATO–EU defence co-operation, which resulted in the setting up of ad-hoc working groups in four specific areas: security arrangements, developing permanent arrangements for consultation and co-operation between the two organizations, defining modalities for EU access to NATO assets, and EU capability goals.

NATO's military capabilities and its adaptability to include forces of non-NATO countries were decisive factors in the Alliance's role in implementing the Bosnian Peace Agreement. Following the signing of the Agreement in Paris on 14 Dec. 1995, and on the basis of the UN Security Council's Resolution 1031, NATO commenced implementation of the military aspects of the accord through the NATO-led multi-national force, the Implementation Force (IFOR), under an operation code-named Joint Endeavour. Its task was to help the parties implement the peace accord to which they had freely agreed and create a secure environment for civil and economic reconstruction. IFOR was the largest-ever military operation undertaken by the Alliance. In Dec. 1996 it was replaced by the Stabilisation Force (SFOR), which is committed to contributing to peace and stability in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

In March 1999, following the collapse of negotiations with President Milošević of Yugoslavia on a settlement to the Kosovo crisis, NATO forces launched a series of attacks on Serb military targets. After an air campaign lasting 78 days these attacks were suspended and in accordance with the Military-Technical Agreement the full withdrawal of Yugoslav forces began. The deployment in Kosovo of a multinational security force, with substantial NATO participation, was synchronized with the Serb withdrawal before the end of June. The formal cessation of the air campaign was then announced by the Secretary General of NATO. Since June 1999 a NATO-led peacekeeping force (KFOR) has been deployed in Kosovo under a United Nations mandate.

Enlargement. In Dec. 1994 NATO foreign ministers initiated a study on enlargement, which was followed by intensified individual dialogues with interested partner countries and by an analysis of the relevant factors associated with the admission of new members. The conclusion was that, subject to agreed criteria, the accession of new members would enhance security and extend stability throughout the Euro-Atlantic area.

At the July 1997 meeting of Heads of State and Government in Madrid it was decided to invite three countries (Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland) to begin accession negotiations. By Dec. 1997 the three had signed accession agreements, and subsequently joined NATO in March 1999.

In April 1999 the Alliance adopted the Membership Action Plan (MAP) which is specifically designed to provide concrete advice and assistance to aspiring members with their own preparations for possible future membership. Nine partner countries are involved in this initiative: Albania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia and the Former Yugoslavian Republic of Macedonia. At the Prague Summit in Nov. 2002 Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia were invited to accession talks with NATO. They are set to join NATO officially in 2004.

On 27 May 1997, in Paris, NATO and Russia signed the Founding Act on Mutual Relations, Co-operation and Security, committing them to build together a lasting peace in the Euro-Atlantic area, and establishing a new forum for consultations and co-operation called the NATO-Russia Permanent Joint Council. NATO-Russia co-operation has since developed and a new level of partnership is being explored.

At the meeting in Sintra, Portugal, on 29 May 1997, a NATO-Ukraine charter was drawn up and initialled, to be signed in Madrid the following July. At the same time, Foreign Ministers agreed to enhance their dialogue, begun in 1995, with six countries of the Mediterranean (Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Mauritania, Morocco, Tunisia), and a new committee, the Mediterranean Co-operation Group was established to take the Mediterranean Dialogue forward. Algeria joined the Mediterranean Dialogue in March 2000.

On 12 Sept. 2001, following the attacks on New York and Washington on 11 Sept., for the first time in its history, NATO invoked articles of the Washington Treaty, declaring it considered the attack on the USA as an attack against all members of the Alliance. Actions were subsequently taken by NATO and by individual member countries in support of the US-led campaign against terrorism, in response to requests made by the USA.

Organization. The North Atlantic Council (NAC) is the highest decision-making body and forum for consultation within the Atlantic Alliance. It is composed of Permanent Representatives of all 19 member countries meeting together at least once a week. The NAC also meets at higher levels involving foreign ministers or heads of state or government, but it has the same authority and powers of decision-making, and its decisions have the same status and validity at whatever level it meets. All decisions are taken on the basis of consensus, reflecting the collective will of all member governments. The NAC is the only body within the Atlantic Alliance which derives its authority explicitly from the North Atlantic Treaty. The NAC has responsibility under the Treaty for setting up subsidiary bodies. Committees and planning groups have since been created to support the work of the NAC or to assume responsibility in specific fields such as defence planning, nuclear planning and military matters.

The Military Committee is responsible for making recommendations to the Council and the Defence Planning Committee on military matters and for supplying guidance to the Allied Commanders. Composed of the Chiefs-of-Staff of member countries (Iceland, which has no military forces, may be represented by a civilian), the Committee is assisted by an International Military Staff. It meets at Chiefs-of-Staff level at least twice a year but remains in permanent session at the level of national military representatives. The area covered by the North Atlantic Treaty is divided into two commands: European and the Atlantic.

Finance. The co-ordination of military plans and defence expenditures rests on detailed and comparative analysis of the capabilities of member countries. In 1997 the cost of enlargement sparked a potentially damaging dispute between the USA and European members of the Alliance following Pentagon estimates that the cost would be in the region of US$27,000m.–35,000m. over a 12-year period. Later assessments, taking into account the fact that Britain, France and Germany are already engaged in improving and increasing the mobility of their rapid-reaction or crisis forces, reduced the estimate to current members to US$1,300m. over ten years, with the cost of improved military capability in line with NATO standards in new member countries being the responsibility of new members.

Under the terms of the Partnership for Peace strategy, partner countries undertake to make available the necessary personnel, assets, facilities and capabilities to participate in the programme, and share the financial cost of any military exercises in which they participate.

BANK FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENTS (BIS)

Origin. Founded on 17 May 1930, the Bank for International Settlements fosters international monetary and financial co-operation and serves as a bank for central banks.

Aims. The BIS fulfils its mandate by acting as: a forum to promote discussion and facilitate decision-making processes among central banks and within the international financial community; a centre for economic and monetary research; a prime counterparty for central banks in their financial transactions; and an agent or trustee in connection with international financial operations.

Finance. Around 130 central banks and international financial institutions place deposits with the BIS. At 31 March 2002 the total of currency deposits placed with the BIS amounted to about US$154bn., representing around 7·6% of world foreign exchange reserves.

Organization and Membership. There are 50 member central banks. These are the central banks or monetary authorities of Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, China, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hong Kong, Hungary, Iceland, India, Ireland, Italy, Japan, South Korea, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Malaysia, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, Turkey, UK and USA, as well as the European Central Bank.

The BIS is administered by a Board of Directors, which is comprised of the governors of the central banks of Belgium, France, Germany, Italy and the UK and the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the US Federal Reserve System as ex officio members, each of whom appoints another member of the same nationality. The Statutes also provide for the election to the Board of not more than nine Governors of other member central banks. The Governors of the central banks of Canada, Japan, the Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland are currently elected members of the Board.

Headquarters: Centralbahnplatz 2, CH-4002 Basle, Switzerland.

ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT (OECD)

Origin. Founded in 1961 to replace the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC), which was linked to the Marshall Plan and was established in 1948. The change of title marks the Organisation's altered status and functions: with the accession of Canada and USA as full members, it ceased to be a purely European body, and at the same time added development aid to the list of its priorities. The aims of the organization are to promote policies designed to achieve the highest sustainable economic growth and employment and a rising standard of living in member countries, while maintaining financial stability, and thus to contribute to the development of the world economy; to contribute to sound economic expansion in member as well as non-member countries in the process of economic development; and to contribute to the expansion of world trade on a multilateral, non-discriminatory basis in accordance with international obligations.

Members. Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, South Korea, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, UK and USA. Slovakia is the OECD's newest member, joining in Dec. 2000.

Activities. The OECD's main fields of programming are: economic policy; statistics; energy; development co-operation; sustainable development; public management; international trade; financial, fiscal and enterprise affairs; food, agriculture and fisheries; territorial development; environment; science, technology and industry; biotechnology and biodiversity; electronic commerce; initiatives to fight corruption; regulatory reform; ageing society; education, employment, labour and social affairs. Some short-term priority projects in 2003–04 include corporate governance, follow-up to the Doha development agenda, terrorism and risk.

Relations with non-member countries. Through its Centre for Co-operation with Non-Members (CCNM) the OECD maintains co-operative relations with a wide range of transition and emerging market economies covering topics of mutual interest. OECD member country officials and experts engage their non-member counterparts in policy dialogue and conduct peer assessments while sharing each other's rich and varied policy experiences. The year 2001 saw a major restructuring of the activities of the CNNM, grouping its work around Global Forums in eight policy areas where the OECD has particular expertise and where global dialogue can have an important impact on policy-making. The programmes for regions and countries were also reorganized. This strengthened the focus on key areas of institutional and policy reform to ensure that the benefits of globalization are fully shared worldwide. The Global Forums aim to achieve sustained results and to develop stable active networks of policy-makers in OECD member and non-member economies in eight key areas: sustainable development, the knowledge economy, governance, trade, agriculture, taxation, international investment and competition. The regional and country programmes provide for more targeted co-operation with non-members in three areas: Europe and Central Asia; Asia; and South America. There is a general programme for each region, as well as a specific programme for a particular country (Russia, China and Brazil). There are also sub-regional programmes for South Eastern Europe and the Baltic region.

Relations with developing countries. The OECD's Development Assistance Committee (DAC) is the principal body through which the Organisation deals with issues related to co-operation with developing countries. OECD member countries are major aid donors, accounting for more than 95% of total official development assistance (ODA), which amounted to US$53·7bn. worldwide in 2000. Much of the Organisation's development work is focused on how to spend and invest this aid in the most effective manner, so as to reduce poverty and ensure sustainable development in developing countries. Major new developments in 2001 included a milestone agreement on untying aid and the adoption of new guidelines on poverty reduction, conflict prevention, sustainable development and capacity building for trade. In addition, the Development Centre carries out comparative research and policy dialogue to help promote a better understanding in the OECD of the economic and social problems of developing countries and to transfer to them the knowledge, information and experience gained in the development process. The Sahel and West Africa Club (formerly the Club du Sahel) is an informal forum for reflection and exchanging views with and about African countries and working to improve development aid. It creates and facilitates links between OECD member countries and West Africa and between the public and private sectors.

Relations with other international organizations. Under a protocol signed at the same time as the OECD Convention, the European Commission generally takes part in the work of the OECD. EFTA may also send representatives to attend OECD meetings. Formal relations exist with a number of other international organizations, including the ILO, FAO, IMF, IBRD, UNCTAD, IAEA and the Council of Europe.

Relations with civil society. A few non-governmental organizations have been granted consultative status enabling them to discuss subjects of common interest and be consulted in a particular field by the relevant OECD Committee or its officers, notably the Business and Industry Advisory Committee to the OECD (BIAC) and the Trade Union Advisory Committee (TUAC). Since 2000 the OECD has organized, annually, the OECD Forum, an international public conference, offering business, labour and civil society the opportunity to discuss key issues of the 21st century with government ministers and leaders of international organizations. What is unique about the OECD Forum is that it allows participants to shape the outcome of the annual meeting of the Council at Ministerial level.

Organization. The governing body of OECD is the Council, on which each member country is represented. It meets from time to time (usually once a year) at the level of government ministers, with the chairmanship at ministerial level being rotated among member governments. The Council also meets regularly at official level, when it comprises the Secretary-General (chairman) and the Permanent Representatives to OECD (ambassadors who head resident diplomatic missions). It is responsible for all questions of general policy and may establish subsidiary bodies as required to achieve the aims of the organization. Decisions and recommendations of the Council are adopted by agreement of all its members.

The Council is assisted by an Executive Committee which prepares its work and is also called upon to carry out specific tasks where necessary. Apart from its regular meetings, the Committee meets occasionally in special sessions attended by senior governments officials. The greater part of the work of the OECD is prepared and carried out by about 200 specialized bodies (Committees, Working Parties, etc). All members are normally represented on these bodies, except those of a restricted nature. Delegates are usually officials coming either from the capitals of member states or from the Permanent Delegations to the OECD. They are serviced by an International Secretariat headed by the OECD Secretary-General. Funding is by contributions from member states, based on a formula related to their size and economy.

Three other bodies are part of the OECD system: the International Energy Agency (IEA), the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) and the Centre for Educational Research and Innovation (CERI).

EUROPEAN UNION (EU)

Origin. The Union is founded on the existing European communities set up by the Treaties of Paris (1951) and Rome (1957), supplemented by revisions, the Single European Act in 1986, the Maastricht Treaty on European Union in 1992, the Treaty of Amsterdam in 1997 and the draft Treaty of Nice in 2000.

Members. (15). As at April 2003: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Republic of Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the UK.

History. On 19 Sept. 1946, in Zrich, Winston Churchill called for a 'united states of Europe', but neither he nor his successor pressed for British involvement. Two years later, the Congress of Europe (the meeting in The Hague of nearly 1,000 Europeans from 26 countries calling for a united Europe) resulted in the birth in 1949 of the Council of Europe, a European assembly of nations whose aim (Art. 1 of the Statute) was: 'to achieve a greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realizing the ideals and principles which are their common heritage'.

On 18 April 1951, subsequent to a proposal by the French foreign minister Robert Schuman (Schuman Declaration), Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands signed the Treaty of Paris establishing the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC). The treaty provided for the pooling of coal and steel production and was regarded as a first step towards a united Europe. Encouraged by the success of the ECSC, plans were laid down for the establishment of two more communities. The European Economic Community (EEC) and the European Atomic Energy Community (EAEC or Euratom) were subsequently created under separate treaties signed in Rome on 25 March 1957. The treaties provided for the establishment by stages of a common market with a customs union at its core, the approximation of economic policies, and the promotion of growth in the nuclear industries for peaceful purposes.

To this end, Euratom was awarded monopoly powers of acquisition of fissile materials for civil purposes (it is not concerned with the military uses of nuclear power). Subsequently, the various powers of the three communities (ECSC, EAEC, EEC, sometimes referred to collectively as the European Community or EC) were transferred by a treaty signed in Brussels in 1965 to a single Council and single Commission of the European Communities, today the core of the EU. The Commission is advised on matters relating to EAEC by a Scientific and Technical Committee.

Enlargement. On 30 June 1970 membership negotiations began between the European Community and the UK, Denmark, Ireland and Norway. On 22 Jan. 1972 all four countries signed a Treaty of Accession, and with the exception of Norway which later rejected membership in a referendum in Nov. that year, the UK, Denmark and Ireland became full members on 1 Jan. 1973 (though Greenland exercised its autonomy under the Danish Crown to secede in 1985). Greece joined on 1 Jan. 1981; Spain and Portugal on 1 Jan. 1986. The former German Democratic Republic entered into full membership on reunification with Federal Germany in Oct. 1990, and following referenda in favour, Austria, Finland and Sweden became members on 1 Jan. 1995. In a referendum in Nov. 1994 Norway again rejected membership.

Single European Act. The enlarging of the Community resulted in renewed efforts to promote European integration, culminating in the signing in Dec. 1985 of the Single European Act. The SEA represented the first major revision of the Treaties of Rome and provided for greater involvement of the European Parliament in the decision-making process.

Maastricht Treaty on European Union. Further amendments were agreed at the Maastricht Summit of Dec. 1991 in the draft Treaty on European Union whereby moves to a common currency were agreed subject to specific conditions (including an opt-out clause for the UK) and the social dimension was recognized in a protocol (not applicable to the UK) allowing member states to use EC institutions for this purpose. Ratification by member states of the Maastricht Treaty proved unexpectedly controversial. In June 1992 the Danish electorate in a referendum voted against it, then reversed the decision in a second referendum in May 1993. Ratification was finally completed during 1993, with the UK ratifying on 2 Aug., and the European Union (EU) officially came into being on 1 Nov. that year.

Further Enlargement. On 16 July 1997 Jacques Santer presented Agenda 2000, the European Commission's detailed strategy for consolidating the Union through enlargement as far eastwards as Ukraine, Belarus and Moldova. It recommended the early start of accession negotiations with Hungary, Poland, Estonia, the Czech Republic and Slovenia under the provision of Article O of the Maastricht Treaty whereby 'any European State may apply to become a member of the Union' (subject to the Copenhagen Criteria set by the European Council at its summit in 1993).

In 2002 it was announced that ten countries will be ready to join in 2004, namely: Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Slovenia, Cyprus and Malta. Subject to the results of referenda likely to be held during 2003 they are all set to become members on 1 May 2004. A target date of 2007 is proposed for Bulgaria and Romania to join. Turkey is also hoping to become a member, but a decision on whether to start talks on a bid for membership by Turkey will not take place until Dec. 2004. Following a referendum in Ireland in Oct. 2002, all 15 EU member countries have now ratified the 2000 Nice Treaty on EU expansion. An application to join the EU has also been received by Turkey, and the Prince of Liechtenstein has made it known that he wishes his government to apply.

Objectives. The ultimate goal of the EU is 'an ever closer union among the peoples of Europe, in which decisions are taken as closely as possible to the citizen'. Priorities include the implementation of the Treaty of Amsterdam (new rights for citizens, freedom of movement, strengthening the institutions of the EU, employment); economic and monetary union; further expansion of the scope of the Communities; implementation of a common foreign and security policy; and development in the fields of justice and home affairs. At the European Summit held in Nice, France in Dec. 2000 it was agreed to concentrate on four main areas—the charter of fundamental rights, simplifying EU treaties, clarifying the balance of power between the EU and member states, and the possibility of a second chamber of parliament. In Dec. 2001 the Laeken European Conference adopted the Declaration on the Future of the European Union, committing the EU to becoming more democratic, transparent and effective, opening the way to a constitution for the people of Europe. The European Council decided to set up a convention, comprising 105 members, under the chairmanship of former French president Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, to draft an EU constitution.

Structure. The institutional arrangements of the EU provide for an independent policy-making executive with powers of proposal (European Commission), various consultative and advisory bodies, and a decision-making body drawn from the Governments (Council of Ministers).

Defence. In Nov. 2000 European Union defence ministers agreed to commit personnel and equipment to a rapid reaction force that could be deployed in tackling crises in an area up to 4,000 km from Brussels at short notice. The European Union's first ever peacekeeping force (EUFOR) officially started work in Macedonia on 1 April 2003. The rapid reaction force will ultimately have a pool of approximately 100,000 personnel, 400 combat aircraft and 100 warships, but a maximum of 60,000 personnel will be serving at any one time to allow for the rotation of forces in the event of a lengthy operation. Although final numbers have not yet been agreed, Britain, France and Germany are likely to provide the largest number of troops, at around 12,000 to 13,000 each out of the total of 60,000. Denmark has decided to opt out.

The European Union Institute for Security Studies (EUISS) was created by a Council Joint Action in July 2001 with the status of an autonomous agency. It contributes to the development of the Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP) through research and debate on major security and defence issues.

Major Policy Areas. The major policy areas of the EU were laid down in the Treaty of Rome of 25 March 1957 which guaranteed certain rights to the citizens of all member states, including the outlawing of economic discrimination by nationality, and equal pay for equal work as between men and women.

The single internal market. The single internal market represents the core of the process of economic integration and is characterized by the removal of obstacles to the four fundamental freedoms of movement for persons, goods, capital and services. Under the Treaty, individuals or companies from one member state may establish themselves in another country (for the purposes of economic activity) or sell goods or services there on the same basis as nationals of that country. With a few exceptions, restrictions on the movement of capital have also been ended. Under the Single European Act the member states bound themselves to achieve the suppression of all barriers to free movement of persons, goods and services by 31 Dec. 1992.

The Schengen Accord abolished border controls on persons and goods between certain EU states plus Norway and Iceland. It came into effect on 26 March 1995 and was signed by Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

Economic and Monetary Union. The establishment of the single market provided for the next phase of integration: economic and monetary union. The European Monetary System (EMS) was founded in March 1979 to control inflation, protect European trade from international disturbances and ultimately promote convergence between the European economies. At its heart was the Exchange Rate Mechanism (ERM). The ERM is run by the finance ministries and central banks of the EU countries on a day-to-day basis; monthly reviews are carried out by the EU Monetary Committee (finance ministries) and the EU Committee of Central Bankers. Sweden is not in the ERM; the UK suspended its membership on 17 Sept. 1992. In Jan. 1995 Austria joined the ERM. Finland followed in 1996, and in Nov. that year the Italian lira, which had been temporarily suspended, was re-admitted.

With the introduction of the euro, exchange rates have been fixed for all member countries. The member countries are Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain. The euro became legal tender from 1 Jan. 2002 across the region. National currencies ran in parallel for certain periods depending on the country but were phased out by the end of Feb. 2002.

European Monetary Union (EMU). The single European currency with 11 member states came into operation in Jan. 1999 although it was not until 2002 that the currency came into general circulation. Greece subsequently joined in Jan. 2001. The euro-zone is the world's second largest economy after the USA in terms of output and the largest in terms of trade. EMU currency consists of the euro of 100 cents, with coins of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50 cents and 1 and 2 euros and notes of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 200 and 500 euros. EU member countries not in EMU will select a central rate for their currency in consultation with members of the euro bloc and the European Central Bank. The rate is set according to an assessment of each country's chances of joining the euro zone.

An agreement on the legal status of the euro and currency discipline, the Stability and Growth Pact, was reached by all member states at the Dublin summit on 13 Dec. 1996. Financial penalties will be applied to member states running a GDP deficit (negative growth) of up to 0·75%. If GDP falls between 0·75% and 2%, EU finance ministers will have discretion as to whether to apply penalties. Members running an excessive deficit will be automatically exempt from penalties in the event of a natural disaster or if the fall in GDP is at least 2% over one year.

Environment. The Single European Act made the protection of the environment an integral part of economic and social policies. Community policy aims at preventing pollution (the Prevention Principle), rectifying pollution at source, and imposing the costs of prevention or rectification upon the polluters themselves (the Polluter Pays Principle). The European Environment Agency (see below) was established to ensure that policy was based on reliable scientific data.

In March 2002 the 15 European Union member states agreed to be bound by the 1997 Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework on Climate Change, which commits the EU to reduce its emissions of greenhouse gases by 8% from the 1990 levels between 2008 and 2012.

The Common Agricultural Policy (CAP). The objectives set out in the Treaty are to increase agricultural productivity, to ensure a fair standard of living for the agricultural community, to stabilize markets, to assure supplies, and to ensure reasonable consumer prices. In Dec. 1960 the Council laid down the fundamental principles on which the CAP is based: a single market, which calls for common prices, stable currency parities and the harmonizing of health and veterinary legislation; Community preference, which protects the single Community market from imports; common financing, through the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (EAGGF), which seeks to improve agriculture through its Guidance section, and to stabilize markets against world price fluctuations through market intervention, with levies and refunds on exports.

Following the disappearance of stable currency parities, artificial currency levels have been applied in the CAP. This factor, together with over-production owing to high producer prices, meant that the CAP consumed about two-thirds of the Community budget. In May 1992 it was agreed to reform CAP and to control over-production by reducing the price supports to farmers by 29% for cereals, 15% for beef and 5% for dairy products. In June 1995 the guaranteed intervention price for beef was decreased by 5%. In July 1996 agriculture ministers agreed a reduction in the set-aside rate for cereals from 10% to 5%. Fruit and vegetable production subsidies were fixed at no more than 4% of the value of total marketed production, rising to 4·5% in 1999. Compensatory grants are made available to farmers who remove land from production or take early retirement. The CAP reform aims to make the agricultural sector more responsive to supply and demand. Farm spending currently absorbs 46% of the EU budget but accounts for only 1·8% of Europe's GDP.

Customs Union and External Trade Relations. Goods or Services originating in one member state have free circulation within the EU, which implies common arrangements for trade with the rest of the world. Member states can no longer make bilateral trade agreements with third countries; this power has been ceded to the EU. The Customs Union was achieved in July 1968.

In Oct. 1991 a treaty forming the European Economic Area (EEA) was approved by the member states of the then EC and European Free Trade Association (EFTA). Association agreements which could lead to accession or customs union have been made with Cyprus, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Israel, Malta, Morocco and Turkey. The customs union with Turkey came into force on 1 Jan. 1996. Commercial, industrial, technical and financial aid agreements have been made with Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro, Syria and Tunisia. In 1976 Canada signed a framework agreement for co-operation in industrial trade, science and natural resources, and a transatlantic pact was signed with the USA in Dec. 1995. Co-operation agreements also exist with a number of Latin American countries and groupings, and with Arab and Asian countries, and an economic and commercial agreement has been signed with the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN). Partnership and co-operation agreements were signed with Ukraine in June 1994, Kazakhstan in Jan. 1995, Kyrgyzstan in Feb. 1995 and with Uzbekistan in June 1996. In the Development Aid sector, the EU has an agreement (the Cotonou Agreement, signed in 2000, the successor of the Lomé Convention, originally signed in 1975 but renewed and enlarged in 1979, 1984 and 1989) with some 60 African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries which removes customs duties without reciprocal arrangements for most of their imports to the Community.

The application of common duties has been conducted mainly within the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which was succeeded in 1995 by the establishment of the World Trade Organization.

Fisheries. The Common Fisheries Policy (CFP) came into effect in Jan. 1983, according to which all EU fishermen have equal access to the waters of member countries (a zone extending up to 200 nautical miles from the shore around all its coastlines), with the total allowable catch for each species being set and shared out between member countries according to pre-established quotas, with in some cases 'historic rights' applying, as well as special rules to conserve stock, preserve marine biodiversity, and the sustainable pursuit of fishing.

A number of agreements are in place with other countries (Canada, Norway, USA and some African countries) allowing reciprocal fishing rights. When Greenland withdrew from the Community in 1985 EU boats retained their fishing rights subject to quotas and limits, which were revised in 1995 owing to concern about overfishing of Greenland halibut. Agreements were initialled with Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Argentina in 1992.

Transport. Under the Maastricht Treaty, the Community must contribute to the establishment and development of trans-European networks in the areas of transport, telecommunications and energy infrastructures.

Competition. The Competition (anti-trust) law of the EU is based on two principles: that businesses should not seek to nullify the creation of the common market by the erection of artificial national (or other) barriers to the free movement of goods; and against the abuse of dominant positions in any market. These two principles have led among other things to the outlawing of prohibitions on exports to other member states, of price-fixing agreements and of refusal to supply; and to the refusal by the Commission to allow mergers or takeovers by dominant undertakings in specific cases. Increasingly heavy fines are imposed on offenders.

A number of structural funds have been established in an attempt to counter specific problems within and across the Community. These include:

European Social Fund. Provides resources with the aim of combating long-term unemployment and facilitating integration into the labour market of young people and the socially disadvantaged. The 2002 budget included an allocation of around €9,402m. for the Fund's commitments.

European Regional Development Fund. Intended to compensate for the unequal rate of development among different regions of the EU by encouraging investment and improving infrastructure in 'problem regions'.

Finances. The general budget of the EU covers all EEC and Euratom expenditure, and the administrative expenditure of the ECSC.

EU revenue in €1m.:

	Financial year 2001
Agricultural duties	2,155·7
Customs duties	12,813·6
VAT	31,250·0
GNP resource	34,878·8
Miscellaneous revenue	13,492·5
Total	94,210·6

Expenditure for the financial year 2001 was €85,562·3m., of which the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund Guarantee Section accounted for €42,184·4m.

The resources of the Community (the levies and duties mentioned above, and up to a 1·4% VAT charge) have been surrendered to it by Treaty. The Budget is made by the Council and the Parliament acting jointly as the Budgetary Authority. The Parliament has control, within a certain margin, of non-obligatory expenditure (where the amount to be spent is not set out in the legislation concerned), and can also reject the Budget. Otherwise, the Council decides.

EU INSTITUTIONS

EUROPEAN COMMISSION

The European Commission consists of 20 members appointed by the member states (one from each small country, two from each big one) to serve for five years. The Commission President is selected by a consensus of member state heads of government and serves a five-year term. The Commission acts as the EU executive body and as guardian of the Treaties. In this it has the right of initiative (putting proposals to the Council of Ministers for action) and of execution (once the Council has decided). It can take the other institutions or individual countries before the European Court of Justice should any of these fail to comply with European Law. Decisions on legislative proposals made by the Commission are taken in the Council of the European Union. Members of the Commission swear an oath of independence, distancing themselves from partisan influence from any source. The Commission operates through 36 Directorates-General and services.

At the European Summit held in Nice in Dec. 2000 it was decided that in 2005 Germany, France, the UK, Italy and Spain would lose their second commissioner. Each new member state will have one commissioner until there are 27 EU member countries. A permanent limit of fewer than 27 will then be set, with the seats being rotated among member states.

The current Commission took office in Sept. 1999. Members, their nationality and political affiliation (S-Socialist/Social Democrat; C-Christian Democrat/Conservative; L-Liberal; G-Green; Ind-Independent) in March 2003 were as follows.

President: Romano Prodi (Italy, S); responsible for monetary and institutional affairs, foreign policy and common security.

The commissioners are:

Vice-president: Neil Kinnock (UK, S); responsible for personnel and administrative EU reform.

Vice-president: Loyola de Palacio (Spain, C); responsible for transport, energy and relations with European parliament.

Agriculture, Rural Development and Fisheries: Franz Fischler (Austria, C).
Budget: Michaele Schreyer (Germany, G).
Competition: Mario Monti (Italy, Ind).
Development and Humanitarian Aid: Poul Nielson (Denmark, S).
Economic and Monetary Affairs: Pedro Solbes Mira (Spain, S).
Education and Culture: Viviane Reding (Luxembourg, C).
Employment and Social Affairs: Anna Diamantopoulou (Greece, S).
Enlargement: Günter Verheugen (Germany, S).
Enterprise and Information Society: Erkki Liikanen (Finland, S).
Environment: Margot Wallström (Sweden, S).
External Relations: Chris Patten (UK, C).
Health and Consumer Protection: David Byrne (Ireland, C).
Internal Market, Taxation and Customs Union: Frits Bolkestein (Netherlands, L)
Justice and Home Affairs: António Vitorino (Portugal, S).
Regional Policy: Michel Barnier (France, C).
Research: Philippe Busquin (Belgium, S).
Trade: Pascal Lamy (France, S).

Headquarters: 200 rue de la Loi/Wetstraat, B-1049 Brussels, Belgium.
Secretary-General: David O'Sullivan (Ireland).

COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION (COUNCIL OF MINISTERS)

The Council of Ministers consists of ministers from the 15 national governments and is the only institution which directly represents the member states' national interests. It is the Union's principal decision-making body. Here, members legislate for the Union, set its political objectives, co-ordinate their national policies and resolve differences between themselves and other institutions. The presidency rotates every six months. Greece had the presidency during the first half of 2003, Italy has the presidency during the second half of 2003, Ireland will have it during the first half of 2004 and the Netherlands during the second half of 2004. Meetings are held in Brussels, except in April, June and Oct. when all meetings are in Luxembourg. Around 100 formal ministerial sessions are held each year. In 1999 the final adoption of some 200 legal acts took place.

Decisions are taken either by qualified majority vote or by unanimity. Since the adoption of the Single European Act, an increasing number of decisions are by majority vote, although some areas such as taxation and social security, immigration and border controls are reserved to unanimity. At the Nice Summit in Dec. 2000 agreement was reached that a further 39 articles of the EU's treaties would move to qualified majority voting. 27 votes are needed to veto a decision, and member states carry the following vote weightings: France, Germany, Italy and the UK, 10; Spain, 8; Belgium, Greece, the Netherlands and Portugal, 5; Austria and Sweden, 4; Denmark, Finland and the Republic of Ireland, 3; Luxembourg, 2. From the accession of the new EU member countries in May 2004 until the end of 2004 these will remain unchanged but the new members will have between 2 votes (in the case of Cyprus and Malta) and 8 (in the case of Poland). At the European Council meeting in Brussels in Oct. 2002 the allocation of vote weightings from 1 Jan. 2005 was agreed. The new allocation is to be: France, Germany, Italy and the UK, 29; Poland and Spain, 27; the Netherlands, 13; Belgium, the Czech Republic, Greece, Hungary and Portugal, 12; Austria and Sweden, 10; Denmark, Finland, the Republic of Ireland, Lithuania and Slovakia, 7; Cyprus, Estonia, Latvia, Luxembourg and Slovenia, 4; Malta 3. Each member state has a national delegation in Brussels known as the Permanent Representation, headed by Permanent Representatives, senior diplomats whose committee (Coreper) prepares ministerial sessions. Coreper meets weekly and its main task is to ensure that only the most difficult and sensitive issues are dealt with at ministerial level.

The Secretariat provides the practical infrastructure of the Council at all levels. The JHA (Co-operation in the fields of Justice and Home Affairs), established in the Maastricht Treaty, brings together the ministries of justice and the interior of the 15 member states. It permits dialogue and co-operation between the police, customs, immigration services and justice departments of the member states in order to combat problems relating to both civil and criminal matters. The CFSP (the Common Foreign and Security Policy), also established by the Maastricht Treaty, came into force on 1 Nov. 1993.

Legislation. The Community's legislative process starts with a proposal from the Commission (either at the suggestion of its services or in pursuit of its declared political aims) to the Council, or in the case of co-decision, to both the Council and the European Parliament. The Council generally seeks the views of the European Parliament on the proposal, and the Parliament adopts a formal Opinion after consideration of the matter by its specialist Committees. The Council may also (and in some cases is obliged to) consult the Economic and Social Committee which similarly delivers an opinion. When these opinions have been received, the Council will decide. Most decisions are taken on a majority basis, but will take account of reservations expressed by individual member states. The text eventually approved may differ substantially from the original Commission proposal.

Provisions of the Treaties and secondary legislation may be either directly applicable in member states or only applicable after member states have enacted their own implementing legislation. Community law, adopted by the Council (or by Parliament and the Council in the framework of the co-decision procedure) may take the following forms: (1) Regulations, which are of general application and binding in their entirety and directly applicable in all member states; (2) Directives, which are binding upon each member state as to the result to be achieved within a given time, but leave the national authority the choice of form and method of achieving this result; and (3) Decisions, which are binding in their entirety on their addressees. In addition the Council and Commission can issue recommendations and opinions which have no binding force.

Transparency. The Council is trying to make more of its work accessible to its citizens. Votes on legislative matters, as well as the explanations of these votes, are now automatically made public and Council documents can be released to the public upon request. Other attempts to improve transparency include briefings for journalists and the provision of background notes on subjects under discussion.

THE EUROPEAN COUNCIL

Since 1974 Heads of State or Government have met at least twice a year (in the capital of the member state currently exercising the presidency of the Council of European Union) in the form of the European Council or European Summit as it is commonly known. Its membership includes the President of the European Commission, and the President of the European Parliament is invited to make a presentation at the opening session. The European Council has become an increasingly important element of the Union, setting priorities, giving political direction, providing the impetus for its development and resolving contentious issues that prove too difficult for the Council of the European Union. It has become directly responsible for common policies within the fields of foreign and security policy, justice and home affairs. Though there was no provision made for its existence in the original Treaty of Rome, its position was later acknowledged and formalized in the Single European Act.

At the European Council's Barcelona Summit in March 2002 a series of key decisions were reached, notably: free choice of supplier for non-household users of electricity and gas as from 2004; go-ahead for Galileo, the EU reply to the US dominance of global satellite positioning technology; adoption of seven financial services directives before the end of 2002, with the goal of full integration of financial services markets by 2005; research and development spending to be raised to 3% of EU GDP by 2010 from current 1·9%; widespread availability of broadband technology by 2005; implementation in 2004 of 'Single Sky' Europe-wide air traffic control area to speed air travel; labour mobility to be improved by more flexible pension and healthcare arrangements; creation of more jobs through reform of tax and benefit systems and reduced incentives for early retirement; provision of childcare for 90% of children aged between three and school age by 2010; children to be taught at least two foreign languages 'from a very early age'; one internet-connected computer to be available for every 15 school pupils by end-2003; commitment to EU average development aid of 0·39% of gross national income by 2006, with goal of member states reaching UN target of 0·7% of GDP.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

The European Parliament consists of 626 members, elected in all 15 member states for five-year terms on 10 and 13 June 1999. A proportional representation system was used in Great Britain for the first time.

All EU citizens may stand or vote in their adoptive country of residence. Germany returned 99 members, France, Italy and the UK 87 each, Spain 64, the Netherlands 31, Belgium, Greece and Portugal 25 each, Sweden 22, Austria 21, Denmark and Finland 16 each, Ireland 15 and Luxembourg 6. At the EU summit held in Nice, France in Dec. 2000 the parliamentary allocation of seats after the forthcoming expansion of the EU to include the 12 candidate countries was announced. Out of a total of 732 seats, Germany would still have 99, but France, Italy and the UK would have 72 each, Poland and Spain 50 each, Romania 33, the Netherlands 25, Belgium, Greece and Portugal 22 each, the Czech Republic and Hungary 20 each, Sweden 18, Austria and Bulgaria 17 each, Denmark, Finland and Slovakia 13 each, Ireland and Lithuania 12 each, Latvia 8, Slovenia 7, Cyprus, Estonia and Luxembourg 6 each, and Malta 5.

Political groupings. Following the 1999 elections to the European Parliament the European People's Party (EPP) had 233 seats, Party of European Socialists (PES) 180, European Liberal Democratic and Reformist Group (ELDR) 51, Greens/European Free Alliance (GR/EFA) 48, European Unitary Left (EUL) 42, Union for a Europe of Nations (UEN) 31, Europe of Democracies and Diversities (EDD) 16, Independents (I) 25.

The Parliament has a right to be consulted on a wide range of legislative proposals and forms one arm of the Community's Budgetary Authority. Under the Single European Act, it gained greater authority in legislation through the 'concertation' procedure under which it can reject certain Council drafts in a second reading procedure. Under the Maastricht Treaty, it gained the right of 'co-decision' on legislation with the Council of Ministers on a restricted range of domestic matters. The President of the European Council must report to the Parliament on progress in the development of foreign and security policy. It also plays an important role in appointing the President and members of the Commission. It can hold individual commissioners to account and can pass a motion of censure on the entire Commission, a prospect that was realized in March 1999 when the Commission, including the President, Jacques Santer, was forced to resign following an investigation into mismanagement and corruption. Parliament's seat is in Strasbourg where the one-week plenary sessions are held each month. In the Chamber, members sit in political groups, not as national delegations. All the activities of the Parliament and its bodies are the responsibility of the Bureau, consisting of the President and 14 Vice-Presidents elected for a two-and-a-half year period.

Location: Brussels, but meets at least once a month in Strasbourg.
President: Pat Cox (Ireland; ELDR).

COURT OF JUSTICE OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

The Court of Justice of the European Communities is composed of 15 judges and eight advocates-general. It is responsible for the adjudication of disputes arising out of the application of the treaties, and its findings are enforceable in all member countries. A Court of First Instance (est. 1989) handles certain categories of cases, including cases arising under the competition rules of the EC and cases brought by Community officials.

Address: Court of Justice of the European Communities, L-2925 Luxembourg.
President of the Court of Justice: Gil Carlos Rodríguez Iglesias (Spain).
President of the Court of First Instance: Bo Vesterdorf (Denmark).

EUROPEAN COURT OF AUDITORS

The European Court of Auditors was established by a treaty of 22 July 1975 which took effect on 1 June 1977. It consists of 15 members and was raised to the status of a full EU institution by the 1993 Maastricht Treaty. It audits the accounts and verifies the implementation of the budget of the EU.

Address: 12, rue Alcide De Gasperi, L-1615 Luxembourg.
President: Juan Manuel Fabra Vallés (Spain).

EUROPEAN OMBUDSMAN

The Ombudsman was inaugurated in 1995 and deals with complaints from citizens, companies and organizations concerning maladministration in the activities of the institutions and bodies of the European Union. The present incumbent is Nikiforos Diamandouros (Greece).

Address: 1 avenue du Président Robert Schuman, B.P. 403, F-67001 Strasbourg Cedex, France.

EUROPEAN INVESTMENT BANK (EIB)

The EIB is the financing institution of the European Union, created by the Treaty of Rome in 1958 as an autonomous body set up to finance capital investment furthering European integration. To this end, the Bank raises its resources on the world's capital markets where it mobilizes significant volumes of funds on favourable terms. It directs these funds towards capital projects promoting EU economic policies. Outside the Union the EIB implements the financial components of agreements concluded under European Union development aid and co-operation policies. The members of the EIB are the member states of the European Union, who have all subscribed to the Bank's capital. Its governing body is its Board of Governors consisting of the ministers designated by each of the member states, usually the finance ministers.

Address: 100 Bd Konrad Adenauer, L-2950 Luxembourg.
Website: http://www.eib.org
President and Chairman of the Board: Philippe Maystadt (Belgium).

EUROPEAN SYSTEM OF CENTRAL BANKS (ESCB)

The ESCB is composed of the European Central Bank (ECB) and 15 National Central Banks (NCBs). The NCBs of the member states not participating in the euro area are members with special status; while they are allowed to conduct their respective national monetary policies, they do not take part in decision-making regarding the single monetary policy for the euro area and the implementation of these policies. The Governing Council of the ECB makes a distinction between the ESCB and the 'Eurosystem' which is composed of the ECB and the 12 fully participating NCBs.

Members. The 12 fully participating National Central Banks are from: Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain. The three members with special status are: Denmark, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Functions. The primary objective of the ESCB is to maintain price stability. Without prejudice to this, the ESCB supports general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community. Tasks to be carried out include: i) defining and implementing the monetary policy of the Community; ii) conducting foreign exchange operations; iii) holding and managing the official foreign reserves of the participating member states; iv) promoting the smooth operation of payment systems; v) supporting the policies of the competent authorities relating to the prudential supervision of credit institutions and the stability of the financial system.

The ECB has the exclusive right to issue banknotes within the Community.

Organization. The ESCB is governed by the decision-making bodies of the ECB: the Governing Council and the Executive Board. The Governing Council is the supreme decision-making body and comprises all members of the Executive Board plus the governors of the NCBs forming the Eurosystem. The Executive Board comprises the president, vice-president and four other members, appointed by common accord of the heads of state and government of the participating member states. There is also a General Council which will exist while there remain members with special status.

Address: Kaiserstrasse 29, 60311 Frankfurt am Main, Germany.
President: Willem Frederik Duisenberg (Netherlands).

The Consultative Bodies There are two main consultative committees whose members are appointed in a personal capacity and are not bound by any mandatory instruction.

1. Economic and Social Committee. The 222-member committee is consulted by the Council of Ministers or by the European Commission, particularly with regard to agriculture, free movement of workers, harmonization of laws and transport. It is served by a permanent and independent General Secretariat, headed by a Secretary-General.

Secretary-General: Patrick Venturini (France).

2. Committee of the Regions. A new advisory body established by the Maastricht Treaty and consisting of 222 full members and an equal number of alternate members appointed by the Council for a four-year term. The Committee must be consulted on matters regarding education, culture, public health, trans-European networks, economic and social cohesion, and on any issue with regional implications.

President: Sir Albert Bore (United Kingdom).

STATISTICAL OFFICE OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES (EUROSTAT)

Eurostat's mission is to provide the EU with a high-quality statistical service. It receives statistical data collected according to uniform rules from the national statistical institutes of member states, then consolidates and harmonizes the data, before making them available to the public as printed or electronic publications. The data are directly available from the Data Shop network and from EUR-OP distribution networks.

Address: Jean Monnet Building, L-2920 Luxembourg.
Data Shop: Rue de la Loi 120, B-1049 Brussels, Belgium.

EU General information. Available as free-of-charge publications. The Official Journal, other official documents, specialized publications and databases addressing professional needs can be ordered from the EUR-OP network.

Address: Jean Monnet Building, rue Alcide de Gasperi, L-2920 Luxembourg.

EU AGENCIES AND OTHER BODIES

COMMUNITY PLANT VARIETY OFFICE Launched in 1995 to administer a system of plant variety rights. The system allows Community Plant Variety Rights (CPVRs), valid throughout the European Union, to be granted for new plant varieties as sole and exclusive form of Community intellectual property rights.

Address: P.O Box 2141-3, Boulevard Maréchal Foch, F-49021 Angers Cédex 02, France.

EUROPEAN AGENCY FOR THE EVALUATION OF MEDICINAL PRODUCTS Founded in 1995 to evaluate the quality and effectiveness of health products for human and veterinary use.

Address: 7 Westferry Circus, Canary Wharf, London E14 4HB, UK.

EUROPEAN AGENCY FOR RECONSTRUCTION Founded in 2000, with responsibility for the management of the main EU assistance programmes in Serbia and Montenegro and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Address: Egnatia 4, Thessaloniki 54626, Greece.

EUROPEAN AGENCY FOR SAFETY AND HEALTH AT WORK Founded in 1996 in order to serve the information needs of people with an interest in occupational safety and health.

Address: Gran Via 33, E-48009 Bilbao, Spain.

EUROPEAN CENTRE FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF VOCATIONAL TRAINING Generally known as Cedefop (Centre Européen pour le Développement de la Formation Professionnelle), it was set up to help policy-makers and practitioners of the European Commission, the member states and social partner organizations across Europe make informed choices about vocational training policy.

Address: PO Box 22427, Thessaloniki 55102, Greece.

EUROPEAN ENVIRONMENT AGENCY Launched by the EU in 1993 with a mandate to orchestrate, cross-check and put to strategic use information of relevance to the protection and improvement of Europe's environment. Based in Copenhagen, it has a mandate to ensure objective, reliable and comprehensive information on the environment at European level to enable its members to take the requisite measures to protect it. The Agency carries out its tasks through the European Information and Observation Network (EIONET). Membership is open to countries outside the EU that share the Agency's concerns. Current membership includes all EU countries, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway. The EU accession countries joined the EEA in 2002.

Address: Kongens Nytorv 6, 1050 Copenhagen K, Denmark.

EUROPEAN FOUNDATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF LIVING AND WORKING CONDITIONS Launched in 1975 to contribute to the planning and establishment of better living and working conditions. The Foundation's role is to provide findings, knowledge and advice from comparative research managed in a European perspective, which respond to the needs of the key parties at the EU level.

Address: Wyatville Road, Loughlinstown, Dublin 18, Ireland.

EUROPEAN INVESTMENT FUND Founded in 1994 as the European Union's specialized financial institution. It has a dual mission that combines the pursuit of objectives such as innovation, the creation of employment and regional development with maintaining a commercial approach to investments. It particularly provides venture capital and guarantee instruments for the growth of small and medium-sized enterprises.

Address: 43 avenue J. F. Kennedy, L-2968 Luxembourg.

EUROPEAN MONITORING CENTRE FOR DRUGS AND DRUG ADDICTION Established in 1993 to provide the European Union and its member states with objective, reliable and comparable information on a European level concerning drugs and drug addiction and their consequences.

Address: Rua da Cruz de Santa Apolónia 23–25, PT-1149-045 Lisbon, Portugal.

EUROPEAN MONITORING CENTRE ON RACISM AND XENOPHOBIA Established in 1997 as an independent body to contribute towards the combat against racism, xenophobia and anti-semitism throughout Europe. It has the task of reviewing the extent and development of the racist, xenophobic and anti-semitic phenomena in the European Union and promoting 'best practice' among the member states.

Address: Rahlgasse 3, A-1060 Vienna, Austria.

EUROPEAN TRAINING FOUNDATION Launched in 1995 to contribute to the process of vocational education and training reform that is currently taking place within the EU's partner countries and territories.

Address: Villa Gualino, viale Settimio Severo 65, I-10133 Turin, Italy.

EUROPOL Founded on 3 Jan. 1994 to exchange criminal intelligence between EU countries. Its precursor was the Europol Drug Unit, which initially dealt with the fight against drugs, progressively adding other areas. Europol took up its full activities on 1 July 1999. Europol's current mandate includes the prevention and combat of illicit drug trafficking, crimes involving illegal immigration networks, illicit vehicle trafficking, trafficking in human beings including child pornography, forgery of money and means of payment, illicit trafficking in nuclear and radioactive substances, terrorism and associated money laundering activities. There are about 300 staff members from all member states. Of these, 44 are ELOs (Europol Liaison Officers) working for their national police, gendarmerie or customs services. The 2001 budget was €35·4m. Member countries subscribe in proportion to their GNP.

Address: Raamweg 47, The Hague, Netherlands.
Website: http://www.europol.eu.int
e-mail: info@europol.eu.int
Director: Jürgen Storbeck (Germany).

OFFICE FOR HARMONIZATION IN THE INTERNAL MARKET The Office was established in 1994, and is responsible for registering Community trade marks and designs. Both Community trade marks and Community designs confer their proprietors a uniform right, which confers all member states of the EU by means of one single application and one single registration procedure.

Address: Avenida de Europa 4, Apartado de Correos 77, E-03080 Alicante, Spain.

TRANSLATION CENTRE FOR BODIES OF THE EUROPEAN UNION Founded in 1994 to support EU agencies and offices in the accurate translation of important communications.

Address: Bâtiment Nouvel Hémicycle 1, rue du Fort Thüngen, L-1499 Luxembourg Kirchberg, Luxembourg.

EUROPEAN FOOD SAFETY AGENCY Founded in 2002 to provide independent scientific advice on all matters with a direct or indirect impact on food safety.

Address: Rue de Genève 1, B-1140 Brussels, Belgium.

COUNCIL OF EUROPE

Origin and Membership. In 1948 the Congress of Europe, bringing together at The Hague nearly 1,000 influential Europeans from 26 countries, called for the creation of a united Europe, including a European Assembly. This proposal, examined first by the Ministerial Council of the Brussels Treaty Organization, then by a conference of ambassadors, was at the origin of the Council of Europe, which is, with its 45 member States, the widest organization bringing together all European democracies. The Statute of the Council was signed at London on 5 May 1949 and came into force two months later.

The founder members were Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the UK. Turkey and Greece joined in 1949, Iceland in 1950, the Federal Republic of Germany in 1951 (having been an associate since 1950), Austria in 1956, Cyprus in 1961, Switzerland in 1963, Malta in 1965, Portugal in 1976, Spain in 1977, Liechtenstein in 1978, San Marino in 1988, Finland in 1989, Hungary in 1990, Czechoslovakia (after partitioning, the Czech Republic and Slovakia rejoined in 1993) and Poland in 1991, Bulgaria in 1992, Estonia, Lithuania, Romania and Slovenia in 1993, Andorra in 1994, Albania, Latvia, Macedonia, Moldova and Ukraine in 1995, Croatia and Russia in 1996, Georgia in 1999, Armenia and Azerbaijan in 2001, Bosnia-Herzegovina in 2002, and Serbia and Montenegro in 2003.

Membership is limited to European states which 'accept the principles of the rule of law and of the enjoyment by all persons within [their] jurisdiction of human rights and fundamental freedoms'. The Statute provides for both withdrawal (Article 7) and suspension (Articles 8 and 9). Greece withdrew during 1969–74.

Aims and Achievements. Article 1 of the Statute states that the Council's aim is 'to achieve a greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realizing the ideals and principles which are their common heritage and facilitating their economic and social progress'; 'this aim shall be pursued ... by discussion of questions of common concern and by agreements and common action'. The only limitation is provided by Article 1 (d), which excludes 'matters relating to national defence'.

The main areas of the Council's activity are: human rights, the media, social and socio-economic questions, education, culture and sport, youth, public health, heritage and environment, local and regional government, and legal co-operation. 188 Conventions and Agreements have been concluded covering such matters as social security, cultural affairs, conservation of European wildlife and natural habitats, protection of archaeological heritage, extradition, medical treatment, equivalence of degrees and diplomas, the protection of television broadcasts, adoption of children and transportation of animals.

Treaties in the legal field include the adoption of the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism, the European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers and the Transfer of Sentenced Persons. The Committee of Ministers adopted a European Convention for the protection of individuals with regard to the automatic processing of personal data (1981), a Convention on the compensation of victims of violent crimes (1983), a Convention on spectator violence and misbehaviour at sport events and in particular at football matches (1985), the European Charter of Local Government (1985), and a Convention for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (1987). The European Social Charter of 1961 sets out the social and economic rights which all member governments agree to guarantee to their citizens.

European Social Charter. The Charter defines the rights and principles which are the basis of the Council's social policy, and guarantees a number of social and economic rights to the citizen, including the right to work, the right to form workers' organizations, the right to social security and assistance, the right of the family to protection and the right of migrant workers to protection and assistance. Two committees, comprising independent and government experts, supervise the parties' compliance with their obligations under the Charter. A revised charter, incorporating new rights such as protection for those without jobs and opportunities for workers with family responsibilities, was opened for signature on 3 May 1996 and signed by 13 members.

Human rights. The promotion and development of human rights is one of the major tasks of the Council of Europe. The European Convention on Human Rights, signed in 1950, set up special machinery to guarantee internationally fundamental rights and freedoms. The European Commission of Human Rights which was set up has now been abolished and has been replaced by the new European Court of Human Rights, which came into operation on 1 Nov. 1998. The European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, set up under the European Convention on Human Rights as amended, is composed of a number of judges equal to that of the Contracting States (currently 41). There is no restriction on the number of judges of the same nationality. Judges are elected by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe for a term of six years. The terms of office of one half of the judges elected at the first election expired after three years, so as to ensure that the terms of office of one half of the judges are renewed every three years. Any Contracting State (State application) or individual claiming to be a victim of a violation of the Convention (individual application) may lodge directly with the Court in Strasbourg an application alleging a breach by a Contracting State of one of the Convention rights.

President of the European Court of Human Rights: Luzius Wildhaber (Switzerland).

The Development Bank, formerly the Social Development Fund, was created in 1956. The main purpose of the Bank is to give financial aid in the spheres of housing, vocational training, regional planning and development.

The European Youth Foundation provides money to subsidize activities by European youth organizations in their own countries.

Structure. Under the Statute, two organs were set up: an intergovernmental Committee of [Foreign] Ministers with powers of decision and recommendation to governments, and an interparliamentary deliberative body, the Parliamentary Assembly (referred to in the Statute as the Consultative Assembly)—both served by the Secretariat. A Joint Committee acts as an organ of co-ordination and liaison between the two and gives members an opportunity to exchange views on matters of important European interest. In addition, a number of committees of experts have been established. On municipal matters the Committee of Ministers receives recommendations from the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe. The Committee usually meets twice a year and has a rotatory chair; their deputies meet for several days each month.

The Parliamentary Assembly consists of 313 parliamentarians elected or appointed by their national parliaments (Albania 4, Andorra 2, Armenia 4, Austria 6, Azerbaijan 6, Belgium 7, Bosnia-Herzegovina 5, Bulgaria 6, Croatia 5, Cyprus 3, the Czech Republic 7, Denmark 5, Estonia 3, Finland 5, France 18, Georgia 5, Germany 18, Greece 7, Hungary 7, Iceland 3, Ireland 4, Italy 18, Latvia 3, Liechtenstein 2, Lithuania 4, Luxembourg 3, Macedonia 3, Malta 3, Moldova 5, Netherlands 7, Norway 5, Poland 12, Portugal 7, Romania 10, Russia 18, San Marino 2, Serbia and Montenegro 7, Slovakia 5, Slovenia 3, Spain 12, Sweden 6, Switzerland 6, Turkey 12, Ukraine 12, UK 18). It meets three times a year for approximately a week. The work of the Assembly is prepared by parliamentary committees. Since June 1989 representatives of a number of central and East European countries have been permitted to attend as non-voting members ('special guests'). Armenia and Azerbaijan have subsequently become full members.

Although without legislative powers, the Assembly acts as the powerhouse of the Council, initiating European action in key areas by making recommendations to the Committee of Ministers. As the widest parliamentary forum in Western Europe, the Assembly also acts as the conscience of the area by voicing its opinions on important current issues. These are embodied in Resolutions. The Ministers' role is to translate the Assembly's recommendations into action, particularly as regards lowering the barriers between the European countries, harmonizing their legislation or introducing, where possible, common European laws, abolishing discrimination on grounds of nationality, and undertaking certain tasks on a joint European basis.

WESTERN EUROPEAN UNION (WEU)

Origin. In March 1948 the signing of the Brussels Treaty of Economic, Social and Cultural Collaboration and Collective Defence by Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Netherlands and the UK opened the way for the establishment of the Western European Union. Six years later, the Paris Agreements, signed in Oct. 1954, which amended the Brussels Treaty, gave birth to WEU as a new international organization and provided for the Federal Republic of Germany and Italy to join. WEU came into being in 1955. Today, as an international defence and security organization, it brings together 28 nations encompassing four types of status: member state, associate member, observer and associate partner. Only the ten member states are signatories to the modified Brussels Treaty and have full decision making rights in WEU. The other 18 countries have been increasingly associated with WEU's activities. WEU's role and operational capabilities developed considerably after 1991. This development was based on close co-operation with the European Union and NATO. WEU acquired the necessary instruments to undertake any European-led crisis management operations and worked to develop them further as preparation for the establishment within the European Union of a crisis management capability in accordance with the decisions taken at the Cologne European Council in June 1999. Following decisions taken by the European Council since its meeting in Cologne to strengthen the European Security and Defence Policy within the EU, WEU relinquished its crisis management functions to the EU on 1 July 2001.

Member states. Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the UK. Associate members: Czech Republic, Hungary, Iceland, Norway, Poland and Turkey. Observers: Austria, Denmark, Finland, Ireland and Sweden. Associate partners: Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia.

Reform. A joint meeting of the foreign and defence ministers within the WEU framework, held in Rome on 26–27 Oct. 1984, was marked by the adoption of the founding text of WEU's reactivation: the Rome Declaration. Work on the definition of a European security identity and the gradual harmonization of its members' defence policies were among the stated objectives. Ministers recognized the 'continuing necessity to strengthen western security, and that better utilization of WEU would not only contribute to the security of Western Europe but also to an improvement in the common defence of all the countries of the Atlantic Alliance'.

In 1987 WEU foreign and defence ministers adopted the Hague Platform on European Security Interests, defining the conditions and criteria for European security, and the responsibilities of WEU members to provide an integrated Europe with a security and defence dimension. In 1987 and 1988, following the laying of mines in the Persian Gulf during the Iran–Iraq war, minesweepers dispatched by WEU countries helped secure free movement in international waters. Operation Cleansweep helped to complete the clearance of a 480-km sea lane from the Strait of Hormuz, and was the first instance of a concerted action in WEU. During the Gulf Crisis, at the end of 1990 and early 1991, co-ordinated action took place among WEU nations contributing forces and other forms of support to the coalition forces involved in the liberation of Kuwait.

In Maastricht, on 10 Dec. 1991, WEU ministers stated that: 'WEU will be developed as the defence component of the European Union and as the means to strengthen the European pillar of the Atlantic Alliance. To this end, it will formulate common European defence policy and carry forward its concrete implementation through the further development of its own operational role'. The Declaration then proposed ways of strengthening WEU's relations with the European Union and NATO, as well as measures to develop its operational role. A number of practical decisions were taken, including the transfer of the WEU headquarters from London to Brussels, which was completed in Jan. 1993.

At a meeting in Bonn in June 1992 WEU ministers went on to adopt the Petersberg Declaration, agreeing that the WEU should have a military capability in order to conduct humanitarian and rescue tasks, peacekeeping tasks and tasks of combat forces in crisis management, including peacemaking (the so-called 'Petersberg tasks') at the initiative of the WEU Council or following a request by the European Union, the OSCE or the UN.

At the Alliance Summit of Jan. 1994 NATO leaders gave their full support to the development of a European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI) and to the strengthening of the WEU. They declared their readiness to make collective assets of the Alliance available for WEU operations. The Alliance leaders also endorsed the concept of Combined Joint Task Forces (CJTFs) with the objective not only of adapting Alliance structures to NATO's new missions but also of improving co-operation with the WEU, and in order to reflect the emerging ESDI. Work on the CJTF concept came to fruition at the NATO Ministerial meeting in Berlin in June 1996. One of the fundamental objectives of the Alliance adaptation process identified by NATO Ministers in Berlin was the development of the European Security and Defence Identity within the Alliance.

With the agreement on the Treaty of Amsterdam revising the Treaty on European Union, WEU has drawn closer to the EU. In particular, the European Council's guidelines for the Common Foreign Security Policy (CFSP) 'shall obtain in respect of WEU for those matters for which the Union avails itself of the WEU'; and the Petersberg tasks have been incorporated into the EU Treaty. It is stated that WEU is an integral part of the development of the European Union, giving the Union access to an operational capability, notably in the context of the Petersberg tasks. In the WEU Ministerial Declaration of 22 July 1997 responding to the Treaty of Amsterdam, WEU confirmed its readiness to develop WEU's relations with the EU and work out arrangements for enhanced co-operation.

Further to the decisions taken by the Cologne European Council in June 1999, the EU is setting up the capabilities and instruments needed to fulfil its new responsibilities in the area of conflict prevention and crisis management tasks. Following decisions taken by the European Council since its meeting in Cologne to strengthen the European Security and Defence Policy within the EU, WEU relinquished its crisis management functions to the EU. However, the organization has not disappeared. The necessary WEU functions and structures are in place to enable the WEU member states to fulfil the commitments of the modified Brussels Treaty, particularly those arising from Article V (collective defence) and Article IX (relations with the WEU Parliamentary Assembly). They also provide support to the Western European Armaments Group (WEAG), which continues to carry out its functions of reflection and co-operation in the armament field, and to the Western European Armaments Organisation (WEAO).

Operations. In the context of the Yugoslav conflict, WEU has undertaken three operations, two of them to help in the enforcement of sanctions imposed by the UN Security Council (the WEU/NATO operation SHARP GUARD in the Adriatic and the WEU Danube operation) and one to assist in the European Union administration of the town of Mostar. From 1997 to 2001 WEU deployed a Multinational Advisory Police Element (MAPE) in Albania to assist in the reorganization of the Albanian Police. A WEU Demining Assistance Mission to Croatia (WEUDAM), operating from May 1999 to Nov. 2001, provided advice, technical expertise and training support to the Croatian Mine Action Centre.

Organization. WEU comprises an intergovernmental policy-making council and an assembly of parliamentary representatives, together with a number of subsidiary bodies set up by the council to facilitate its work. Since the 1984 reforms, the Council, supreme authority of the WEU, meets twice a year at ministerial level (foreign and defence) in the capital of the presiding country. The presidency rotates biannually. The Permanent Council, chaired by the Secretary-General, meets whenever necessary at ambassadorial level, at the WEU headquarters in Brussels. The WEU Assembly, located in Paris, comprises 115 parliamentarians of member states and meets twice a year, in plenary sessions in Paris. There are Permanent Committees on: defence questions and armaments; political affairs; technological and aerospace questions; budgetary affairs and administration; rules of procedure and privileges; and parliamentary and public relations.

ORGANIZATION FOR SECURITY AND CO-OPERATION IN EUROPE (OSCE)

The OSCE is a pan-European security organization of 55 participating states. It was established as a primary instrument in its region for early warning, conflict prevention, crisis management and post-conflict rehabilitation in Europe.

Origin. Initiatives from both NATO and the Warsaw Pact culminated in the first summit Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe (CSCE) attended by heads of state and government in Helsinki on 30 July–1 Aug. 1975. It adopted the Helsinki Final Act laying down ten principles governing the behaviour of States towards their citizens and each other, concerning human rights, self-determination and the interrelations of the participant states. The CSCE was to serve as a multilateral forum for dialogue and negotiations between East and West.

The Helsinki Final Act comprised three main sections: 1) politico-military aspects of security: principles guiding relations between and among participating States and military confidence-building measures; 2) co-operation in the fields of economics, science and technology and the environment; 3) co-operation in humanitarian and other fields.

From CSCE to OSCE. The Paris Summit of Nov. 1990 set the CSCE on a new course. In the Charter of Paris for a New Europe, the CSCE was called upon to contribute to managing the historic change in Europe and respond to the new challenges of the post-Cold War period. At the meeting, members of NATO and the Warsaw Pact signed an important Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE) and a declaration that they were ‘no longer adversaries’ and did not intend to ‘use force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state’. All 34 participants adopted the Confidence and Security-Building Measures (CSBMs), which pertained to the exchange of military information, verification of military installations, objection to unusual military activities etc., and signed the Charter of Paris. The Charter sets out principles of human rights, democracy and the rule of law to which all the signatories undertake to adhere, and lays down the bases for east-west co-operation and other future action. In July 1992 member nations unanimously agreed to set up an armed peacekeeping force. The 1994 Budapest Summit recognized that the CSCE was no longer a conference and on 1 Jan. 1995 the CSCE changed its name to the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE). The 1996 Lisbon Summit elaborated the OSCE’s key role in fostering security and stability in all their dimensions. It also stimulated the development of an OSCE Document-Charter on European Security.

Members. Albania, Andorra, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Belgium, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Holy See, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Macedonia, Malta, Moldova, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovak Republic, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, UK, USA and Uzbekistan. Partners for co-operation: Japan and South Korea. Mediterranean partners for co-operation: Algeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Morocco, Tunisia.

Organization. The OSCE’s regular body for political consultation and decision-making is the Permanent Council. Its members, Permanent Representatives of the OSCE participating States, meet weekly in the Hofburg Congress Center in Vienna to discuss and take decisions on all issues pertinent to the OSCE. The Forum for Security Co-operation (FSC), which deals with arms control and confidence and security-building measures, meets weekly in Vienna. There are also Summits—periodic meetings of Heads of State or Government of OSCE participating States that set priorities and provide orientation at the highest political level. During periods between these summits, decision-making and governing power lies with the Ministerial Council, which is made up of the Foreign Ministers of the OSCE participating States. It meets at least once a year (but not when there is a summit).

In addition, a Senior Council is convened for periodic political deliberations. It also meets once a year as the Economic Forum. The Chairman-in-Office has overall responsibility for executive action. The chair rotates annually. The Secretary-General acts as representative of the Chairman-in-Office and manages OSCE structures and operations.

The Secretariat is based in Vienna and includes a Conflict Prevention Centre which provides operational support for OSCE missions. There are some 270 staff employed in OSCE institutions, and about 2,500 professionals, seconded by OSCE-participating states, work at OSCE missions and other field operations.

The Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights is located in Warsaw. It is active in monitoring elections and developing national electoral and human rights institutions, providing technical assistance to national legal institutions, and promoting the development of NGOs.

The Office of the Representative on Freedom of the Media is located in Vienna. Its main function is to observe relevant media developments in OSCE participating States with a view to providing an early warning on violations of freedom of expression.

The Office of the High Commissioner on National Minorities is located in The Hague. Its function is to identify and seek early resolution of ethnic tensions that might endanger peace, stability or friendly relations between the participating States of the OSCE.

The budget for 2003 was €185·7m.

EUROPEAN BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT (EBRD)

History. The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development was established in 1991 when communism was collapsing in central and eastern Europe and ex-Soviet countries needed support to nurture a new private sector in a democratic environment.

Activities. The EBRD is the largest single investor in the region and mobilizes significant foreign direct investment beyond its own financing. It is owned by 60 countries and two intergovernmental institutions. But despite its public sector shareholders, it invests mainly in private enterprises, usually together with commercial partners. Today the EBRD uses the tools of investment to help build market economies and democracies in 27 countries from Central Europe to Central Asia.

It provides project financing for banks, industries and businesses, for both new ventures and investments in existing companies. It also works with publicly-owned companies, to support privatization, restructuring of state-owned firms and improvement of municipal services. The EBRD uses its close relationship with governments in the region to promote policies that will bolster the business environment.

The mandate of the EBRD stipulates that it must only work in countries that are committed to democratic principles. Respect for the environment is part of the strong corporate governance attached to all EBRD investments.

Organization. All the powers of the EBRD are vested in a Board of Governors, to which each member appoints a governor, generally the minister of finance or an equivalent. The Board of Governors delegates powers to the Board of Directors, which is responsible for the direction of the EBRD's general operations and policies. The President is elected by the Board of Governors and is the legal representative of the EBRD. The President conducts the current business of the Bank under the guidance of the Board of Directors.

EUROPEAN FREE TRADE ASSOCIATION (EFTA)

History and Membership. The Stockholm Convention establishing the Association entered into force on 3 May 1960. Founder members were Austria, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and the UK. With the accession of Austria, Denmark, Finland, Portugal, Sweden and the UK to the EU, EFTA was reduced to four member countries: Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Switzerland. In June 2001 the Vaduz Convention was signed. It liberalizes trade further among the four EFTA States in order to reflect the Swiss–EU bilateral agreements.

Activities. Free trade in industrial goods among EFTA members was achieved by 1966. Co-operation with the EU began in 1972 with the signing of free trade agreements and culminated in the establishment of a European Economic Area (EEA), encompassing the free movement of goods, services, capital and labour throughout EFTA and the EU member countries. The Agreement was signed by all members of the EU and EFTA on 2 May 1992, but was rejected by Switzerland in a referendum on 6 Dec. 1992. The agreement came into force on 1 Jan. 1994.

The main provisions of the EEA Agreement are: free movement of products within the EEA from 1993 (with special arrangements to cover food, energy, coal and steel); EFTA to assume EU rules on company law, consumer protection, education, the environment, research and development, and social policy; EFTA to adopt EU competition rules on anti-trust matters, abuse of a dominant position, public procurement, mergers and state aid; EFTA to create an EFTA Surveillance Authority and an EFTA Court; individuals to be free to live, work and offer services throughout the EEA, with mutual recognition of professional qualifications; capital movements to be free with some restrictions on investments; EFTA countries not to be bound by the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) or Common Fisheries Policy (CFP).

The EEA-EFTA states have established a Surveillance Authority and a Court to ensure implementation of the Agreement among the EFTA-EEA states. Political direction is given by the EEA Council which meets twice a year at ministerial level, while ongoing operation of the Agreement is overseen by the EEA Joint Committee. Legislative power remains with national governments and parliaments.

EFTA has formal relations with several other states. Declarations on co-operation were signed with Hungary, former Czechoslovakia and Poland (1990), Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Romania (1991), Slovenia and Albania (1992), Egypt, Morocco and Tunisia (1995), the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and the Palestine Liberation Organization (1996), Jordan and Lebanon (1997), Croatia, the Gulf Co-operation Council, Serbia and Montenegro and Mercosur (2000). Free trade agreements have been signed with Turkey (1991), Israel and Czechoslovakia (1992, with protocols on succession with the Czech Republic and Slovakia in 1993), Poland and Romania (1992), Bulgaria and Hungary (1993), Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Slovenia (1995), Morocco (1997), the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Mexico (2000) and Jordan and Croatia (2001). A draft agreement was reached with Singapore in 2001. In Dec. 1998 an interim free trade agreement was signed with the Palestinian Authority and talks on an agreement began with Egypt. Negotiations on free trade agreements are ongoing with Canada, Egypt, Tunisia, Cyprus and Chile.

Organization. The operation of the free trade area among the EFTA states is the responsibility of the EFTA Council which meets regularly at ambassadorial level in Geneva. The Council is assisted by a Secretariat and standing committees. Each EFTA country holds the chairmanship of the Council for six months. For EEA matters there is a separate committee structure.

EUROPEAN SPACE AGENCY (ESA)

History. Established in 1975, replacing the European Space Research Organization (ESRO) and the European Launcher Development Organization (ELDO).

Members. Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom. Canada takes part in some projects under a co-operation agreement.

Activities. ESA is the intergovernmental agency in Europe responsible for the exploitation of space science, research and technology for exclusively peaceful purposes. Its aim is to define and put into effect a long-term European space policy that allows Europe to remain competitive in the field of space technology. It has a policy of co-operation with various partners on the basis that pooling resources and sharing work will boost the effectiveness of its programmes. Its space plan covers the fields of science, Earth observation, telecommunications, navigation, space segment technologies, ground infrastructures, space transport systems and microgravity research.

CERN – THE EUROPEAN ORGANISATION FOR NUCLEAR RESEARCH

Founded in 1954, CERN is the world's leading particle physics research centre. By studying the behaviour of nature's fundamental particles, CERN aims to find out what our Universe is made of and how it works. CERN's biggest accelerator, the Large Electron Positron Collider (LEP), recreates conditions at the birth of the Universe. A yet more powerful accelerator, the Large Hadron Collider (LHC), is scheduled for completion in 2005. One of the beneficial byproducts of CERN activity is the Worldwide Web, developed at CERN to give particle physicists easy access to shared data. One of Europe's first joint ventures, CERN now has a membership of 20 member states: Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Slovak Republic, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom. Some 6,500 scientists, half of the world's particle physicists, use CERN's facilities.

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

Founded in 1952 as a co-operative link between the parliaments and governments of the Nordic states. The co-operation focuses on Intra-Nordic co-operation, co-operation with Europe/EU/EEA and co-operation with the adjacent areas. The Council consists of 87 elected MPs and the committees meet several times a year, as required. Every year the Nordic Council grants prizes for literature, music, nature and environment.

Members. Denmark (including the Faroe Islands and Greenland), Finland (including Åland), Iceland, Norway, Sweden.

Address: Postboks 3043, DK-1021 Copenhagen K, Denmark.

COUNCIL OF THE BALTIC SEA STATES

Established in 1992 in Copenhagen following a conference of ministers of foreign affairs.

Members. Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Poland, Russia, Sweden and the European Commission.

Aims. To promote co-operation in the Baltic Sea region in the field of trade, investment and economic exchanges, combating organized crime, civil security, culture and education, transport and communication, energy and environment, human rights and assistance to democratic institutions.

The Council meets at ministerial level once a year, chaired by rotating foreign ministers; it is the supreme decision-making body. Between annual sessions the Committee of Senior Officials and three working groups meet at regular intervals. The CBSS Commissioner on Democratic Development, Helle Degn (Denmark), appointed in Oct. 2000, acts independently to the Council, and supports and structures the promotion and consolidation of democratic development in the member states. In Oct. 1999 ministers of energy of the CBSS member states agreed to achieve the goal of creating effective, economically and environmentally sound and more integrated energy systems in the Baltic Sea region. Four summits at the level of heads of government of CBSS member states and the President of the European Commission have taken place; in 1996, 1998, 2000 and 2002. The Baltic Sea Region Energy Cooperation (BASREC) is made up of energy ministers from the region and is chaired by the energy minister from the chair country of the CBSS.

DANUBE COMMISSION

History and Membership. The Danube Commission was constituted in 1949 according to the Convention on the regulation of shipping on the Danube signed in Belgrade on 18 Aug. 1948. The Belgrade Convention, amended by the Additional Protocol of 26 March 1998, declares that navigation on the Danube from Kelheim to the Black Sea (with access to the sea through the Sulina arm and the Sulina Canal) is equally free and open to the nationals, merchant shipping and merchandise of all states as to harbour and navigation fees as well as conditions of merchant navigation. The Commission holds annual sessions and is composed of one representative from each of its 11 member countries: Austria, Bulgaria, Croatia, Germany, Hungary, Moldova, Romania, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia and Ukraine.

Functions. To ensure that the provisions of the Belgrade Convention are carried out; to establish a uniform buoying system on all navigable waterways; to establish the basic regulations for navigation on the river and ensure facilities for shipping; to co-ordinate the regulations for river, customs and sanitation control as well as the hydrometeorological service; to collect relevant statistical data concerning navigation on the Danube; to propose measures for the prevention of pollution of the Danube caused by navigation; and to harmonize regulations of the Danube Commission member states with European Union regulations on inland waterway navigation.

THE COMMONWEALTH

The Commonwealth is a free association of sovereign independent states. It numbered 54 members in 2002. With a membership of 1·7bn. people, it represents over 30% of the world's population. There is no charter, treaty or constitution; the association is expressed in co-operation, consultation and mutual assistance for which the Commonwealth Secretariat is the central co-ordinating body.

Origin. The Commonwealth was first defined by the Imperial Conference of 1926 as a group of 'autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations'. The basis of the association changed from one owing allegiance to a common Crown, and the modern Commonwealth was born in 1949 when the member countries accepted India's intention of becoming a republic at the same time as continuing 'her full membership of the Commonwealth of Nations and her acceptance of the King as the symbol of the free association of its independent member nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth'. In 2002 the Commonwealth consisted of 33 republics and 21 monarchies, of which 16 are Queen's realms. All acknowledge the Queen symbolically as Head of the Commonwealth. The Queen's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III, c. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body being Protestants'.

A number of territories, formerly under British jurisdiction or mandate, did not join the Commonwealth: Egypt, Iraq, Transjordan, Burma (now Myanmar), Palestine, Sudan, British Somaliland and Aden. Four countries, Ireland in 1948, South Africa in 1961, Pakistan in 1972, and Fiji (now Fiji Islands) in 1987 have left the Commonwealth. Pakistan was re-admitted to the Commonwealth in 1989, South Africa in 1994, Fiji Islands in 1997. Nigeria was suspended in 1995 for violation of human rights but was fully reinstated on 29 May 1999. Pakistan was suspended from the Commonwealth's councils following a coup in Oct. 1999. Fiji Islands was also suspended from the Commonwealth's councils in May 2000 following a coup there but was re-admitted in Dec. 2001 following the restoration of democracy. Zimbabwe was suspended from the Commonwealth's councils for a year on 19 March 2002 for a 'high level of politically motivated violence' during the vote that saw President Robert Mugabe re-elected. In March 2003 it was suspended for a further nine months. Mozambique, admitted in Nov. 1995, is the first member state not to have been a member of the former British Commonwealth or Empire. Tuvalu is a special member, with the right to participate in all functional Commonwealth meetings and activities but not to attend meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government.

Aims and Conditions of Membership. Membership involves acceptance of certain core principles, as set out in the Harare Declaration of 1991, and is subject to the approval of other member states. The Harare Declaration charts a course to take the Commonwealth into the 21st century and affirms members' continued commitment to the Singapore Declarations of 1971, by which members committed themselves to the pursuit of world peace and support of the UN.

The core principles defined by the Harare Declaration are: political democracy, human rights, good governance and the rule of law, and the protection of the environment through sustainable development. Commitment to these principles was made binding as a condition of membership at the 1993 Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus.

The Millbrook Action Programme of 1995 aims to support countries in implementing the Harare Declaration, providing assistance in constitutional and judicial matters, running elections, training and technical advice. Violations of the Harare Declaration will provoke a series of measures by the Commonwealth Secretariat, including: expression of disapproval, encouragement of bilateral actions by member states, appointment of fact-finders and mediators, stipulation of a period for the restoration of democracy, exclusion from ministerial meetings, suspension of all participation and aid and finally punitive measures including trade sanctions. An eight-member Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group on the Harare Declaration (CMAG) may be convened by the Secretary-General as and when necessary to deal with violations. The Group held its first meeting in Dec. 1995. Its terms of reference are as set out in the Millbrook Action Programme.

The Commonwealth Parliamentary Association was founded in 1911. As defined by its constitution, its objectives are to 'promote knowledge of the constitutional, legislative, economic, social and cultural aspects of parliamentary democracy'. It meets these objectives by organizing conferences, meetings and seminars for members, arranging exchange visits between members, publishing books, newsletters, reports, studies and a quarterly journal and providing an information service. Its principal governing body is the General Assembly, which meets annually during the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference and is composed of members attending that Conference as delegates. The Association elects an Executive Committee comprising a Chair, President, Vice-President, Treasurer and 27 regional representatives, which meets twice a year. The Chair is elected for three-year terms.

Commonwealth Secretariat. The Commonwealth Secretariat is an international body at the service of all 54 member countries. It provides the central organization for joint consultation and co-operation in many fields. It was established in 1965 by Commonwealth Heads of Government as a 'visible symbol of the spirit of co-operation which animates the Commonwealth', and has observer status at the UN General Assembly.

The Secretariat disseminates information on matters of common concern, organizes and services meetings and conferences, co-ordinates many Commonwealth activities, and provides expert technical assistance for economic and social development through the multilateral Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation. The Secretariat is organized in divisions and sections which correspond to its main areas of operation: international affairs, economic affairs, food production and rural development, youth, education, information, applied studies in government, science and technology, law and health. Within this structure the Secretariat organizes the biennial meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government (CHOGMs), annual meetings of Finance Ministers of member countries, and regular meetings of Ministers of Education, Law, Health, and others as appropriate. To emphasize the multilateral nature of the association, meetings are held in different cities and regions within the Commonwealth. Heads of Government decided that the Secretariat should work from London as it has the widest range of communications of any Commonwealth city, as well as the largest assembly of diplomatic missions.

Commonwealth Heads of Government Meetings (CHOGMs). Outside the UN, the CHOGM remains the largest intergovernmental conference in the world. Meetings are held every two years. The 2002 CHOGM in Coolum, Australia, scheduled for Oct. 2001 but postponed following the attacks on the United States of 11 Sept. 2001, was dominated by the Zimbabwe issue. The next meeting will be held in Abuja, Nigeria in Dec. 2003. A host of Commonwealth organizations and agencies are dedicated to enhancing interCommonwealth relations and the development of the potential of Commonwealth citizens. A list of these can be obtained from the Commonwealth Institute in London.

Commonwealth Day is celebrated on the second Monday in March each year. The theme for 2003 was ‘Partners in Development’.

Overseas Territories and Associated States. There are 14 United Kingdom overseas territories (see pages 1717–46), six Australian external territories (see pages 234–9), two New Zealand dependent territories and two New Zealand associated states (see pages 1215–20). A dependent territory is a territory belonging by settlement, conquest or annexation to the British, Australian or New Zealand Crown.

United Kingdom Overseas Territories administered through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office comprise, in the Indian Ocean: British Indian Ocean Territory; in the Mediterranean: Gibraltar, the Sovereign Base Areas of Akrotiri and Dhekelia in Cyprus; in the Atlantic Ocean: Bermuda, Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, British Antarctic Territory, St Helena and Dependencies (Ascension and Tristan da Cunha); in the Caribbean: Montserrat, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Turks and Caicos Islands, Anguilla; in the Western Pacific: Pitcairn Group of Islands.

The Australian external territories are: Coral Sea Islands, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, Christmas Island, Heard and McDonald Islands, Australian Antarctic Territory, and Ashmore and Cartier Islands. The New Zealand external territories are: Tokelau Islands and the Ross Dependency. The New Zealand associated states are: Cook Islands and Niue.

COMMONWEALTH OF INDEPENDENT STATES (CIS)

The Commonwealth of Independent States, founded on 8 Dec. 1991 in Viskuli, a government villa in Belarus, is a community of independent states which proclaimed itself the successor to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in some aspects of international law and affairs. The member states are the founders, Russia, Belarus and Ukraine, and nine subsequent adherents: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan.

History. Extended negotiations in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) in 1990 and 1991, under the direction of President Gorbachev, sought to establish a 'renewed federation' or, subsequently, to conclude a new union treaty that would embrace all the 15 constituent republics of the USSR at that date. According to a referendum conducted in March 1991, 76% of the population (on an 80% turn-out) wished to maintain the USSR as a 'renewed federation of equal sovereign republics in which the human rights and freedoms of any nationality would be fully guaranteed'. In Sept. 1991 the three Baltic republics—Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—were nonetheless recognized as independent states by the USSR State Council, and subsequently by the international community. Most of the remaining republics reached agreement on the broad outlines of a new 'union of sovereign states' in Nov. 1991, which would have retained a directly elected President and an all-union legislature, but which would have limited central authority to those powers specifically delegated to it by the members of the union.

A referendum in Ukraine in Dec. 1991, however, showed overwhelming support for full independence, and following this the three Slav republics (Russia, Belarus and Ukraine) concluded the Minsk Agreement on 8 Dec. 1991, establishing a Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), headquartered in Minsk. The USSR, as a subject of international law and a geopolitical reality, was declared no longer in existence, and each of the three republics individually renounced the 1922 treaty through which the USSR had been established.

The CIS declared itself open to other former Soviet republics, and to states elsewhere that shared its objectives, and on 21 Dec. 1991 in Alma-Ata, a further declaration was signed with eight other republics: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan. The declaration committed signatories to recognize the independence and sovereignty of other members, to respect human rights including those of national minorities, and to the observance of existing boundaries. Relations among the members of the CIS were to be conducted on an equal, multilateral, interstate basis, but it was agreed to endorse the principle of unitary control of strategic nuclear arms and the concept of a 'single economic space'. In a separate agreement the heads of member states agreed that Russia should take up the seat at the United Nations formerly occupied by the USSR, and a framework of interstate and intergovernment consultation was established. Following these developments Mikhail Gorbachev resigned as USSR President on 25 Dec. 1991, and on 26 Dec. the USSR Supreme Soviet voted a formal end to the 1922 Treaty of Union, and dissolved itself. Georgia decided to join on 9 Dec. 1993 and on 1 March 1994 the national parliament ratified the act.

The Charter, adopted on 22 Jan. 1993 in Minsk, proclaims that the Commonwealth is based on the principles of the sovereign equality of all members. It is not a state and does not have supranational authority.

Activities and Institutions. The principal organs of the CIS, according to the agreement concluded in Alma-Ata on 21 Dec. 1991, are the Council of Heads of States, which meets twice a year, and the Council of Heads of Government, which meets every three months. Both councils may convene extraordinary sessions, and may hold joint sittings. There is also a Council of Defence Ministers, established Feb. 1992, and a Council of Foreign Ministers (Dec. 1993). The Secretariat is the standing working organ.

At a summit meeting of heads of states (with the exception of Azerbaijan) in July 1992, agreements were reached on a way to divide former USSR assets abroad; on the legal cessionary of state archives of former Soviet states; on the status of an Economic Court; and on collective security. In 1992 an Inter-Parliamentary Assembly was established by seven member states (Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan).

At a subsequent meeting in Jan. 1993 Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan agreed on a charter to implement co-operation in political, economic, ecological, humanitarian, cultural and other spheres; thorough and balanced economic and social development within the common economic space; interstate co-operation and integration; and to ensure human rights and freedoms. Three participants (Ukraine, Moldova and Turkmenistan) agreed only to a declaration that the decision would be open for signing in the future. For the purpose of the maintenance and development of multilateral industrial, trade and financial relations, Heads of State established an Inter-State Bank and adopted a Provision on it. Its charter was signed by ten Heads of State (Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan) on 22 Dec. 1993.

The CIS Inter-State Bank was set up with a starting capital of 5,000m. roubles, to facilitate multilateral clearing of CIS interstate transactions. Members' contributions (by %), based on their share of foreign trade turnover in 1990, were as follows: Russia, 50%; Ukraine, 20·7%; Belarus, 8·4%; Kazakhstan, 6·1%; Uzbekistan, 5·5%; Moldova, 2·9%; Armenia, 1·8%; Tajikistan, 1·6%; Kyrgyzstan, 1·5%; Turkmenistan, 1·5%. The bank is an international settlement and financial-credit institution, established in accordance with the rules of international public law. The authorized capital on 1 Jan. 1999 was 20,000m. roubles.

In accordance with the Agreement on Armed Forces and Border Troops, concluded on 30 Dec. 1991, it was decided to consider and solve the issue on the transference of the management of the General-Purpose Armed Forces in accordance with the national legislation of member states. On 14 Feb. 1992 the Council of Defence Ministers was established. In 1993 the Office of Commander-in-Chief of CIS Joint Armed Forces was reorganized in a Staff for Co-ordinating Military Co-operation. Its Chief of Staff is appointed by the Council of Heads of State. On 24 Sept. an Agreement on collective peacekeeping was concluded. Peacekeeping operations in intra-CIS conflicts could be implemented at the request of member states, and with the consent of parties to the conflict. CIS members contribute to this force in proportion to the size of their armed forces and are responsible for the conditions, training and supply of military and civil personnel to the conflict region; the commander is appointed on each occasion by the Council of Heads of State.

At the same meeting, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan signed an agreement to form an Economic Union. Georgia and Turkmenistan signed later (14 and 23 Jan. 1994). Ukraine became an associated member on 15 April 1994. In Oct. 1994 a summit meeting established the Inter-State Economic Committee (MEK) to be based in Moscow. Members include all CIS states except Turkmenistan. The Committee's decisions are binding if voted by 80% of the membership. Russia commands 50% of the voting power; Ukraine 14%. The Committee's remit is to co-ordinate energy, transport and communications policies. A Customs Union to regulate payments between member states with non-convertible independent currencies and a regulatory Economic Court have also been established.

On 29 March 1996 Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Russia signed an agreement increasing their mutual economic and social integration by creating a Community of Integrated States (Tajikistan signed in 1998). The agreement established a Supreme Inter-Governmental Council comprising heads of state and government and foreign ministers, with a rotatory Chair, an integration committee of Ministers and an Inter-Parliamentary Committee.

On 2 April 1996 the Presidents of Belarus and Russia signed a treaty providing for political, economic and military integration, creating the nucleus of a Community of Russia and Belarus. The agreement establishes a Supreme Council comprising the Presidents, Prime Ministers and Speakers of both countries and the Chairman of the Executive Committee. A further treaty was signed on 22 May 1997, instituting common citizenship, common deployment of military forces and the harmonization of the two economies with a view to the creation of a common currency. The Community was later renamed the Union of Belarus and Russia and signed subsequent agreements on equal rights for its citizens and equal conditions for state and private entrepreneurship.

In March 1994 the CIS was accorded observer status in the UN.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES (OAS)

Origin. On 14 April 1890 representatives of the American republics, meeting in Washington at the First International Conference of American States, established an International Union of American Republics and, as its central office, a Commercial Bureau of American Republics, which later became the Pan-American Union. This international organization's object was to foster mutual understanding and co-operation among the nations of the western hemisphere. This led to the adoption on 30 April 1948 by the Ninth International Conference of American States, at Bogotá, Colombia, of the Charter of the Organization of American States. This co-ordinated the work of all the former independent official entities in the inter-American system and defined their mutual relationships. The Charter of 1948 was subsequently amended by the Protocol of Buenos Aires (1967) and the Protocol of Cartagena de Indias (1985).

Members. This is on a basis of absolute equality, with each country having one vote and there being no veto power. Members (2001): Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba (suspended 1962), Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Permanent Observers. Algeria, Angola, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Estonia, EU, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Holy See, Hungary, India, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, South Korea, Latvia, Lebanon, Morocco, the Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, UK, Ukraine, Yemen.

Aims and Activities. To strengthen the peace and security of the continent; promote and consolidate representative democracy, with due respect for the principle of non-intervention; prevent possible causes of difficulties and ensure the peaceful settlement of disputes among member states; provide for common action in the event of aggression; seek the solution of political, juridical and economic problems; promote by co-operative action economic, social and cultural development; and achieve an effective limitation of conventional weapons in order to devote maximum resources to economic and social development.

The Santiago Commitment to Democracy and the Renewal of the Inter-American System. With the emergence of democratically elected governments throughout the continent, the OAS has been increasingly concerned with the preservation, protection and promotion of democracy. At its 21st Regular Session (Santiago, Chile, 1991) the OAS General Assembly adopted the Santiago Commitment to Democracy and the Renewal of the Inter-American System as well as the Protocol of Washington (1992) to amend the Charter by provisions of the Resolution 1080 on representative democracy. The latter calls for collective action in the event of a 'sudden or irregular interruption of the democratic political institutional process or of the legitimate exercise of power by the democratically elected government in any of the Organization's member states'.

The Protocol of Washington also incorporates among the essential purposes of the OAS the eradication of extreme poverty which constitutes an obstacle to the full democratic development of the peoples of the hemisphere. This commitment was further strengthened by amendments under the Protocol of Managua the following year, with measures designed to improve the delivery of technical co-operation to such member states. At its 20th Special Session (Feb. 1994, Mexico City), the OAS General Assembly approved a resolution on a commitment to a partnership for development and struggle to overcome extreme poverty.

Declaration of Belém do Pará. At its 24th Regular Session (June 1994, Belém do Pará), the General Assembly adopted the Declaration of Belém do Pará, in which the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Heads of Delegation of Member States declared their commitment to strengthening the OAS as the main hemispheric forum of political consensus, so that it may support: the realization of the aspirations of member states in promoting and consolidating peace, democracy, social justice, and development, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter; their decision to promote and deepen co-operative relations in the economic, social, educational, cultural, scientific, technological and political fields; their commitment to continue and further the dialogue on hemispheric security in order to consolidate and strengthen mutual confidence; their determination to continue to contribute to the objective of general and complete disarmament, under effective international control; their determination to strengthen regional co-operation to increase the effectiveness of efforts to combat the illicit use of narcotic drugs and traffic therein; their decision to co-operate in a reciprocal effort towards preventing and punishing terrorist acts, methods and practices, and the development of international law in this matter; and their commitment to promote economic and social development for the indigenous populations of their countries.

Organization. Under its Charter the OAS accomplishes its purposes by means of:

(a) The General Assembly, which meets annually.

(b) The Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs, held to consider problems of an urgent nature and of common interest.

(c) The Councils: The Permanent Council, which meets on a permanent basis at OAS headquarters and carries out decisions of the General Assembly, assists the member states in the peaceful settlement of disputes, acts as the Preparatory Committee of that Assembly, submits recommendations with regard to the functioning of the Organization, and considers the reports to the Assembly of the other organs. The Inter-American Council for Integral Development (CIDI) (formed from the merger of two previous councils, the Inter-American Economic and Social Council and the Inter-American Council for Education, Science and Culture) directs and monitors OAS technical co-operation programmes.

(d) The Inter-American Juridical Committee which acts as an advisory body to the OAS on juridical matters and promotes the development and codification of international law. 11 jurists, elected for four-year terms by the General Assembly, represent all the American States.

(e) The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights which oversees the observance and protection of human rights. Seven members elected for four-year terms by the General Assembly represent all the OAS member states.

(f) The General Secretariat, which is the central and permanent organ of the OAS.

(g) The Specialized Conferences, meeting to deal with special technical matters or to develop specific aspects of inter-American co-operation.

(h) The Specialized Organizations, intergovernmental organizations established by multilateral agreements to discharge specific functions in their respective fields of action, such as women's affairs, agriculture, child welfare, Indian affairs, geography and history, and health.

In Sept. 2001 an Inter-American Democratic Charter was adopted. It sets out a simple, clear declaration: 'The peoples of the Americas have a right to democracy and their governments have an obligation to promote and defend it.' The Charter compels the OAS to take action against any member state that disrupts its own democratic institutions.

The Secretary-General is elected by the General Assembly for five-year terms. The General Assembly approves the annual budget which is financed by quotas contributed by the member governments. The budget in 2003 amounted to US$83·17m.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK (IDB)

The IDB, the oldest and largest regional multilateral development institution, was established in 1959 to help accelerate economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean. The Bank's original membership included 19 Latin American and Caribbean countries and the USA. Today, membership totals 46 nations, including non-regional members.

Members. Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, UK, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela.

The Bank's total lending up to 2000 has been US$106bn. for projects with a total cost of over US$263bn. Its lending has increased dramatically from the US$294m. approved in 1961 to US$6,311m. in 2002.

Current lending priorities include poverty reduction and social equity, modernization and integration, and the environment. The Bank has a Fund for Special Operations for lending on concessional terms for projects in countries classified as economically less developed. An additional facility, the Multilateral Investment Fund (MIF), was created in 1992 to help promote and accelerate investment reforms and private-sector development throughout the region.

The Board of Governors is the Bank's highest authority. Governors are usually Ministers of Finance, Presidents of Central Banks or officers of comparable rank. The IDB has country offices in each of its borrowing countries, and in Paris and Tokyo.

SECRETARIAT FOR CENTRAL AMERICAN ECONOMIC INTEGRATION (SIECA)

SIECA (Secretaría de Integración Económica Centroamericana) was created by the General Treaty of Central American Economic Integration in Dec. 1960. The General Treaty incorporates the Agreement on the Regime for Central American Integration Industries. In Oct. 1993 the Protocol to the General Treaty on Central Economic Integration, known as the Guatemala Protocol, was signed.

Members. Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua. Observer: Panama.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COMMON MARKET (CACM)

In Dec. 1960 El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua concluded the General Treaty of Central American Economic Integration under the auspices of the Organization of Central American States (ODECA) in Managua. Long-standing political and social conflicts in the area have repeatedly dogged efforts to establish integration towards the establishment of a common market.

Members. Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama.

A protocol to the 1960 General Treaty signed by all six members in Oct. 1993 reaffirmed an eventual commitment to full economic integration with a common external tariff of 20% to be introduced only voluntarily and gradually.

A Treaty on Democratic Security in Central America was signed by all six members at San Pedro Sula, Honduras in Dec. 1995, with a view to achieving a proper 'balance of forces' in the region, intensifying the fight against trafficking of drugs and arms, and reintegrating refugees and displaced persons.

In addition, the CACM countries signed a new framework co-operation agreement with the EC in Feb. 1993, revising the previous (1985) failing agreement between them, to provide support to CACM's integration plans.

Headquarters: 4a Avenida 10–25, Zona 14, Ciudad de Guatemala, Guatemala.
Secretary-General: Haroldo Rodas Melgar.

CENTRAL AMERICAN BANK FOR ECONOMIC INTEGRATION (BCIE)

Established in 1960, the Bank is the financial institution of the Central American Economic Integration and aims to implement the economic integration and balanced economic growth of the member states.

THE ANDEAN COMMUNITY

On 26 May 1969 an agreement was signed by Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru establishing the Cartagena Agreement (also referred to as the Andean Pact or the Andean Group). Chile withdrew from the Group in 1976. Venezuela, which was initially actively involved, did not sign the agreement until 1973. In 1997 Peru announced its withdrawal for five years; and Panama joined.

The Andean Free Trade Area came into effect on 1 Feb. 1993 as the first step towards the creation of a common market. Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela have fully liberalized the trade among them, while Peru is still implementing its liberalization process, due to end by 2005. A Common External Tariff for imports from third countries has been in effect since 1 Feb. 1995.

In March 1996 at the Group's 8th summit in Trujillo in Peru, member countries (Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Venezuela) signed a reform protocol to the Agreement, according to which the Group would be superseded by the Andean Community, in order to promote greater economic, commercial and political integration between member countries under a new Andean Integration System (SAI).

The member countries and bodies of the Andean Integration System are now working to establish an Andean Common Market by Dec. 2005 at the latest and to implement a Common Foreign Policy, carry out a social agenda, execute a Community policy on border integration, and devise actions for harmonizing and reaching macroeconomic targets.

Organization. The Andean Presidential Council, composed of the presidents of the member states, is the highest-level body of the Andean Integration System (SAI). The Commission and the Andean Council of Foreign Ministers are legislative bodies. The General Secretariat is the executive body and the Andean Parliament is the deliberative body of the SAI. The Court of Justice, which began operating in 1984, resolves disputes between members and interprets legislation. The SAI has other institutions: Andean Development Corporation (CAF), Latin American Reserve Fund (FLAR), Simon Bolivar Andean University, Andean Business Advisory Council, Andean Labour Advisory Council and various Social Agreements.

SOUTHERN COMMON MARKET (MERCOSUR)

Founded in March 1991 by the Treaty of Asunción between Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, the treaty committed the signatories to the progressive reduction of tariffs culminating in the formation of a common market on 1 Jan. 1995. This duly came into effect as a free trade zone affecting 90% of commodities. A common external tariff averaging 14% applies to 80% of trade with countries outside Mercosur. Details were agreed at foreign minister level by the Protocol of Ouro Preto signed on 17 Dec. 1994.

In 1996 Chile negotiated a free-trade agreement with Mercosur which came into effect on 1 Oct. Two weeks later, Bolivia signed the same. In Dec. that year, an agreement conferring associate membership on Bolivia was also endorsed.

Organization. The member states' foreign ministers form a Council responsible for leading the integration process, the chairmanship of which rotates every six months. The permanent executive body is the Common Market Group of member states, which takes decisions by consensus. There is a Trade Commission and Joint Parliamentary Commission, an arbitration tribunal whose decisions are binding on member countries, and a secretariat in Montevideo.

Headquarters: Rincón 575 P12, 11000 Montevideo, Uruguay.

Administrative Secretary: Reginaldo Braga Arcuri (Brazil).

ASSOCIATION OF CARIBBEAN STATES (ACS)

The Convention establishing the ACS was signed on 24 July 1994 in Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, with the aim of promoting consultation, co-operation and concerted action among all the countries of the Caribbean, comprising 25 full member states and three associate members. A total of eight other non-independent Caribbean countries are eligible for associate membership.

Members. Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Venezuela.

Associate Members. Aruba, France (on behalf of French Guiana, Guadeloupe and Martinique) and the Netherlands Antilles.

The CARICOM Secretariat, the Latin American Economic System (SELA), the Central American Integration System (SICA) and the Permanent Secretariat of the General Agreement on Central American Economic Integration (SIECA) were declared Founding Observers of the ACS in 1996. The United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) and the Caribbean Tourism Organization (CTO) were admitted as Founding Observers in 2000 and 2001 respectively.

Functions. The objectives of the ACS are enshrined in the Convention and are based on the following: the strengthening of the regional co-operation and integration process, with a view to creating an enhanced economic space in the region; preserving the environmental integrity of the Caribbean Sea which is regarded as the common patrimony of the peoples of the region; and promoting the sustainable development of the Greater Caribbean. Its current focal areas are trade, transport, sustainable tourism and natural disasters.

Organization. The main organs of the Association are the Ministerial Council and the Secretariat. There are Special Committees on: Trade Development and External Economic Relations; Sustainable Tourism; Transport; Natural Disasters; Budget and Administration. There is also a Council of National Representatives of the Special Fund responsible for overseeing resource mobilization efforts and project development.

Headquarters: ACS Secretariat, 5–7 Sweet Briar Road, St Clair, PO Box 660, Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago.

CARIBBEAN COMMUNITY (CARICOM)

Origin. The Treaty of Chaguaramas establishing the Caribbean Community and Common Market was signed by the prime ministers of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago at Chaguaramas, Trinidad, on 4 July 1973, and entered into force on 1 Aug. 1973.

Six additional countries and territories (Belize, Dominica, Grenada, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Montserrat) signed the Treaty on 17 April 1974, and the Treaty came into effect for those countries on 1 May 1974. Antigua acceded to membership on 4 July that year; St Kitts and Nevis on 26 July; the Bahamas on 4 July 1983 (not Common Market); Suriname on 4 July 1995.

Members. Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, Montserrat, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, and Trinidad and Tobago. Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, and Turks and Caicos Islands are associate members.

Objectives. The Caribbean Community has the following objectives: improved standards of living and work; full employment of labour and other factors of production; accelerated, co-ordinated and sustained economic development and convergence; expansion of trade and economic relations with third States; enhanced levels of international competitiveness; organization for increased production and productivity; the achievement of a greater measure of economic leverage and effectiveness of member states in dealing with third States, groups of States and entities of any description; enhanced co-ordination of member states' foreign and foreign economic policies; enhanced functional co-operation.

The Civil Society 'Forward Together Conference', a historic consultation between the representatives of Civil Society in the 15 Member States of the Caribbean Community and the Heads of Government held at the Ocean View Hotel, Liliendaal, Guyana on 2–3 July 2002, agreed on several broad principles for strengthening the relationships between the Caribbean Community and the Civil Society. These included more regular engagements between the Civil Society and the Heads of Government, especially for more constructive participation of Civil Society representatives in appropriate decision-making Organs of the Community such as the Council for Trade and Economic Development (COTED), the Council for Finance and Planning (COFAP), the Council for Human and Social Development (COHSOD).

The revision of the Treaty of Chaguaramas (by means of nine protocols) was begun in the 1990s and was completed in 2001. At its 22nd Meeting in July 2001 a number of Heads signed the Revised Treaty paving the way for the implementation of the new Treaty provisions and the subsequent establishment of the CARICOM Single Market and Economy (CSME).

At its 20th Meeting, the Conference of Heads of Government of the Caribbean Community approved for signature the agreement establishing the Caribbean Court of Justice. They mandated the establishment of a Preparatory Committee comprising the Attorneys General of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia and Trinidad and Tobago assisted by other officials, to develop and implement a programme of public education within the Caribbean Community and to make appropriate arrangements for the inauguration of the Caribbean Court of Justice prior to the establishment of the CARICOM Single Market and Economy. To this end at its 23rd Meeting in July 2002 the Heads of Government agreed on immediate measures to inaugurate the Court by the second half of 2003. Among the measures adopted was the establishment of a Trust Fund with a one-time settlement of US$100m. to finance the Court. The President of the Caribbean Development Bank was authorized to raise the funds on international capital markets, so that member states could access these funds to meet their assessed contributions towards the financing of the Court. The agreement establishing the Regional Justice Protection Programme was also approved for signature. The agreement establishes a framework for regional co-operation in the protection of witnesses, jurors, judicial and legal officers, law enforcement personnel and their associates.

Structure. The Conference of Heads of Government is the principal organ of the Community, and its primary responsibility is to determine and provide the policy direction for the Community. It is the final authority on behalf of the Community for the conclusion of treaties and for entering into relationships between the Community and international organizations and States. It is responsible for financial arrangements to meet the expenses of the Community.

The Community Council of Ministers is the second highest organ of the Community and consists of Ministers of Government responsible for Community Affairs. The Community Council has primary responsibility for the development of Community strategic planning and co-ordination in the areas of economic integration, functional co-operation and external relations.

Ministerial Councils established by the Conference of Heads of Government to assist the principal organs are: Council for Trade and Economic Development (COTED); the Council for Foreign and Community Relations (COFCOR); the Council for Human and Social Development (COHSOD); and the Council for Finance and Planning (COFAP).

The Secretariat is the principal administrative organ of the Community. The Secretary-General is appointed by the Conference (on the recommendation of the Community Council) for a term not exceeding five years, and may be re-appointed. The Secretary-General is the Chief Executive Officer of the Community and acts in that capacity at all meetings of the Community Organs.

Institutions of the Community. Caribbean Disaster Emergency Response Agency (CDERA); Caribbean Meteorological Institute (CMI); Caribbean Meteorological Organization (CMO); Caribbean Food Corporation (CFC); Caribbean Environmental Health Institute (CEHI); Caribbean Agriculture Research and Development Institute (CARDI); Association of Caribbean Community Parliamentarians (ACCP); Caribbean Centre for Development Administration (CARICAD); Caribbean Food and Nutrition Institute (CFNI).

Associate Institutions. Caribbean Development Bank (CDB); University of Guyana (UG); University of the West Indies (UWI); Caribbean Law Institute (CLI)/ Caribbean Law Institute Centre (CLIC); Secretariat of the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States.

ORGANIZATION OF EASTERN CARIBBEAN STATES (OECS)

Founded in 1981 when seven eastern Caribbean states signed the Treaty of Basseterre agreeing to co-operate with each other to promote unity and solidarity among the members.

Members. Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Grenada, Montserrat, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines. The British Virgin Islands and Anguilla have associate membership.

Functions. As set out in the Treaty of Basseterre: to promote co-operation among the member states and to defend their sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence; to assist member states in the realization of their obligations and responsibilities to the international community with due regard to the role of international law as a standard of conduct in their relationships; to assist member states in the realization of their obligations and responsibilities to the international community with due regard to the role of international issues; to establish and maintain, where possible, arrangements for joint overseas representation and common services; to pursue these through its respective institutions by discussion of questions of common concern and by agreement on common action.

OECS's work is carried out by four main divisions. They have responsibility for: Corporate Services, Functional Co-operation, Economic Affairs, and External Relations. These oversee the work of a number of specialized institutions, work units and projects in six countries. There is an OECS secretariat in St Lucia, which is comprised of several operating units, responsible for the following functions: Education and Human Resource Development, Export Development Unit, Legal Unit, Environment and Sustainable Development Unit, Pharmaceutical Procurement Service, Social Development Unit and OECS Sports Desk.

AGENCY FOR THE PROHIBITION OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS IN LATIN AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN (OPANAL)

The Agency (Organismo para la Proscripción de las Armas Nucleares en la América Latina y el Caribe) was established following the Cuban missile crisis to guarantee implementation of the world's first Nuclear-Weapon-Free-Zone (NWFZ) in the region. Created by the Treaty of Tlatelolco (1967), OPANAL is an inter-governmental agency responsible for ensuring that the requirements of the Treaty are enforced. OPANAL has played a major role in establishing other NWFZs throughout the world.

Organization. The Agency consists of three main bodies: the General Conference which meets for biennial sessions and special sessions when deemed necessary; the Council of OPANAL consisting of five member states which meet every two months plus special meetings when necessary; and the Secretariat General.

Members of the Treaty. Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay, Venezuela.

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

A multilateral development finance institution established in 1966 to promote economic and social progress in the Asian and Pacific region, the Bank's strategic objectives in the medium term are to foster economic growth, reduce poverty, improve the status of women, support human development (including population planning) and protect the environment.

The bank's capital stock is owned by 59 member countries, 43 regional and 16 non-regional. The bank makes loans and equity investments, and provides technical assistance grants for the preparation and execution of development projects and programmes; promotes investment of public and private capital for development purposes; and assists in co-ordinating development policies and plans in its developing member countries (DMCs).

The bank gives special attention to the needs of smaller or less developed countries, giving priority to regional, sub-regional and national projects which contribute to the economic growth of the region and promote regional co-operation. Loans from ordinary capital resources on non-concessional terms account for about 80% of cumulative lending. Loans from the bank's principal special fund, the Asian Development Fund, are made on highly concessional terms almost exclusively to the poorest borrowing countries.

Regional members. Afghanistan, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, China, Cook Islands, East Timor, Fiji Islands, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kiribati, South Korea, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Malaysia, Maldives, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Samoa, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Taiwan, Tajikistan, Thailand, Tonga, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu and Vietnam.

Non-regional members. Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, UK, USA.

Organization. The bank's highest policy-making body is its Board of Governors, which meets annually. Its executive body is the 12-member Board of Directors (each with an alternate), eight from the regional members and four non-regional.

The ADB also has resident missions: in Bangladesh; Cambodia; China; New Delhi, India; Jakarta, Indonesia; Kazakhstan; Kyrgyzstan; Laos; Káthmandu, Nepal; Islamabad, Pakistan; the Philippines; Sri Lanka; Uzbekistan; Hanoi, Vietnam; and a regional mission in Port Vila, Vanuatu. There are also three representative offices: in Tokyo, Frankfurt and Washington, D.C.

ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION ORGANIZATION (ECO)

The Economic Co-operation Organization (ECO) is an intergovernmental regional organization established in 1985 by Iran, Pakistan and Turkey. ECO is the successor of the Regional Co-operation for Development (RCD) which was first established in 1964. ECO was later expanded in 1992 to include seven new members: Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan. The objectives of the organization, stipulated in its Charter, the Treaty of Izmir, include the promotion of conditions for sustained economic growth in the region. While transport and communications, trade and investment, and energy are the high priority areas in ECO's scheme of work, other fields of co-operation such as industry, agriculture, health, science and education, drug control and human development are also on the agenda.

While summit meetings lend reaffirmation of the high level commitment of ECO member states to the goals and objectives of the organization, the Council of Ministers (COM) remains the highest policy and decision-making body of the organization, which meets at least once a year and is chaired by rotation among the member states.

ECO Summits were instituted with the First Summit held in Tehran in 1992; the Second Summit was held in Istanbul in 1993, the Third in Islamabad in 1995, the Fourth in Ashgabat in 1996, the Fifth in Almaty in May 1999 and the Sixth in Tehran in 2000.

The long-term perspectives and priorities of ECO are defined in the form of two Action Plans: the Quetta Plan of Action, and the Istanbul Declaration and Economic Co-operation Strategy, which was adopted in 1996, with concrete targets to be achieved by 2005.

The heads of state/government of the member states and the Council of Ministers have encouraged and endorsed the establishment of co-operative arrangements between ECO and major international and regional organizations and institutions within and outside the UN system for joint efforts towards implementation of ECO's economic projects and programmes.

ECO enjoys observer status with the United Nations, World Trade Organization and the Organization of Islamic Conference. A number of resolutions have been adopted in the UN General Assembly in the context of expansion of co-operation with ECO in the 1990s, most recently in Dec. 2001.

COLOMBO PLAN

History. Founded in 1950 to promote the development of newly independent Asian member countries, the Colombo Plan has grown from a group of seven Commonwealth nations into an organization of 24 countries. Originally the Plan was conceived for a period of six years. This was renewed from time to time until the Consultative Committee gave the Plan an indefinite life span in 1980.

Members. (Permanent Member Countries) Afghanistan, Australia, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, Fiji Islands, India, Indonesia, Islamic Republic of Iran, Japan, South Korea, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Myanmar, Nepal, New Zealand, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand, USA and Vietnam. (Provisional member country) Mongolia.

Aims. The aims of the Colombo Plan are: (1) to provide a forum for discussion, at local level, of development needs; (2) to facilitate development assistance by encouraging members to participate as donors and recipients of technical co-operation; and (3) to execute programmes to advance development within member countries. The Plan currently has the following programmes:

Programme for Public Administration (PPA). Initiated in 1995 to provide developing member country officials training in all sectors of public administration in the context of market-oriented economies, drawing on the experience of more developed economies in the region. The PPA conducts joint training programmes with member countries and sponsors participants on training courses conducted by the Asian Productivity Organization (APO) and the South East Asian Fisheries Development Centre (SEAFDEC). 1999 also saw the introduction of training programmes conducted in collaboration with the Asian Development Bank Institute (ADBI) in Tokyo.

South-South Technical Co-operation Data Bank Programme (SSTC/DB). Published a report in Dec. 1997 entitled South-South Technical Co-operation in Selected Member Countries covering technical co-operation activities of India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Pakistan, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

Drug Advisory Programme (DAP). Initiated in 1972, it works with governments, international bodies and NGOs in the region to deliver more effective anti-narcotics programmes. It works both in supply (controlling availability of drugs) and demand (helping counter the culture and providing assistance to addicts).

Programme for Private Sector Development (PPSD). In 1998 the PPSD conducted training programmes co-sponsored by the Asian Development Bank (ADB), the Malaysian Technical Co-operation Programme (MTCP) and the Pakistan Industrial Technical Assistance Centre (PITAC).

Colombo Plan Staff College for Technician Education (CPSC). Established in 1973, it trains management and technical staff from member countries. It is separately financed by most member countries and functions under the guidance of its own Governing Board, consisting of the heads of member countries' permanent diplomatic missions in the Philippines.

Structure. The Consultative Committee is the principal policy-making body of the Colombo Plan. Consisting of all member countries, it meets every two years to review the economic and social progress of members, exchange views on technical co-operation programmes and generally review the activities of the Plan. The Colombo Plan Council represents each member government and meets several times a year to identify development issues, recommend measures to be taken and ensure implementation.

ASIA-PACIFIC ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION (APEC)

Origin and Aims. APEC was originally established in 1989 to take advantage of the interdependence among Asia-Pacific economies, by facilitating economic growth for all participants and enhancing a sense of community in the region. Begun as an informal dialogue group, APEC is the premier forum for facilitating economic growth, co-operation, trade and investment in the Asia-Pacific region. APEC has a membership of 21 economic jurisdictions, a population of over 2·5bn. and a combined GDP of US$19trn. accounting for 47% of world trade.

APEC is working to achieve what are referred to as the 'Bogor Goals' of free and open trade and investment in the Asia-Pacific by 2010 for developed economies and 2020 for developing economies.

Members. Australia, Brunei, Canada, Chile, China, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, South Korea, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Russia, Singapore, Taiwan, Thailand, USA and Vietnam.

Activities. APEC works in three broad areas to meet the Bogor Goals. These three broad work areas, known as APEC's 'Three Pillars', are: Trade and Investment Liberalization—reducing and eliminating tariff and non-tariff barriers to trade and investment, and opening markets; Business Facilitation—reducing the costs of business transactions, improving access to trade information and bringing into line policy and business strategies to facilitate growth, and free and open trade; Economic and Technical Co-operation—assisting member economies build the necessary capacities to take advantage of global trade and the new economy.

SECRETARIAT OF THE PACIFIC COMMUNITY (SPC)

Until Feb. 1998 known as the South Pacific Commission, this is a regional intergovernmental organization founded in 1947 under an Agreement commonly referred to as the Canberra Agreement. It is funded by assessed contributions from its 27 members and by voluntary contributions from member and non-member countries, international organizations and other sources.

Members. American Samoa, Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, France, French Polynesia, Guam, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Nauru, New Caledonia, New Zealand, Niue, Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Pitcairn Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, UK, USA, Vanuatu, and Wallis and Futuna.

Functions. The SPC has three main areas of work: land resources, marine resources and social resources. It conducts research and provides technical assistance and training in these areas to member Pacific Island countries and territories of the Pacific.

Organization. The Conference of the Pacific Community is the governing body of the Community. Its key focus is to appoint the Director-General, to consider major national or regional policy issues and to note changes to the Financial and Staff Regulations approved by the CRGA, the Committee of Representatives of Governments and Administrations. It meets every two years. The CRGA meets once a year and is the principal decision-making organ of the Community. There is also a regional office in Fiji Islands.

Headquarters: BP D5, 98848 Nouméa Cedex, New Caledonia.

PACIFIC ISLANDS FORUM (PIF)

In Oct. 2000 the South Pacific Forum changed its name to the Pacific Islands Forum. As the South Pacific Forum it held its first meeting of Heads of Government in New Zealand in 1971. The annual PIF provides an opportunity for discussions to be held on a wide range of issues. The Agreement Establishing the Forum Secretariat defines the membership of the Forum and the Secretariat. Decisions are reached by consensus. The administrative arm of the Forum, known officially as the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat, is based in Suva, Fiji. In Oct. 1994 the Forum was granted observer status to the UN.

Members. (2002) Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, New Zealand, Niue, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu and Vanuatu. In 1999 the French territory of New Caledonia was admitted to the Forum as an observer. In 2002 East Timor was admitted to the Forum as a Special Observer.

Functions. The Secretariat's mission is to provide policy options to the Pacific Islands Forum, and to promote Forum decisions and regional and international co-operation. The organization seeks to promote political stability and regional security; enhance the management of economies and the development process; improve trade and investment performance; and efficiently manage the resources of the Secretariat.

Activities. The Secretariat has four core divisions: Trade and Investment; Political and International Affairs; Development and Economic Policy; Corporate Services. The Secretariat provides policy advice to members on a wide range of social, economic and political issues. Since 1989 the Forum has held Post Forum Dialogues with key dialogue partners at ministerial level. There are currently twelve partners: Canada, China, EU, France, India, Indonesia, Japan, South Korea, Malaysia, the Philippines, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Organization. The South Pacific Bureau for Economic Cooperation (SPEC) began as a trade bureau and was established as SPEC in 1972, before being re-organized as the South Pacific Forum Secretariat in 1988. It changed its name to the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat in 2000. The Secretariat is headed by a Secretary General and Deputy Secretary General who form the Executive. The governing body is the Forum Officials Committee, which acts as an intermediary between the Secretariat and the Forum. The Secretariat operates four Trade Offices in Auckland, Beijing, Sydney and Tokyo.

The Secretary General is the permanent Chair of the Council of Regional Organisations in the Pacific (CROP), which brings together ten main regional organizations in the Pacific region: Fiji School of Medicine (FSM); Forum Fisheries Agency (FFA); Pacific Islands Development Programme (PIDP); Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat (PIFS); Secretariat for the Pacific Community (SPC); South Pacific Applied Geoscience Commission (SOPAC); South Pacific Board for Educational Assessment (SPBEA); South Pacific Regional Environment Programme (SPREP); South Pacific Tourism Organisation (SPTO); and the University of the South Pacific (USP).

ASSOCIATION OF SOUTH EAST ASIAN NATIONS (ASEAN)

History and Membership. ASEAN is a regional intergovernmental organization formed by the governments of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand through the Bangkok Declaration which was signed by their foreign ministers on 8 Aug. 1967. Brunei joined in 1984, Vietnam in 1995, Laos and Myanmar in 1997 and Cambodia in 1999. Papua New Guinea also has observer status. In 2001 the combined GDP of member countries was estimated to be US$550,000m.

Objectives. The main objectives are to accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development, to promote active collaboration and mutual assistance in matters of common interest, to ensure the political and economic stability of the South East Asian region, and to maintain close co-operation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims.

Activities. Principal projects concern economic co-operation and development, with the intensification of intra-ASEAN trade, and trade between the region and the rest of the world; joint research and technological programmes; co-operation in transportation and communications; promotion of tourism, South East Asian studies, cultural, scientific, educational and administrative exchanges. The decision to set up an ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) was taken at the Fourth Summit meeting, in Singapore in 1992, with the aim of creating a common market in 15 years, subsequently brought forward to 2002. AFTA applies to its first six signatories, namely Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

In Dec. 1995 heads of government meeting in Bangkok signed a treaty establishing a South-East Asia Nuclear-Free Zone, which was extended to cover offshore economic exclusion zones. Individual signatories were to decide whether to allow port visits or transportation of nuclear weapons by foreign powers through territorial waters. The ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF) was proposed at a meeting of foreign ministers in July 1993 to discuss security issues in the region. Its first formal meeting took place in July 1994 attended by all seven members and its dialogue partners (Australia, Canada, the EU, Japan, South Korea, New Zealand and the USA) and observers (People's Republic of China, Laos, Papua New Guinea, Russia and Vietnam).

Organization. The highest authority is the meeting of Heads of Government, which takes place annually. The highest policy-making body is the annual Meeting of Foreign Ministers, commonly known as AMM, the ASEAN Ministerial Meeting, which convenes in each of the member countries on a rotational basis in alphabetical order. The AEM (ASEAN Economic Meeting) meets formally or informally each year to direct ASEAN economic co-operation. The AEM and AMM report jointly to the heads of government at summit meetings. Each capital has its own national secretariat. The central secretariat in Jakarta is headed by the Secretary-General, a post that revolves among the member states in alphabetical order every five years.

ASEAN MEKONG BASIN DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION (MEKONG GROUP)

The ministers and representatives of Brunei, Cambodia, China, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam met in Kuala Lumpur on 17 June 1996 and agreed the following basic objectives for the Group. Its principal objectives are to co-operate in the economic and social development of the Mekong Basin area and strengthen the link between it and ASEAN member countries, through a process of dialogue and common project identification.

Priorities include: development of infrastructure capacities in the fields of transport, telecommunications, irrigation and energy; development of trade and investment-generating activities; development of the agricultural sector to enhance production for domestic consumption and export; sustainable development of forestry resources and development of mineral resources; development of the industrial sector, especially small to medium enterprises; development of tourism; human resource development and support for training; co-operation in the fields of science and technology.

SOUTH ASIAN ASSOCIATION FOR REGIONAL CO-OPERATION (SAARC)

SAARC was established to accelerate the process of economic and social development in member states through joint action in agreed areas of co-operation. The foreign ministers of the seven member countries met for the first time in New Delhi in Aug.

1983 and adopted the Declaration on South Asian Regional Co-operation whereby an Integrated Programme of Action (IPA) was launched. The charter establishing SAARC was adopted at the first summit meeting in Dhaka in Dec. 1985.

Members. Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka.

Objectives. To promote the welfare of the peoples of South Asia; to accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development; to promote and strengthen collective self-reliance among members; to promote active collaboration and mutual assistance in the economic, social, cultural, technical and scientific fields; to strengthen co-operation with other developing countries, and among themselves through international forums on matters of common interest. Co-operation within the framework is based on respect for the principles of sovereign equality, territorial integrity, political independence, non-interference in the internal affairs of other states, and mutual benefit. Agreed areas of co-operation under the Integrated Programme of Action (IPA) include agriculture and rural development; human resource development; environment, meteorology and forestry; science and technology; transport and communications; energy; and social development.

A SAARC Preferential Trading Arrangement (SAPTA) designed to reduce tariffs on trade between SAARC member states was signed in April 1993 and entered into force in Dec. 1995. In 1998 at the Tenth Summit in Colombo, the importance of achieving a South Asian Free Trade Area (SAFTA) as mandated by the Malé Summit in 1997 was reiterated and it was decided to set up a Committee of Experts to work on drafting a comprehensive treaty regime for creating a free trade area. The Colombo Summit agreed that the text of this regulatory framework would be finalized by 2001.

Organization. The highest authority of the Association rests with the heads of state or government, who meet annually at Summit level. The Council of Foreign Ministers, which meets twice a year, is responsible for formulating policy, reviewing progress and deciding on new areas of co-operation and the mechanisms deemed necessary for that. The Council is supported by a Standing Committee of Foreign Secretaries, by the Programming Committee and by 11 Technical Committees which are responsible for individual areas of SAARC's activities. There is a secretariat in Káthmandu, headed by a Secretary-General, who is assisted in his work by seven Directors, appointed by the Secretary-General upon nomination by member states for a period of three years which may in special circumstances be extended.

Decisions at all levels are taken on the basis of unanimity. Bilateral and contentious issues are excluded from deliberations.

THE LEAGUE OF ARAB STATES

Origin. The League of Arab States is a voluntary association of sovereign Arab states, established by a Pact signed in Cairo on 22 March 1945 by the representatives of Egypt, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Yemen. It seeks to promote closer ties among member states and to co-ordinate their economic, cultural and security policies with a view to developing collective co-operation, protecting national security and maintaining the independence and sovereignty of member states, in order to enhance the potential for joint Arab action across all fields.

Members. Algeria, Bahrain, Comoros, Djibouti, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Palestine, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates and Republic of Yemen. Libya left the League of Arab States in Oct. 2002, citing its 'inefficiency' in dealing with the stand-off between Iraq and the USA and the Israeli–Palestinian conflict.

Joint Action. In the political field, the League is entrusted with defending the supreme interests and national causes of the Arab world through the implementation of joint action plans at regional and international levels, and with examining any disputes that may arise between member states with a view to settling them by peaceful means. The Joint Defence and Economic Co-operation Treaty signed in 1950 provided for the establishment of a Joint Defence Council as well as an Economic Council (renamed the Economic and Social Council in 1977). Economic, social and cultural activities constitute principal and vital elements of the joint action initiative.

Arab Common Market. An Arab Common Market came into operation on 1 Jan. 1965. The agreement, reached on 13 Aug. 1964, provided for the abolition of customs duties on agricultural products and natural resources within five years, by reducing tariffs at an annual rate of 20%. Customs duties on industrial products were to be reduced by 10% annually. However, it never became reality although it has remained the ambition of many people throughout the Arab world for many years since.

Organization. The machinery of the League consists of a Council, 11 specialized ministerial committees entrusted with drawing up common policies for the regulation and advancement of co-operation in their fields (information, internal affairs, justice, housing, transport, social affairs, youth and sports, health, environment, telecommunications and electricity), and a permanent secretariat.

The League is considered to be a regional organization within the framework of the United Nations at which its Secretary-General is an observer. It has permanent delegations in New York and Geneva for the UN, in Addis Ababa for the Organization of African Unity (OAU), as well as offices in Athens, Beijing, Berlin, Brussels, London, Madrid, Moscow, New Delhi, Paris, Rome, Vienna and Washington, D.C.

Headquarters: Al Tahrir Square, Cairo, Egypt.

GULF CO-OPERATION COUNCIL (GCC)

Origin. Also referred to as the Co-operation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf (CCASG), the Council was established on 25 May 1981 on signature of the Charter by Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

Aims. To assure security and stability of the region through economic and political co-operation; promote, expand and enhance economic ties on solid foundations, in the best interests of the people; co-ordinate and unify economic, financial and monetary policies, as well as commercial and industrial legislation and customs regulations; achieve self-sufficiency in basic foodstuffs.

Organization. The Supreme Council is formed by the heads of member states and is the highest authority. Its presidency rotates, based on the alphabetical order of the names of the member states. It holds one regular session every year, in addition to a mid-year consultation session. The Co-operation Council has a commission, called 'Commission for the Settlement of Disputes', which is attached to the Supreme Council. The Ministerial Council is formed of the Foreign Ministers of the member states or other delegated ministers and meets quarterly. The Secretariat-General is composed of Secretary-General, Assistant Secretaries-General and a number of staff as required. The Secretariat consists of the following sectors: Political Affairs, Military Affairs, Economic Affairs, Human and Environment Affairs, Information Centre, Media Department, Secretary-General's Office, GCC Delegation in Brussels, Technical Telecommunications Bureau in Bahrain. In Jan. 2003 it launched a customs union, introducing a 5% duty on foreign imports across the trade bloc.

Finance. The annual budget of the GCC Secretariat is shared equally by the six member states.

Headquarters: PO Box 7153, Riyadh-11462, Saudi Arabia.
Secretary-General: Abdulrahman bin Hamad Al-Attiyeh.

Publications. GCC News (monthly, in English); Attaawun (quarterly, in Arabic); GCC Economic Bulletin (annual).

ORGANIZATION OF THE PETROLEUM EXPORTING COUNTRIES (OPEC)

Origin and Aims. Founded in Baghdad in 1960 by Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. The principal aims are: to unify the petroleum policies of member countries and determine the best means for safeguarding their interests, individually and collectively; to devise ways and means of ensuring the stabilization of prices in international oil markets with a view to eliminating harmful and unnecessary fluctuations; and to secure a steady income for the producing countries, an efficient, economic and regular supply of petroleum to consuming nations, and a fair return on their capital to those investing in the petroleum industry. It is estimated that OPEC members possess 75% of the world's known reserves of crude petroleum, of which about two-thirds are in the Middle East.

Members. (2002) Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela. Membership applications may be made by any other country having substantial net exports of crude petroleum, which has fundamentally similar interests to those of member countries. Gabon became an associated member in 1973 and a full member in 1975, but in 1996 withdrew owing to difficulty in meeting its percentage contribution. Ecuador joined the Organization in 1973 but left in 1992.

Organization. The main organs are the Conference, the Board of Governors and the Secretariat. The Conference, which is the supreme authority meeting at least twice a year, consists of delegations from each member country, normally headed by the respective minister of oil, mines or energy. All decisions, other than those concerning procedural matters, must be adopted unanimously.

OPEC FUND FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The OPEC Fund for International Development was established in 1976 to provide financial aid on advantageous terms to developing countries (other than OPEC members) and international development agencies whose beneficiaries are developing countries. In 1980 the Fund was transformed into a permanent autonomous international agency and renamed the OPEC Fund for International Development. It is administered by a Ministerial Council and a Governing Board. Each member country is represented on the Council by its finance minister.

The initial endowment of the fund amounted to US$800m. At the start of 2003 pledged contributions totalled US$3,435m., and the Fund had extended 953 loans totalling US$5,146·1m. of which US$3,952·5m. was for project financing, US$724·2m. for balance-of-payments support, US$305·3m. for programme funding and US$164·0m. for debt relief within the context of the Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. In addition, and through its private sector window, the Fund had approved financing worth a total of US$189·3m. in 40 operations in support of private sector entities in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean and Europe. Through its grant programme the Fund had also committed a total of US$272·3m. in support of a wide range of initiatives.

AFRICAN UNION (AU)

History. The Fourth Extraordinary Session of the Assembly of the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) held in Sirté, Libya on 9 Sept. 1999 decided to establish an African Union. At Lomé, Togo on 11 July 2000 the OAU Assembly of the Heads of State and Government adopted the Constitutive Act of the African Union, which was later ratified by the required two-thirds of the member states of the Organization of African Unity (OAU); it came into force on 26 May 2001. The Lusaka Summit, in July 2001, gave a mandate to translate the transformation of the Organization of African Unity into the African Union, and on 9 July 2002 the Durban Summit, in South Africa, formally launched the African Union.

Aims. The African Union aims to promote unity, solidarity, cohesion and co-operation among the peoples of Africa and African states, and at the same time to co-ordinate efforts by African people to realize their goals of achieving economic, political and social integration.

Activities. The African Union became fully operational in July 2002, and will be working towards establishing 17 organs among which are a Pan-African parliament, the Economic, Social and Cultural Commission (ECOSOC), a Central Bank and a Court of Justice.

ECONOMIC COMMUNITY OF CENTRAL AFRICAN STATES (CEEAC)

The Economic Community of Central African States (Communauté Economique des Etats de l'Afrique Centrale) was established in 1983 to promote regional economic co-operation and to establish a Central African Common Market.

Members: Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Republic of the Congo, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, Rwanda, São Tomé e Príncipe. Observer: Angola.

Headquarters: BP 2112, Libreville, Gabon.

ECONOMIC COMMUNITY OF WEST AFRICAN STATES (ECOWAS)

Founded in 1975 as a regional common market, and now aiming to operate a single currency zone by 2004, ECOWAS later also became a political forum involved in the promotion of a democratic environment and the pursuit of fundamental human rights. In July 1993 it revised its treaty to assume responsibility for the regulation of regional armed conflicts, acknowledging the inextricable link between development and peace and security. Thus it now has a new role in conflict management and prevention through its Mediation and Security Council, which monitors the moratorium on the export, import and manufacture of light weapons and ammunition. However, it still retains a military arm, ECOMOG. It is also involved in the war against drug abuse and illicit drug trafficking.

Members. Benin, Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Côte d'Ivoire, The Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Togo.

Organization. It meets at yearly summits which rotate in the different capitals of member states. The institution is governed by the Council of Ministers, and has a secretariat in Abuja which is run by an Executive Secretary.

WEST AFRICAN ECONOMIC AND MONETARY UNION (UEMOA)

Founded in 1994, the UEMOA (Union Economique et Monétaire Ouest Africaine) aims to reinforce the competitiveness of the economic and financial activities of member states in the context of an open and rival market and a rationalized and harmonized juridical environment; to ensure the convergence of the macro-economic performances and policies of member states with the institution of a multilateral control procedure; to create a common market among member states based on the free circulation of the people, goods, services and capital and on the right of people exercising an independent or remunerated activity to establish a common external tariff as well as a common commercial policy; to institute a co-ordination for the national sector-based policies with the implementation of common actions and conceivably common policies, especially in the following domains: community-based land reclamation, agriculture, environment, transport, infrastructures, telecommunications, human resources, energy, industries, mines and crafts; and to harmonize the legislation, especially the fiscal system, of the member states if the necessity arose for the proper functioning of the common market.

COMMON MARKET FOR EASTERN AND SOUTHERN AFRICA (COMESA)

COMESA is an African economic grouping of 20 member states who are committed, over the long term, to the creation of a Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa. It was established in 1994 as a building block for the African Economic Community and replaced the Preferential Trade Area for Eastern and Southern Africa, which had been in existence since 1981.

Members. Angola, Burundi, Comoros, Democratic Republic of Congo, Djibouti, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Madagascar, Malaŵi, Mauritius, Namibia, Rwanda, Seychelles, Sudan, Swaziland, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Objectives. To facilitate the removal of the structural and institutional weaknesses of member states so that they are able to attain collective and sustainable development.

Activities. COMESA's Free Trade Area (FTA) was launched on 31 Oct. 2000 at a Summit of Heads of States and Government in Lusaka, Zambia. The FTA participating states shall have zero tariff on goods and services produced in these countries.

In addition to creating the policy environment for freeing trade, COMESA has also created specialized institutions like the Trade and Development Bank of Eastern and Southern Africa, the COMESA Re-Insurance Company, the Clearing House and the COMESA Court of Justice, to provide the required financial infrastructure and service support.

SOUTHERN AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT COMMUNITY (SADC)

The Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC), the forerunner of the Southern African Development Community (SADC), was formed in Lusaka, Zambia on 1 April 1980, following the adoption of the Lusaka Declaration—Southern Africa: Towards Economic Liberation—by the nine founding member states.

Members. The nine founder member countries were Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Malaŵi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe. The Democratic Republic of the Congo, Mauritius, Namibia, the Seychelles and South Africa have since joined, bringing membership up to 14 countries.

Aims and Activities. SADC's Common Agenda includes the following: the promotion of sustainable and equitable economic growth and socio-economic development that will ensure poverty alleviation with the ultimate objective of its eradication; the promotion of common political values, systems and other shared values that are transmitted through institutions that are democratic, legitimate and effective; and the consolidation and maintenance of democracy, peace and security.

In contrast to the country-based co-ordination of sectoral activities and programmes, SADC has now adopted a more centralized approach through which the 21 Co-ordinating Units are grouped into four clusters; namely: Trade, Industry, Finance and Investment; Infrastructure and Services; Food, Agriculture, and Natural Resources; Social and Human Development and Special Programmes.

SADC has made remarkable progress in implementing its integration agenda since the 1992 Treaty came into force. Since then, 24 Protocols to spearhead the sectoral programmes and activities have been signed. The following protocols have entered into force: Immunities and Privileges; Combating Illicit Drug Trafficking; Energy; Transport, Communications and Meteorology; Shared Watercourse Systems; Mining; Trade; Education and Training.

LAKE CHAD BASIN COMMISSION

Established by a Convention and Statute signed on 22 May 1964 by Cameroon, Chad, Niger and Nigeria, and later by the Central African Republic and Sudan, to regulate and control utilization of the water and other natural resources in the Basin; to initiate, promote and co-ordinate natural resources development projects and research within the Basin area; and to examine complaints and promote settlement of disputes, with a view to promoting regional co-operation.

In Dec. 1977, at Enugu in Nigeria, the 3rd summit of heads of state of the commission signed the protocol for the Harmonization of the Regulations Relating to Fauna and Flora in member countries, and adopted plans for the multi-donor approach towards major integrated development for the conventional basin. An international campaign to save Lake Chad following a report on the environmental degradation of the conventional basin was launched by heads of state at the 8th summit of the Commission in Abuja in March 1994. The 10th summit, held in N'Djaména in 2000, saw agreement on a US$1m. inter-basin water transfer project.

The Commission operates an annual budget of CFA 800m., and receives assistance from various international and donor agencies including the FAO, and UN Development and Environment Programmes.

NIGER BASIN AUTHORITY

As a result of a special meeting of the Niger River Commission (established in 1964), to discuss the revitalizing and restructuring of the organization to improve its efficiency, the Niger Basin Authority was established in 1980. Its responsibilities cover the harmonization and co-ordination of national development policies; the formulation of the general development policy of the Basin; the elaboration and implementation of an integrated development plan of the Basin; the initiation and monitoring of an orderly and rational regional policy for the utilization of the waters of the Niger River; the design and conduct of studies, researches and surveys; the formulation of plans, the construction, exploitation and maintenance of structure, and the elaboration of projects.

Members: Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Chad, Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Mali, Niger, Nigeria.

Executive Secretary: Muhammad Bello Tuga.

EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY

The East African Community (EAC) was formally established on 30 Nov. 1999 with the signing in Arusha, Tanzania of the Treaty for the Establishment of the East African Community. The Treaty envisages the establishment of a Customs Union, as the entry point of the Community, a Common Market, subsequently a Monetary Union and ultimately a Political Federation of the East African States. The EAC partner states are aiming to sign a Protocol on the Establishment of the East African Customs Union by Nov. 2003.

Members: Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL AUTHORITY ON DEVELOPMENT

The Intergovernmental Authority on Development was created on 21 March 1996 and has its origins in the Intergovernmental Authority on Drought and Development, which had been established in 1986. It has three priority areas of co-operation: conflict prevention, management and humanitarian affairs; infrastructure development; food security and environment protection.

Members: Djibouti, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan, Uganda.

Executive Secretary: Dr Attalla Hamad Bashir (Sudan).

WORLD COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

The World Council of Churches was formally constituted on 23 Aug. 1948 in Amsterdam. Today, member churches number over 340 from more than 120 countries.

Origin. The World Council was founded by the coming together of diverse Christian movements, including the overseas mission groups gathered from 1921 in the International Missionary Council, the Faith and Order Movement founded by American Episcopal Bishop Charles Brent, and the Life and Work Movement led by Swedish Lutheran Archbishop Nathan Söderblom. On 13 May 1938, at Utrecht, a provisional committee was appointed to prepare for the formation of a World Council of Churches, under the chairmanship of William Temple, then Archbishop of York.

Membership. The basis of membership (1975) states: 'The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of Churches which confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour according to the Scriptures and therefore seek to fulfil together their common calling to the glory of the one God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.' Membership is open to Churches which express their agreement with this basis and satisfy such criteria as the Assembly or Central Committee may prescribe. Today, more than 340 Churches of Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox, Old Catholic and Pentecostal confessions belong to this fellowship.

Activities. The WCC's Central Committee comprises the Programme Committee and the Finance Committee. Within the Programme Committee there are advisory groups on issues relating to communication, women, justice, peace and creation, youth, ecumenical relations and inter-religious relations. Following the WCC's international assembly in Harare, Zimbabwe in 1998 the work of the WCC was restructured. Activities were grouped into four 'clusters'—Relationships; Issues and Themes; Communication; and Finance, Services and Administration. The Relationships cluster comprises four teams (Church and Ecumenical Relations, Regional Relations and Ecumenical Sharing, Inter-Religious Relations and International Relations), as well as two programmes (Action by Churches Together and the Ecumenical Church Loan Fund). The Issues and Themes cluster comprises four teams (Faith and Order; Mission and Evangelism; Justice, Peace and Creation; and Education and Ecumenical Formation).

In Aug. 1997 the WCC launched a Peace to the City campaign, as the initial focus of a programme to overcome violence in troubled cities. The Decade to Overcome Violence was launched in Feb. 2001 during the meeting of the WCC Central Committee in Berlin.

Organization. The governing body of the World Council, consisting of delegates specially appointed by the member Churches, is the Assembly, which meets every seven or eight years to frame policy. It has no legislative powers and depends for the implementation of its decisions upon the action of member Churches. The 8th Assembly, in Harare in 1998, had as its theme 'Turn to God, Rejoice in Hope'. A 154-member Central Committee meets annually to carry out the Assembly mandate, with a smaller 25-member Executive Committee meeting twice a year. The General Secretariat includes the Ecumenical Institute at Bossey, in Switzerland.

UNREPRESENTED NATIONS AND PEOPLES ORGANIZATION (UNPO)

UNPO is an international organization created by nations and peoples around the world who are not represented in the world's principal international organizations, such as the UN. Founded in 1991, UNPO now has 53 members representing over 100m. people worldwide.

Membership. Open to all nations and peoples unrepresented, subject to adherence to the five principles which form the basis of UNPO's charter: equal right to self-determination of all nations and peoples; adherence to internationally accepted human rights standards; to the principles of democracy; promotion of non-violence; and protection of the environment. Applicants must show that they constitute a 'nation or people' as defined in the Covenant.

Functions and Activities. UNPO offers an international forum for occupied nations, indigenous peoples, minorities and oppressed majorities, who struggle to regain their lost countries, preserve their cultural identities, protect their basic human and economic rights, and safeguard their environment.

It does not represent those peoples; rather it assists and empowers them to represent themselves more effectively. To this end, it provides professional services and facilities as well as education and training in the fields of diplomacy, human rights law, democratic processes, conflict resolution, and environmental protection. Members, private foundations and voluntary contributions fund the Organization.

In total six former members of UNPO (Armenia, Belau, East Timor, Estonia, Georgia and Latvia) subsequently achieved full independence and gained representation in the UN. Belau is now called Palau. Current members Bougainville and Kosovo are progressively achieving self-determination.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR MIGRATION (IOM)

Established in Brussels in 1951 to help solve European population and refugee problems through migration, and to stimulate the creation of new economic opportunities in countries lacking certain manpower. IOM is committed to the principle that humane and orderly migration benefits migrants and society.

Members (98 as of Dec. 2002). Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, Colombia, Congo (Democratic Republic of), Congo (Republic of), Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Finland, France, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, South Korea, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liberia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mali, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Rwanda, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, United Republic of Tanzania, Thailand, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukraine, UK, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia and Zimbabwe. 33 governments and a large number of government agencies and NGOs have observer status.

Activities. As an intergovernmental body, IOM acts with its partners in the international community to: assist in meeting the operational challenges of migration; advance understanding of migration issues; encourage social and economic development through migration; work towards effective respect of human dignity and the well-being of migrants. Since 1952 the IOM has assisted some 11m. refugees and migrants to settle in over 125 countries. Throughout 2001 the organization assisted in the humanitarian emergency unfolding in Afghanistan by way of shelter programmes and the registration of IDPs (internally displaced persons), and by meeting the needs of the displaced brought on by drought and conflict. Those elsewhere supported by the IOM in 2001 included: India, following the earthquake affecting large areas in the west of the country; and Africa, in particular the collection and destruction of arms in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the relocation of IDPs following continued fighting in the border region between Guinea and Sierra Leone. In 2001 IOM launched a 'Migration and Development in Africa Programme' and a 'Migration Policy and Research Programme'. IOM's operational budget in 2001 was US$360m.

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS (ICRC)

Origin. Founded in Geneva in Feb. 1863. From its outset the ICRC saw that volunteers could act effectively on the battlefield, without risking rejection by officers and soldiers, only if they could be told apart from ordinary civilians by a distinctive emblem and were protected from fighting.

The 27th International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent was held in Geneva in Nov. 1999 and adopted a Plan of Action for 2000–03.

Mission Statement. The ICRC acts to help all victims of war and internal violence, attempting to ensure implementation of humanitarian rules restricting armed violence.

The ICRC's mission arises from the basic human desire, common to all civilizations, to lay down rules governing the use of force in war and to safeguard the dignity of the weak. With a mandate from the international community to help victims of war and internal violence and to promote compliance with international humanitarian law, the ICRC's activities are aimed at protecting and assisting the victims of armed conflict and internal violence so as to preserve their physical integrity and their dignity and to enable them to regain their autonomy as quickly as possible. The main treaties governing international law are the Geneva Conventions (1949) and the Additional Protocols (1977).

* The ICRC is independent of all governments and international organizations. Its work is prompted by the desire to promote humane conduct and is guided by empathy for the victims. The ICRC is impartial: its only criterion for action is the victims' needs. The ICRC is neutral and remains detached from all political issues related to conflict.

* By applying these principles strictly, the ICRC is able to act as an intermediary between the parties to armed conflict and to promote dialogue in situations of internal violence, with a view to finding solutions for matters of humanitarian concern.

* Through its work, the ICRC helps to prevent the worsening of crises and even at times to resolve them.

* The ICRC systematically reminds all military and civilian authorities directly involved in armed conflict or internal violence of their obligations under international humanitarian law and the other humanitarian rules by which they are bound.

* The ICRC has the duty to remind all States of their collective obligation to ensure respect for international humanitarian law.

* In all societies and cultures, the ICRC endeavours to promote international humanitarian law and the fundamental human values underlying the law.

* As the founding member of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, the ICRC directs and co-ordinates the international work of the Movement's components in connection with armed conflict and internal violence.

* The ICRC gives priority to co-operation with the National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies and their Federation. It acts in consultation with all other organizations involved in humanitarian work.

Finance. The ICRC relies for its financing on voluntary contributions from signatories to the Geneva Conventions, supranational organizations such as the European Union, and public and private sources. To obtain the necessary funding the ICRC launches annual appeals.

In 2001 the ICRC maintained a permanent presence in 69 countries with a total staff of around 11,000, and conducted operations in around 80 countries.

MÉDECINS SANS FRONTIÈRES (MSF)

Origin. Médecins sans Frontières was established on 20 Dec. 1971 by a group of French doctors. MSF has offices in 20 countries and provides emergency medical assistance to more than 80 countries.

Functions. MSF was the first non-military, non-governmental organization to specialize in international humanitarian aid and emergency medical assistance. MSF is dedicated to rectifying what it perceives as the shortcomings of international aid agencies who, it believes, offer too little medical assistance and are overly reticent in the face of legal and administrative obstacles. MSF works in countries where health structures are insufficient, collaborating with authorities such as the Ministry of Health to provide assistance. MSF works in rehabilitation of hospitals and dispensaries, vaccination programmes and water and sanitation projects. MSF also works in remote health care centres, slum areas and provides training of local personnel with the objective of rebuilding health structures to acceptable levels.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL (AI)

Origin. Founded in 1961 by British lawyer Peter Beneson as a one-year campaign for the release of prisoners of conscience, Amnesty International has grown to become a worldwide organization, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977. As defined by AI, 'prisoners of conscience' are people imprisoned solely because of their political or religious beliefs, gender, or their racial or ethnic origin, who have neither used nor advocated violence. The organization's mandate is based on the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

AI has over 1m. members, subscribers and regular donors in more than 100 countries. The organization is governed by a nine-member International Executive Committee (IEC). It comprises eight volunteer members elected every two years by an International Council comprising representatives of the worldwide movement, and an elected member of the International Secretariat. During the 12 months to 31 March 1998 the International Secretariat had expenditure of £16,312,000.

Each year, AI produces a global report detailing human rights violations in all regions of the world. The 2001 report, which detailed abuses during 2000, included the fact that executions were carried out in 61 countries, people were arbitrarily arrested and detained, or in detention without charge or trial in 72 countries, and in 125 countries people were reportedly tortured or ill-treated by security forces, police or other state authorities.

INTERNATIONAL SEABED AUTHORITY (ISA)

The ISA is an autonomous international organization established under the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) of 1982 and the 1994 Agreement relating to the implementation of Part XI of the above Convention. It came into existence on 16 Nov. 1994 and became fully operational in June 1996.

The administrative expenses are met from assessed contributions from its members. Membership currently numbers 138 and the budget for the biennium 2003–04 is US$10,509,700.

The Convention on the Law of the Sea covers almost all ocean space and its uses: navigation and overflight, resource exploration and exploitation, conservation and pollution, fishing and shipping. It entitles coastal states and inhabited islands to proclaim a 200-mile exclusive economic zone or continental shelf (which may be larger). Its 320 Articles and nine Annexes constitute a guide for behaviour by states in the world's oceans, defining maritime zones, laying down rules for drawing sea boundaries, assigning legal rights, duties and responsibilities to States, and providing machinery for the settlement of disputes.

Organization. The Assembly, consisting of representatives from all member states, is the supreme organ. The 36-member Council, elected by the Assembly, includes the four largest importers or consumers of seabed minerals, four largest investors in seabed minerals, four major exporters of the same, six developing countries representing special interests and 18 members from all the geographical regions. The Council is the executive organ of the Authority. There are also two subsidiary bodies: the Legal and Technical Commission (currently 24 experts) and the Finance Committee (currently 15 experts). The Secretariat serves all the bodies of the Authority and under the 1994 Agreement is performing functions of the Enterprise (until such time as it starts to operate independently of the Secretariat). The Enterprise is the organ through which the ISA carries out deep seabed activities directly or through joint ventures.

Activities. In July 2000 the ISA adopted the Regulations for Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area. Pursuant thereto, it signed exploration contracts with seven contractors who have submitted plans of work for deep seabed exploration. These are: Institut Français de Recherche pour l'Exploitation de la Mer (IFREMER) and Association Française pour l'Etude de la Recherche des Nodules (AFERNOD), France; Deep Ocean Resources Development Co. Ltd (DORD), Japan; State Enterprise Yuzhmorgeologiya, Russian Federation; China Ocean Minerals Research and Development Association (COMRA); Interoceanmetal Joint Organization (IOM), a consortium sponsored by Bulgaria, Cuba, Czech Republic, Poland, Russian Federation and Slovakia; the government of South Korea; and the government of India.

Between 1998 and 2002 the ISA organized five workshops: the development of guidelines for the assessment of the possible environmental impacts arising from exploration for polymetallic nodules; proposed technologies for deep seabed mining of polymetallic nodules; the available knowledge on mineral resources other than polymetallic nodules in the deep seabed; a standardized system of data interpretation; prospects for international collaboration in marine environmental research. The workshop to be convened in 2003 will have as its objective the establishment of a programme to develop a geologic model of the Clarion-Clipperton Fracture Zone in the Pacific Ocean. While continuing to develop a database on polymetallic nodules (POLYDAT), the Authority has also made significant progress towards the establishment of a central data repository for all marine minerals in the deep seabed.

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (ITLOS), founded in Oct. 1996 and based in Hamburg, adjudicates on disputes relating to the interpretation and application of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. The Convention gives the Tribunal jurisdiction to resolve a variety of international law of the sea disputes such as the delimitation of maritime zones, fisheries, navigation and the protection of the marine environment. Its Seabed Disputes Chamber has compulsory jurisdiction to resolve disputes amongst States, the International Seabed Authority, companies and private individuals, arising out of the exploitation of the deep seabed. The Tribunal also has compulsory jurisdiction in certain instances to protect the rights of parties to a dispute or to prevent serious harm to the marine environment, and over the prompt release of arrested vessels and their crews upon the deposit of a security. The jurisdiction of the Tribunal also extends to all matters specifically provided for in any other agreement which confers jurisdiction on the Tribunal. The Tribunal is composed of 21 judges, elected by signatories from five world regional blocs: five each from Africa and Asia; four from Western Europe and other States; four from Latin America and the Caribbean; and three from Eastern Europe. The judges serve a term of nine years, with one third of the judges' terms expiring every three years.

ANTARCTIC TREATY

Antarctica is an island continent some 15·5m. sq. km in area which lies almost entirely within the Antarctic Circle. Its surface is composed of an ice sheet over rock, and it is uninhabited except for research and other workers in the course of duty. It is in general ownerless: for countries with territorial claims, see ARGENTINA; AUSTRALIA: Australian Antarctic Territory; CHILE; FRANCE: Southern and Antarctic Territories; NEW ZEALAND: Ross Dependency; NORWAY: Queen Maud Land; UNITED KINGDOM: British Antarctic Territory.

12 countries which had maintained research stations in Antarctica during International Geophysical Year, 1957–58 (Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Chile, France, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, the USSR, the UK and the USA) signed the Antarctic Treaty (Washington Treaty) on 1 Dec. 1959. Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czech Republic, Denmark, Ecuador, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Italy, South Korea, North Korea, the Netherlands, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine, Uruguay and Venezuela subsequently acceded to the Treaty. The Treaty reserves the Antarctic area south of 60º S. lat. for peaceful purposes, provides for international co-operation in scientific investigation and research, and preserves, for the duration of the Treaty, the status quo with regard to territorial sovereignty, rights and claims. The Treaty entered into force on 23 June 1961. The 45 nations party to the Treaty (27 full voting signatories and 18 adherents) meet biennially.

An agreement reached in Madrid in April 1991 and signed by all 39 parties in Oct. imposes a ban on mineral exploitation in Antarctica for 50 years, at the end of which any one of the 27 voting parties may request a review conference. After this the ban may be lifted by agreement of three quarters of the nations then voting, which must include the present 27.

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION (IPU)

Founded in 1889 by William Randal Cremer (UK) and Frédéric Passy (France), the Inter-Parliamentary Union was the first permanent forum for political multilateral negotiations. The Union is a centre for dialogue and parliamentary diplomacy among legislators representing every political system and all the main political leanings in the world. It was instrumental in setting up what is now the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague.

Activities. The IPU fosters contacts, co-ordination and the exchange of experience among parliaments and parliamentarians of all countries; considers questions of international interest and concern, and expresses its views on such issues in order to bring about action by parliaments and parliamentarians; contributes to the defence and promotion of human rightsan essential factor of parliamentary democracy and development; contributes to better knowledge of the working and development of representative institutions and to the strengthening of representative democracy.

Membership. The IPU had 144 members and five associate members in Nov. 2002.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR DEMOCRACY AND ELECTORAL ASSISTANCE (IDEA)

Created in 1995, the International IDEA is an intergovernmental organization that seeks to promote and develop sustainable democracy worldwide. Global in membership and independent of specific national interests, IDEA works with both new and long-established democracies, helping to develop the institutions and culture of democracy. It operates at international, regional and national levels, working in partnership with a range of institutions.

Aims and Activities. The International IDEA aims to: help countries build capacity to develop democratic institutions; provide a meeting-place for and facilitate dialogue between democracy practitioners around the world; increase knowledge and expertise about elections and election observation; promote transparency, accountability, professionalism and efficiency in elections in the context of democratic development; develop and promote norms, rules and guidelines relating to multi-party pluralism and broader democratic processes. The principal areas of activity include: electoral systems and management; political participation, including women in politics; political parties, management and financing; post-conflict democracy building and reconciliation; democracy at local level; democracy indicators and assessment.

Membership. The International IDEA had 19 members in Dec. 2002.

ISLAMIC DEVELOPMENT BANK

The Agreement establishing the IDB (Banque islamique de développement) was adopted at the Second Islamic Finance Ministers' Conference held in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia in Aug. 1974. The Bank, which is open to all member countries of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, commenced operations in 1975. Its main objective is to foster economic development and social progress of member countries and Muslim communities individually as well as jointly in accordance with the principles of the Sharia. It is active in the promotion of trade and the flow of investments among member countries, and maintains a Special Assistance Fund for member countries suffering natural calamities. The Fund is also used to finance health and educational projects aimed at improving the socio-economic conditions of Muslim communities in non-member countries. A US$1·5bn. IDB Infrastructure Fund was launched in 1998 to invest in projects such as power, telecommunications, transportation, energy, natural resources, petro-chemical and other infrastructure-related sectors in member countries.

Members (54 as of March 2003). Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Benin, Brunei, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Chad, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Djibouti, Egypt, Gabon, The Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lebanon, Libya, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Morocco, Mozambique, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Palestine, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan, Suriname, Syria, Tajikistan, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, Yemen.

INTERPOL (INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION)

Organization. Interpol was founded in 1923, disbanded in 1938 and reconstituted in 1946. The International Criminal Police Organization—Interpol was founded to ensure and promote the widest possible mutual assistance between all criminal police authorities within the limits of the law existing in the different countries worldwide and the spirit of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and to establish and develop all institutions likely to contribute effectively to the prevention and suppression of ordinary law crimes.

Aims. Interpol provides a co-ordination centre (General Secretariat) for its 181 member countries. Its priority areas of activity concern criminal organizations, public safety and terrorism, drug-related crimes, financial crime and high-tech crime, trafficking in human beings, and tracking fugitives from justice. Interpol centralizes records and information on international offenders; it operates a worldwide communication network.

Interpol's General Assembly is held annually. The General Assembly is the body of supreme authority in the organization. It is composed of delegates appointed by the members of the organization.

Interpol's Executive Committee, which meets four times a year, supervises the execution of the decisions of the General Assembly. The Executive Committee is composed of the president of the organization, the three vice-presidents and nine delegates.

Interpol's General Secretariat is the centre for co-ordinating the fight against international crime. Its activities, undertaken in response to requests from the police services and judicial authorities in its member countries, focus on crime prevention and law enforcement.

As of March 2003 Interpol's Sub-Regional Bureaus are located in Abidjan, Buenos Aires, El Salvador, Harare and Nairobi. The Interpol's Liaison Office for Asia is located in Bangkok.

INTERNATIONAL MOBILE SATELLITE ORGANIZATION (IMSO)

Founded in 1979 as the International Maritime Satellite Organization (Inmarsat) to establish a satellite system to improve maritime communications for distress and safety and commercial applications. Its competence was subsequently expanded to include aeronautical and land mobile communications. Privatization, which was completed in April 1999, transferred the business to a newly created company and the Organization remains as a regulator to ensure that the company fulfils its public services obligations. The company has taken the Inmarsat name and the Organization uses the acronym IMSO. In Oct. 1999 the Organization had 86 member parties.

Organization. The Assembly of all Parties to the Convention meets every two years. There is also a 22-member Council of representatives of national telecommunications administrations as well as an executive Directorate.

Headquarters: 99 City Road, London EC1Y 1AX, UK.
Director of the Secretariat, IMSO: Jerzy Vonau.
Chief Executive, Inmarsat Ltd: Michael Storey.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE ORGANIZATION (ITSO)

Founded in 1964 as Intelsat, the organization was the world's first commercial communications satellite operator. Today, with capacity on a fleet of geostationary satellites and expanding terrestrial network assets, Intelsat continues to provide highly reliable connectivity for telephony, corporate network, broadcast and Internet services.

Organization. In 2001 the member states of the organization implemented restructuring by transferring certain assets to Intelsat Ltd, a new Bermuda-based commercial company under the supervision of the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization, now known as ITSO. The Intelsat Global Service Corporation is located in Washington, D. C., and Intelsat Global Services & Marketing Ltd, the sales arm of the international firm, has its headquarters in London. Intelsat also has offices in Australia, Brazil, China, France, Germany, Hawaii, India, Peru and South Africa. There were 148 member countries in March 2003.

Headquarters: 3400 International Drive, NW, Washington, D.C., 20008–3006, USA.

Director-General: Ahmed Toumi (Morocco).

INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION (IATA)

Founded in 1945 for inter-airline co-operation in promoting safe, reliable, secure and economical air services, IATA has over 230 members from more than 130 nations worldwide. IATA is the successor to the International Air Traffic Association, founded in the Hague in 1919, the year of the world's first international scheduled services.

Main offices: IATA Centre, Route de l'Aéroport 33, PO Box 416, CH-1215 Geneva, Switzerland. 800 Place Victoria, PO Box 113, Montreal, Quebec, Canada H4Z 1M1. 77 Robinson Road, #05-00 SIA Building, Singapore 068896.

Director-General: Giovanni Bisignani (Italy).

INTERNATIONAL ROAD FEDERATION (IRF)

The IRF is a non-profit, non-political service organization whose purpose is to encourage better road and transportation systems worldwide and to help apply technology and management practices to give maximum economic and social returns from national road investments.

Founded following the Second World War, over the years the IRF has led major global road infrastructure developments, including achieving 1,000 km of new roads in Mexico in the 1950s, and promoting the Pan-American Highway linking North and South America. It publishes World Road Statistics, as well as road research studies, including a 140-country inventory of road and transport research in co-operation with the US Bureau of Public Roads.

Director-General (Washington, D.C.): C. Patrick Sankey (USA).

INTERNATIONAL CONFEDERATION OF FREE TRADE UNIONS (ICFTU)

Origin. The founding congress of the ICFTU was held in London in Dec. 1949 following the withdrawal of some Western trade unions from the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU), which had come under Communist control. The constitution, as amended, provides for co-operation with the UN and the ILO, and for regional organizations to promote free trade unionism, especially in developing countries. By Nov. 2002 the ICFTU represented 158m. workers across 231 national trade union centres in 150 countries and territories.

Aims. The ICFTU aims to promote the interests of working people and to secure recognition of workers' organizations as free bargaining agents; to reduce the gap between rich and poor; and to defend fundamental human and trade union rights. In 1996 it campaigned for the adoption by the WTO of a social clause, with legally binding minimum labour standards.

Organization. The Congress meets every four years. The 17th Annual World Congress was held in Durban in April 2000. The next Congress will be held in 2004 in Japan. It elects the General Secretary and an Executive Board of 53 members nominated on an area basis for a four-year period. Five seats are reserved for women, nominated by the Women's Committee, and one reserved for a representative of young workers. The Board meets at least once a year. Various committees cover economic and social policy, violation of trade union and other human rights, trade union co-operation projects and also the administration of the International Solidarity Fund. There are joint ICFTU–Global Union Federations for co-ordinating activities.

The ICFTU has branch offices in Geneva and New York, and regional organizations in Latin America (Caracas), Asia (Singapore) and Africa (Nairobi).

Headquarters: Bd. du Roi Albert II, Nº 5, bte 1, Brussels 1210, Belgium.

WORLD FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS (WFTU)

Origin and History. The WFTU was founded on a worldwide basis in 1945 at the international trade union conferences held in London and Paris, with the participation of all the trade union centres in the countries of the anti-Hitler coalition. The aim was to reunite the world trade union movement at the end of the Second World War. The acute political differences among affiliates, especially the east–west confrontation in Europe on ideological lines, led to a split. A number of affiliated organizations withdrew in 1949 and established the ICFTU. The WFTU now draws its membership from the industrially developing countries like India, Vietnam and other Asian countries, Brazil, Peru, Cuba and other Latin American countries, Syria, Lebanon, Kuwait and other Arab countries, and it has affiliates and associates in more than 20 European countries. It has close relations with the International Confederation of Arab Trade Unions, the Organization of African Trade Union Unity as well as the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, all of which participated at its Congress in New Delhi, India in 2000. Its Trade Unions Internationals (TUIs) have affiliates in Russia, the Czech Republic, Poland and other East European countries, Portugal, France, Spain, Japan and other OECD countries.

The headquarters of the TUIs are situated in Helsinki, New Delhi, Budapest, Mexico, Paris and Moscow. The WFTU and its TUIs have 130m. members, organized in 92 affiliated or associated national federations and six Trade Unions Internationals, in 130 countries. It has regional offices in New Delhi, Havana, Dakar, Damascus and Moscow and Permanent Representatives accredited to the UN in New York, Geneva and Rome.

General Secretary: Aleksander Zharikov (Russia).

Publications. Flashes From the Trade Unions (fortnightly, published in English, French, Spanish and Arabic), reports of Congresses, etc.

EUROPEAN TRADE UNION CONFEDERATION (ETUC)

Established in 1973, the ETUC is recognized by the EU, the Council of Europe and EFTA as the only representative cross-sectoral trade union organization at a European level. It has grown steadily with a membership of 78 National Trade Union Confederations from 34 countries and 11 European Industry Federations with a total of 60m. members. The Congress meets every four years, with the 10th Statutory Congress scheduled to meet in Prague in May 2003.

WORLD CONFEDERATION OF LABOUR (WCL)

Founded in 1920 as the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, it went out of existence in 1940 as a large proportion of its 3·4m. members were in Italy and Germany, where affiliated unions were suppressed by the Fascist and Nazi regimes. Reconstituted in 1945 and declining to merge with the WFTU or ICFTU, its policy was based on the papal encyclicals Rerum novarum (1891) and Quadragesimo anno (1931), and in 1968 it became the WCL and dropped its openly confessional approach.

Today, it has Christian, Buddhist and Muslim member confederations, as well as organizations without religious reference. The WCL defines itself as pluralist and humanist. In its concern to defend trade union freedoms and assist trade union development, the WCL differs little in policy from the ICFTU above. A membership of 26m. in 116 countries is claimed. The biggest group is the Confederation of Christian Trade Unions (CSC) of Belgium (1·6m.).

Organization. The WCL is organized on a federative basis which leaves wide discretion to its autonomous constituent unions. Its governing body is the Congress, which meets every four years. The Congress appoints (or re-appoints) the Secretary-General at each four-yearly meeting. The General Council which meets at least once a year, is composed of the members of the Confederal Board (at least 22 members, elected by the Congress) and representatives of national confederations, international trade federations, and trade union organizations where there is no confederation affiliated to the WCL. The Confederal Board is responsible for the general leadership of the WCL, in accordance with the decisions and directives of the Council and Congress. There are regional organizations in Latin America (Caracas), Africa (Lomé) and Asia (Manila), and three liaison offices (Bucharest, Geneva and Washington).

Headquarters: 33 rue de Trèves, Brussels 1040, Belgium.

President: Basile Mahan Gahé (Côte d'Ivoire).

Publications. Annual Report on Workers Rights; Teleflash (20 a year), Labor Magazine (4 a year).

THE INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION OF THE FRANCOPHONIE

The International Organization of the Francophonie represents 56 countries and provinces/regions (including five with observer status) using French as an official language. Objectives include the promotion of peace, democracy, and economic and social development, through political and technical co-operation. The Secretary-General is based in Paris.

Members. Albania, Belgium, Benin, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Canada–New Brunswick, Canada–Quebec, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Republic of the Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Djibouti, Dominica, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, France, French Community of Belgium, Gabon, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Laos, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Macedonia, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Moldova, Monaco, Morocco, Niger, Romania, Rwanda, St Lucia, São Tomé e Príncipe, Senegal, Seychelles, Switzerland, Togo, Tunisia, Vanuatu, Vietnam. Observers. Czech Republic, Lithuania, Poland, Slovakia, Slovenia.

Secretary-General: Boutros Boutros-Ghali (Egypt).

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR STANDARDIZATION (ISO)

Established in 1947, the International Organization for Standardization is a non-governmental federation of national standards bodies from some 145 countries worldwide, one from each country. ISO's work results in international agreements which are published as International Standards. The first ISO standard was published in 1951 with the title 'Standard reference temperature for industrial length measurement'.

Some 14,000 ISO International Standards are available on subjects in such diverse fields as information technology, textiles, packaging, distribution of goods, energy production and utilization, building, banking and financial services. ISO standardization activities include the widely recognized ISO 9000 family of quality management system and standards and the ISO 14000 series of environmental management system standards. Standardization programmes are now being developed in completely new fields, such as advanced materials, life sciences, urbanization and the service sector.

Mission. To promote the development of standardization and related activities in the world with a view to facilitating the international exchange of goods and services, and to developing co-operation in the spheres of intellectual, scientific, technological and economic activity.

Headquarters: 1 rue de Varembé, Case postale 56, CH-1211 Geneva 20, Switzerland.

WORLD WIDE FUND FOR NATURE (WWF)

Origin. WWF was officially formed and registered as a charity on 11 Sept. 1961. The first National Appeal, with HRH The Duke of Edinburgh as President, was launched in the United Kingdom on 23 Nov. 1961, shortly followed by the United States and Switzerland.

Organization. WWF is the world's largest and most experienced independent conservation organization with over 4·7m. supporters and a global network of 27 National Organizations, five Associates and 24 Programme Offices.

The National Organizations carry out conservation activities in their own countries and contribute technical expertise and funding to WWF's international conservation programme. The Programme Offices implement WWF's fieldwork, advise national and local governments, and raise public understanding of conservation issues.

Mission. WWF has as its mission preserving genetic, species and ecosystem diversity; ensuring that the use of renewable natural resources is sustainable now and in the longer term, for the benefit of all life on Earth; promoting actions to reduce to a minimum pollution and the wasteful exploitation and consumption of resources and energy. WWF's ultimate goal is to stop, and eventually reverse, the accelerating degradation of our planet's natural environment, and to help build a future in which humans live in harmony with nature.

INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE (IOC)

Founded in 1894 by French educator Baron Pierre de Coubertin, the International Olympic Committee is an international non-governmental, non-profit organization whose members act as the IOC's representatives in their respective countries, not as delegates of their countries within the IOC. The Committee's main responsibility is to supervise the organization of the summer and winter Olympic Games. It owns all rights to the Olympic symbols, flag, motto, anthem and Olympic Games.

Aims. 'To contribute to building a peaceful and better world by educating youth through sport, practised without discrimination of any kind and in the Olympic Spirit, which requires mutual understanding with a spirit of friendship, solidarity and fair play.'

Finances. The IOC receives no public funding. Its only source of funding is from private sectors, with the substantial part of these revenues coming from television broadcasters and sponsors.

INTERNATIONAL UNION AGAINST CANCER (UICC)

Founded in 1933, the UICC is an international non-governmental association of 291 member organizations in 87 countries.

Objectives. The UICC is devoted exclusively to all aspects of the worldwide fight against cancer. Its objectives are to advance scientific and medical knowledge in research, diagnosis, treatment and prevention of cancer, and to promote all other aspects of the campaign against cancer throughout the world. Particular emphasis is placed on professional and public education.

Membership. The UICC is made up of voluntary cancer leagues, associations and societies as well as cancer research and treatment centres and, in some countries, ministries of health.

Activities. The UICC creates and carries out programmes around the world in collaboration with several hundred volunteer experts, most of whom are professionally active in UICC member organizations. It promotes co-operation between cancer organizations, researchers, scientists, health professionals and cancer experts, with a focus in four key areas: building and enhancing cancer control capacity, tobacco control, population-based cancer prevention and control, and transfer of cancer knowledge and dissemination. The International Cancer Congress is held by the UICC every four years; the most recent took place in 2002 in Oslo and the next is scheduled to take place in Washington, D.C. in 2006.

AFGHANISTAN

Islamic State of Afghanistan

Capital: Kabul
Population estimate, 2000: 21·77m.
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

For much of the 19th century Afghanistan was part of the power struggle between Britain, as the dominant power in India, and the Russian empire. While the country achieved independence after the First World War, tribal wars and banditry restricted economic and social development. Stability came in the period of Záhir Shah who ruled for 40 years. In 1964 he was able to overcome opposition and put through a constitution establishing parliamentary democracy. In 1973 there was a military coup led by his cousin and brother-in-law, and a former prime minister, Mohammed Daoud, who abolished the 1964 constitution and declared a republic. Záhir Shah abdicated on 24 Aug. 1973.

The republic inherited pressure for tribal autonomy and economic crises mainly brought about by drought and famine. In April 1978 President Daoud was overthrown and killed in a further coup which installed a pro-Soviet government. The new president, Noor Mohammad Taraki, was overthrown in Sept. 1979, whereupon the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan in Dec., deposed his successor and placed Babrak Karmal at the head of government.

In Dec. 1986 Sayid Mohammed Najibullah became president amid continuing civil war between government and rebel Muslim forces. Whereas in the 1960s both the USSR and the USA had financed government projects, in 1987 the USSR provided considerable military support and development aid to the pro-Soviet administration while the USA extended more limited support to the rebels. In the mid-1980s the UN began negotiations on the withdrawal of Soviet troops and the establishment of a government of national unity. Soviet troops began withdrawing from Afghanistan in early 1988.

After talks in Nov. 1991 with Afghan opposition movements (‘mujahideen’), the Soviet government transferred its support from the Najibullah regime to an ‘Islamic Interim Government’. As mujahideen insurgents closed in on Kabul, President Najibullah stepped down on 16 April 1992 but fighting continued.

In 1994 a newly formed militant Islamic movement, ‘Taliban’ (i.e. ‘students of religion’), took Kabul, apparently with Pakistani support. The Taliban, most of whose leaders were Pashtuns, were in turn defeated by the troops of President Rabbani but in Sept. 1996 Taliban forces recaptured Kabul and set up an interim government under Mohamed Rabbani. Afghanistan was declared a complete Islamic state under Sharia law.

Government forces which had retreated to the north of Kabul counter-attacked but a new Taliban offensive, launched on 27 Dec. 1996, gave Taliban control of 90% of the country. The opposition Northern Alliance controlled the remaining 10% in the northeast of the country. Under the Taliban, irregular forces were disarmed and roads cleared of bandits. Rebuilding of towns and villages started. But the strict application of Islamic law ran counter to western sensitivities with the result that only three countries—Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates—recognized the Taliban as the legal government.

In March 2001 Afghanistan was widely condemned for the destruction of ancient monuments that the Taliban deemed un-Islamic, including the world’s tallest Buddhas. In May 2001 the ruling Taliban refused to extradite Osama bin Laden, a Saudi militant, to the USA to face charges connected to the bombing of American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania during 1998. In Sept. 2001 Ahmed Shah Masood, leader of the Northern Alliance, was killed after being attacked by two suicide bombers.

Following the attacks on the USA on 11 Sept. 2001 Osama bin Laden became the chief suspect. Within two weeks of the attacks on the USA both Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates had broken off diplomatic relations. The USA put pressure on the ruling Taliban to hand over Osama bin Laden, but without success. Consequently the USA launched air strikes on Afghanistan on 7 Oct. During the following month the Taliban's control over Afghanistan gradually dwindled. On 13 Nov. the Northern Alliance took the capital Kabul, effectively bringing an end to Taliban rule, and with the surrender of Kandahar the Taliban lost control of their last stronghold. On 27 Nov. representatives of rival factions, but excluding the Taliban, took part in United Nations-sponsored talks in Germany on the future of their country. As a result Hamid Karzai, a Pashtun tribal leader, was chosen to head an interim power-sharing council, which took office in Kabul from 22 Dec. He was subsequently appointed president of the transitional government in June 2002. In Sept. 2002 he survived an assassination attempt.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Afghanistan is bounded in the north by Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan and Tajikistan, east by China, east and south by Pakistan and west by Iran.

The area is 251,773 sq. miles (652,090 sq. km). The estimated population in 2001 was 26·8m. The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 31·18m. In 1995 an estimated 19·9% of the population lived in urban areas.

According to humanitarian agencies in Jan. 2002 there were almost 1·2m. internally displaced persons in Afghanistan. An estimated 4m. sought asylum outside Afghanistan including 2m. in Pakistan, 1·5m. in Iran, 26,000 in Turkmenistan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, and several hundred thousand in western European countries, Australia and North America. Approximately half of the internally displaced persons in Afghanistan moved prior to the events of Sept. 2001, for reasons such as drought and food scarcity. As a consequence of the US war in Afghanistan, numbers of refugees to Pakistan and Iran increased dramatically. Pakistan took more than 70,000 Afghan refugees in the months following 11 Sept. 2001 while Iran admitted some 60,000. In the meantime more than 1·6m. Afghans have returned to their country since a UN-sponsored programme began in early 2002, and in Dec. 2002 Pakistan and Afghanistan agreed to repatriate the remaining refugees, lodged in various camps in Pakistan, within three years.

The country is divided into 30 regions (velayat). Area and estimated population in 1990:

Region	Area (sq. km)	Population (1,000)	Region	Area (sq. km)	Population (1,000)
Badakhshan	45,556	554	Kunar	10,153	308
Badghis	22,136	318	Kunduz	8,576	577
Baghlan	18,144	484	Laghman	7,147	379
Balkh	12,319	629	Logar	4,853	265

Kapisa	5,407	433	Zabul	17,503	186

[1]Saripul did not exist at the time of the 1990 population estimates.

The capital, Kabul, had a population of 2·45m. in 1999. Other towns (with UN population estimates, 1988): Kandahar (225,500), Herat (177,300), Mazar i Sharif, (130,600), Jalalabad (55,000).

Main ethnic groups: Pashtuns, 38%; Tajiks, 25%; Hazaras, 19%; Uzbeks, 6%; Others, 12%. The official languages are Pashto and Dari.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Based on 2001 estimates: birth rate, 41 per 1,000 population; death rate, 18 per 1,000; infant mortality, 147 per 1,000 live births; annual population growth rate, 3·5%. Life expectancy at birth, 47 years for men and 45 for women.

The maternal mortality rate is among the highest in the world with some 16,000 pregnancy-related deaths every year.

CLIMATE

The climate is arid, with a big annual range of temperature and very little rain, apart from the period Jan. to April. Winters are very cold, with considerable snowfall, which may last the year round on mountain summits. Kabul, Jan. 27°F (–2·8°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 13" (338 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Following UN-sponsored talks in Bonn, Germany in Nov. 2001, on 22 Dec. 2001 power was handed over to an Interim Authority, designed to oversee the restructuring of the country until a second stage of government, the Transitional Authority, could be put into power. This second stage resulted from a Loya Jirga (Grand Council), which convened between 10–16 June 2002. A Constitutional Commission has been established, with UN assistance, to help the Constitutional Loya Jirga prepare a new constitution. In the meantime the 1964 constitution has been reintroduced with some modifications.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held by the Loya Jirga on 13 June 2002. Hamid Karzai was elected president with 1,295 out of 1,575 votes cast, against 171 for Masooda Jalal and 89 for Mir Mohammad Mahfoz Nadai.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the Transitional Government was composed as follows:

President of the Transitional Government: Hamid Karzai; b. 1957 (Pashtun; sworn in 19 June 2002).

Vice Presidents: Mohammad Fahim Khan (Tajik; also Minister of Defence); Karim Khalili (Hazara Shia); Hedayat Amin Arsala (Pashtun); Niamatullah Shahrani (Uzbek).

Presidential Adviser on Security Affairs and Minister of Education: Younis Qanooni. Minister of Foreign Affairs: Dr Abdullah Abdullah. Economy and Finance: Ashraf Qani Ahmadzai. Interior: Taj Mohammad Wardak. Planning: Haji Mohammad Mohaqeq. Commerce: Seyyed Mustafa Kazemi. Mines and Industries: Vacant. Small Industries: Alim Razim. Information and Culture: Rahin Makhdoom. Communications: Masoum Stanakzai. Labour and Social Affairs: Noor Ahmed Qarqeen. Hajj (Pilgrimage) and Awqaf: Mohammad Amin Nasiryar. Martyrs and Disabled: Abdullah Wardak. Higher Education: Dr Sharif Faez. Public Health: Suhaila Seddiqi. Public Works: Abdullah Ali. Rural Development: Hanif Atmar. Urban Development: Mohammad Yousuf Pashtun. Reconstruction: Mohammad Amin Farhang. Transport: Syed Ali Jawed. Return of Refugees: Enayatullah Nazeri. Agriculture: Seyyed Hussein Anwar. Water and Power: Ahmed Shakar Kargar. Irrigation and Environment: Yousuf Nuristani. Justice: Abbas Karimi. Air Transport and Tourism: Mir Wais Sadeq. Department of Border Affairs: Arif Noorzai. Women's Affairs: Habiba Sorabi.

DEFENCE

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$245m. (US$10 per capita), representing 13·0% of GDP. In 1998 Afghanistan was estimated to have 108,000 soldiers and rebels under the age of 18—more than twice as many young soldiers as any other country.

The threat of chemical and biological weapons development by al-Qaeda forces stimulated opposition to the Taliban regime during the US campaign following the attacks on New York and Washington of 11 Sept. 2001, although no such weapons capability was proved to exist.

Casualties from landmines and unexploded munitions total 150–300 per month, a figure exacerbated by the crisis of late 2001.

Army. The decimation of the Taliban's armed forces left Afghanistan without an army. There are now plans for a multi-ethnic Afghan National Army, under the command of President Hamid Karzai, ultimately with a strength of 70,000.

Air Force. Afghanistan's air forces have been severely damaged, but there are now plans for a new air force with a strength of 8,000.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

UN sanctions were imposed in 1999 but were withdrawn following the collapse of the Taliban regime.

Afghanistan is a member of the UN, Asian Development Bank, ECO, Colombo Plan and OIC.

ECONOMY

Following the military campaign in Afghanistan pledges of economic aid came from many countries, totalling more than US$4·5bn., of which the USA pledged US$1·8bn. An Implementation Group has been established to oversee the allocation of funding and the implementation of international assistance. Donor organizations working in co-operation with the Afghan Interim Authority, and subsequently the Transitional Government, for fund allocation include the World Bank, UNDP, Asian Development Bank and the Islamic Development Bank.

Currency. A new currency was introduced in Oct. 2002. Called the afghani (as was its predecessor), one of the new notes is worth 1,000 of the old ones. The old afghani had been trading at around 46,000 to the US$.

Performance. Real GDP growth was estimated at 6% in both 1997 and 1998.

Banking and Finance. The Afghan State Bank is the largest of the three main banks and also undertakes the functions of a central bank, holding the exclusive right of note issue.

The UN sanctions placed on Afghanistan in 1999 extended to the Afghan State Bank and to Bank Millie Afghan (Afghan National Bank) but have now been lifted. The Afghanistan Central Bank (Da Afghanistan Bank) was founded in 1939. Its Governor is Anwarulhaq Ahadi. There are no commercial banks in the country. Money is exchanged in bazaars.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in increasingly common use. Local units include: one khurd = 0·244 lb; one pao = 0·974 lb; one charak = 3·896 lb; one sere = 16 lb; one kharwar = 1,280 lb or 16 maunds of 80 lb each; one gaz = 40 inches; one jarib = 60 x 60 kabuli yd or ½ acre; one kulba = 40 jaribs (area in which 2½ kharwars of seed can be sown); one jarib yd = 29 inches.

The Afghan Interim Authority replaced the lunar calendar with the traditional Afghan solar calendar. The solar calendar was used in Afghanistan until 1999 when it was changed by the Taliban authorities who wanted the country to adopt the system used in Saudi Arabia. The change means the current year switches from 1424 to 1382.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 2000 there were six generating plants, four of which were hydro-electric. Installed capacity was 494,000 kW in 1995. Production was 430m. kWh in 1998; consumption in 1996 was 660m. kWh.

Oil and Gas. Natural gas reserves were 99bn. cu. metres in 1997. Production in 1996 was 7 petajoules. A consortium of oil and gas companies (‘CentGas’) was planning a US$2bn. natural gas pipeline from Turkmenistan through Afghanistan to Pakistan, although the withdrawal from the project of the US oil company Unocal in April 1998 led to doubts over the viability of the project. Since the installation of the Interim Authority, and now the Transitional Government, both the CentGas project and other major oil and gas ventures within the region from US, Chinese and Iranian companies seem likely to proceed.

Minerals. There are deposits of coal, copper, barite, lapis-lazuli, emerald, talc and salt.

Agriculture. The greater part of Afghanistan is mountainous but there are many fertile plains and valleys. In 1998 there were 7·91m. ha of arable land and 0·14m. ha of permanent cropland; 2·39m. ha were irrigated in 1998. 69·2% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture in 1995. Principal crops include grains, rice, fresh and dried fruits, vegetables, cottonseed and potatoes.

Production, 2000, in 1,000 tonnes: wheat, 1,469; grapes, 330; potatoes, 235; rice, 233; maize, 115. Opium production in 2001 was just 200 tonnes (down from 4,581 tonnes in 1999), but in 2002 it rose again to 3,400 tonnes. In 1998 the harvest was worth an estimated US$69m. The area under cultivation in 2002 was 55,000 ha, up from 7,606 ha in 2001 but down from 90,983 ha in 1999. For several years Afghanistan's annual narcotics production was more than twice that of the second largest producer, Myanmar. In Feb. 2001 the United Nations Drug Control Programme reported that opium production had been almost totally eradicated after the Taliban outlawed the cultivation of poppies. As a result in 2001 Myanmar became the largest producer of opium, but in 2002 Afghanistan was again the leading producer. Despite a renewed clampdown on opium production and trafficking since the fall of the Taliban Afghanistan's farmers are being forced by poverty to revive the industry.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 3·5m.; sheep, 18·0m.; goats 7·4m.; asses, 920,000; camels, 290,000; horses, 104,000; chickens, 7m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 2·1% of the total land area (3·1% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 8·28m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 2000 the total catch was estimated to be 1,000 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Major industries include natural gas, fertilizers, cement, coalmining, small vehicle assembly plants, building, carpet weaving, cotton textiles, clothing and footwear, leather tanning, sugar manufacturing and fruit canning.

Labour. The workforce was 8,851,000 in 1996 (65% males). In 1995 the unemployment rate was estimated at 8%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total exports (1995), US$153m.; imports US$344m. Main exported products: non-edible crude materials (excluding fuels), manufactured goods (raw material intensive), machinery and transport equipment, fruits, nuts, hand-woven carpets, wool, hides, precious and semi-precious gems. Main imports: foodstuffs and live animals, beverages and tobacco, mineral fuels, manufactured goods, chemicals and related products, machinery and transport equipment. Main trading partners: Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan and Russia.

Imports and exports were largely unaffected by the sanctions imposed during the Taliban regime.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 20,720 km of roads in 2001, of which 3,120 km were paved. Approximately half of all road surfaces are in a poor state of repair as a result of military action, but rebuilding is underway. In Jan. 2003 women regained the right to drive after a 10-year ban. Approximately 31,000 passenger cars (1·4 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 25,000 trucks and vans were in use in 1996.

Rail. There are two short stretches of railway in the country, extensions of the Uzbek and Turkmen networks. A Trans-Afghan Railway was proposed in an Afghan-Pakistan-Turkmen agreement of 1994.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Kabul (Khwaja Rawash Airport). The national carrier is Ariana Afghan Airlines, which in 1998 operated direct flights from Kabul to Amritsar, Dubai and Jeddah. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Afghanistan-based carriers flew 2·7m. km, carrying 140,000 passengers (36,000 on international flights). The UN sanctions imposed on 14 Nov. 1999 included the cutting off of Afghanistan's air links to the outside world. In Jan. 2002 Ariana Afghan Airlines resumed services and Kabul airport was reopened. The airport was heavily bombed during the US campaign and is still under repair.

Shipping. There are practically no navigable rivers. A port has been built at Qizil Qala on the Oxus and there are three river ports on the Amu Darya, linked by road to Kabul. The container port at Kheyrabad on the Amu Darya river has rail connections to Uzbekistan.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 29,000 telephone main lines, or 1·3 per 1,000 inhabitants—the lowest penetration rate of any country outside Africa.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 352 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A Supreme Court was established in June 1978. It retained its authority under the Taliban regime.

Under the Taliban, a strict form of Sharia law was followed. This law, which was enforced by armed police, included prohibitions on alcohol, television broadcasts, internet use and photography, yet received its widest condemnation for its treatment of women. Public executions and amputations were widely used as punishment under the regime.

A Judicial Commission is being instituted that will create a civil justice system in accordance with Islamic principles, international standards, the rule of law and Afghan legal traditions.

Religion. The predominant religion is Islam. An estimated 84% of the population are Sunni Muslims, and 15% Shias.

The Taliban provoked international censure in May 2001 by forcing the minority population of Afghan Hindus and Sikhs to wear yellow identification badges.

Education. Adult literacy was 31·5% in 1995 (male, 46·2%; female, 16·1%).

The primary enrolment ratio in 1999 was 38% for boys and 3% for girls. Enrolment at secondary and tertiary levels was even lower. In Jan. 2002 there were an estimated 3,600 primary schools, two-thirds of which were government-supported.

In 1995–96 there were 5 universities, 1 university of Islamic studies, 1 state medical institute and 1 polytechnic. Kabul University had 9,500 students and 500 academic staff. Formerly one of Asia's finest educational institutes, Kabul University lost many of its staff during the Taliban regime, and following the US bombing attacks it was closed down.

In areas controlled by the Taliban education was forbidden for girls. Boys' schools taught only religious education and military training. Female teachers and pupils are now returning to education after five years of exclusion.

Health. Afghanistan is one of the least successful countries in the battle against undernourishment. Between 1980 and 1996 the proportion of undernourished people rose from 33% of the population to 62%. Half of all Afghan children suffer from chronic malnutrition. One in four children die before reaching the age of five, largely as a result of diarrhoea, pneumonia, measles and other similar illnesses.

The bombing of Afghanistan beginning in Oct. 2001 severely disrupted the supply of aid to the country and left much of the population exposed to starvation.

In the period 1990–98 only 6% of the population had access to safe drinking water (the lowest percentage of any country).

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 2·75m. radio receivers and 270,000 television receivers (colour by PAL).

Under the Taliban television stations were closed down—only one remained in operation, in a Northern Alliance-controlled area. Television sets were smashed or even publicly hanged. The single radio broadcasting station to remain in operation, Radio Afghanistan, was renamed Voice of Shariah and was used to broadcast official propaganda and religious sermons. It proclaimed itself as the only radio station in the world where music of any kind was banned. Since the collapse of the regime Radio Afghanistan has resumed services, as have Kabul TV and a number of other broadcasters.

Cinema. Cinemas were banned under the Taliban but have since reopened. The Afghan Film Institute is responsible for censorship.

Press. In 1996 there were 12 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 113,000, at a rate of 5·6 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Under Taliban control there was only one, tightly-controlled, newspaper named Shariat. Other newspapers in circulation in Jan. 2002 were Hewad, Anis and the English-language Kabul Times.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 4,000 foreign tourists bringing in receipts of US$1m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the Russo-Turkish war of 1877–78, demands grew for independence from Turkey. After the defeat of Turkey in the Balkan war of 1912, Albanian nationalists proclaimed Albania's independence and set up a provisional government.

During the First World War Albania became a battlefield for warring occupation forces. Albania was admitted to the League of Nations on 20 Dec. 1920. In Nov. 1921 the conference of ambassadors confirmed her 1913 frontiers with minor alterations. Italian influence grew from the mid-1920s. A friendship pact was signed with Italy in 1926 and a defence treaty in 1927. In April 1939 Mussolini invaded Albania and set up a puppet state. During the Second World War Albania suffered first Italian and then German occupation. Resistance was carried on by royalist, nationalist republican and communist movements, often at odds with each other. The latter enjoyed the support of Tito's partisans, who were instrumental in forming the Albanian Communist Party on 8 Nov. 1941. Communists dominated the Anti-Fascist National Liberation Committee which became the Provisional Democratic Government on 22 Oct. 1944 after the German withdrawal, with Enver Hoxha, a French-educated school teacher and member of the Communist Party Central Committee, at its head. Large estates were broken up and the land distributed, though full collectivization was not brought in until 1955–59. Close ties were forged with the USSR but following Khrushchev's reconciliation with Tito in 1956 China replaced the Soviet Union as Albania's powerful patron from 1961 until the end of the Maoist phase in 1977. The regime then adopted a policy of 'revolutionary self-sufficiency'. Following the collapse of the Soviet empire the People's Assembly adopted a decree legalizing opposition parties. A non-Communist government was elected in March 1992.

In 1997 Albania was disrupted by financial crises caused by the collapse of fraudulent pyramid finance schemes. A period of violent anarchy led to the fall of the administration and to fresh elections which returned a Socialist-led government. A UN peacekeeping force withdrew in Aug. 1997 but sporadic violence continued. In April 1999 the Kosovo crisis which led to NATO air attacks on Yugoslavian military targets set off a flood of refugees into Albania.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Albania is bounded in the north by Serbia and Montenegro, east by Macedonia, south by Greece and west by the Adriatic. The area is 28,748 sq. km (11,101 sq. miles). At the census of April 2001 the population was 3,087,159; density, 107 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 3·31m.

In 2001, 57·9% of the population lived in rural areas. The capital is Tirana (population in 2001, 343,078); other large towns (population in 2001) are Durrës (99,546), Elbasan (87,797), Shkodër (82,445), Vlorë (77,691), Fier (56,297), Korçë (55,130), Berat (40,112), Lushnjë (32,580), Kavajë (24,817) and Gjirokastër (Argyrocastro) (20,630).

The country is administratively divided into 12 prefectures, 36 districts, 306 communes and 65 municipalities.

In most cases districts are named after their capitals. Exceptions are: Devoll, capital—Bilisht; Dibër—Peshkopi; Has—Krume; Kolonjë—Ersekë; Kurbin—Laç; Mallakastër—Ballsh; Malsi e Madhe—Koplik; Mat—Burrel; Mirditë—Rrëshen; Skrapar—Çorovodë; Tropojë—Bajram Curri.

At the 1989 census, members of ethnic minorities totalled 64,816, including 58,758 Greeks and 4,697 Macedonians.

The official language is Albanian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: births, 50,077; deaths, 16,421. Rates in 2000 (per 1,000): births, 16·2; deaths, 5·3. Infant mortality, 1999, was 29 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate (number of births per woman), 2·1 in 2000. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –0·6%. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 71·7 years for males and 76·4 years for females. Abortion was legalized in 1991.

CLIMATE

Mediterranean-type, with rainfall mainly in winter, but thunderstorms are frequent and severe in the great heat of the plains in summer. Winters in the highlands can be severe, with much snow. Tirana, Jan. 44°F (6·8°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,353 mm). Shkodër, Jan. 39°F (3·9°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 57" (1,425 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 28 Nov. 1998. The supreme legislative body is the single-chamber People's Assembly of 140 deputies, 100 directly elected and 40 elected by proportional representation, for four-year terms. Where no candidate wins an absolute majority, a run-off election is held. The President is elected by Parliament for a five-year term.

National Anthem. 'Rreth Flamurit të për bashkuar' ('The flag that united us in the struggle'); words by A. S. Drenova, tune by C. Porumbescu.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections took place on 24 June and 8 July 2001. The ruling Socialist Party of Albania (PSS) won 73 of the 140 seats with 42·0% of votes cast, the Union for Victory coalition 46 with 37·1%, the Democratic Party 6 with 5·1%, and the Social Democratic Party 4 with 3·6%. Other parties won three seats or fewer.

Parliament chose Alfred Moisiu (ind.) as president on 24 June 2002.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 15 months. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$111m. (US$36 per capita), representing 3·0% of GDP.

Army. The Army is to consist of seven divisions under Plan 2000. Strength in 1996 was 60,000 (including 20,000 conscripts). There is an internal security force, and frontier guards number 500.

Navy. Navy personnel in 1999 totalled 2,500 officers and ratings. Of the 30 vessels in the navy there were 11 torpedo craft. There are naval bases at Durrës, Sarandë, Shëngjin and Vlorë.

Air Force. The Air Force, controlled by the Army, had (1999) about 2,500 personnel, and operated 98 combat aircraft including Chinese built MiG-15s, MiG-17s and MiG-19s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Albania is a member of the UN, WTO, the Council of Europe, OSCE, the Central European Initiative, BSEC, IOM, OIC and the NATO Partnership for Peace.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 54·4% of GDP (among the highest percentages of any country), services 21·0% and industry 24·6%.

Overview. Priority is given to the development of agriculture and the exploitation of tourism and natural resources. Privatization of land, small businesses and housing was achieved in 1991–93. A privatization programme for large enterprises was initiated in 1995 under the aegis of the National Privatization Agency. Sales are at auction or through vouchers.

Towards the end of 1997 Prime Minister Fatos Nano succeeded in raising US$600m. from foreign donors (more than had been requested) to help rebuild the country's economy.

Currency. The monetary unit is the lek (ALL), notionally of 100 qindars. In Sept. 1991 the lek (plural, lekë or leks) was pegged to the ecu at a rate of 30 leks = one ecu. In June 1992 it was devalued from 50 to 110 to US$1. After several years of high inflation (225% in 1992), in 2001 there was inflation of 3·1%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$319m. in June 2002, total money supply was 156,469m. leks and gold reserves totalled 111,000 troy oz.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year.

Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. leks):

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Revenue	49,068	47,551	53,205	89,145
Expenditure	69,687	83,553	97,472	137,254

Performance. Total GDP in 2001 was US$4·1bn. GDP contracted by 7·0% in 1997 after the collapse of pyramid finance schemes, but then grew by 8·0% in 1998. In 1999 growth was 7·3%, followed by 7·8% in 2000 and 7·3% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank of Albania, founded in 1925 with Italian aid as the Albanian State Bank and renamed in 1993. Its Governor is Shkëlqim Cani. In 1996 there were 3 state-owned commercial banks, 1 foreign bank and 2 joint ventures. Albania's largest bank, the Savings Bank of Albania, is currently 100% owned by the government but is set to be privatized. It has total assets of US$1·4bn., approximately 60% of the total assets of the Albanian banking sector.

A stock exchange opened in Tirana in 1996.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Albania's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Albania is rich in hydro-electric potential. Although virtually all of the electricity is generated by hydro-electric power plants only 30% of potential hydro-electric sources are currently being used. Electricity capacity was 1·67m. kW in 2000. Production was 5·40bn. kWh in 2000 and consumption per capita 776 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Offshore exploration began in 1991. Oil has been produced onshore since 1920. Oil reserves are some 165m. bbls. Crude oil production in 1999, 323,000 tonnes. Natural gas is extracted. Reserves in 1997 totalled 2,000m. cu. metres; output in 1996 was one petajoule. Oil investment includes the building of a 40 km pipeline to the Adriatic coast. A consortium led by Premier Oil, an independent UK company, signed an agreement in Dec. 1997 to develop Albania's biggest onshore oilfield, Patos Merinze, by investing US$250m. Production was to increase from 6,000 bbls. a day to more than 25,000 within four years as a result of the venture, which represents the largest single foreign investment made in Albania.

Minerals. Mineral wealth is considerable and includes lignite, chromium, copper and nickel. Production (in 1,000 tonnes): iron-nickel ore (1991), 931; copper ore (1995), 258; chromium ore (1994), 223; lignite (1999), 33. Nickel reserves are 60m. tonnes of iron containing 1m. tonnes of nickel, but extraction had virtually ceased by 1996. A consortium of British and Italian companies is modernizing the chrome industry with the aim of making Albania the leading supplier of ferrochrome to European stainless steel producers.

Agriculture. In 2000, 53% of the population depended upon agriculture, which contributed 54·4% of GDP in 1998. The country is mountainous, except for the Adriatic littoral and the Korçë Basin, which are fertile. Only 24% of the land area is suitable for cultivation; 15% of Albania is used for pasture. In 2000 there were 578,000 ha of arable land and 121,000 ha of permanent cropland. 129,000 ha were irrigated in 2000.

A law of Aug. 1991 privatized co-operatives' land. Families received allocations, according to their size, from village committees. In 1998 there were 466,659 private agricultural holdings with a total area of 451,917 ha; average 0·96 ha. Since 1995 owners have been permitted to buy and sell agricultural land. In 2000 there were 7,691 tractors in use.

Production (in 1,000 tonnes), 2000: total grains, 566 (including wheat 341 and maize 206); tomatoes, 162; potatoes, 161; grapes, 79; sugarbeet, 42; wine, 7,413 hectolitres.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 728,000; sheep, 1,939,000; goats, 1,106,000; pigs 81,000; asses, 113,000; horses, 63,000; chickens, 4,087,000. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 35; mutton and lamb, 19; goat meat, 16; pork, bacon and ham, 7; poultry meat, 6; cheese, 8; milk, 948; 530m. eggs.

Forestry. Forests covered 1,026,000 ha in 2000 (36·9% of the total land area), mainly oak, elm, pine and birch. Timber production in 2000 was 190,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catch in 2000 amounted to 3,290 tonnes (1,613 tonnes from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Output is small, and the principal industries are agricultural product processing, textiles, oil products and cement. Closures of loss-making plants in the chemical and engineering industries built up in the Communist era led to a 60% decline in production by 1993. Output (1994) (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 100; rolled steel, 17; phosphate fertilizer, 11; ammonium nitrate, 6; vegetable oil, 6; soap, 3; sugar (1998), 3; washing powder and detergents (1997), 2; beer (1997), 15·1m. litres; wine, 0·5m. litres; 40m. bricks; 414m. cigarettes (1997); 3m. articles of knitwear.

Labour. In 2000 the workforce was 1,283,000, of which 1,068,000 were employed (877,000 in the private sector). Unemployment was 16·8% at the end of 2000.

The average monthly wage in 1999 was 12,708 leks; the official minimum wage was 6,380 leks. Minimum wages may not fall below one-third of maximum. Retirement age is 60 for men and 55 for women.

Trade Unions. Independent trade unions became legal in Feb. 1991.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment was legalized in Nov. 1990. Foreign debt was US$784m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2000 totalled US$255·7m.; imports, US$1,070·0m. In 2000 exports included manufactures (85·2%) and agriculture and food (10·9%); imports included capital goods (21·5%) and food (20·3%).

Main export markets, 2000 (% of total trade): Italy, 70·6%; Greece, 12·7%; Germany, 6·6%. Main import suppliers: Italy, 35·2%; Greece, 26·4%; Germany, 6·1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 there were 3,221 km of main roads, 4,278 km of secondary roads and 10,500 km of other roads. There were 114,531 passenger cars in 2000, as well as 16,806 buses and coaches and 43,301 lorries and vans. There were 428 road accidents in 2000 (280 fatalities).

Rail. Total length in operation in 2000 was 400 km. Passenger-km travelled in 2000 came to 124m. and freight tonne-km to 28m.

Civil Aviation. The national carrier is Albanian Airlines, a joint venture with a Kuwaiti firm. It began operations in Oct. 1995. In 2002 it flew services to Bologna, Frankfurt, Istanbul, Priština and Rome. Air civil transportation is carried out by 12 airlines, of which 10 are foreign airlines and 2 are joint ventures. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Albania-based carriers flew 0·3m. km, carrying 20,000 passengers (all on international flights). The main airport is Mother Teresa International Airport at Rinas, 25 km from Tirana, which handled 356,823 passengers in 1999.

Shipping. In 2000 merchant shipping totalled 24,105 GRT. The main port is Durrës, with secondary ports being Vlorë, Sarandë and Shëngjin.

Telecommunications. By the end of 2002 there were 220,000 telephone main lines. Albtelecom, the fixed-line operator, is set to be privatized. A state-owned mobile telephone network was set up in 1996, initially serving 8,000 subscribers. In 2000 there were 25,000 PCs in use (6·4 for every 1,000 persons) and 20,000 mobile phone subscribers. There were 12,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 698 post offices. The volume of postal traffic in 2000 was 2,095,000 pieces of ordinary mail and 892,000 pieces of registered post.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A new criminal code was introduced in June 1995. The administration of justice (made up of First Instance Courts, The Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court) is presided over by the Council of Justice, chaired by the President of the Republic, which appoints judges to courts. A Ministry of Justice was re-established in 1990 and a Bar Council set up. In Nov. 1993 the number of capital offences was reduced from 13 to six and the death penalty was abolished for women. In 2000 the death penalty was abolished for peacetime offences. The prison population in 1999 was 3,083, including 306 minors.

Religion. The population is 70% of Muslim origin, mainly Sunni with some Belaktashi, 7% Albanian Orthodox, 5% Roman Catholic and 18% others. The Albanian Orthodox Church is autocephalous; it is headed by an Exarch and three metropolitans. In 2001 there were 118 priests. The Roman Catholic cathedral in Shkodër has been restored. In 2000 there were one Roman Catholic archbishop and three bishops. Percentages of the population actively practising were estimated in 1996 as Muslims, 20%; Orthodox, 6%; Roman Catholics, 3%.

Education. Primary education is free and compulsory in eight-year schools from seven to 15 years. Secondary education is also free and lasts four years. Secondary education is divided into three categories: general; technical and professional; vocational. There were, in 2000–01, 2,002 nursery schools with 80,443 pupils and 3,749 teachers; 28,293 primary school teachers with 535,238 pupils; and 108,173 pupils and 5,760 teachers at secondary schools. In 2000–01 there were 5 universities,

1 agricultural university, 1 technological university, 1 polytechnic, 1 academy of fine arts and 1 higher institute of physical education. There were 40,859 university students registered and 1,683 academic staff in 2000–01; Tirana is the largest university, with 14,683 students in 1999–2000. Adult literacy in 1999 was 84·0% (90·9% among males and 76·9% among females).

In 2000 total expenditure on education came to 3% of GNP.

Health. Medical services are free, though medicines are charged for. In 1999 there were 51 hospitals, 4,325 doctors and 12,674 nurses or midwives. In 1999 there were 10,237 hospital beds. The expenditure for health in 1999 was 12,077m. leks (7·3% of total government expenditure).

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the National Council for Radio-Television (NCRT), one member of which is appointed by the president, and the other six by the permanent Commission on the Media, which is composed equally of representatives of government and opposition parties. In Dec. 2000 the NCRT licensed two national television stations, 45 local television stations, 31 local radio stations and one national radio station. There are also a number of privately owned television broadcasting stations. In 1997 there were 810,000 radio and 405,000 TV receivers (colour by SECAM H).

Cinema. In 2002 there were 25 cinemas, compared to 65 in 1991.

Press. In 1996 there were 5 national dailies (combined circulation of 116,000, at a rate of 37 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Tourism. In 1999 26,000 foreign tourists stayed in 102 Albanian hotels.

The Greek colony of Butrint, Sarandë is a UNESCO world heritage site.

Libraries. The National Library in Tirana contains over 1m. items.

Theatre and Opera. The National Albanian Theatre, Tirana, is the most prestigious, with a capacity of 540. The Opera and Ballet Theatre, Tirana, is the home of the Albanian Philharmonic Orchestra.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Algeria came under French control in the 1850s. The French settlers who subsequently arrived developed political and economic power at the expense of the indigenous Muslim population. In Nov. 1954 the Front de Libération Nationale (FLN), representing the Muslim majority, declared open warfare against the French administration and armed forces. There was extensive loss of life and property during the fighting which continued unabated until March 1962 when a ceasefire was agreed between the French government and the nationalists. Against the wishes of the French in Algeria, Gen. de Gaulle conceded Algerian independence on 3 July 1962.

The Political Bureau of the FLN took over the functions of government, a National Constituent Assembly was elected and the Republic was declared on 25 Sept. 1962. The founder of the FLN, Ahmed Ben Bella, became prime minister, and president the following year. On 15 June 1965 the government was overthrown by a junta of army officers, who established a Revolutionary Council under Col. Houari Boumédienne. After 10 years of rule, Boumédienne proposed that elections should be held for a president and a National Assembly. The proposed new constitution was accepted in a referendum in Nov. 1976 and Boumédienne was elected president unopposed. A National Assembly was elected in Feb. 1977, only FLN members being allowed as candidates.

On the death of the president in Dec. 1978 the Revolutionary Council again took over the government. The Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) was banned in March 1992. The head of state, Mohamed Boudiaf, was assassinated on 29 July 1992, and a campaign of terrorism was launched by fundamentalists which has continued to the present day. It is estimated that over 100,000 lives have been lost, although Algeria has emerged from the worst of the war, with most of the guerrilla activity now restricted to the countryside. Unrest among Berbers, Algeria's main ethnic community, erupted into violence in May 2001, resulting in 60 people losing their lives in the Berber region of Kabylie. In March 2002 President Bouteflika agreed to grant the Berber language official status alongside Arabic.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Algeria is bounded in the west by Morocco and Western Sahara, southwest by Mauritania and Mali, southeast by Niger, east by Libya and Tunisia, and north by the Mediterranean Sea. It has an area of 2,381,741 sq. km (919,595 sq. miles). Population (census 1998) 29,2767,767; density, 12·3 per sq. km. In 1999, 59·5% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 35·6m.

2·5m. Algerians live in France.

83% of the population speak Arabic, 17% Berber; French is widely spoken. A law of Dec. 1996 made Arabic the sole official language, but in March 2002 Tamazight, the Berber language, was given official status and also made a national language.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A referendum was held on 28 Nov. 1996. The electorate was 16,434,527; turn-out was 79·6%. The electorate approved by 85·81% of votes cast a new Constitution which defines the fundamental components of the Algerian people as Islam, Arab identity and Berber identity. It was signed into law on 7 Dec. 1996. Political parties are permitted, but not if based on a separatist feature such as race, religion, sex, language or region. The terms of office of the President are limited to two, but the President's powers of nomination are widened (General-Secretary of the government, governor of the national bank, judges, chiefs of security organs and prefects). Parliament is bicameral: a 380-member National Assembly elected by direct universal suffrage using proportional representation, and a 144-member Council of the Nation, one-third nominated by the President and two-thirds indirectly elected by the 48 local authorities. The Council of the Nation debates bills passed by the National Assembly which become law if a three-quarters majority is in favour.

In a referendum on 16 Sept. 1999 voters were asked 'Do you agree with the president's approach to restore peace and civilian concord?' Turn-out was 85·1% and 98·6% of the votes cast were in favour.

National Anthem. 'Qassaman bin nazilat Il-mahiqat' ('We swear by the lightning that destroys'); words by M. Zakaria, tune by Mohamed Fawzi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In presidential elections on 15 April 1999 Abdelaziz Bouteflika (National Democratic Rally) gained 73·8% of the votes cast; turn-out was 60·3%. All of the other candidates had withdrawn the previous day alleging fraud.

Parliamentary elections were held on 30 May 2002. Prime Minister Ali Benflis' National Liberation Front won 199 out of 389 seats with 34·3% of votes cast; the National Democratic Rally, 47 seats with 8·2%; the Movement for National Reform, 43 with 9·5%; the Movement of the Society for Peace, 38 with 7·0%; and the Workers' Party, 21 with 3·3%. Turn-out was 46·2%.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 18 months (six months basic training and 12 months civilian tasks) at the age of 19.

Military expenditure totalled US$2,930m. in 2000 (US$97 per capita), representing 6·8% of GDP.

Army. There are six military regions. The Army had a strength of 105,000 (75,000 conscripts) in 1999. The Ministry of the Interior maintains National Security Forces of 20,000. The Republican Guard numbers 1,200 personnel and the Gendarmerie 60,000. There were in addition legitimate defence groups (self-defence militia and communal guards) numbering around 100,000.

Navy. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 7,000. The Navy's 41 vessels included two submarines and three frigates. There are naval bases at Algiers, Annaba, Mers el Kebir and Jijel.

Air Force. The Air Force in 1999 had 10,000 personnel, 181 combat aircraft and 65 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Algeria is a member of the UN, the African Union, the League of Arab States, Arab Maghreb Union, OPEC, African Development Bank, IOM and the OIC.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 12·1% of GDP, services 40·6% and industry 47·3%.

Overview. A law on privatization of July 1995 envisages the creation of small- and medium-size businesses in commerce, tourism and transport. Strategic industries (gas and oil) and large industrial complexes are to remain state-owned. Some 1,200 small and 50 large businesses were offered for sale to Algerian citizens; 30% of the shares are reserved for employees (5% free of charge).

Currency. The unit of currency is the Algerian dinar (DZD) of 100 centimes. Foreign exchange reserves were US$21,133m. in June 2002, with gold reserves 5·58m. troy oz. Total money supply was 1,287bn. dinars in March 2002. Inflation was 4·2% in 2001. The dinar was devalued by 28·6% in April 1994.

Budget. The fiscal year starts on 1 Jan. In 1999 revenue totalled 950,496m. dinars and expenditure 961,682m. dinars.

Performance. Total GDP was US$53·0bn. in 2001. GDP growth was 2·5% in 2000 and 2·8% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Banque d'Algérie. The Governor is Mohammed Laksaci. In 1996 there were five state-owned commercial banks. Private banking recommenced in Sept. 1995.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Algeria's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 6m. kW in 1997. 7% is hydro-electric. Production in 1998 was 21·38bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 563 kWh.

Postal Services. There were 3,223 post offices in 1997.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judiciary is constitutionally independent. Judges are appointed by the Supreme Council of Magistrature chaired by the President of the Republic. Criminal justice is organized as in France. The Supreme Court is at the same time Council of State and High Court of Appeal. The death penalty is in force for terrorism.

The population in penal institutions in 1996 was 35,737 (125 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The 1996 Constitution made Islam the state religion, established a consultative High Islamic Council, and forbids practices ‘contrary to Islamic morality’. Over 98% of the population are Sunni Muslims. There are also around 110,000 Ibadiyah Muslims and 150,000 Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. The Armed Islamic Group (GIA) vowed in 1994 to kill ‘Jews, Christians and polytheists’ in Algeria. Hundreds of foreign nationals, including priests and nuns, have since been killed. Signalling an increasing tolerance amongst the Muslim community, the Missionaries of Africa’s house at Ghardaia Oasis was re-opened in 2000.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 66·6% (77·4% among males and 55·7% among females). In 1996–97 there were 33,503 children in pre-primary education. There were 15,426 state primary schools with 170,956 teachers and 4,674,947 pupils; 3,934 middle and secondary schools (1995) with 151,948 teachers and 2,618,242 pupils, of whom 48% were female.

In 1995–96 there were 6 universities, 2 universities of science and technology, 5 university centres, 1 agronomic institute, 1 telecommunications institute, 1 veterinary institute, 1 school of architecture and town planning and 1 école normale supérieure. In 1996 there were 160,000 university students and 7,947 academic staff.

In 1996 expenditure on education came to 5·1% of GNP and represented 16·4% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1994 there were 25,796 doctors, 7,763 dental surgeons and 3,425 pharmacists. In 1990 there were 284 hospitals (with 60,124 beds), 1,309 health centres, 510 polyclinics, 475 maternity clinics and 3,344 care centres.

Welfare. Welfare payments to 7·4m. beneficiaries on low incomes were introduced in March 1992.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-controlled Radiodiffusion Algérienne and Entreprise Nationale de Télévision broadcast home services in Arabic, Kabyle (Berber) and French, and an external service. There are 18 TV transmitting stations (colour by PAL). In 1997 there were 7·1m. radio and 3·1m. TV receivers.

Press. Algeria had five daily newspapers in 1996, with a combined circulation of 1·1m.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 678,000 foreign tourists, spending US$20m.

ANDORRA

Principat d'Andorra

Capital: Andorra la Vella
Population estimate, 2000: 66,000
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
The political status of Andorra was regulated by the Paréage of 1278 which placed Andorra under the joint suzerainty of the Comte de Foix and of the Bishop of Urgel. The rights vested in the house of Foix passed by marriage to that of Bearn and, on the accession of Henri IV, to the French crown. A democratic constitution was adopted in 1993.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
The co-principality of Andorra is situated in the eastern Pyrenees on the French–Spanish border. The country is mountainous and has an average altitude of 1,996 metres. Area, 468 sq. km. In lieu of a census, a register of population is kept. The registered population on 31 Dec. 2000 was 65,844; density, 141 per sq. km.

In 1995, 95·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The chief towns are Andorra la Vella, the capital (population, 25,000 in 1999) and its suburb Escaldes-Engordany (13,177). 36·0% of the residential population are Andorran, 40·6% Spanish, 10·2% Portuguese and 6·5% French. Catalan is the official language, but Spanish and French are widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS
Births in 2000 numbered 747 (rate of 11·3 per 1,000 inhabitants) and deaths 259 (3·9 per 1,000 inhabitants). Life expectancy (2000): male, 89·8 years; female, 91·1 years. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 4·3%. Fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 births per woman.

CLIMATE
Escaldes-Engordany, Jan. 35·8°F (2·1°C), July 65·8°F (18·8°C). Annual rainfall 34·9" (886 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The joint heads of state are the President of the French Republic and the Bishop of Urgel, the co-princes.

A new democratic constitution was approved by 74·2% of votes cast at a referendum on 14 March 1993. The electorate was 9,123; turn-out was 75·7%. The new Constitution, which came into force on 4 May 1993, makes the co-princes a single constitutional monarch and provides for a parliament, the General Council of the Andorran Valleys, with 28 members, two from each of the seven parishes and 14 elected by proportional representation from the single national constituency, for four years. In 1982 an Executive Council was appointed and legislative and executive powers were separated. The General Council elects the President of the Executive Council, who is the head of the government.

There is a Constitutional Court of four members who hold office for eight-year terms, renewable once.

National Anthem. 'El Gran Carlemany, mon pare' ('Great Charlemagne, my father'); words by Enric Marfany, tune by D. J. Benlloch i Vivò.

RECENT ELECTIONS
Elections to the General Council were held on 4 March 2001. The Liberal Party of Andorra won 15 seats, the Social Democratic Party 6, the Democratic Party 5, and the Lauredian Union 2. Turn-out was 81·6%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the government comprised:

President, Executive Council: Marc Forné Molné; b. 1946 (Liberal Party of Andorra; sworn in 7 Dec. 1994 and re-elected in Feb. 1997 and March 2001).

Minister for Foreign Affairs: Juli Minoves Triquell. Economy: Miquel Alvarez Marfany. Finance: Mireia Maestre Cortadella. Interior and Justice: Jordi Visent Guitart. Territorial Planning: Jordi Malleu Serra. Health and Social Affairs: Mónica Tort Codina. Culture: Xavier Montane Atero. Education, Youth and Sports: Pere Cervós Cardona. Presidency and Tourism: Enric Pujal Areny. Agriculture and Environment: Olga Adellach Coma.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The 1993 Constitution empowers Andorra to conduct its own foreign affairs, with consultation on matters affecting France or Spain.

Andorra is a member of the UN, UNESCO, WIPO, the Council of Europe and the OSCE.

ECONOMY

Currency. Since 1 Jan. 2002 Andorra has been using the euro.

Budget. 2001: revenue, €234,705,780; expenditure, €250,775,790.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·3% in 1999 and averaged 2·4% between 1995 and 2000.

Banking and Finance. The banking sector, with its tax-haven status, contributes substantially to the economy.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 26,500 kW in 2000. Production in 1998 was 116m. kWh. 60% of Andorra's electricity comes from Spain.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were some 1,000 ha of arable land (2% of total). Tobacco and potatoes are principal crops. The principal livestock activity is sheep raising.

INDUSTRY

Labour. Only 1% of the workforce is employed in agriculture, the rest in tourism, commerce, services and light industry. Manufacturing consists mainly of cigarettes, cigars and furniture.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Andorra is a member of the EU Customs Union for industrial goods, but is a third country for agricultural produce. There is a free economic zone.

Imports and Exports. 1997 exports, US$46·2m.; imports, US$920·2m. Main export markets (2000): Spain, 60·9%; France, 26·1%. Leading import suppliers (2000): Spain, 48·5%; France, 26·6%. The European Union accounted for 92·3% of exports in 2000 and 89·2% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1994 there were 269 km of roads (198 km paved). Motor vehicles (2000) totalled 60,287, including 46,421 cars and 6,029 trucks and vans.

Civil Aviation. There is an airport at Seo de Urgel.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 34,215 telephone main lines, or 519·6 per 1,000 inhabitants. There were 25,099 mobile phone subscribers in Dec. 2000 and 24,500 Internet users in April 2001. In 1996 there were 3,000 fax machines.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the High Council of Justice, comprising five members appointed for single six-year terms. The independence of judges is constitutionally guaranteed. Judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by Magistrates' Courts and a Judge's Court. Criminal justice is administered by the Corts, consisting of the judge of appeal, a raonador (ombudsman) elected by the General Council of the Valleys, a general attorney and an attorney nominated for five years alternately by each of the co-princes.

Religion. The Roman Catholic is the established church, but the 1993 Constitution guarantees religious liberty. In 1997 around 79% of the population were Catholics.

Education. Free education in French- or Spanish-language schools is compulsory: six years primary starting at six years, followed by four years secondary. A Roman Catholic school provides education in Catalan. In 1996–97 there were 18 schools altogether with 8,079 pupils.

Health. In 2000 there were two hospitals (one private, one public); in 1994 there were 132 doctors.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Servei de Telecomunicacions d'Andorra relays French and Spanish programmes. Radio Andorra is a commercial public station; Radio Valira is commercial. Number of receivers: radio (1997), 16,000; TV (1997), 27,000. Colour is by PAL.

Press. In 1996 there were three daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 4,000, at a rate of 60 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. Tourism is the main industry, averaging 11m. visitors a year and accounting for 80% of GDP.

ANGOLA

República de Angola

Capital: Luanda
Population estimate, 2000: 13·13m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 2,187
HDI/world rank: 0·403/161

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Portuguese were dominant from the late 19th century. Angola remained a Portuguese colony until 11 June 1951, when it became an Overseas Province of Portugal.

A guerrilla war broke out in 1961 when the People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola launched a military offensive to end Portuguese colonial rule. After the coup d'état in Portugal in April 1974, negotiations with Portugal, the MPLA (People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola), the FNLA (National Front for the Liberation of Angola) and UNITA (National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola) led to independence on 11 Nov. 1975. The FNLA tried to seize power by force but was driven out of the capital. As independence approached, invasion from the north was combined with a South African invasion in support of UNITA. The MPLA declared independence and, subsequently, with the help of Cuban troops, defeated the FNLA in the north and drove the invading South African army out of the country. South African invasions and the occupation of large areas of Angola continued until the signing of the New York Agreement in Dec. 1988, under which South Africa agreed to withdraw its forces from Angola and Namibia (and grant independence to Namibia), while Angola and Cuba agreed to the phased withdrawal of Cuban troops.

After many abortive attempts to end the internal conflict with UNITA, a peace agreement was signed on 31 May 1991 under which a single national army was to be formed and multi-party elections held. In Sept. 1992 the MPLA won the elections and José Eduardo dos Santos was re-elected president against UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi. But the latter rejected the election results, withdrew his generals from the unified army and went back to war, seizing an estimated 70% of the country.

On 20 Nov. 1994 a peace agreement was signed in Lusaka, allowing for UNITA to share in government.

On 9 Jan. 1998 a breakthrough in negotiations between the government and UNITA rebels was announced. Jonas Savimbi, UNITA's leader, met with President dos Santos but talks soon foundered and serious fighting resumed in the north, raising fears of a major new offensive by the Angolan Armed Forces against the UNITA rebels. Meanwhile, Angolan troops fought in the Democratic Republic of the Congo alongside the forces of President Kabila in his efforts to quash a Rwandan-backed rebellion in the east of his country. They remained after the assassination of Kabila in Jan. 2001 but renewed hopes of peace resulted in their withdrawal in Jan. 2002. In Feb. 2002 Jonas Savimbi was killed in fighting with government troops. On 4 April 2002 commanders of the Angolan army and UNITA signed a ceasefire agreement aimed at ending the civil war. More than half a million Angolans died in the civil unrest that plagued their country for over a quarter of a century.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Angola is bounded in the north by the Republic of the Congo, north and northeast by the Democratic Republic of the Congo, east by Zambia, south by Namibia and west by the Atlantic Ocean. The area is 1,246,700 sq. km (481,354 sq. miles) including the province of Cabinda, an exclave of territory separated by 30 sq. km of the Democratic Republic of the Congo's territory. The population at census, 1970, was 5,646,166, of whom 14% were urban. Official estimate, 1995, 11·5m.; density, 9·2 per sq. km. In 1999, 66·5% of the population were living in rural areas. Population figures are rough estimates because the civil war has led to huge movements of population.

There were 0·3m. Angolan refugees in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Zambia and the Republic of the Congo in 1995.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 17·77m.

Area, population and chief towns of the provinces:

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population estimate, 1992 (in 1,000)	Chief town
Bengo	31,371	196·1	Caxito
Benguela	31,788	656·6	Benguela
Bié	70,314	1,119·8	Kuito
Cabinda	7,270	152·1	Cabinda
Cuando-Cubango	199,049	139·6	Menongue
Cuanza Norte	24,190	385·2	Ndalatando
Cuanza Sul	55,660	694·5	Sumbe
Cunene	89,342	241·2	Ondjiva
Huambo	34,274	1,521·0	Huambo
Huíla	75,002	885·1	Lubango
Luanda	2,418	1,588·6	Luanda
Lunda Norte	102,783	305·9	Lucapa
Lunda Sul	45,649	169·1	Saurimo
Malanje	97,602	906·0	Malanje
Moxico	223,023	319·3	Luena
Namibe	58,137	107·3	Namibe
Uíge	58,698	802·7	Uíge
Zaire	40,130	237·5	Mbanza Congo

The most important towns (populations) are Luanda, the capital (1999, 2·55m.), Huambo (1995, 400,000), Benguela (1983, 155,000), Lobito (1983, 150,000), Lubango (1984, 105,000), Malanje (1970, 31,559) and Namibe (formerly Moçâmedes, 1981, 100,000).

The main ethnic groups are Umbundo (Ovimbundo), Kimbundo, Bakongo, Chokwe, Ganguela, Luvale and Kwanyama.

Portuguese is the official language. Bantu and other African languages are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 43·6 years for males and 46·3 years for females. 1995 births (estimates), 567,000; deaths, 217,000. Birth rate in 1995 was 49·3 per 1,000 population; death rate, 18·9. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·4%. Fertility rate, 1999, 6·6 births per woman; infant mortality, 1999, 172 per 1,000 live births. Angola has one of the highest rates of child mortality in the world, at nearly 300 deaths among children under 5 per 1,000 live births in 1999.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, with low rainfall in the west but increasing inland. Temperatures are constant over the year and most rain falls in March and April. Luanda, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 69°F (20·6°C). Annual rainfall 13" (323 mm). Lobito, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 14" (353 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the Constitution adopted at independence, the sole legal party was the MPLA. In Dec. 1990, however, the MPLA announced that the Constitution would be revised to permit opposition parties. The supreme organ of state is the 220-member National Assembly. There is an executive President elected for renewable terms of five years, who appoints a Council of Ministers.

In Dec. 2002 Angola's ruling party and the UNITA party of former rebels agreed on a new constitution. The president would keep key powers, including the power to name and to remove the prime minister. The president will also appoint provincial governors, rather than letting voters elect them, but the governor must be from the party that received a majority of votes in that province. The draft constitution has been submitted to the Angolan parliament for consideration, and a referendum is likely to be held before the end of 2003.

National Anthem. 'O Pátria, nunca mais esqueceremos' ('Oh Fatherland, never shall we forget'); words by M. R. Alves Monteiro, tune by R. A. Dias Mingas.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential and parliamentary elections of 29–30 Sept. 1992 the electorate was 4,862,748. Turn-out was about 90%. Eduardo dos Santos (MPLA) was re-elected as president with 49·5% of votes cast against 40·5% for his single opponent, Jonas Savimbi (UNITA). The latter refused to accept the result. The MPLA gained 129 seats in the National Assembly with 53·74% of votes cast, and UNITA 77 with 34·1%. 10 other parties gained 6 seats or fewer.

On 11 April 1997 a Government of National Unity was installed, with 3 ministerial posts going to UNITA. Jonas Savimbi, UNITA's leader, received the specially created position of Chief of the Principal Opposition Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: José Eduardo dos Santos; b. 1943 (MPLA; since 10 Sept. 1979; re-elected 9 Dec. 1985 and 29–30 Sept. 1992).

Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior: Fernando Dias dos Santos da Piedade 'Nando'; b. 1952 (MPLA; since 6 Dec. 2002).

Government Website: http://www.angola.org

DEFENCE

Conscription is for two years. Defence expenditure totalled US$1,250m. in 2000 (US$97 per capita), representing 19·2% of GDP.

Army. In 1999 the Army had 35 regiments. Total strength was estimated at 100,000. In addition the paramilitary Rapid Reaction Police numbered 15,000.

Navy. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled about 1,500 with nine operational vessels. There is a naval base at Luanda.

Air Force. The Angolan People's Air Force (FAPA) was formed in 1976 and has about 11,000 personnel. Since the elections in 1992 and the relative calm, the Air Force has been run down and serviceability of combat aircraft is low. In 1999 there were 85 combat aircraft and 28 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Angola is a member of the UN, WTO, the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, SADC, IOM and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 12·2% of GDP, services 36·4% and industry 51·4%.

Overview. Reforms are under way to introduce a market economy and restore private property. In April 2000 Angola signed a far-reaching agreement with the International Monetary Fund which stipulates economic reforms. In July 2000 the World Bank also signed an agreement approving a series of reforms in return for help with the country's huge foreign debt. During 2000 there were plans to privatize at least ten large- and medium-sized companies. It is hoped to complete the privatization process before the end of 2003.

Currency. The unit of currency is the kwanza (AOA), introduced in Dec. 1999, replacing the readjusted kwanza at a rate of 1 kwanza = 1m. readjusted kwanzas. Foreign exchange reserves were US$902m. in June 2002. Gold reserves were 46,500 troy oz in 1990. Inflation was 4,146% in 1996. It has slowed since then, and in 2001 was 153%.

Budget. Revenues in 1997 were KZr694·6m. and expenditure KZr521·3m.

Performance. Total GDP was US$9·5bn. in 2001. The civil war meant GDP growth in 1993 was negative, at –24·0%, but a recovery followed and in 2000 and 2001 it was 3·0% and 3·2% respectively, mainly thanks to booming diamond exports and post-war rebuilding.

Banking and Finance. Banking was re-opened to commercial competition in 1991. The Banco Nacional de Angola is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Aguinaldo Jaime). All banks remain state-owned, though the government is progressively reducing its stake in them. An agricultural bank and a commercial and industrial bank were founded in 1991. Five Portuguese banks have branches, as well as the French Banque Paribas, Citibank, the Equator Bank, and the African Development Bank.

Angola received US$1·8bn. in foreign direct investment in 2000, approximately 90% of which was in the oil sector.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. In 1998 Angola's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 0·5 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 1m. kW in 1997. Production in 1998 was 1·89bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 60 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Oil is produced mainly offshore and in the Cabinda exclave. Oil production and supporting activities contribute some 45% of Angolan GDP and provide the government with approximately US$3·5bn. annually. The oil industry is expected to invest US$3·5bn. a year in offshore Angola in the early part of the 21st century, and it is hoped that by 2005 output may be double the 750,000 bbls. a day produced in 2000. There are plans for a new US$3·3bn. oil refinery near Lobito which is scheduled to begin operations in 2006. Only Nigeria among sub-Saharan African countries produces more oil. It is believed that there are huge oil resources yet to be discovered. Proven resources in 2001 were 5·4bn. bbls. Total production (1996) 258m. bbls. Natural gas production, 1996, 57 petajoules.

Minerals. Mineral production in Angola is dominated by diamonds, and 90% of all workers in the mining sector work in the diamond industry. Production in 1998 totalled 2,764,000 carats. Angola has billions of dollars worth of unexploited diamond fields. In 2000 the government regained control of the nation's richest diamond provinces from UNITA rebels. Other minerals produced include (1991) granite, 635,000 cu. metres; marble, 244,000 cu. metres; salt, 6,600 tonnes. Iron ore, phosphate, manganese and copper deposits exist.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 3m. ha of arable land and 0·5m. ha of permanent crops. The agricultural population in 1995 was 8·17m., of whom 3·78m. were economically active. There were 10,300 tractors in 1998. Principal crops (with 2000 production, in 1,000 tonnes): cassava (3,130); maize (428); sugarcane (330); bananas (290); sweet potatoes (182); millet (102); citrus fruits (75); dry beans (68).

Livestock (2000): 4·0m. cattle, 350,000 sheep, 2·15m. goats, 800,000 pigs.

Forestry. In 1995, 222,000 sq. km, or 17·8% of the total land area, was covered by forests (18·8% in 1990), including mahogany and other hardwoods. Timber production in 1999 was 6·68m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1993 the fishing fleet had 73 vessels over 100 GRT totalling 17,332 GRT. Total catch in 2000 came to 238,351 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The principal manufacturing branches are foodstuffs, textiles and oil refining. Output, 1998 (in tonnes): sugar, 32,000; 1997 (in tonnes): residual fuel oil, 640,000; distillate

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were, in 1997, 76,626 km of roads (7,955 km highways; 25% of all roads surfaced), and in 1996 approximately 207,000 passenger cars and 25,000 commercial vehicles. Many roads remain mined as a result of the civil war; a programme of de-mining and rehabilitation is under way.

Rail. The length of railways open for traffic in 1987 was 2,952 km, comprising 2,798 km of 1,067 mm gauge and 154 km of 600 mm gauge, but much of the network was severely damaged in the civil war. Restoration and redevelopment of the network is under way, notably the Benguela Railway, linking the port city of Lobito with Huambo in Angola's rich farmlands and neighbouring Democratic Republic of the Congo and Zambia.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Luanda (Fourth of February). The national carrier is Linhas Aéreas de Angola (TAAG). In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Angola-based carriers flew 6·5m. km, carrying 531,000 passengers (120,000 on international flights).

Shipping. There are ports at Luanda, Lobito and Namibe, and oil terminals at Malongo, Lobito and Soyo. In 1998 the merchant fleet totalled 74,000 GRT, including oil tankers 3,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 69,700 telephone main lines in 2000, or 5·3 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 15,000 PCs in use. It is intended to privatize Angola Telecom, although no date has been set. In Dec. 2000 there were approximately 30,000 Internet users, and in Dec. 1998, 9,700 mobile phone subscribers.

Postal Services. In 1997 there were 80 post offices, or 1 for every 145,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court and Court of Appeal are in Luanda. The death penalty was abolished in 1992.

Religion. In 1997 there were 5·39m. Roman Catholics, 1·56m. Protestants, 460,000 African Christians, and most of the remainder follow traditional animist religions.

Education. The education system provides three levels of general education totalling eight years, followed by schools for technical training, teacher training or pre-university studies. Enrolment (in 1,000) in 1991–92: pre-school, 214; general education first level, 989; second level, 141; third level, 42; technical training, 12·7; teacher training, 109; pre-university studies (1990–91), 6·1. There is one university. Private schools have been permitted since 1991. The University of Luanda has campuses at Luanda, Huambo and Lubango. It had 8,954 students in 1991–92. The adult literacy rate was 42·0% in 1998.

Health. In 1990 there were 662 doctors, 10 dentists, 9,334 nurses, 4,165 medical auxiliaries and 266 hospitals and health centres with 11,857 beds. There were 1,339 medical posts.

In the period 1990–98 only 31% of the population had access to safe drinking water. In 2000 it was estimated that 60% of the 3·9m. displaced people were suffering from malnutrition.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 150,000 TV receivers and 630,000 radio receivers in Angola. The government-controlled Rádio Nacional de Angola broadcasts three programmes and an international service. There are also regional stations. Televisão Popular de Angola transmits from seven stations (colour by PAL).

Press. Angola had five daily newspapers in 1996, with a combined circulation of 128,000. The government daily is the Jornal de Angola. The Díario da República is the official gazette. There is an independent weekly, Agora, and there are around 100 specialized and independent publications.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 45,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$13m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Antigua and Barbuda make up the island nation of the Lesser Antilles in the Eastern Caribbean. Most of the population is descended from African slaves brought in during colonial times to work on sugar plantations.

As British colonies Antigua and Barbuda formed part of the Leeward Islands Federation from 1871 until 30 June 1956 when Antigua and Barbuda became a separate Crown Colony. It was part of the West Indies Federation from 3 Jan. 1958 until 31 May 1962 and became an Associated State of the UK on 27 Feb. 1967. Antigua and Barbuda gained independence on 1 Nov. 1981.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Antigua and Barbuda comprises three islands of the Lesser Antilles situated in the eastern Caribbean with a total land area of 442 sq. km (171 sq. miles); it consists of Antigua (280 sq. km), Barbuda, 40 km to the north (161 sq. km) and uninhabited Redonda, 40 km to the southwest (one sq. km). The population in July 2002 was 67,448 (1,400 on Barbuda); density, 153 per sq. km. Urban population (1998), 36·3%.

The chief towns are St John's, the capital on Antigua (25,000 inhabitants in 1999) and Codrington (1,400), the only settlement on Barbuda.

English is the official language; local dialects are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Expectation of life, 1996: males, 71·5 years, females, 75·8. Annual population growth rate, 1995–2001, 0·7%. Births, 1997, 1,448; deaths, 1999, 508. Infant mortality in 1998 was 17 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but drier than most West Indies islands. The hot season is from May to Nov., when rainfall is greater. Mean annual rainfall is 40" (1,000 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

H.M. Queen Elizabeth, as Head of State, is represented by a Governor-General appointed by her on the advice of the Prime Minister. There is a bicameral legislature, comprising a 17-member Senate appointed by the Governor-General and a 17-member House of Representatives elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term. The Governor-General appoints a Prime Minister and, on the latter's advice, other members of the Cabinet.

Barbuda is administered by a nine-member directly-elected council.

National Anthem. 'Fair Antigua and Barbuda'; words by N. H. Richards, tune by W. G. Chambers.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Argentina gained its independence from Spain in 1816. Civil wars and anarchy followed until, in 1853, stable government was established.

In 1943 when Gen. Juan Domingo Perón led a military coup his regime was autocratic but popularist. His wife Eva (Evita), played a major role, giving the regime an almost cult-like following. She died in 1955 and a civilian administration followed until 1966 when the next military coup led to seven years of government by the military. However, a political party had established itself around the Peróns and when elections were held in 1973 Gen. Perón was elected president. When he died in 1974, his widow Isobel succeeded him as president. She was deposed in 1976 following another military coup, which established a three-man junta with Gen. Jorge Videla, C.-in-C. of the army, as president. The new government instituted a savagely repressive regime.

Videla was succeeded by Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, the army C.-in-C. In April 1982 Galtieri, in an effort to distract attention from domestic failings, invaded the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas). The subsequent military defeat helped to precipitate the fall of Galtieri and the junta in July 1982. Return to civilian rule took place on 10 Dec. 1983. A new Constitution was adopted in Aug. 1994.

On 4 July 2001 former President Carlos Menem, who had been placed under house arrest a month earlier, was formally charged in connection with his alleged role in illegal arms deals, but he was released by a federal court four months later and announced that he would again run for the presidency. A state of emergency was introduced in Dec. 2001 as Argentina verged on bankruptcy in the face of an ever-worsening economic crisis. President Fernando de la Rua resigned on 20 Dec. 2001 after days of rioting, protests and looting across the country. During a period of 11 days there were three different acting or interim presidents before Eduardo Duhalde was elected president by congress until elections in 2003.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The second largest country in South America, the Argentine Republic is bounded in the north by Bolivia, in the northeast by Paraguay, in the east by Brazil, Uruguay and the Atlantic Ocean, and the west by Chile. The republic consists of 23 provinces and one federal district with the following areas and estimated populations in 2000 (in 1,000):

Provinces	Area (sq. km)	Population 2000	Capital	Population (1991 census)

Buenos Aires: Buenos Aires was first founded in 1536 with the foundation of a Spanish settlement and fort, 'Puerto de Nuestra Señora de Santa Maria del Buen Ayre', by Pedro de Mendoza. Rising from the Rio Plata it is situated on the east coast of Argentina, covering an area of 194 sq. km. It is South America's second largest city after São Paulo.

Argentina also claims territory in Antarctica.

The area is 2,780,400 sq. km excluding the claimed Antarctic territory, and the population at the 1991 census was 32,615,528 (16,677,548 females); 2000 estimate, 37·03m. giving a density of 13 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 41·47m.

In 1999, 89·6% of the population were urban.

In April 1990 the National Congress declared that the Falklands and other British-held islands in the South Atlantic were part of the new province of Tierra del Fuego formed from the former National Territory of the same name. The 1994 Constitution reaffirms Argentine sovereignty over the Falkland Islands.

The population of the principal metropolitan areas in 1995 was: Buenos Aires, 11,802,000; Córdoba, 1,294,000; Rosario, 1,155,000; Mendoza, 851,000; La Plata, 676,128 (1992); Tucumán, 642,473 (1992).

95% speak the national language, Spanish, while 3% speak Italian, 1% Guaraní and 1% other languages. In 1999, 12,989 immigrants were granted permanent residency, down from 18,463 in 1996.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 688,000; deaths, 289,000. Rates, 1999 (per 1,000 population): birth, 18·8; death, 7·9. Infant mortality, 1999, 19 per 1,000 live births. Estimated life expectancy at birth, 1999, 69·9 years for males and 77·0 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1995–2000, 1·3%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is warm temperate over the pampas, where rainfall occurs in all seasons, but diminishes towards the west. In the north and west, the climate is more arid, with high summer temperatures, while in the extreme south conditions are also dry, but much cooler. Buenos Aires, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 37" (950 mm). Bahía Blanca, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 48°F (8·9°C). Annual rainfall 21" (523 mm). Mendoza, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 47°F (8·3°C). Annual rainfall 8" (190 mm). Rosario, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 51°F (10·6°C). Annual rainfall 35" (869 mm). San Juan, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 4" (89 mm). San Miguel de Tucumán, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 56°F (13·3°C). Annual rainfall 38" (970 mm). Ushuaia, Jan. 50°F (10°C), July 34°F (1·1°C). Annual rainfall 19" (475 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 10 April 1994 elections were held for a 230-member constituent assembly to reform the 1853 constitution. The Justicialist National Movement (Peronist) gained 38·8% of votes cast and the Radical Union 20%. On 22 Aug. 1994 this assembly unanimously adopted a new Constitution. This reduces the presidential term of office from six to four years, but permits the President to stand for two terms. The President is no longer elected by an electoral college, but directly by universal suffrage. A presidential candidate is elected who gains more than 45% of votes cast, or 40% if at least 10% ahead of an opponent; otherwise there is a second round. The Constitution attenuates the President's powers by instituting a Chief of Cabinet. The National Congress consists of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies: the Senate comprises 72 members, three nominated by each provincial legislature and three from the Federal District for nine years (one-third retiring every three years). The Chamber of Deputies comprises 257 members directly elected by universal suffrage (at age 18).

National Anthem. 'Oid, mortales, el grito sagrado Libertad' ('Hear, mortals, the sacred cry of Liberty'); words by V. López y Planes, 1813; tune by J. Blas Parera.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 1 Jan. 2002 Congress elected Eduardo Duhalde as the country's new president after Fernando de la Rúa and three acting or interim presidents had all resigned.

In the first round of presidential elections held on 27 April 2003, Carlos Menem (Peronist) won 24·4% of the vote, followed by Néstor Kirchner (Peronist) with 22·0%, Ricardo López Murphy (ind.) with 16·3%, Elisa Carrió (ind.) with 14·1% and Adolfo Rodriguez Saá (Peronist) with 14·1%. There were three other candidates. Turn-out was 77·6%. On 14 May Menem pulled out of the second round, leaving Kirchner as winner by default.

Following the elections to the Chamber of Deputies of 24 Oct. 1999, the Alliance (consisting of the Radical Union and the centre-left Frepaso) held 122 seats; the Justicialist Party (JP/Peronists), 100; Action for the Republic, 12. Other parties held 23 seats. In the elections of 14 Oct. 2001 for the 127 seats not contested in 1999 the Justicialist Party won 66 seats with 37·4% of votes cast, the Alliance 35 with 23·1%, Alternative for a Republic of Equals 8 with 7·2%, and Front for Change 4 with 4·1%. Other parties won 2 seats or fewer. Turn-out was 73·7%. As a result of the election the JP had 116 of the 257 seats, the Alliance 88, Alternative for a Republic of Equals 17 and the Action for the Republic 9.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$4,658m. (US$126 per capita), representing 1·7% of GDP (compared to over 8% in 1981).

Army. There are five military regions. In 1999 the Army was 40,000 strong. The trained reserve numbers about 250,000, of whom 200,000 belong to the National Guard and 50,000 to the Territorial Guard.

There is a paramilitary gendarmerie of 18,000 run by the Ministry of Defence.

Navy. The Argentinian Fleet (1999) included three diesel submarines, six destroyers and seven frigates. Total personnel was 20,000 including 2,000 in Naval Aviation and 2,800 marines. Main bases are at Buenos Aires, Puerto Belgrano (HQ and Dockyard), Mar del Plata and Ushuaia.

The Naval Aviation Service had some 31 combat aircraft in 1999 including Super-Etendard strike aircraft and eight armed helicopters.

Air Force. The Air Force is organized into Air Operations, Air Regions, Logistics and Personnel Commands. There were (1999) 10,500 personnel and 125 combat aircraft including Mirage 5 and Mirage III jet fighters. In addition there were 27 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Argentina is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, LAIA, Mercosur, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty, and is set to apply for membership of the OECD. Diplomatic relations with Britain, broken since the 1982 Falklands War, were re-opened in 1990. Praising Argentina's 'call to peace', in Nov.

1997 US President Clinton announced his intention to give the country 'major non-NATO ally' status. The alignment with US foreign policy came after years of anti-American sentiment and a policy of neutrality.

ECONOMY

Services contributed 65·6% of GDP in 1998, industry 28·7% and agriculture 5·7%.

Overview. Argentina suffers from the world's largest debt default, a severe recession and a freeze on bank savings. At the root of the crisis lie failures in fiscal policy. Governments have raised spending so high that it cannot be financed in an orderly way. By mid-2002 the debt burden was US$140bn. while dollar reserves dropped by nearly a third to US$10bn. Owing to the external debt position, the government has been unable to use fiscal policy to boost the economy. Inflation is accelerating and confidence in public finances is undermined.

Currency. The monetary unit is the peso (ARP), which replaced the austral on 1 Jan. 1992 at a rate of one peso = 10,000 australs. For nearly a decade the peso was pegged at parity with the US dollar, but it was devalued by nearly 30% in Jan. 2002 and floated in Feb. 2002. There was deflation in 2000 of 0·9% and 2001 of 1·1%, but in early 2002 there was high inflation. Gold reserves were 9,000 troy oz in June 2002 (4·4m. troy oz in 1995); foreign exchange reserves were US$9,621m. (US$20,780m. in June 2001). Total money supply was 15,701m. pesos in Dec. 2001.

Budget. The financial year commences on 1 Jan.

Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. pesos):

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Expenditure	44,697·0	45,930·4	48,056·6	48,224·7

Performance. The economy grew in 1998 by 3·8% but shrank by 3·4% and 0·5% in 1999 and 2000 respectively, mainly as a result of the recession in Brazil, which started in 1998, and the devaluation of the Brazilian real in Jan. 1999. In 2001 the economy contracted by 4·5%. As Argentina's economic crisis worsened, in the first quarter of 2002 the economy contracted by 16·3%. Total GDP was US$268·8bn. in 2001. In March 2001 the economy minister, José Luis Machinea, resigned after a turbulent 15 months in which he had failed to revive a stagnant economy. As the economic situation deteriorated Argentina had a further five economy ministers in the space of just over a year. In Nov. 2001 the government tried to persuade creditors to accept a restructuring of the US$132bn. public debt, but on 23 Dec. 2001 interim President Adolfo Rodríguez Saá announced that Argentina would default on the debt payments—the biggest debt default in history. One in five Argentines now live in extreme poverty and more than half the population lives below the official poverty line.

Banking and Finance. In 2000 there were 15 government banks, 74 private banks and 24 other financial institutions. The total assets of the Argentine Central Bank (BCRA) in Feb. 2001 were 41·90bn. pesos. The President of the Central Bank is Alfonso de Prat-Gay. In early 2002 banks and financial markets were temporarily closed as an emergency measure in response to the economic crisis that made the country virtually bankrupt.

There is a stock exchange at Buenos Aires. Some analysts predict that it may close down before long, with activity in 2000 at its lowest level since the late 1980s.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legal.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Argentina's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·8 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Electric power production (1999) was 78,493m. kWh (7,106m. kWh nuclear). In 2001 there were two nuclear reactors. Installed capacity in 1998 was 21·76m. kW; consumption per capita was 1,891 kWh. The electricity market is almost entirely under private ownership, much of it in foreign hands.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production (2000) was 44·68m. cu. metres. Reserves were estimated at some 2·7bn. bbls in 1999. The oil industry was privatized in 1993.

Natural gas extraction in 2000 was 44,870m. cu. metres. Reserves were about 775,500m. cu. metres in 2000. The main area in production is the Neuquen basin in western Argentina, with over 40% of the total oil reserves and nearly half the gas reserves. Natural gas accounts for approximately 45% of all the energy consumed in Argentina.

Minerals. An estimated 250,000 tonnes of hard coal were produced in 1997. Other minerals (with estimated production in 2000) include clays (2·3m. tonnes), salt (1m. tonnes), borates (580,000 tonnes), bentonite (122,000 tonnes), zinc (33,761 tonnes of metal), lead (14,115 tonnes of metal), iron ore (3,388 tonnes of metal in 1996), beryllium (10 tonnes of metal), silver (78,271 kg), gold (25,954 kg), granite, marble and tungsten. Production from the US$1·1bn. Alumbrera copper and gold mine, the country's biggest mining project, in Catamarca province in the northwest, started in late 1997. In 1993 the mining laws were reformed and state regulation was swept away creating a more stable tax regime for investors. In Dec. 1997 Argentina and Chile signed a treaty laying the legal and tax framework for mining operations straddling the 5,000 km border, allowing mining products to be transported out through both countries.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 25·0m. ha of arable land and 2·2m. ha of permanent crops. The agricultural population was 3·82m. in 1995, of whom 1·49m. were economically active. 1·25m. ha were irrigated in 1998.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 48,674,400; sheep, 13,703,400; goats, 3,490,200. In 1998 there were 3,341,652 pigs and 1,994,241 horses. In 1997 wool production was 45,120 tonnes; milk (in 2000, provisional), 9,658m. litres; eggs (in 2000, provisional), 484m. dozen.

Crop production (in 1,000 tonnes) in 1999–2000, provisional: soybeans, 20,207; sugarcane, 18,193 (1998–99); maize, 16,817; wheat, 15,303; sunflower seed, 6,098; potatoes, 3,412 (1997–98). Cotton, vine, citrus fruit, olives and yerba maté (Paraguayan tea) are also cultivated. Wine is fast becoming a major product. Argentina is the world's leading producer of sunflower seeds, and is now the fifth largest wine producer after Italy, France, Spain and the USA; the value of wine exports has grown from US$19m. in 1995 to a predicted US$200m. in 2000.

Forestry. The woodland area was 44,975,115 ha in 1994. Production in 1999 (preliminary) included 1·82m. cu. metres of sawn wood, 5·58m. tonnes of round logs, 1·01m. tonnes of paper and cardboard, 382,000 cu. metres of chipboard. Timber production totalled 5·74m. cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. Fish landings in 2000 amounted to 917,725 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing. Hake and squid are the most common catches.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Argentina, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: YPF SA (23bn. pesos), an integrated oil company; Siderca SAIC (6bn. pesos), a manufacturer of steel pipe for the energy industry; Pecom Energía SA (5bn. pesos), an energy conglomerate.

Production (2000 in tonnes): Portland cement, 6,114,000; crude steel, 4,472,000; crude iron, 3,605,000; sugar, 1,462,000; paper, 1,214,000; polyethylene, 286,500; primary aluminium, 261,895; synthetic rubber, 54,402; distillate oil, 10,394,000 (1997); petrol, 4,815,000 (1997); residual fuel oil, 2,555,000 (1997); jet fuel, 1,235,000 (1997). Motor vehicles produced in 2000 totalled 238,706; tyres, 8,519,000; motorcycles, 20,537.

Labour. In 2000 the economically active population totalled 9·72m.; there were 1·46m. unemployed in 2000. The unemployment rate, which had been 18·4% in 1995, was down to 11·0% of the workforce in 1998, but had risen to 19·0% by Dec. 2001.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$146,172m. in 2000 (the fifth highest in the world).

Imports and Exports. Foreign trade (in US$1m.):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports	20,122	23,762	30,450	31,377	25,508	23,851
Exports	20,963	23,811	26,431	26,434	23,309	26,409

Principal exports in 2000 (in US$1m., provisional) were food products and live animals (8,404); fuels, mineral lubricants and related products (4,678); animal and vegetable oils (3,173); machinery and transportation equipment (3,107); and manufactured goods (2,982).

Principal imports in 2000 (in US$1m., provisional) were machinery and transportation equipment (9,005); manufactured goods (5,518); food products and live animals (4,928); and chemical products (4,025).

In 2000 imports (in US$1m.) were mainly from Brazil (6,443); USA (4,785); Germany (1,262); China, including Hong Kong (1,222); Italy (1,014); and Japan (1,006). Exports went mainly to Brazil (6,990); USA (3,156); Chile (2,670); Spain (915); China, including Hong Kong (884); and Uruguay (808).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 38,371 km of motorways and national and provincial highways. The four main roads constituting Argentina's portion of the Pan-American Highway were opened in 1942. Vehicles in use in 1997 totalled 6,280,650, of which 4,901,600 were passenger cars, 1,338,400 trucks and vans, and 40,650 buses and coaches. In 2000, 3,686 people were killed in road accidents. In 2000, 352,641 new vehicles were registered.

Rail. Much of the 33,000 km state-owned network (on 1,000 mm, 1,435 mm and 1,676 mm gauges; 210 km electrified) was privatized in 1993–94. 30-year concessions were awarded to five freight operators; long-distance passenger services are run by contractors to the requirements of local authorities. Metro, light rail and suburban railway services are also operated by concessionaires.

In 2000 railways carried 16,265,000 tonnes of freight and 480,150,000 passengers.

The metro and light rail network in Buenos Aires extends to 46 km.

Civil Aviation. The main international airports are Buenos Aires Aeroparque, which handled 7,038,000 passengers in 2000, and Buenos Aires Ezeiza, which handled 5,690,600 passengers in 2000. The national carrier, Aerolíneas Argentinas, is 15% state-owned.

In 2000 a total of 13·63m. passengers and 203,606 tonnes of freight were carried on domestic and international airlines. In 1998 Aerolíneas Argentinas flew 83·2m. km, carrying 4,024,600 passengers (2,060,000 on international flights).

Shipping. The merchant shipping fleet totalled 499,000 GRT in 1998, including oil tankers totalling 102,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. The telephone service Entel was privatized in 1990. The sell-off split Argentina into two monopolies, operated by Telefonica Internacional de España, and a holding controlled by France Telecom and Telecom Italia. In Nov. 2000 the industry was opened to unrestricted competition. The number of lines in service in 2000 totalled 7,894,200 (213·2 per 1,000 inhabitants). There are two independent cellular operators; mobile phone subscribers numbered 4,434,000 in 1999. There were 1,900,000 PCs in use in 2000 (51·3 per 1,000 persons) and 70,000 fax machines in 1997. Argentina had 3·88m. Internet users in July 2001.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 5,676 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by federal and provincial courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or those in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The chief federal court is the Supreme Court, with five judges whose appointment is approved by the Senate. Other federal courts are the appeal courts, at Buenos Aires, Bahía Blanca, La Plata, Córdoba, Mendoza, Tucumán and Resistencia. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so designated) and several minor chambers. The death penalty was re-introduced in 1976 for the killing of government, military police and judicial officials, and for participation in terrorist activities. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 43,174 (120 per 100,000 of national population). In 1997 there were 816,340 crimes reported; and in 2000, 18,377 guilty verdicts were passed.

The police force is centralized under the Federal Security Council.

Religion. The Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State; affiliation numbered 31·06m. in 1997. In Feb. 2001 there were four Cardinals. There were 2·66m. Protestants of various denominations in 1997 and 520,000 Muslims. There were 275,000 Latter-day Saints (Mormons) in 1998.

Education. Adult literacy was 96·7% in 1999 (males, 96·8%; females, 96·7%). In 1999, 1,180,733 children attended pre-school institutions, 6,595,923 were in basic general education, 1,294,666 in 'multimodal' secondary schooling and 391,010 in higher non-universities.

In 1996, in the public sector, there were 33 universities; one technical university; and university institutes of aeronautics, military studies, naval and maritime studies and police studies. In the private sector, there were 15 universities; 7 Roman Catholic universities; 1 Adventist university; universities of business administration, business and social science, the cinema, notarial studies, social studies, and theology; and university institutes of biomedical science, health and the merchant navy. In 1999 there were 994,788 students attending public universities and 171,783 private universities. In 1996 there was a total of 128,478 academic staff.

In 1997 total expenditure on education came to 3·5% of GNP and 12·6% of total government spending.

Health. Free medical attention is obtainable from public hospitals. In 1999 there were 7,428 public health care institutions which had an average of 76,363 available beds.

Welfare. Until the end of 1996 trade unions had a monopoly in the handling of the compulsory social security contributions of employees, but private insurance agencies are now permitted to function alongside them.

Unique Social Security System Expenditure (in 1m. pesos):

	1999	2000
Retirement and pensions	17,508	17,386
Healthcare assistance and other forms of social insurance	5,249	5,440
Family allowances	1,879	1,920

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

According to tradition, the kingdom was founded in the region of Lake Van by Haig, or Haik, a descendant of Noah. Historically, the region and former kingdom that was Greater Armenia lay east of the Euphrates River; Little, or Lesser, Armenia was west of the river. In 189 BC the Armenians split away from the Syrians to found a native dynasty, the Artashesids. The imperialistic ambitions of King Tigranes led to war with Rome and defeated Armenia became a tributary kingdom. In the 3rd century AD it was overrun by Sassanian Persia. Armenia was the first country to adopt Christianity as its state religion, in the early 4th century. The persecution of Christians under Persian rule created martyrs and kindled nationalism among the Armenians, particularly after the partition (387) of the kingdom between Persia and Rome. However, because of its strategic location, attempts at independence were short-lived, as Armenia was the constant prey of the Persians, Byzantines and Arabs, and later of the Turkish and Russian Empires.

In the early part of the 20th century the Armenians under Turkish rule suffered brutal persecution. An estimated 1·75m. were massacred or deported to present-day Syria from their homeland in Anatolia. Armenia enjoyed a brief period of independence after the First World War but in 1920 the country was proclaimed a Soviet Socialist Republic. After the collapse of Communism, 99% of voters supported a breakaway from the Soviet Union. A declaration of independence in Sept. 1991 was followed by presidential elections after which President Ter-Petrosyan came to an agreement on economic co-operation with the other Soviet republics and joined the CIS. A new constitution adopted in July 1995 led to National Assembly elections. President Ter-Petrosyan was re-elected in Sept. 1996. OSCE observers noted ‘very serious irregularities’ in the conduct of the election and there were demonstrations of protest in Yerevan, leading to several deaths.

Hostilities with Azerbaijan over the enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh were brought to an end with a 1994 ceasefire. Resigning over Nagorno-Karabakh in Feb. 1998, President Ter-Petrosyan was succeeded by Robert Kocharyan, who was sworn in as president in April 1998. On 27 Oct. 1999, five men burst into the parliamentary chamber, killing the Prime Minister, Vazgen Sarkisian, and seven other officials. Aram Sarkisian, brother of the slain prime minister, was named as his successor. In April 2001 a first round of high-level talks on the settlement of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict was held in Florida. Armenia and Azerbaijan have agreed to continue talks in principle, without specifying when.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Armenia covers an area of 29,743 sq. km (11,484 sq. miles). It is bounded in the north by Georgia, in the east by Azerbaijan and in the south and west by Turkey and Iran.

The population in 2001 was estimated at 3,802,400 (1,848,500 males; 1,953,900 females), of which 2,532,400 (66·6%) lived in urban areas; population density is 128 per sq. km. Armenians account for 97%, Kurds 1·6% and Russians 0.8%—in 1989, 2·6% of the population were Azeris, prior to the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 3·81m.

According to the Second Armenia-Diaspora Conference in May 2002 there are approximately 10m. Armenians worldwide.

The capital is Yerevan (1·25m. population in 2000). Other large towns are Gyumri (formerly Leninakan) (211,600 in 2000) and Vanadzor (formerly Kirovakan) (172,500 in 2000).

The official language is Armenian.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The head of state is the President, directly elected for five-year terms. Parliament is a 190-member National Assembly, of which 150 members are directly elected on a first-past-the-post system, and 40 by proportional representation, distributed among those parties gaining more than 5% of votes cast. The government is nominated by the President.

National Anthem. 'Mer Hayrenik azat, ankakh' ('Land of our fathers, free and independent'); words by M. Nalbandyan, tune by B. Kanachyan.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In presidential elections held on 19 Feb. 2003 incumbent president Robert Kocharian received 48·3% of votes cast, ahead of Stepan Demirchyan with 27·4% and Artashes Geghamyan 16·9%. Turn-out was 61·2%. The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe said that the election process 'fell short of international standards in several key respects'. In the run-off on 5 March 2003 between the two leading candidates Robert Kocharian won 67·5% of the vote against 32·5% for Stepan Demirchyan. Again observers claimed the elections failed to meet international standards for a democratic poll.

Parliamentary elections were held on 30 May 1999. The Miasnutyun (Unity) alliance won 55 of the 131 seats available with 41·2% of the vote. The Communists (HKK) were second with 11 seats and 12·1% of the vote.

DEFENCE

There is conscription for 18 months. Paramilitary forces at the disposal of the Ministry of the Interior are estimated at 30,000.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$149m. (US$42 per capita), representing 8·0% of GDP.

Army. Current troop levels are 52,000 including a special forces regiment and an independent helicopter squadron. There are approximately 300,000 Armenians who have received some kind of military service experience within the last 15 years. The Defence Ministry is aiming for a standing army of 70,000.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

There is a dispute over the mainly Armenian-populated enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, which lies within Azerbaijan's borders—Armenia and Azerbaijan are technically still at war.

Armenia is a member of the UN, NATO Partnership for Peace, Council of Europe, CIS, OSCE, BSE and the IOM. It is the biggest recipient of US government aid, per head of population, after Israel.

ECONOMY

In 2000 agriculture contributed 30·8% of GDP, industry 19·9% and services 42·2%. Net taxes made up the remaining 7·1%.

Overview. A privatization scheme was launched on 1 March 1995 under the auspices of a Privatization Commission.

Currency. In Nov. 1993 a new currency unit, the dram (AMD) of 100 lumma, was introduced to replace the rouble. Inflation, which had been 5,273% in 1994, was just 3·2% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$323m. in June 2002, gold reserves were 28,000 troy oz and total money supply was 74,904m. drams.

Budget. In 2000 total revenue was 172,132·8m. drams and total expenditure 222,886·4m. drams.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·3% in 1999, 6·0% in 2000 and 9·6% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$2·0bn.

Banking and Finance. The Chairman of the Central Bank (founded in 1993) is Tigran Sargsyan. In 1997 there were 33 commercial banks (one state-owned).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Armenia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Output of electricity in 2000 was 5,567m. kWh. Capacity was 3m. kW in 1997. Consumption per capita was 1,464 kWh in 2000. A nuclear plant closed in 1989 was re-opened in 1995 because of the blockade of the electricity supply by Azerbaijan; it was anticipated that domestic supply would be raised from four to 12 hours daily.

Minerals. There are deposits of copper, zinc, aluminium, molybdenum, marble, gold and granite.

Agriculture. The chief agricultural area is the valley of the Arax and the area round Yerevan. Here there are cotton plantations, orchards and vineyards. Almonds, olives and figs are also grown. In the mountainous areas the chief pursuit is livestock raising. In 1998 there were 494,000 ha of arable land and 65,000 ha of permanent crops. Major agricultural production (in tonnes in 2000): potatoes, 290,300; wheat, 177,800; tomatoes, 143,700; grapes, 115,800; barley, 32,900. Livestock (2000): cattle, 497,306; sheep, 539,992; pigs, 68,912; horses, 11,400; chickens, 4m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 334,000 ha, or 11·8% of the total land area (10·4% in 1990). Timber production in 1998 was 36,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catch in 2000 came to an estimated 389 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Among the chief industries are chemicals, producing mainly synthetic rubber and fertilizers, the extraction and processing of building materials, ginning- and textile-mills, carpet weaving and food processing, including wine-making.

Labour. In 2000 the population of working age was 2·35m., of whom 1·3m. were employed: 44% in agriculture, 14% in industry. The registered unemployment rate was 11·7% of the workforce in 2000 (11·5% in 1999). The official average monthly salary in Jan. 2001 was 20,612 drams.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$898m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Exports	290·3	232·5	229·5	231·7	300·5

The main import suppliers in 2000 were Russia (14·9%), USA (11·6%), Belgium (9·5%) and Iran (9·4%). Principal export markets were Belgium (25·2%), Russia (15·0%), USA (12·7%) and Iran (9·3%). Cut diamonds and jewellery from precious metals and stones account for 45% of Armenia's exports, non-precious metals 15% and mineral products 13%. Foodstuffs account for 26% of Armenia's imports, mineral products 19%, and equipment and machinery 15%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 12,072 km of road network in 2000. There were also 7,527 km of motorway. In 1996 there were 5,760 passenger cars, buses, coaches, lorries and vans as well as 7,200 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 316 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Rail. Total length in 2000 was 711 km of 1,000 mm gauge. Passenger-km travelled in 2000 came to 52m. and freight tonne-km to 354m.

There is a tramway in Yerevan.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Yerevan (Zvartnots). The state-owned Armenian Airlines has been operational since 1995. In 1998 it operated services to Adler/Sochi, Aleppo, Amman, Amsterdam, Anapa, Ashgabat, Athens, Beirut, Delhi, Dubai, Ekaterinburg, Istanbul, Kharkiv, Krasnodar, Kyiv, London, Milan, Mineralnye Vody, Moscow, Nizhny Novgorod, Novosibirsk, Odesa, Paris, Rostov, St Petersburg, Samara, Saratov, Simferopol, Sofia, Stavropol, Tashkent, Tbilisi, Tehran, Vladikavkaz and Volgograd. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Armenian-based carriers flew 8·2m. km, carrying 343,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Telecommunications. Telephone main lines numbered 527,000 in 2000 (138·6 per 1,000 inhabitants) and there were 25,000 PCs in use (7·1 for every 1,000 persons). In 1996 there were 350 fax machines. Armenia had 17,400 mobile phone subscribers in Dec. 1998 and 30,000 Internet users in July 2000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2000, 12,048 crimes were reported, including 127 murders or attempted murders. The population in penal institutions in Feb. 2000 was 6,789 (178 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Armenia adopted Christianity in AD 301, thus becoming the first Christian nation in the world. The Armenian Apostolic Church is headed by its Catholicos (Karekin II, b. 1932) whose seat is at Etchmiadzin, and who is head of all the Armenian (Gregorian) communities throughout the world. In 1995 it numbered 7m. adherents (4m. in diaspora). The Catholicos is elected by representatives of parishes. The Catholicos of the diaspora is Kachechyan of Cilicia, with seat at Antelias. In 1997, 70% of the population belonged to the Armenian Apostolic Church.

Education. Armenia's literacy rate was 98·3% in 1999 (99·2% among males and 97·5% among females). At the end of 2000, 46,300 children (17% of those eligible) attended pre-school institutions. In 2000–01 there were 176,302 pupils in primary schools (and 13,620 teachers in 1996–97) and 292,368 pupils in secondary schools. In 2000–01 there were 25 technical colleges with 26,870 students and 19 higher educational institutions with 43,615 students. Yerevan houses the National Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Armenia (NAS RA), 43 scientific institutes, a medical institute and other technical colleges, and a state university. NAS RA is composed of more than 50 institutions and organizations with a staff of 4,500.

In 2000–01 there were seven universities (including the Yerevan State University and the American University), with 22,400 students, out of a total of 19 public higher education establishments.

Health. In 2000 there were some 12,270 doctors, 22,672 junior medical personnel and 146 hospitals with 20,795 beds.

Welfare. In 2000 there were 501,711 old age, and 58,371 other, pensioners.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-owned Armenian Radio broadcasts two national programmes and relays of Radio Moscow and Voice of America, and a foreign service, Radio Yerevan (Armenian, English, French, Spanish, Arabic, Kurdish, Russian). Television broadcasting is by the state-controlled Armenian Television (colour by SECAM H). In 1997 there were 825,000 TV receivers and 850,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. 3 full-length films were made in 1995.

Press. In 2000 there were 91 daily publications.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 41,000 foreign tourists bringing in receipts of US$27m.

Libraries. There were 1,138 libraries in 2000, which lent 5·1m. items.

Theatre and Opera. 360,000 people attended 21 theatres in 2000.

Museums and Galleries. In 2000 there were 93 museums with 874,100 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Various dates are given for the discovery of Australia, including 1522 in which year it was sighted by Magellan's followers. Capt. Cook discovered the east coast in 1770 and initially the British planned to establish a colony there; instead, however, the government decided to set up a penal settlement.

The appointment of Lachlan Macquarie as Governor in 1809 began a period of development in which Australia ceased primarily to be a penal settlement. The crossing of the Blue Mountains in 1813 was the first of many expeditions which led to discovery and use of vast areas of good grazing land.

On 1 Jan. 1901 the six separately constituted colonies of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania were federated under the name of the Commonwealth of Australia, the designation of 'colonies' being at the same time changed into that of 'states'—except in the case of Northern Territory which was transferred from South Australia to the Commonwealth as a 'territory' on 1 Jan. 1911.

In 1911 the Commonwealth acquired from the State of New South Wales the Canberra site for the Australian capital. Building began in 1923 and a Federal Parliament was opened at Canberra in 1927.

Since the Second World War, Australia has played an increasingly important role in Asia and the Pacific. For much of this period central government has been in the hands of the Liberal–National Party coalition, including 23 years consecutively between 1949 and 1972. The Australian Labor Party (ALP) has held power for some 20 years in three spells since 1945 and during its third period of rule, between 1983 and 1996, shifted its stance on state control and economic planning to allow for an ambitious programme of privatization. In March 1986 the Australia Act abolished the remaining legislative, executive and judicial controls of the British Parliament.

A referendum to decide whether Australia should become a republic was held on 6 Nov. 1999. 54·87% of votes cast were in favour of remaining a monarchy with Queen Elizabeth II as head of state, against 45·13% in favour of a republic with a president chosen by parliament.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Australia, excluding external territories, covers an estimated land area of 7,692,030 sq. km, extending from Cape York (10° 41' S) in the north some 3,680 km to South East Cape, Tasmania (43° 39' S), and from Cape Byron, New South Wales (153° 39' E) in the east some 4,000 km west to Steep Point, Western Australia (113° 9' E). External territories under the administration of Australia comprise the Ashmore and Cartier Islands, Australian Antarctic Territory, Christmas Island, the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the Coral Sea Islands, the Heard and McDonald Islands and Norfolk Island. For these see below.

Growth in census population has been:

1901	3,774,310	1966	11,599,498	1986	15,763,000
1911	4,455,005	1971	12,755,638	1991	16,852,258
1921	5,435,734	1976	13,915,500	1996	17,892,423
1947	7,579,358	1981	15,053,600	2001	18,972,350
1961	10,508,186

Of the 2001 census population, 9,618,981 were females.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 21·03m.

At the census in 1996 density was 2·3 per sq. km. In 1999, 84·7% of the population lived in urban areas.

Areas and populations of the States and Territories at the 1996 census:

States and Territories	Area (sq. km)	Population	Per sq. km
New South Wales (NSW)	800,640	6,038,696	7·6
Victoria (Vic.)	227,420	4,373,520	19·2
Queensland (Qld.)	1,730,650	3,368,850	1·9
South Australia (SA)	983,480	1,427,936	1·4
Western Australia (WA)	2,529,880	1,726,095	0·7
Tasmania (Tas.)	68,400	459,659	6·7
Northern Territory (NT)	1,349,130	195,101	0·1
Australian Capital Territory (ACT)	2,360	299,243	126·8

Population at 31 Dec. 2001: New South Wales, 6,642,900; Victoria, 4,854,100; Queensland, 3,670,500; South Australia, 1,518,900; Western Australia, 1,918,800; Tasmania, 473,300; Northern Territory, 199,900; Australian Capital Territory, 322,600.

Resident population (estimate) in capitals and other statistical districts with more than 150,000 population at 30 June 2000:

Capital	State	Population	Capital	State	Population
Canberra	ACT	310,500	Darwin	NT	90,000
Sydney	NSW	4,085,600	Statistical district
Melbourne	Vic.	3,466,000	Newcastle	NSW	483,300
Brisbane	Qld.	1,626,900	Wollongong	NSW	264,400
Adelaide	SA	1,096,100	Gold Coast[1]	Qld.	404,300
Perth	WA	1,381,100	Geelong	Vic.	157,900
Hobart	Tas.	194,200	Sunshine Coast[2]	Qld.	178,000

The median age of the 2001 census population was 35 years.

Australians born overseas (census 2001), 4,105,444, of whom 1,036,245 (5·5%) were from the UK. In 1998 it was estimated that 23·4% of the population was born overseas.

Aboriginals have been included in population statistics only since 1967. At the 2001 census 410,003 people identified themselves as being of indigenous origin (2·2% of the total population). A 1992 High Court ruling that the Meriam people of the Murray Islands had land rights before the European settlement reversed the previous assumption that Australia was terra nullius before that settlement. The Native Title Act setting up a system for deciding claims by Aborigines came into effect on 1 Jan. 1994.

Overseas arrivals and departures:

	Settler arrival numbers[1]	Permanent departure numbers	Net permanent migration
1995–96	99,100	28,600	70,500
1996–97	85,800	29,900	55,900
1997–98	77,300	32,000	45,300
1998–99	84,100	35,200	49,000

[1]Equals the total number of people entitled to permanent residence actually arriving.

Under the Migration Program, the planning level for 1998–99 was 68,000. The Migration Act of Dec. 1989 sought to curb illegal entry and ensure that annual immigrant intakes were met but not exceeded. Provisions for temporary visitors to become permanent were restricted. According to the 1996 census, 68% of the population born overseas have become Australian citizens.

The national language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 76·2 years for males and 81·8 years for females. A World Health Organization report published in June 2000 put Australians in second place in a 'healthy life expectancy' list, with an expected 73·2 years of healthy life for babies born in 1999.

Statistics for years ended 30 June:

	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Divorces
1997	252,718	128,428	106,701	51,334
1998	249,726	127,270	110,392	51,603
1999	249,282	127,200	114,300	52,600
2000	249,600	128,100	113,400	49,900

In 2000 the median age for marrying was 30 years for males and 28 for females. Infant mortality, 1999, was 5·7 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2000, 1·8 births per woman.

Suicide rates (per 100,000 population, 1997): 14·6 (men, 23·4; women, 6·1).

CLIMATE

Over most of the continent, four seasons may be recognized. Spring is from Sept. to Nov., summer from Dec. to Feb., autumn from March to May and winter from June to Aug., but because of its great size there are climates that range from tropical monsoon to cool temperate, with large areas of desert as well. In northern Australia there are only two seasons, the wet one lasting from Nov. to March, but rainfall amounts diminish markedly from the coast to the interior. Central and southern Queensland are subtropical, north and central New South Wales are warm temperate, as are parts of Victoria, Western Australia and Tasmania, where most rain falls in winter. Canberra, Jan. 68°F (20°C), July 42°F (5·6°C). Annual rainfall 25" (635 mm). Adelaide, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 52°F (11·1°C). Annual rainfall 21" (528 mm). Brisbane, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 58°F (14·4°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,153 mm). Darwin, Jan. 83°F (28·3°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,536 mm). Hobart, Jan. 62°F (16·7°C), July 46°F (7·8°C). Annual rainfall 23" (584 mm). Melbourne, Jan. 67°F (19·4°C), July 49°F (9·4°C). Annual rainfall 26" (659 mm). Perth, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 55°F (12·8°C). Annual rainfall 35" (873 mm). Sydney, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 53°F (11·7°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,215 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Federal Government. Under the Constitution legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the Queen, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate and a House of Representatives. Under the terms of the constitution there must be a session of parliament at least once a year.

The Senate (Upper House) comprises 76 Senators (12 for each State voting as one electorate and, as from Aug. 1974, 2 Senators respectively for the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory). Senators representing the States are chosen for six years. The terms of Senators representing the Territories expire at the close of the day next preceding the polling day for the general elections of the House of Representatives. In general, the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-half every three years, but in case of disagreement with the House of Representatives, it, together with the House of Representatives, may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. Elections to the Senate are on the single transferable vote system; voters list candidates in order of preference. A candidate must reach a quota to be elected, otherwise the lowest-placed candidate drops out and his or her votes are transferred to other candidates.

The House of Representatives (Lower House) consists, as nearly as practicable, of twice as many Members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several States being in proportion to population as shown by the latest statistics, but not less than 5 for any original State. The 148 membership is made up as follows: New South Wales, 50; Victoria, 37; Queensland, 26; South Australia, 12; Western Australia, 14; Tasmania, 5; ACT, 3; Northern Territory, 1. Elections to the House of Representatives are on the alternative vote system; voters list candidates in order of preference, and if no one candidate wins an overall majority, the lowest-placed drops out and his or her votes are transferred. The Northern Territory has been represented by one Member in the House of Representatives since 1922; the Australian Capital Territory by one Member since 1949 and two Members since May 1974. The Member for the Australian Capital Territory was given full voting rights as from the Parliament elected in Nov. 1966. The Member for the Northern Territory was given full voting rights in 1968. The House of Representatives continues for three years from the date of its first meeting, unless sooner dissolved.

Every Senator or Member of the House of Representatives must be a subject of the Queen, be of full age, possess electoral qualifications and have resided for three years within Australia. The franchise for both Houses is the same and is based on universal (males and females aged 18 years) suffrage. Compulsory voting was introduced in 1925. If a Member of a State Parliament wishes to be a candidate in a federal election, he must first resign his State seat.

Executive power is vested in the Governor-General, advised by an Executive Council. The Governor-General presides over the Council, and its members hold office at his pleasure. All Ministers of State, who are members of the party or parties commanding a majority in the lower House, are members of the Executive Council under summons. A record of proceedings of meetings is kept by the Secretary to the Council. At Executive Council meetings the decisions of the Cabinet are (where necessary) given legal form, appointments made, resignations accepted, proclamations, regulations and the like made.

The policy of a ministry is, in practice, determined by the Ministers of State meeting without the Governor-General under the chairmanship of the Prime Minister. This group is known as the Cabinet. There are 11 Standing Committees of the Cabinet comprising varying numbers of Cabinet and non-Cabinet Ministers. In Labour governments all Ministers have been members of Cabinet; in Liberal and National Country Party governments, only the senior ministers. Cabinet meetings are private and deliberative, and records of meetings are not made public. The Cabinet does not form part of the legal mechanisms of government; the decisions it takes have, in themselves, no legal effect. The Cabinet substantially controls, in ordinary circumstances, not only the general legislative programme of Parliament but the whole course of Parliamentary proceedings. In effect, though not in form, the Cabinet, by reason of the fact that all Ministers are members of the Executive Council, is also the dominant element in the executive government of the country.

The legislative powers of the Federal Parliament embrace trade and commerce, shipping, etc.; taxation, finance, banking, currency, bills of exchange, bankruptcy, insurance, defence, external affairs, naturalization and aliens, quarantine, immigration and emigration; the people of any race for whom it is deemed necessary to make special laws; postal, telegraph and like services; census and statistics; weights and measures; astronomical and meteorological observations; copyrights; railways; conciliation and arbitration in disputes extending beyond the limits of any one State; social services; marriage, divorce, etc.; service and execution of the civil and criminal process; recognition of the laws, Acts and records, and judicial proceedings of the States. The Senate may not originate or amend money bills. Disagreement with the House of Representatives may result in dissolution and, in the last resort, a joint sitting of the two Houses. The Federal Parliament has limited and enumerated powers, the several State parliaments retaining the residuary power of government over their respective territories. If a State law is inconsistent with a Commonwealth law, the latter prevails.

The Constitution also provides for the admission or creation of new States. Proposed laws for the alteration of the Constitution must be submitted to the electors, and they can be enacted only if approved by a majority of the States and by a majority of all the electors voting.

The Australia Acts 1986 removed residual powers of the British government to intervene in the government of Australia or the individual states.

In Feb. 1998 an Australian Constitutional Convention voted for Australia to become a republic. In a national referendum, held on 6 Nov. 1999, 54·87% voted against Australia becoming a republic.

State Government. In each of the six States (New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania) there is a State government whose constitution, powers and laws continue, subject to changes embodied in the Australian Constitution and subsequent alterations and agreements, as they were before federation. The system of government is basically the same as that described above for the Commonwealth—i.e., the Sovereign, her representative (in this case a Governor), an upper and lower house of Parliament (except in Queensland, where the upper house was abolished in 1922), a cabinet led by the Premier and an Executive Council. Among the more important functions of the State governments are those relating to education, health, hospitals and charities, law, order and public safety, business undertakings such as railways and tramways, and public utilities such as water supply and sewerage. In the domains of education, hospitals, justice, the police, penal establishments, and railway and tramway operation, State government activity predominates. Care of the public health and recreative activities are shared with local government authorities and the Federal government; social services other than those referred to above are now primarily the concern of the Federal government; the operation of public utilities is shared with local and semi-government authorities.

Administration of Territories. Since 1911 responsibility for administration and development of the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) has been vested in Federal Ministers and Departments. The ACT became self-governing on 11 May 1989. The ACT House of Assembly has been accorded the forms of a legislature, but continues to perform an advisory function for the Minister for the Capital Territory.

On 1 July 1978 the Northern Territory of Australia became a self-governing Territory with expenditure responsibilities and revenue-raising powers broadly approximating those of a State.

National Anthem. 'Advance Australia Fair' (adopted 19 April 1984; words and tune by P. D. McCormick). The 'Royal Anthem' (i.e. 'God Save the Queen') is used in the presence of the British Royal Family.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The 40th Parliament was elected on 10 Nov. 2001.

House of Representatives. Liberal Party (LP), 68 seats and 37·1% of votes cast; Australian Labor Party (ALP), 65 seats but 37·8% of votes cast; National Party of Australia (NP), 13 (3·6%); Northern Territory Country Liberal Party, 1; independents and others, 3.

Senate. Following elections of 10 Nov. 2001 the make-up of the Senate was Liberal Party, 31; Australian Labor Party, 28; Australian Democratic Party, 8; National Party of Australia, 3; Greens, 2, Northern Territory Country Liberal Party, 1; One Nation, 1; Country Labor Party, 1; ind., 1.

DEFENCE

The Minister for Defence has responsibility under legislation for the control and administration of the Defence Force. The Chief of Defence Force Staff is vested with command of the Defence Force. He is the principal military adviser to the Minister. The Chief of Naval Staff, the Chief of the General Staff and the Chief of the Air Staff command the Navy, Army and Air Force respectively. They have delegated authority from the Chief of Defence Force Staff and the Secretary to administer matters relating to their particular Service.

2001 defence expenditure was US$6,752m., amounting to US$350 per capita and representing 1·9% of GDP (which, along with 1999 and 2000, was the lowest proportion since 1939).

Army. The strength of the Army was 25,150, including 2,500 women, in 2002. The effective strength of the Army Reserve was 16,200.

Women have been eligible for combat duties since 1993.

Navy. The all-volunteer Navy in 2002 was 12,750 including 990 in the Fleet Air Arm and 1,900 women. The Fleet included 6 diesel-powered submarines and 9 frigates.

The fleet main base is at Sydney, with subsidiary bases at Cockburn Sound (Western Australia), Cairns and Darwin.

Air Force. The Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) operated 156 combat aircraft including 35 F-111 and 71 F-18 'Hornets' in 2002. Personnel numbered 13,200, including 1,964 women. There is also an Australian Air Force Reserve, 2,000-strong.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Australia is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the Commonwealth, OECD, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, APEC, IOM, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Pacific Community and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

In 1999–2000 service industries accounted for around 64% of GDP and goods-producing industries around 19%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Australia ranked 11th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8·6 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. Thanks to a combination of liberalization, increased competition and technological advance, the economy has changed radically in recent years. The reforms undertaken since the mid-1980s have led to a more competitive and outward-looking economy. This, together with flexible macroeconomic policies, enabled Australia to weather the Asian financial crisis. In 2000 the economy suffered from higher world energy prices and a slowing American economy. Monetary policy is expansionary. Performance in research and development suggests there are barriers to innovation. In 2001 the Backing Australia's Ability programme was launched to boost infrastructure and research funding.

Currency. On 14 Feb. 1966 Australia adopted a system of decimal currency. The currency unit, the Australian dollar (AUD), is divided into 100 cents.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$18,515m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 2·56m. troy oz. Total money supply was $A166,978m. in March 2002.

Inflation during the late 1990s remained under the Reserve Bank's 2%–3% headline inflation target, increasing by 1·2% in 1998–99, 2·4% in 1999–2000 and 6·0% in 2000–01.

Budget. In 1929, under a financial agreement between the Federal government and States, approved by a referendum, the Federal government took over all State debts existing on 30 June 1927 and agreed to pay $A15·17m. a year for 58 years towards interest charges, and to make substantial contributions towards a sinking fund on State debt. The Sinking Fund arrangements were revised under an amendment to the agreement in 1976. After 1942 the Federal government alone has levied income taxes. State expenditure was backed by federal grants.

In Aug. 1998 the Commonwealth government introduced a tax reform package including, from 2000, the introduction of a Goods and Services Tax (GST) at a 10% rate, with all the revenues going to the states in return for the abolition of a range of other indirect taxes; the abolition of Financial Assistance Grants to states; the abolition of wholesale sales tax (which is levied by the Commonwealth government); cuts in personal income tax; and increases in social security benefits, especially for families. In all, the underlying cash balance is expected to be in surplus by $A2·1bn. (0·3% of GDP) in the financial year 2002–03. In accrual terms, a fiscal deficit of $A0·5bn. (0·1% of GDP) is expected in 2002–03. The economy is forecast to grow by around 3% in 2002–03, following growth of around 4% in 2001–02.

Performance. Real domestic demand increased by 5·2% in year average terms in 1999–2000, the 9th consecutive year of growth, and 5·6% in the calendar year 1999. GDP was $A631,810m. for 1999–2000, nominal terms ($A595,417m. in 1998–99); and GDP growth was 4·3% in 1999–2000 (real terms), the 9th consecutive year of real GDP growth, averaging 3·9% per annum since 1991–92 (3·8% growth in the calendar year 2000, real terms). During much of the 1990s the real GDP growth rate, along with inflation being brought down and kept low, made the Australian economic performance one of the best in the OECD area.

Banking and Finance. From 1 July 1998 a new financial regulatory framework based on three agencies was introduced by the Australian government, following recommendations by the Financial System Inquiry. The framework included changes in the role of the Reserve Bank of Australia and creation of the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA) with responsibility for the supervision of deposit-taking institutions (comprising banks, building societies, credit unions and friendly societies), life and general insurance companies and superannuation funds. It further involved replacement of the Australian Securities Commission with the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) with responsibility for the regulation of financial services and Australia's 1·2m. companies.

The banking system comprises:

(a) The Reserve Bank of Australia is the central bank. It has two broad responsibilities—monetary policy and the maintenance of financial stability, including stability of the payments system. It also provides selected banking and registry services to Federal and State Government customers and some overseas official institutions. A wholly owned subsidiary of the Reserve Bank (Note Printing Australia Limited) manufactures Australia's currency notes (all polymer) and other security products. The Governor is a statutory appointee (present incumbent, Ian Macfarlane, appointed 1996 for a seven-year term). Within the Reserve Bank there are two Boards: the Reserve Bank Board and the Payments System Board; the Governor is the Chairman of each.

At 30 June 2001 total assets of the Reserve Bank of Australia were $A58,113m., including gold, $A1,381m., foreign exchange, $A35,786m. and Australian dollar securities, $A19,814m. Main liability items were capital and reserves, $A9,431m.; Australian notes on issue, $A27,168m.; and deposits, $A16,864m. Responsibilities derive principally from the Reserve Bank Act 1959, the Payment Systems (Regulation) Act 1998 and the Payment Systems and Netting Act 1998.

(b) Four major banks: (i) The Commonwealth Bank of Australia; (ii) the Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd; (iii) Westpac Banking Corporation; (iv) National Australia Bank.

(c) The Commonwealth Bank of Australia has two subsidiaries—Colonial State Bank and Commonwealth Development Bank. There are eight other Australian-owned banks—Adelaide Bank Ltd, AMP Bank Ltd, Bank of Queensland Ltd, Bendigo Bank Ltd, Elders Rural Bank (50% owned by Bendigo Bank Ltd), Macquarie Bank Ltd, St George Bank Ltd and Suncorp-Metway Ltd.

(d) There are 12 banks incorporated in Australia which are owned by foreign banks and 27 branches of foreign banks (these figures include four foreign banks which have both a subsidiary and a branch presence in Australia).

(e) At 30 June 2000 there were 51 authorized banks with Australian banking assets of $A730bn., with 5,000 branches and similar number of agencies, almost 11,000 ATMs and 320,000 EFTPOS terminals. As at 30 June 2000 there were 19 building societies with assets of $A13bn. and 215 credit unions with assets of $A22bn.

There is an Australian Stock Exchange (ASX) in Sydney.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Australia's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 17·7 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Australia 16th in the world, with 60·3%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Electricity supply is the responsibility of the State governments. At 30 June 1997 total installed plant capacity was 39,017m. kW; production (1999), 186,252m. kWh (15% hydro-electric). In the year ended 30 June 1999 total consumption stood at 161,762m. kWh, including 48,334m. kWh by residential customers.

Oil and Gas. The main fields are Gippsland (Vic.) and Carnarvon (WA). Crude oil and condensate production was 34,000m. litres in 1997–98; natural gas, 30,323m. cu. metres. Oil reserves in 1999 totalled 2·9bn. bbls. and natural gas reserves 1,260bn. cu. metres. Australia's most productive oilfield in 2000 was Laminaria in Northern Territory with peak production of around 180,000 bbls. and average production at Nov. 2000 of around 167,000 bbls. per day.

Minerals. Australia is the world's largest producer of bauxite (38% of total world production) and diamonds (28% of world production, mostly for industrial use). It is also the third-largest gold producer and the fifth-largest silver producer. Black coal is Australia's major source of energy. Reserves are large (1997: 95bn. recoverable tonnes) and easily worked. The main fields are in New South Wales and Queensland. Brown coal (lignite) reserves are mainly in Victoria. Coal production, 1998–99, was 225m. tonnes; lignite production, 68·6m. tonnes.

Production of other major minerals (preliminary figures) in 1999–2000 (in tonnes): aluminium, 14·9m.; manganese, 2·1m.; zinc, 1·3m.; copper concentrate, 752,000; uranium, 8,223; silver, 1,894; gold, 296. Diamond production, 1999–2000 (preliminary figure): 29·7m. carats.

Agriculture. In the year ended 30 June 2000 there were 146,371 establishments mainly engaged in agriculture, of which an estimated 12,300 farm businesses (12%) had a turnover of $A500,000 or more. Farm business turnover in 1999–2000 was estimated to total $A28·5bn. In 1999–2000 the estimated total area of land under agricultural use was 456m. ha (about 59% of total land area) with farm holdings of over 2,500 ha representing 10% of all establishments. Beef cattle farming represents the largest sector, accounting for 24% of farming establishments. Important crops (1999–2000): wheat (24·8m. tonnes from 12·2m. ha); barley (5·0m. tonnes from 2·6m. ha); oats (1·1m. tonnes from 0·58m. ha); canola (2·5m. tonnes from 1·9m. ha); grain sorghum (2·1m. tonnes from 0·62m. ha); sugarcane, 1998–99 total, (38·5m. tonnes from 0·4m. ha). In 1999–2000, 1·3m. tonnes of grapes were harvested from 140,000 ha of vines.

Livestock totals (1999–2000): beef cattle, 24·4m.; dairy cattle, 3·1m.; sheep and lambs, 118·6m.; pigs, 2·5m.; chicken for meat, 72·9m.; chicken for egg production, 12·0m. Gross value of agricultural production in 1999–2000, $A30·2bn., including (in $A1bn.) cattle and calves slaughtering, 5·1; wheat, 4·8; wool, 2·1; milk, 2·8.

Fruit and vegetable production in 1999–2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): potatoes, 1,200; oranges, 510; apples, 320; carrots, 283; bananas, 257.

Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 organic crops were grown in an area covering 1·7m. ha (the largest area of any country in the world), representing 1·4% of all farmland.

Australia is the world's leading wool producer; only China has more sheep.

Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes), 1999–2000: beef, 1,952; lamb and mutton, 680; pigmeat, 363; poultry meat, 593; veal, 36; wool, 695; milk, 10,847m. litres.

Forestry. The Federal government is responsible for forestry at the national level. Each State is responsible for the management of publicly owned forests. Estimated total native forest cover was 164·41m. ha at June 2001 (1997, 155·84m. ha), made up of (in 1,000 ha): public forest, 124,468 (112,631); privately owned, 37,299 (42,018). (The changes in area since 1997 are primarily down to improvements in mapping and do not necessarily reflect the establishment of new forests.) The major part of wood supplies derives from coniferous plantations, of which there were 972,164 ha at 30 June 2000. Australia also had 502,620 ha of hardwood plantation at that date. Timber production in 1999–2000 was 24·01m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The Australian Fishing Zone covers an area 16% larger than the Australian land mass and is the third largest fishing zone in the world, but fish production is insignificant by world standards owing to low productivity of the oceans. The major commercially exploited species are prawns, rock lobster, abalone, tuna, other fin fish, scallops, oysters and pearls. Total fisheries production in 1999–2000 came to 221,405 tonnes with a gross value of $A2·3bn. In the same year aquaculture production was 40,632 tonnes with a gross value of $A678m., which represented 30% of the total value of fisheries production.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Australia, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Telstra Corporation Ltd ($A71bn.), a telecommunications company; The News Corporation Ltd ($A68bn.); and Rio Tinto Ltd ($A54bn.), the metal and mining sister enterprise of Rio Tinto plc.

Manufacturing industries at 30 June 2000: persons employed, 933,000; salaries paid, $A35,482m.; turnover, $A231,145m. (excludes small single-establishment enterprises employing fewer than four persons).

Manufacturing by sector, 1999–2000:

	Persons Employed	Salaries in $1m.	Turnover in $A1m.
Food, beverages and tobacco	168,100	6,140	51,089
Textiles, clothing, footwear and leather products	65,300	1,895	9,337
Wood and paper products	64,800	2,276	14,060

	Persons Employed	Salaries in $1m.	Turnover in $A1m.
Printing, publishing and recording media	99,600	3,879	17,256
Chemical, petroleum, coal and associated products	97,500	4,321	36,002
Non-metallic mineral products	35,600	1,517	10,560
Metal products	144,600	5,789	41,304
Machinery and equipment	200,700	8,149	44,350
Other manufacturing	56,600	1,516	7,188

Manufactured products in 1999–2000 included: clay bricks, 1,735m.; portland cement, 7·9m. tonnes; ready-mixed concrete, 20·6m. cu. metres; basic iron, spiegeleisen and sponge iron, 6·5m. tonnes; tobacco and cigarettes, 20,688 tonnes; newsprint, 381m. tonnes; tin, 600m. tonnes; aviation turbine fuel, 5,538m. litres; beer, 1,768m. litres.

Labour. In June 2001 the total workforce (persons aged 15 and over) numbered 9,461,000 (4,169,600 females). In June 2001 there were 8,839,500 employed persons (51·8% females). In Feb. 2001 the labour force included 329,700 employers, 7,326,400 wage and salary earners and 866,900 self-employed. The majority of wage and salary earners have had their minimum wages and conditions of work prescribed in awards by the Industrial Relations Commission. In Oct. 1991 the Commission decided to allow direct employer-employee wage bargaining, provided agreements reached are endorsed by the Commission. In some States, some conditions of work (e.g., weekly hours of work, leave) are set down in State legislation. Average weekly wage, May 2001, $A662·60 (men, $A789·40; women, $A524·70). Average working week, 2000–01: 34·0 hours. Four weeks annual leave is standard. In 2000–01 part-time work accounted for 26·7% of all employment in Australia and persons born overseas made up 58·0% of the total labour force.

Employees in all States are covered by workers' compensation legislation and by certain industrial award provisions relating to work injuries.

During 2000 there were 698 industrial disputes recorded which accounted for 469,100 working days lost (28% decrease on 1999). In these disputes 325,400 workers were involved.

The following table shows the distribution of employed persons by industry in 2000–01, by sex and average weekly hours worked:

Industry	Numbers (in 1,000)		Hours worked
	Persons	(Females)	Per person	(Females)

Totals	9,074·3	(3,997·0)	35·6	(29·6)

In Feb. 2001, 1,427,500 wage and salary earners worked in the public sector and 5,898,900 in the private sector.

The following table shows the estimated distribution of employed persons in 2000–01 according to the Australian Standard Classification of Occupations (2nd edition):

	Employed persons (in 1,000)
Occupation	Persons	(Females)
Managers and administrators	653·2	(162·3)
Professionals	1,662·1	(822·8)

Occupation	Employed persons (in 1,000) Persons	(Females)
Associate professionals	1,042·5	(398·0)
Tradespersons and related workers	1,178·2	(114·1)
Advanced clerical and service workers	409·1	(361·1)

Labourers and related workers	869·9	(320·2)
Intermediate production and transport workers	777·2	(95·2)
Elementary clerical, sales and service workers	906·5	(596·7)

In 2000–01, 625,500 persons were unemployed, of whom 552,400 persons were seeking full-time work; 23·0% had been unemployed for more than one year. The unemployment rate in Jan. 2003 was 6·1%.

Trade Unions. In Aug. 2001, 24·5% of all full-time employees (22·7% females) were members of a trade union. In 1999 there were 11 unions with fewer than 1,000 members and 14 unions with 50,000 or more members. Many of the larger trade unions are affiliated with central labour organizations, the oldest and by far the largest being the Australian Council of Trade Unions (ACTU) formed in 1927. In 2002, 46 unions were affiliated to ACTU, representing approximately 1·8m. workers. In July 1992 the Industrial Relations Legislation Amendment Act freed the way for employers and employees to negotiate enterprise-based awards and agreements.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1990 Australia and New Zealand completed a Closer Economic Relations agreement (initiated in 1983) which establishes free trade in goods. Net foreign debt was $A268·1bn. as at 30 June 2000 (an increase of 16% on the previous year). In 1998 the effect of the Asian meltdown on exports resulted increasingly in shipments of commodities and exports of manufactures and some services being redirected to other destinations, notably the USA and Europe. Merchandise exports rose by 23% in 2000–01 against the previous year while imports rose by 7%. Australia is the world's largest exporter of black coal, bauxite, lead, diamonds and mineral sands.

Imports and Exports. Merchandise imports and exports for years ending 30 June (in $A1m.):

	Imports	Exports
1997–98	90,684	87,768
1998–99	97,611	85,991
1999–2000	110,078	97,286
2000–01	118,264	119,062

The Australian customs tariff provides for preferences to goods produced in and shipped from certain countries as a result of reciprocal trade agreements. These include the UK, New Zealand, Canada and Ireland.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. As at June 1999 controlled access roads (motorways excluding tolled roads) totalled 1,563 km; national highways, 18,620 km; rural arterial, 94,854 km; urban arterial, 12,398 km; rural local, 600,725 km; urban local, 84,845 km.

In Dec. 2001 there were 10,101,441 passenger vehicles, 1,819,993 light commercial vehicles, 424,185 trucks, 70,196 buses, 370,982 motorcycles and 35,164 campervans. New registrations in 2001 included 646,010 passenger vehicles, 104,770 light commercial vehicles, 17,707 trucks, 2,969 buses and 34,762 motorcycles.

In 2001, 1,756 persons were killed in road accidents (1,819 in 2000).

Rail. Privatization of government railways began in Victoria in 1994 with West Coast Railway and Hoys Transport being granted seven-year franchises. A three-year extension was granted to West Coast Railway in 2001. Specialised Container Transport (SCT) won the first private rail freight franchise in 1995 followed by TNT (now Toll Holdings). Australian National Railway Commission was sold by the Commonwealth Government in Nov. 1997 and in Feb. 1999 V/Line Freight Corporation, owned by the Victorian Government, was sold to Freight Australia. Rail passenger services in Victoria were franchised in mid-1999. The Australian Railroad Group acquired Western Australia's government rail freight operation, Westrail, in Nov. 2000. Agreement has been reached by the Federal, New South Wales and Victorian Governments that the sale of freight operator National Rail Corporation (NRC) should go ahead and the New South Wales Government is proceeding with the privatization of FreightCorp. These two sales leave QR as the only government-owned rail freight operator in Australia.

The total length of track in 1998–99 was 4,010 km (broad gauge, 1,600 mm); 16,380 km (standard, 1,435 mm); 15,120 km (narrow, 1,067 mm); 4,150 km (610 mm gauge); and 265 km (dual gauge). In the financial year 1999–2000 a total of 508m. tonnes of freight were carried with a total revenue of $A3bn.; passengers carried totalled 618·7m. urban (including train and tram); 10·5m. non-urban.

Under various Commonwealth–State standardization agreements, all the State capitals are now linked by standard gauge track. Work is under way on the 'AustralAsia Rail Project', which involves the construction of 1,410 km standard gauge railway between Alice Springs and Darwin. It is due for completion before the end of 2003.

There are also private industrial and tourist railways, and tramways in Adelaide, Melbourne and Sydney.

Civil Aviation. Qantas Airways is Australia's principal international airline. In 1992 Qantas merged with Australian Airlines, and in 1993, 25% of the company was purchased by British Airways. The remainder is government-owned. Qantas relaunched Australian Airlines in Oct. 2002 to connect Asia-Pacific with Cairns and the Gold Coast. In 1999 Qantas flew 292·7m. km, carrying 16,347,800 passengers (6,222,200 on international flights). A total of 54 international airlines operated air services to and from Australia in 2000–01. There are 13 international airports, the main ones being Adelaide, Brisbane, Cairns, Darwin, Melbourne, Perth and Sydney. International passenger traffic increased from 4·12m. in 1980 to 16·49m. in 2000, an average annual growth of 7·2%. International cargo (freight and mail) increased from 133,000 tonnes in 1980 to 709,000 tonnes in 2000, an average annual growth of 8·7%.

Sydney (Kingsford Smith) handled the most traffic in Australia in 2000 (22,393,629 passengers, of which 14,195,306 on domestic flights), followed by Melbourne International and Brisbane.

Internal airlines (domestic and regional) carried 31,356,096 passengers in 1999–2000. Domestic airlines were deregulated in Oct. 1990.

At 31 March 1999 there were 278 licensed aerodromes in Australia and its external territories.

Shipping. The chief ports are Sydney, Botany Bay, Newcastle, Port Kembla, Melbourne, Geelong, Adelaide, Hastings, Gladstone, Brisbane, Hobart, Fremantle, Dampier, Pt Hedland, Hay Point, Pt Walcott and Townsville. At 30 June 2000 the trading fleet comprised 77 vessels totalling 2,283,336 DWT, 1,729,770 GRT.

Coastal cargo handled at Australian ports in 1999–2000 (in gross weight tonnes): loaded, 51·3m.; unloaded, 50·7m. International trade loaded, 462·2m. tonnes; unloaded, 56·6m. tonnes. Calls to ports made by commercial ships in 1999–2000 totalled 24,600 with 230 made by passenger vessels.

Telecommunications. Australian telecommunications are in the latter stages of an evolution from a state-owned monopoly. In 1989 the domestic market became a regulated monopoly with Telstra as the government-owned company providing all services and, in 1991, a duopoly (with Optus) in fixed network services. In 1993 Vodafone joined Telstra and Optus in the provision of mobile phone services. A new regulatory regime was created by the introduction of the Telecommunications Act 1997 and both markets were opened to wholesale and retail competition. There is no limit to the number of carriers that can hold licences under the new arrangements and by June 2000 a total of 72 licences had been issued. The Australian Communications Authority (ACA) and the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) are the primary regulators with responsibility for the industry's development.

Telephone main lines numbered 10,050,000 in 2000 (524·6 per 1,000 inhabitants), and there were 8,900,000 PCs in use, or 464·6 per 1,000 persons. In Feb. 2002 there were 12·87m. mobile phone subscribers (the largest supplier being Optus, with 4·59m. subscribers) and 10·63m. Internet users.

Three telecommunications satellites are in orbit covering the entire continent.

Postal Services. Postal services are operated by Australia Post, operating under the Australian Postal Corporation Act 1989 as a government business enterprise. Revenue was $A3,732·6m. in 2000–01, expenditure $A3,300·5m. There were 4,787 post offices and other agencies in 2000–01, and 4,761·1m. postal items were handled.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial power of the Commonwealth of Australia is vested in the High Court of Australia (the Federal Supreme Court), in the Federal courts created by the Federal Parliament (the Federal Court of Australia and the Family Court of Australia) and in the State courts invested by Parliament with Federal jurisdiction.

High Court. The High Court consists of a Chief Justice and six other Justices, appointed by the Governor-General in Council. The Constitution confers on the High Court original jurisdiction, inter alia, in all matters arising under treaties or affecting consuls or other foreign representatives, matters between the States of the Commonwealth, matters to which the Commonwealth is a party and matters between residents of different States. Federal Parliament may make laws conferring original jurisdiction on the High Court, inter alia, in matters arising under the Constitution or under any laws made by the Parliament. It has in fact conferred jurisdiction on the High Court in matters arising under the Constitution and in matters arising under certain laws made by Parliament.

The High Court may hear and determine appeals from its own Justices exercising original jurisdiction, from any other Federal Court, from a Court exercising Federal jurisdiction and from the Supreme Courts of the States. It also has jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from the Supreme Courts of the Territories. The right of appeal from the High Court to the Privy Council in London was abolished in 1986.

Other Federal Courts. Since 1924, four other Federal courts have been created to exercise special Federal jurisdiction, i.e. the Federal Court of Australia, the Family Court of Australia, the Australian Industrial Court and the Federal Court of Bankruptcy. The Federal Court of Australia was created by the Federal Court of Australia Act 1976 and began to exercise jurisdiction on 1 Feb. 1977. It exercises such original jurisdiction as is invested in it by laws made by the Federal Parliament including jurisdiction formerly exercised by the Australian Industrial Court and the Federal Court of Bankruptcy, and in some matters previously invested in either the High Court or State and Territory Supreme Courts. The Federal Court also acts as a court of appeal from State and Territory courts in relation to Federal matters. Appeal from the Federal Court to the High Court will be by way of special leave only. The State Supreme Courts have also been invested with Federal jurisdiction in bankruptcy.

State Courts. The general Federal jurisdiction of the State courts extends, subject to certain restrictions and exceptions, to all matters in which the High Court has jurisdiction or in which jurisdiction may be conferred upon it.

Industrial Tribunals. The chief federal industrial tribunal is the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission, constituted by presidential members (with the status of judges) and commissioners. The Commission's functions include settling industrial disputes, making awards, determining the standard hours of work and wage fixation. Questions of law, the judicial interpretation of awards and imposition of penalties in relation to industrial matters are dealt with by the Industrial Division of the Federal Court.

In June 2000 the daily prison population averaged 21,714.

Each State has its own individual police service which operates almost exclusively within its State boundaries. State police investigations include murder, robbery, street-level drug dealing, kidnapping, domestic violence and motor vehicle offences. State police activities are broadly known as community policing.

The role of the Australian Federal Police (AFP) is to enforce Commonwealth criminal law and protect Commonwealth and national interests from crime in Australia and overseas. Responsibilities include combating organized crime, transnational crime, money laundering, illicit drug trafficking, e-crime, the investigation of fraud against the Australian Government, and handling special references from Government. The AFP also provides a protection service to dignitaries and crucial witnesses as well as community policing services to the people of the Australian Capital Territory, Jervis Bay and Australia's External Territories.

Total Australian Federal Police personnel as at 30 June 2002 was 3,051, of which 2,043 were sworn employees (police members) and 1,008 unsworn employees. There are approximately 45,000 police officers in Australia.

Religion. Under the Constitution the Commonwealth cannot make any law to establish any religion, to impose any religious observance or to prohibit the free exercise of any religion. The following percentages refer to those religions with the largest number of adherents at the census of 1996. Answering the census question on religious adherence was not obligatory, however.

Christian, 71% of population: Catholic, 27·0%; Anglican, 22·0%; Uniting Church, 7·5%; Presbyterian and Reformed, 3·8%; Orthodox, 2·8%; Baptist, 1·7%; Lutheran, 1·4%; Pentecostal, 1·0%; Churches of Christ, 0·4%; Jehovah's Witnesses, 0·5%; Salvation Army, 0·4%; other Christian, 2·4%. Religions other than Christian 3·4%; no religion, 16·6%; no statement, 9·0%.

The Anglican Synod voted for the ordination of 10 women in Nov. 1992.

Education. The governments of the Australian States and Territories have the major responsibility for education, including the administration and substantial funding of primary, secondary, and technical and further education. In most States, a single Education Department is responsible for these three levels but in Queensland, Western Australia and the Northern Territory, separate departments deal with school-based and technical and further education issues.

The Australian government provides supplementary finance to the States for government schools, provides the bulk of the public funding that goes to non-government schools and is responsible for direct funding of the higher education sector. It has special responsibilities for student assistance, education programmes for indigenous people and children from non-English-speaking backgrounds, and for international relations in education.

The Australian Constitution empowers the Federal government to make grants to the States and Territories and to place conditions upon such grants. The Commonwealth has worked with the States and Territories to put in place a new set of National Goals for Schooling in the Twenty-First Century, and to develop national performance measures in key areas of schooling including literacy, numeracy, science and information technology.

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of six and 15 years (16 years in Tasmania), at either a government school or a recognized non-government educational institution. Many children attend pre-schools for a year before entering school (usually in sessions of two–three hours, for two–five days per week).

Government schools are usually co-educational and comprehensive. Non-government schools have been traditionally single-sex, particularly in secondary schools, but there is a trend towards co-education. Tuition is free at government schools, but fees are normally charged at non-government schools.

In Aug. 2001 there were 6,942 government (and 2,654 non-government) primary and secondary schools with 152,138 (69,789) full-time teachers and 2,248,481 (1,019,660) full-time pupils.

Vocational education and training (VET) in Australia is essentially a partnership between the Commonwealth, the States and Territories and industry. The Commonwealth is involved in VET through an agreed set of national arrangements for sharing responsibility with the States and Territories. The current mechanism for giving effect to this is the Australian National Training Authority (ANTA) Agreement, which sets out the roles and responsibilities for VET: they provide two-thirds of the funding and have all of the regulatory responsibility for the sector. They are also the 'owners' of the network of public Technical and Further Education (TAFE) institutes. In 2000 publicly-funded VET programmes were provided by some 86 TAFEs and other government institutions, 1,139 community education providers, and by some 3,388 other providers including registered training organizations. In 2000 there were 1·75m. people participating in VET.

In 2000, 45 higher education institutions received Commonwealth Government funding. Most of these institutions operate under State and Territory legislation although several operate under Commonwealth legislation. There is also a completely privately-funded university and numerous private higher education providers in a range of specialist fields. Institutions established by appropriate legislation are autonomous and have the authority to accredit their own programmes and are primarily responsible for their own quality assurance. There were 695,445 university students in 2000, of which 95,607 were overseas students. The total revenue of the higher education system was estimated at around $A9bn. in 2000. Fields of university study with the largest number of award course students in 1999 were administration, business, economics and law (26%); arts, humanities and social sciences (24%); and science (16%).

The higher education sector contributes a significant proportion of the research and research training undertaken in Australia. The Australian Research Council provides advice on research issues and administers the allocation of some research grants to higher education sector researchers and institutions.

The Commonwealth Government offers a number of programmes which provide financial assistance to students. The Youth Allowance is available for eligible full-time students aged 16 to 24, depending on the circumstances of study. Austudy is available to eligible full-time students aged over 25. Abstudy provides financial assistance for eligible Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders who undertake full-time or part-time study. AIC—the Assistance for Isolated Children scheme—provides special support to families whose children are isolated from schooling or who have physical disabilities.

Most Australian students contribute to the cost of their higher education through the Higher Education Contribution Scheme (HECS). Most students can choose to make an upfront contribution (with a 25% discount) or to defer all or part of their payment until their income reaches a certain level when they must begin repaying their contribution through the taxation system. Overseas students generally pay full tuition fees. Universities are also able to offer full-fee places in postgraduate courses and to a limited number of domestic undergraduate students. In 2000 Australia hosted approximately 150,000 international students, mostly from Asia, who contributed around $A3·7bn. to the local economy in fees and expenditure on goods and services.

National bodies with a co-ordinating, planning or funding role include: the Australian National Training Authority (ANTA); the ANTA Ministerial Council, comprising the Federal and State and Territory Ministers for training; the Conference of Directors-General of Education, the Australian Council for Educational Research and advisory bodies, the National Aboriginal Education Committee, Australian Research Council—Department of Education, Training and Youth Affairs; Australian Education International; Australian Qualifications Framework Advisory Board; Ministerial Council on Education, Employment, Training and Youth Affairs; and National Office of Overseas Skills Recognition and Open Learning Australia.

Total operating expenses of Australian Government on education in 1999–2000 were $A34,036m. (5·4% of GDP). Private expenditure on education amounted to $A9,575m. (1·5% of GDP). The figures include government grants to the private sector which are also included in the operating expenses of Australian governments.

The adult literacy rate in 1999 was at least 99%.

Health. In 1999–2000 there were 748 public hospitals, including 24 psychiatric hospitals and 509 private hospitals, including 24 psychiatric hospitals; there were an average 2·8 public hospital beds per 1,000 population (down from 3·3 in 1995–96). In 1999–2000 there were 163,200 registered nurses, 34,600 general medical practitioners, 12,400 physiotherapists and 6,800 dentists. The Royal Flying Doctor Service serves remote areas. Estimated total government expenditure on health services (public and private sectors) in 1999–2000 was $A53·7bn. ($A51·0bn in 1998–99), representing 8·5% of GDP.

At 31 Dec. 2000 there were estimated to be 20,955 HIV cases, 8,616 AIDS diagnoses and 6,017 deaths following AIDS.

By 1999, 20·8% of the adult population were considered obese (having a body mass index over 30), compared to 8·7% in 1990 and 7·1% in 1980.

Welfare. All Commonwealth government social security pensions, benefits and allowances are financed from the Commonwealth government's general revenue. In addition, assistance is provided for welfare services.

Age Pensions—age pensions are payable to men 65 years of age or more who have lived in Australia for a specified period and, unless permanently blind, also satisfy an income and assets test. The minimum age for women's eligibility was raised by six months on 1 July 2001 and is being lifted in six-month increments every two years until 1 July 2013 when it will be 65 years. The qualifying age at 1 July 2001 was 62 years. In the year ending 30 June 2001, 1,785,554 age pensioners received a total of $A15,616·5m.

Disability Support Pension (DSP)—payable to persons aged 16 years or over with a physical, intellectual or psychiatric impairment of at least 20%, assessed as being unable to work for at least 30 hours a week. DSP for those of 21 years or over is paid at the same rate as Age Pensions and is subject to the same means test except for those who are permanently blind. In the year ending 30 June 2001, 623,926 disability support pensioners received a total of $A5,849·8m.

Carer Payment—payable to a person without other means of support who is providing constant care and attention at home for a severely disabled person aged 16 or over, or a person who is frail aged, either permanently or for an extended period. Since 1 July 1998 Carer Payment has been extended to carers of children under 16 years of age with profound disabilities. The rate of Carer Payment is the same as for other pensions. In the year ending 30 June 2001, 57,190 carers received a total of $A480·9m.

Sickness Allowance—paid to those over school-leaving age but below Age Pension age who are unable to work or continue full-time study temporarily owing to illness or injury. Eligibility rests on the person having a job or study course to which they can return. In the year ending 30 June 2001 a total of $A95·6m. was paid to beneficiaries.

Family Tax Benefit—replaced Family Allowance and Family Tax Payment on 1 July 2000. Family Tax Benefit Part A is paid to assist families with children under 21 years of age or dependent full-time students aged 21–24 years; Family Tax Benefit Part B provides additional assistance to families with only one income earner and children under 16 years of age or dependent full-time students aged 16–18 years. Both benefits are subject to an income and assets test. In the year ending 30 June 2001, 2,980,746 families comprising 5,758,423 children received a total of $A6,391·5m.

Parenting Payment (Single) and (Partnered)—is paid to assist those who care for children under 16, with income and assets under certain amounts, and have been an Australian resident for at least two years or a refugee or have become a lone parent while an Australian resident. Parenting Payment (Single) is paid to lone parents under pension rates and conditions; Parenting Payment (Partnered) is paid to one of the parents in the couple. [Since 1 July 2000 the basic component of Parenting Payment (Partnered) was incorporated into Family Tax Benefit with 375,233 beneficiaries transferring to Family Tax Benefit Part B.] In the year ending 30 June 2001, 424,616 Parenting Payment (Single) beneficiaries and 214,721 Parenting Payment (Partnered) beneficiaries received a total of $A5,325·7m.

Maternity Allowance—was introduced from 1 Feb. 1996 to assist families with the costs associated with a new baby (including foregone income). It is paid for each new child to families meeting the Family Tax Benefit A residence, income and assets criteria. Since 1 Jan. 1998 Maternity Allowance is paid in two stages as part of the initiative to boost immunization rates. A lump sum of $A780 (1 July 2001) is paid within 13 weeks of the birth and an additional $A208 (1 July 2001) is paid when the specific immunization or exemption requirements have been met. Families are not disadvantaged in cases where children are not immunized for medical reasons, or where parents conscientiously object to immunization. In the year ended 30 June 2001 a total of $A217·9m. was paid.

Newstart Allowance (NSA)—payable to those who are unemployed and are over 21 years of age but less than Age Pension age. Eligibility is subject to income and assets tests and recipients must satisfy the ‘activity test’ whereby they are actively seeking and willing to undertake suitable paid work, including casual and part-time work. To be eligible for benefit a person must have resided in Australia for at least 12 months preceding his or her claim or intend to remain in Australia permanently; unemployment must not be as a result of industrial action by that person or by members of a union to which that person is a member. In the year ended 30 June 2001 a total of $A4,885·4m. was paid to NSA beneficiaries.

Youth Allowance—replaced five former schemes for young people, including the Youth Training Allowance. In the year ending 30 June 2001 a total of $A2,101·9m. was paid to YA beneficiaries.

Mature Age Allowance (MAA)—paid to older long-term unemployed, over 60 years of age but less than Age Pension age. MAA is non-activity tested. In the year ended June 2001 a total of $A352·6m. was paid.

Service Pensions—are paid by the Department of Veterans’ Affairs. Male veterans who have reached the age of 60 years or are permanently unemployable, and who served in a theatre of war, are eligible subject to an income and assets test. The minimum age for female veterans’ eligibility is being lifted from 55 to 60 years in six-month increments every two years over the period 1995–2013. The qualifying age at 1 July 2001 was 57 years. Wives of service pensioners are also eligible, provided that they do not receive a pension from the Department of Social Security. Disability pension is a compensatory payment in respect of incapacity attributable to war service. It is paid at a rate commensurate with the degree of incapacity and is free of any income test. In the year ended 30 June 2001, $A2,832·3m. of service pensions and $A2,314·1m. of disability and dependants’ pensions were paid out; at 30 June 2001 there were 290,695 eligible veterans.

In addition to cash benefits, welfare services are provided, either directly or through State and local government authorities and voluntary agencies, for people with special needs.

Medicare—covers: automatic entitlement under a single public health fund to medical and optometrical benefits of 85% of the Medical Benefits Schedule fee, with a maximum patient payment for any service where the Schedule fee is charged; access without direct charge to public hospital accommodation and to inpatient and outpatient treatment by doctors appointed by the hospital; the restoration of funds for community health to approximately the same real level as 1975; a reduction in charges for private treatment in shared wards of public hospitals, and increases in the daily bed subsidy payable to private hospitals.

The Medicare programme is financed in part by a 1·5% levy on taxable incomes, with low income cut-off points, which were $A13,807 p.a. for a single person in 2000–01 and $A23,299 p.a. for a family with an extra allowance of $A2,140 for each child. A levy surcharge of 1% was introduced from 1 July 1997 for single individuals with taxable incomes in excess of $A50,000 p.a. and couples and families with combined taxable incomes in excess of $A100,000 who do not have private hospital cover through private health insurance.

Medicare benefits are available to all persons ordinarily resident in Australia. Visitors from the UK, New Zealand, Italy, Sweden, the Netherlands and Malta have immediate access to necessary medical treatment, as do all visitors staying more than six months.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the Australian Broadcasting Authority (ABA), established under the Broadcasting Services Act 1992. Foreign ownership of commercial radio and TV companies is restricted to 20%. The national broadcasting service is provided by the Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC) (established 1932), an independent statutory corporation receiving 82% of its funding from the Federal Government and the remainder from independent sources, and the Special Broadcasting Service (established 1978). The latter provides radio and TV services in more than 100 languages. The transmission system is PAL. There are also commercial radio and TV services operated by companies under licence, subscription TV services, community radio services operated on a non-profit basis and a parliamentary radio service to state capitals, Canberra and Newcastle. The international service Radio Australia broadcasts via short-wave to Papua New Guinea and the Pacific and also via satellite to the Asia-Pacific regions in English and other languages. Digital television broadcasting commenced in the five mainland metropolitan areas on 1 Jan. 2001. As at 30 June 2001 the ABA had licensed 48 commercial TV services, 255 commercial radio services and 286 community radio services. The ABA had allocated licences for six new commercial radio and 10 community radio services in 2000–01.

In 2000 there were estimated to be 7·0m. TV households and 14·13m. TV sets (99% of households had at least one set). As at Sept. 2000 it was estimated there were 1·32m. pay-TV subscribers, representing 18·86% of households.

Cinema. At 30 June 2000 there were 326 cinema sites with a total of 1,514 screens, 374,000 seats and paid admissions of $A79·4m.

Press. There were 49 daily metropolitan newspapers in 2000 (2 national, 10 metropolitan and 37 regional). The papers with the largest circulations are the Sunday Telegraph (New South Wales), with an average of 724,000 per issue in 1999; the Sunday Mail (Queensland), with an average of 594,000 per issue; and the Sun-Herald (New South Wales), with an average of 591,000 per issue. At least 30 magazines have a circulation of over 85,000 copies per issue.

Tourism. As at 30 Nov. 2000 the total number of overseas visitors for the year stood at 4·4m. (a 9·5% increase on 1999) and an estimated $A13·2bn. had been spent. The top source countries for visitors in 1999 were Japan (662,500); New Zealand (660,800); UK (508,900); USA (392,500); Singapore (234,100); and Germany (140,000). Tourism is Australia's largest single earner of foreign exchange.

Festivals. There are around 1,300 festivals annually.

Libraries. In the year ended 30 April 1999, almost 5·7m. people visited a national, State or local library at least once. Total government funding for libraries in 1998–99 was $A756·2m.

Theatre and Opera. Opera Australia is the largest performing arts organization in the country with almost 250 performances staged annually. The last major survey, held in March 1995, revealed that 2,722,100 people aged 15 years and over had attended at least one performance of musical theatre in the previous year; 2,336,300 people, other theatre; 2,634,400 people, other performing arts; 1,407,500 people, dance performances.

Museums and Galleries. In 2000 there were some 2,000 museums, including 250 art museums and 400 historic properties, with a total of 61·6m. artworks and artefacts. Australian museums employ around 37,500 people and receive 27·5m. visitors annually. The majority (68%) of their $A716m. income comes from the government.

AUSTRALIAN TERRITORIES AND STATES

AUSTRALIAN CAPITAL TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area, now the Australian Capital Territory (ACT), was explored in 1820 by Charles Throsby who named it Limestone Plains. Settlement commenced in 1824. Until its selection as the seat of government, it was a quiet pastoral and agricultural community with a few large holdings and a sprinkling of smaller settlers.

In 1901 the Commonwealth constitution stipulated that a land tract of at least 260 sq. km in area and not less than 160 km from Sydney be set aside from New South Wales and reserved as a capital district. The Canberra site was adopted by the Seat of Government Act 1908. The present site, together with an area for a port at Jervis

Bay, was surrendered by New South Wales and accepted by the Commonwealth in 1909. By subsequential proclamation the Territory became vested in the Commonwealth from 1 Jan. 1911. In 1911 an international competition held for the city plan was won by W. Burley Griffin of Chicago but construction was delayed by the First World War. It was not until 1927 that Canberra became the seat of government. Located on the Molonglo River surrounding an artificial lake, it was built as a compromise capital in order to stop squabbling between Melbourne and Sydney following the 1901 Federation of Australian States. Canberra's population has risen since its formal inauguration in 1927 owing to the continual expansion of government offices and the establishment of the National University.

In 1989 self-government was proclaimed and the first ACT assembly was elected in May of that year.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area is 2,360 sq. km, of which 60% is hilly or mountainous. Timbered mountains are located in the south and west, and plains and hill country in the north. The ACT lies within the upper Murrumbidgee River catchment, in the Murray-Darling Basin. The Murrumbidgee flows throughout the Territory from the south, and its tributary, the Molonglo, from the east. The Molonglo was dammed in 1964 to form Lake Burley Griffin. As at 31 Dec. 2001 the resident population was 322,600, an increase of 0·1% from Dec. 2000. Population (1996 census), 299,243.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: births, 4,065, deaths, 1,300; marriages, 1,735; divorces, 1,561. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 4·2.

CLIMATE

ACT has a continental climate, characterized by a marked variation in temperature between seasons, with warm to hot summers and cold winters.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ACT became self-governing on 11 May 1989. It is represented by 2 members in the Commonwealth House of Representatives and 2 senators.

The parliament of the ACT, the Legislative Assembly, consists of 17 members elected for a 3-year term. Its responsibilities are at State and Local government level. The Legislative Assembly elects a Chief Minister and a 4-member cabinet.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 20 Oct. 2001 the Labor party won 8 seats (41·7% of the vote) against the Liberal party with 7 seats (31·6%). The Green party and the Australian Democrats party won 1 seat each with 9·1% and 8% of the vote respectively.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The ACT Australian Labor Party Ministry was as follows in Feb. 2003:

Chief Minister, Attorney-General, Minister for Community Affairs, Corrections and the Environment: Jon Stanhope.

Deputy Chief Minister, Treasurer, Minister for Economic Development, Business and Tourism, Sport, Racing and Gaming: Ted Quinlan. Health and Planning: Simon Corbell. Disability, Housing and Community Services, Urban Services, Arts and Heritage and Police and Emergency Services: Bill Wood. Education, Youth and Family Services, Women and Industrial Relations: Katy Gallagher.

Speaker: Wayne Berry.

ECONOMY

Budget. The ACT is treated equitably with the States and the Northern Territory regarding revenue raising, expenditure and assistance from the Commonwealth government. The Territory was one of the first governments to introduce accrual budgeting and accounting, and financial management reforms in Australia. In 2001–02 the Territory received revenues of $A2,369m. and had expenditure of $A2,294m. achieving a surplus of $A75m. on an accrual basis.

Banking and Finance. Bank Deposits as at March 2002: deposits, $A6,597m.; loans, $A7,962m.; Housing Finance for Owner Occupation (all lenders), total commitments 2000–01, $A1,159m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. See NEW SOUTH WALES.

Water. ACTEW (Australian Capital Territory, Electricity & Water) provides more than 100m. litres of water each day to Canberra residents. The Cotter River catchment includes the Cotter (4,700m. litre) storage capacity, Bendora (10,700m.) and Corin Dams (75,400m.). Googong Dam (124,500m. litres), developed on the Queanbeyan River in New South Wales, is used to meet peaks in demand in summer or during extensive dry periods. There were 44 reservoirs in 2000–01 with a capacity of 912m. litres.

Agriculture. Sheep and/or beef cattle farming is the main agricultural activity. In the year ended June 2000 there were 96 farming establishments with a total area of 47,000 ha. The gross value of commodities produced rose by 2% to $A15·1m. over the previous financial year. Increases in the value of crop production were partially offset by a decrease in the value of livestock products.

Forestry. There is about 23,838 ha of plantation forest in the ACT (approximately 10% of the land area). Most of the area is managed for the production of softwood timber. The established pine forests, such as Kowen, Stromlo, Uriarra and Pierces Creek, are in the northern part of the Territory. After harvesting, 500–1,000 ha of land are planted with new pine forest each year. No native forests or woodlands have been cleared for plantation since the mid-1970s.

INDUSTRY

Turnover in manufacturing industries in 1999–2000 increased by 6% over the previous year to a total of $A640m.

Labour. In May 2002 there were an estimated 170,300 employed persons and in 1999–2000, 9,100 unemployed persons. The annual average unemployment rate in the ACT has fallen since 1996–97 (7·5%) to an average of 4·9% in 2000–01.

In the year ending May 2002, 22% of the ACT labour force was employed in public administration and defence; 15% in property and business services; 14% in retail trade.

Trade Unions. As at Aug. 2001 there were 32,600 people belonging to a trade union (22% of total employees).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2000–01 imports were valued at $A4·8m. (54% decrease on 1999–2000); exports at $A21·6m. (35% decrease on 1999–2000). Manufactured goods accounted for 57% of total imports; optical instruments and apparatus, 86% of total exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At April 2002 there were 2,610 km of road. At 31 March 2001 there were 232,057 vehicles registered in the ACT. In 2000–01, 20 fatalities were caused by traffic accidents.

Civil Aviation. In 2000–01 Canberra International Airport handled an estimated 2,114,173 passengers. Figures for 2001–02 are expected to be 13% down on this.

Telecommunications. In 2001 there were 175,305 people with home computer access (59% of the population) and 123,178 with home Internet access (51%).

Postal Services. See NEW SOUTH WALES.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In the year ending June 2001 there were 48,715 criminal incidents recorded by police, representing a decrease of 9% on the previous year. During 2000–01 there were 590 full-time sworn police officers in the ACT and 184 unsworn police staff.

The proportion of women in the ACT police force grew to 29% during 2000–01. Operational budget for the same financial year was $A65·7m.

Religion. At the 2001 census, 63% of the population were Christian. Of these, 45% were Roman Catholic and 29% Anglican. Non-Christian religions accounted for 5%, the largest groups being Buddhism, Islam and Hinduism.

Education. In Feb. 2002 there were 221 schools comprising 80 pre-schools, 136 primary and secondary schools (including colleges) and 5 special schools. Of these 175 were government schools. There was a total of 64,064 full-time students. There were four higher education institutions in 2001: the Signadou Campus of the Australian Catholic University (ACU) had 624 students enrolled; the Australian National University, 9,636 students; the University of Canberra, 8,675; and the Australian Defence Force Academy, 1,624.

Health. The ACT is serviced by three public and nine private hospitals (six of the private hospitals are day surgery only). At June 2001 there were 199 dental practitioners.

Welfare. At June 2000 there were 14,747 age pensioners (4·7% of ACT population); 5,948 persons received disability support pension (1·9%).

CULTURE

For the year ended 30 June 1998 total funding on culture by the ACT Government was $A28·1m.

Cinema. In the year to April 1999 cinemas attracted an attendance rate of 73·5%.

Tourism. In the year ended 30 June 2000 an estimated 182,400 international visitors came to the ACT, 7% of all international tourists to Australia. 14% of visitors were from the UK. At Dec. 2000 there were 60 tourist accommodation establishments with 15 rooms or more.

Libraries. At Jan. 2003 there were 8 government-operated libraries and 1 mobile service with 2 special libraries (the ACT Heritage Library and the Government and Assembly Library). 1·75m. people visited these libraries and borrowed a total of 2·5m. books.

Theatre and Opera. The renovated Canberra Playhouse opened in 1998.

Museums and Galleries. The Canberra Museum and Gallery opened in 1998.

NORTHERN TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Northern Territory, after forming part of New South Wales, was annexed on 6 July 1863 to South Australia and in 1901 entered the Commonwealth as a corporate part of South Australia. The Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 having made provision for the surrender to the Commonwealth of any territory by any state, an agreement was entered into on 7 Dec. 1907 for the transfer of the Northern Territory to the Commonwealth. It formally passed under the control of the Commonwealth government on 1 Jan. 1911. On 1 Feb. 1927 the Northern Territory was divided for administrative purposes into two territories but in 1931 it was again administered as a single territory under the control of an Administrator in Darwin. The Legislative Council for the Northern Territory, constituted in 1947, was reconstituted in 1959. In that year, citizenship rights were granted to Aboriginal people of 'full descent'. On 1 July 1978 self-government was granted to the Northern Territory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Northern Territory is bounded by the 26th parallel of S. lat. and 129° and 138° E. long. Its total area is 1,346,200 sq. km and includes adjacent islands. It has 5,100 km of mainland coastline and 2,100 km of coast around the islands. The greater part of the interior consists of a tableland rising gradually from the coast to a height of about 700 metres. On this tableland there are large areas of excellent pasturage. The southern part of the Territory is generally sandy and has a small rainfall, but water may be obtained by means of sub-artesian bores.

The population of the Territory at Dec. 2001 was 199,900. The 1996 census was 181,843. The capital, seat of government and principal port is Darwin, on the north coast; estimated population 69,698 at 30 June 2001. Other main centres include Katherine (8,965), 330 km south of Darwin; Alice Springs (26,990), in Central Australia; Tennant Creek (3,065), a rich mining centre 500 km north of Alice Springs; Nhulunbuy (3,918), a bauxite mining centre in the Gove Peninsula Province in eastern Arnhem Land; and Jabiru (1,161), a model town built to serve the rich Uranium Province in eastern Arnhem Land. Palmerston is a Darwin satellite town and Yulara is a resort village serving Uluru National Park and Ayers Rock. There also are a number of large self-contained Aboriginal communities. People identifying themselves as indigenous numbered 50,785 at the 2001 census. This includes people of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001 estimated totals: births, 3,822; deaths, 872; marriages, 781; divorces, 447. Infant mortality per 1,000 live births (2001 estimate), 9·9. Life expectancy, 1996: 69·2 years for males, 75·0 for females. The estimated annual rates per 1,000 population in 2001 were: births, 19·1; deaths, 4·4; marriages, 3·9; divorces, 2·2.

CLIMATE

See AUSTRALIA: Climate.

The highest temperature ever recorded in the NT was 118·9°F (48·3°C) at Finke in 1960, while the lowest recorded temperature was 18·5°F (–7·5°C) at Alice Springs in 1976.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Northern Territory (Self-Government) Act 1978 established the Northern Territory as a body politic as from 1 July 1978, with Ministers having control over and responsibility for Territory finances and the administration of the functions of government as specified by the Federal government. Regulations have been made conferring executive authority for the bulk of administrative functions. At 31 Dec. 1979 the only important powers retained by the Commonwealth related to rights in respect of Aboriginal land, some significant National Parks and the mining of uranium and other substances prescribed in the Atomic Energy Act. Proposed laws passed by the Legislative Assembly require the assent of the Administrator. The Governor-General may disallow any law assented to by the Administrator within six months of the Administrator's assent.

The Northern Territory has federal representation, electing 1 member to the House of Representatives and two members to the Senate.

The Legislative Assembly has 25 members, directly elected for a period of four years. The Chief Minister, Deputy Chief Minister and Speaker are elected by, and from, the members. The Administrator (John Anictomatis) appoints Ministers on the advice of the Leader of the majority party.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In parliamentary elections held in Aug. 2001 the Australian Labor Party won 13 seats against 10 for the Country Liberal Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: John Anictomatis, AO.

The NT Territory Labor Party Cabinet was as follows in Feb. 2003:

Chief Minister, Treasurer, Minister for Territorial Development, Indigenous Affairs, Arts and Museums, Young Territorians, Senior Territorians and Women's Policy: Clare Martin.

Deputy Chief Minister, Treasurer, Minister for Employment, Education and Training, and Racing, Gaming and Licensing: Syd Stirling. Attorney General, Minister for Justice, Corporate and Information Services, Communications and Central Australia: Peter Toyne. Business, Industry and Resource Development, Asian Relations and Trade and Police, Fire and Emergency Services and Defence Support: Paul Henderson. Community Development, Housing, Sport and Recreation, Local Government and Regional Development: John Ah Kit. Health and Community Services: Jane Aagaard. Transport and Infrastructure, Lands and Planning, Ethnic Affairs, and Parks and Wildlife: Kon Vatskalis. Tourism, Primary Industry and Fisheries, Environment and Heritage, and Essential Services: Chris Burns.

ECONOMY

Budget. Revenue and expenditure in $A1m.:

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Revenue	1,883	2,003	2,099
Expenditure	1,888	1,873	1,892

Using uniform presentation standards, total revenue in 2001–02 was $A1,892m. of which $A1,691m. were grants to the Northern Territory from the Commonwealth, and $A408m. was raised by the Northern Territory government, which included $A218m. through state-like taxes.

Expenditure during 2001–02 included $A428m. for education; $A397m. for health; $A208m. for public order and safety; $A246m. for community services; and $A192m. for general public services.

General Government net debt increased by $A15m. to $A1,455m. in 2002.

Banking and Finance. At Sept. 2001 there were 11 banks operating in the Territory with total deposits, $A1,509m.; loans, $A3,463m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. There are 93 parks and reserves covering 43,709 sq. km. Twelve of the parks are classified as national parks, including the Kakadu and Uluru-Kata Tjuta National Park which are included on the World Heritage List.

Electricity. The majority of electric power is supplied by the Power and Water Authority (PAWA). There is one other electricity generator in the Territory—NT Power Generation, with 6% of the market. At 30 June 2001 total electricity generated was 1,513 GWh.

Oil and Gas. The Timor Sea is a petroleum producing province with oil produced from five fields. Also containing more than 22m. cu. ft of known gas reserves, the Timor Sea is well on its way to becoming a significant gas province. The Territory is on the verge of a major development phase for gas reserves and gas-based manufacturing. Gas is currently supplied from the Palm Valley and Mereenie fields in the onshore Amadeus Basin to the Channel Island Power Station in Darwin via one of Australia's longest onshore gas pipelines. The value of energy mineral production in the Territory increased by 77·3% in 2000–01. The total value of oil and gas production in 2000–01 was $A2,622m., an increase of $A1,192m. over 1999–2000. This is largely a result of an increase in crude oil production which rose by 86·3% in 2000–01 with the first full production year at Laminaria and Corallina in the Timor Sea. The Territory produced 5,316 megalitres of crude oil and 458m. cu. metres of natural gas in 2000–01.

Water. The Power and Water Authority (PAWA) is responsible for providing water supply (also electric power and sewerage services) throughout the NT. The Aboriginal Essential Services Branch of PAWA maintains water supply to the 85 remote communities and Aboriginal outstations.

Minerals. Mining is the major contributor to the Territory's economy. Compared to 1999–2000 the overall value of production in the mining industry increased by 43·6% in 2000–01. This represents a $A1,256m. increase from $A2,884m. in 1999–2000 to $A4,138m. in 2000–01. Value of major mineral commodities production in 2000–01 (in $A1m.): bauxite/alumina, 682; gold, 323; uranium, 195; manganese, 152; lead/zinc concentrate, 126; diamonds, 20.

Agriculture. In the year ended June 2000 there were 367 agricultural establishments with a total area under holding of 67·5m. ha. Beef cattle production constitutes the largest farming industry with a total value for slaughter and products in the year ended 30 June 2000 of $A230·0m. During 2000–01 the value of fruit increased by 3·4% to $A70·8m. Fruit production consists mainly of bananas and mangoes. The banana crop has increased significantly from 625 tonnes in 1989 to 7,600 tonnes in 1999–2000. There were eight crocodile farms in 2001 producing a total of 16,335·25 kg of meat in the period Jan.–June 2001.

Forestry. In 2001 there were 35m. ha of native forest, accounting for 26% of the Territory's total land area. Of the total native forest cover, 1% is rainforest, 23% open forest and 76% woodland. Total area of plantation forest is around 5,500 ha, consisting mainly of softwoods. Hardwood plantations of fast growing Acacia Mangium have been established on the Tiwi Islands north of Darwin for the production of woodchip for paper pulp. In addition, a number of operations for the production of sandalwood oil and neem products have been established near Batchelor, south of Darwin. Teak plantations are planned for designated farmland in the Katherine/Daly development region.

Fisheries. The value of the fishing industry in 2000–01 decreased by 1·4% to $A142m. with significant decreases in trepang (41·3%), aquaculture (37·3%), and mud crabs (14·2%) compared with the previous year. Significant gains were made in the value of barramundi (22·3%), sea perch (10·7%) and prawns (28·5%).

INDUSTRY

At 30 June 2000 the manufacturing industry turnover was $A1,020·2m.; 3,300 persons were employed and salaries totalled $A144·9m. In Nov. 2001, 15,102 persons were employed in the wholesale and retail trade.

Labour. The labour force totalled 103,141 in Dec. 2001, of whom 97,100 were employed. The unemployment rate was 8·3%, up from 4·6% in Dec. 1999. Around 4,500 were estimated to have been employed at mines and on oil and gas projects in late 2000.

Trade Unions. In June 1996, 26 trade unions had 19,300 members.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2001–02 the value of the Territory's exports decreased by around 30·2% to $A2,972m. Major export destinations (figures in $A1m.): Singapore (1,001), Japan (497), China (414), Korea (298), Indonesia (175), USA (130). 2001–02 imports totalled $A782m. Major sources of imports for 2000–01 (figures in $A1m.): Singapore (189), Kuwait (137), USA (114), Japan (74), Norway (20).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 2001 there were 20,627 km of sealed and unsealed roads. Registered motor vehicles at 31 Dec. 2002 numbered 126,562, including 93,002 passenger vehicles, 3,216 motorcycles and 1,420 buses. There were 51 road accident fatalities in 2000.

Rail. In 1980 Alice Springs was linked to the Trans-continental network by a standard (1,435 mm) gauge railway to Tarcoola in South Australia (830 km). Construction began in 2001 on a new 1,410 km standard gauge line between Darwin and Alice Springs. This will create the AustralAsia Railway, linking Darwin and Adelaide and creating a new trade route between Asia and southern Australia. The $A1·3bn. project is being funded by $A165m. from the Northern Territory Government, $A165m. from the Commonwealth Government, $A150m. from the South Australian Government and $A750m. from the Asia Pacific Transport Company, which will build, own and operate the railway. The project is scheduled to be completed by the end of 2004 together with completion of Stage Two of Darwin's $A73m. East Arm Port, which will include a railway embankment and intermodal container terminal.

Civil Aviation. Darwin and most regional centres in the Territory are serviced by daily flights to all State capitals and major cities. In 1998 there were direct international services connecting Darwin to Bali, Brunei, Kuala Lumpur, Kupang and Singapore. In 2001 Darwin airport handled around 950,000 domestic and 450,00 international passengers, and Alice Springs around 750,000 domestic passengers.

Shipping. Regular freight shipping services connect Darwin with both the east and west coasts of Australia, Southeast Asia and the rest of the world. In 2001 there were nine shipping lines making regular calls, and cruise ships and naval vessels also include Darwin as a port of call.

A $A90m. development of deepwater port facilities is nearing completion. The Port of Darwin is equipped to handle bulk, container and roll-on-roll-off traffic. 895 vessels visited the port in 2000–01 and it handled 904,783 tonnes of cargo in 1999–2000 (excluding fishing). There is a sheltered mooring basin which provides 85 non-tidal berths.

Commercial and pleasure vessels also call at the ports of Melville Bay (Gove) and Milner Bay (Groote Eylandt), and at Seven Spirit Bay on a regular basis.

Telecommunications. In 2001 there were 63,480 households with home computer access and 26,801 households with home Internet access.

Postal Services. At 30 June 1999 there were 548 Australia Post retail facilities in South Australia and Northern Territory.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Voluntary euthanasia for the terminally ill was legalized in 1995. However, the federal Prime Minister stated that the High Court of Australia would consider cases of euthanasia as murder, and the law was overturned by the Federal Senate on 24 March 1997. The first person to have recourse to legalized euthanasia died on 22 Sept. 1996.

Police personnel at 31 Dec. 2001, 896. In addition there were 49 Aboriginal community police officers. At June 2001 the Territory had three prisons with a daily average of 717 prisoners held.

Education. Education is compulsory from the age of 6 to 15 years. There were (Aug. 2001) 32,717 full-time students enrolled in 149 government schools and 8,692 enrolled in 32 non-government schools with an additional 3,392 in preschools. There were a total of 3,178 teaching staff including preschools, a decrease of 73 teachers from 2000. The proportion of Indigenous students in the Territory is high, comprising 34·7% all primary and secondary students (38,017) in 2001. Schools range from single classrooms and transportable units catering for the needs of small Aboriginal communities and pastoral properties to urban high schools and secondary colleges (years 11–12), catering for about 7,500 students. Bilingual programmes operate in some Aboriginal communities where traditional Aboriginal culture prevails. Secondary education extends from school years 8 to 12 (7 to 12 in Alice Springs).

The Northern Territory University (NTU) was founded in 1989 by amalgamating the existing University College of the Northern Territory and the Darwin Institute of Technology, with the technical and further education courses hitherto offered by the latter to be conducted by an Institute of Technical and Further Education within the new University. In 2001, 1,934 students were enrolled at the NTU of whom 5·3% were identified as Indigenous. The Batchelor Institute of Indigenous Tertiary Education, which provides higher and vocational education and training for Aboriginal and Torres Straits Islanders, had 451 students enrolled in higher education courses in 2000. In 1997 there were 107 registered Vocational Education and Training (VET) course providers in the Territory, offering 101 courses. At 31 Dec. 1997, 22,321 students were enrolled in VET courses. In 2000 there were 22,797 enrolled in VET courses and of these 33·2% were registered as Indigenous.

Health. In 2002 there were five public hospitals with a total of 569 beds. Community health services are provided from urban and rural Health Centres including mobile units. Remote communities are served by resident nursing staff, aboriginal health workers and in larger communities, resident GPs. Each community receives visiting services from specialist physicians, allied health professionals, public health staff and District Medical Officers. Emergency services are supported by the Aerial Medical Services throughout the Territory.

Welfare. The Aged and Disability Program administers NT and Commonwealth funds ($A32m. in 1999–2000) to provide a number of services for senior Territorians and those with a disability. At June 2002 the numbers of pensioners receiving concessions was 16,252. Concessions include allowances on electricity; water, sewerage and property rates; vehicle registrations; spectacles; urban bus travel; and interstate travel. In 2001–02 disability services expenditure was $A14,618m.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Darwin's radio services include 4 ABC stations, 1 SBS station, 2 commercial stations and a community station. Darwin has 2 commercial, 1 ABC and 1 SBS TV service. Alice Springs radio services include 4 ABC stations, 2 commercial and 2 community stations. It has 2 commercial, 1 ABC and 1 SBS TV service. Most other Northern Territory centres have 1 commercial and 1 national radio service, with 1 each of ABC, SBS and commercial television, many of these being provided by self-help projects.

Tourism. In 2001 tourist expenditures were $A973·5m. An estimated 1·58m. people visited the Northern Territory, an increase of 29,000 over 2000. Of these 569,000 were international visitors. Tourism is the second largest revenue earner after the mining industry.

NEW SOUTH WALES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The name New South Wales was applied to the entire east coast of Australia when Capt. James Cook claimed the land for the British Crown on 23 Aug. 1770. The separate colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, Victoria and Queensland were proclaimed in the 19th century. In 1911 and 1915 the Australian Capital Territory around Canberra and Jervis Bay was ceded to the Commonwealth. New South Wales was thus gradually reduced to its present area. The first settlement was made at Port Jackson in 1788 as a penal settlement. A partially elective council was established in 1843 and responsible government in 1856.

Gold discoveries from 1851 had brought a large influx of immigrants, and responsible government was at first unstable, with seven ministries holding office in the five years after 1856. The times were somewhat lawless and bitter conflict arose from loose land laws enacted in 1861. Lack of transport hampered agricultural expansion.

New South Wales federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New South Wales is situated between the 29th and 38th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises 800,640 sq. km, inclusive of Lord Howe Island, 17 sq. km, but exclusive of the Australian Capital Territory (2,360 sq. km) and 70 sq. km at Jervis Bay.

Lord Howe Island, 31° 33' 4" S., 159° 4' 26" E., which is part of New South Wales, is situated about 702 km northeast of Sydney; area, 1,654 ha, of which only about 120 ha are arable; resident population, estimate (1996 census), 369. The Island, which was discovered in 1788, is of volcanic origin. Mount Gower, the highest point, reaches a height of 866 metres.

The Lord Howe Island Board manages the affairs of the Island and supervises the Kentia palm-seed industry.

Census population of New South Wales (including full-blood Aboriginals from 1966):

At 31 Dec. 2001 the estimated resident population was 6,642,900 (annual growth rate, 1·1%). Although NSW comprises only 10·4% of the total area of Australia, over 33·7% of the Australian population live there. Of the 84,100 immigrants to Australia in 1998–99, 35,141, or 42%, settled in New South Wales—nearly twice as many as any other state.

The state is divided into 12 Statistical Divisions. The estimated population of these (in 1,000) at 30 June 2001 was: Sydney, 4,140·8; Hunter, 582·0; Illawarra, 393·3; Mid-North Coast, 275·1; Richmond-Tweed, 212·8; Murrumbidgee, 184·4; South Eastern, 184·4; Central West, 173·2; Northern, 172·2; North Western, 116·4; Murray, 110·1; Far West, 23·2. Population of the Statistical Subdivisions Newcastle (within Hunter) and Wollongong (within Illawarra) was 487·8 and 266·7 respectively.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Within the State there are three levels of government: the Commonwealth government, with authority derived from a written constitution; the State government with residual powers; the local government authorities with powers based upon a State Act of Parliament, operating within incorporated areas extending over almost 90% of the State.

The Constitution of New South Wales is drawn from several diverse sources; certain Imperial statutes such as the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act (1900); the Australian States Constitution Act (1907); an element of inherited English law; amendments to the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act; the (State) Constitution Act; the Australia Acts of 1986; the Constitution (Amendment) Act 1987 and certain other State Statutes; numerous legal decisions; and a large amount of English and local convention.

The Parliament of New South Wales may legislate for the peace, welfare and good government of the State in all matters not specifically reserved to the Commonwealth government.

The State Legislature consists of the Sovereign, represented by the Governor, and two Houses of Parliament, the Legislative Council (upper house) and the Legislative Assembly (lower house).

Australian citizens aged 18 and over, and other British subjects who were enrolled prior to 26 Jan. 1984, men and women aged 18 years and over, are entitled to the franchise. Enrolment and voting is compulsory. The optional preferential method of voting is used for both houses.

The Legislative Council has 42 members elected for a term of office equivalent to two terms of the Legislative Assembly, with 21 members retiring at the same time as the Legislative Assembly elections. The whole State constitutes a single electoral district.

The Legislative Assembly has 93 members elected in single-seat electoral districts for a maximum period of four years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections held on 22 March 2003 the Labor Party won 56 of 93 seats, the Liberal Party 18, the National Party 12 and ind. 7.

Performance. In 1998–99 the gross state product of New South Wales represented 36% of Australia's total GDP.

Banking and Finance. Banking business is transacted chiefly by the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, the State Bank of New South Wales (government banks) and three private banks. At June 1998 there were 45 banking groups (comprised of 52 banking companies, of which 16 were domestic owned and 36 foreign owned).

Lending activity of financial institutions in New South Wales in 2000–01 comprised (in $A1m.): commercial, 95,469; personal, lease financing, 2,778.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In the year ended 30 June 1999 total consumption (including ACT total consumption) stood at 57,168m. kWh, of which 17,720m. kWh was by residential customers. In 1998–99, 60,058m. kWh were produced, an increase of 4·4% on the previous year. Coal is the main fuel source for electricity generation in the state, accounting for 58,975m. kWh in the year ended 30 June 1999. Total installed capacity at 30 June 2000 was 12,687 MW.

Oil and Gas. No natural gas is produced in NSW. Almost all gas is imported from the Moomba field in South Australia plus, since 2001, a small amount from Bass Strait.

Water. Ground water represents the largest source with at least 130 communities relying on it for drinking water.

Minerals. New South Wales contains extensive mineral deposits. For the year ended 30 June 2000, turnover from 123 mining establishments in the coal and metal ore mining industries, employing 10,461 people, was $A5,660m. The value of metallic minerals produced in 1999–2000 was $A1·28bn.; industrial minerals, $A116·3m.; construction materials, $A444·4m. Output of principal products:

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Antimony (tonnes)	1,711	1,784	1,585
Coal (1,000 tonnes)	107,708	103,421	105,000
Copper (tonnes)	118,000	93,000	124,000
Gold (tonnes)	12	19	20
Lead (tonnes)	166,000	162,000	151,000
Construction sand (1,000 tonnes)	9,428	10,378	10,498
Zinc (tonnes)	270,000	273,000	266,000

Agriculture. NSW accounts for around 27% of Australia's total agricultural production and 20% of total agricultural exports. In 1998–99 GDP at factor income for agriculture, forestry, hunting and fishing was $A4,716m. Farm income (including Australian Capital Territory) was $A1,570m. In the year ended June 2000 there were 43,654 farming establishments. These had an area of 62·1m. ha, of which 6·11 m. ha were used for cropping.

Principal crops in 1999–2000 with production in 1,000 tonnes: wheat for grain, 8,600; sugarcane, 1,977; canola, 827; oats for grain, 284. Estimated value of crops, 1999–2000, came to $A4·9bn. with wheat totalling $A1·4bn. and cotton $A1·1bn. (Data relates to farms whose estimated value of agricultural operations was $A5,000 or more at the census.)

The total area under vines at 1999–2000 was 32,300 ha; grape production totalled 327,000 tonnes.

In 2000 there were 3,899·69 ha of banana plantations, with production of 34,400 tonnes; 4,162,000 citrus fruit trees, with production of 200,269 tonnes.

1999–2000 estimated gross value of livestock products was $A1·4bn., including wool produced, $A833m.; and milk, $A467m. In 1999–2000 production (in tonnes) of butter was 3,912; cheese, 26,140; beef and veal, 445,001; mutton, 118,943; lamb, 79,961; pig meat, 103,232.

Forestry. The area of forests managed by State Forests of NSW in 1999–2000 totalled 2·7m. ha of native forest; 267,000 ha of softwood and 46,000 ha of hardwood plantation with a total yield of 2·78m. cu. metres of sawlogs and veneer logs.

Fisheries. Gross value of fisheries production, including crustaceans and molluscs, in 1998–99, came to $A121·5m.; total volume of fisheries production, 21,777 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

A wide range of manufacturing is undertaken in the Sydney area, and there are large iron and steel works near the coalfields at Newcastle and Port Kembla. Around one-third of Australian manufacturing takes place in NSW.

Manufacturing establishments' operations, 1999–2000:

Industry	No. of persons employed	Wages and salaries ($A1m.)	Turnover ($A1m.)	Industry gross product ($A1m.)
Food, beverages and tobacco	47,620	1,880·9	14,982·1	4,438·8

Total manufacturing	291,930	11,660·1	73,259·1	23,103·1

Labour. In May 2001 the labour force was estimated to number 3,244,700 persons, of whom 3,057,700 were employed: 533,900 as intermediate clerical, sales and service workers; 593,700 as professionals; 274,900 as labourers and related workers; 375,300 as tradespersons and related workers; 239,800 as managers and administrators; 256,500 as intermediate production and transport workers; and 154,000 as advanced clerical and service workers. There were 186,900 unemployed (a rate of 5·8%) in May 2001.

Industrial tribunals are authorized to fix minimum rates of wages and other conditions of employment. Their awards may be enforced by law, as may be industrial agreements between employers and organizations of employees, when registered.

During 2000, 150,800 workers were directly involved in 268 industrial disputes. A total of 166,800 working days were lost.

Trade Unions. Registration of trade unions is effected under the New South Wales Trade Union Act 1881, which follows substantially the Trade Union Acts of 1871 and 1876 of England. Registration confers a quasi-corporate existence with power to hold property, to sue and be sued, etc., and the various classes of employees covered by the union are required to be prescribed by the constitution of the union. For the purpose of bringing an industry under the review of the State industrial tribunals, or participating in proceedings relating to disputes before Commonwealth tribunals, employees and employers must be registered as industrial unions, under State or Commonwealth industrial legislation respectively. Trade union membership was held by 26% of employees in Aug. 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. External commerce, exclusive of interstate trade, is included in the statement of the commerce of Australia. Overseas commerce of New South Wales in $A1m. for years ending 30 June:

The major commodities exported in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) were coal, not agglomerated (3,829), aluminium (1,636), cotton (1,157), wool and other animal hair (1,051), medicaments (including veterinary) (1,021), wheat (including spelt) and meslin (unmilled) (1,005), and meat (960). Principal imports were telecommunications equipment (4,447), computers (4,143) and private motor vehicles (3,060).

Principal destinations of exports in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) were Japan (4,799), USA (2,378), New Zealand (1,777), South Korea (1,395), Taiwan (1,277) and China (948). Major sources of supply were USA (10,787), Japan (5,894), China (4,353), UK (3,550), Germany (2,501), South Korea (2,445) and Malaysia (2,019).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At June 2001 there were 181,840 km of public roads of all sorts. The Roads and Traffic Authority of New South Wales is responsible for the administration and upkeep of major roads. In 2001 there were 20,542 km of roads under its control, comprising 3,105 km of national highways, 14,550 km of state roads and 2,887 km of regional and local roads.

The number of registered motor vehicles (excluding tractors and trailers) at 31 March 2001 was 3,745,500, including 3,007,300 passenger vehicles, 501,700 light commercial vehicles, 128,700 trucks, 17,200 buses and 90,700 motorcycles. There were 556 fatalities in road accidents in 2000–01.

Rail. In 1996 the Rail Access Corporation was formed to own and maintain the railway infrastructure. It leases trackage rights to the State Rail Authority (consisting of CityRail and Countrylink), which operates passenger trains, and to the FreightCorp. In 2000–01, 285·7m. passengers were carried on CityRail and 2·1m. on Countrylink. In 2000–01, 89·0m. tonnes of freight were transported. Also open for traffic are 325 km of Victorian government railways which extend over the border, 68 km of private railways (mainly in mining districts), and 53 km of Commonwealth government-owned track.

A tramway opened in Sydney in 1996. There is also a small overhead railway in the city centre.

Civil Aviation. Sydney Airport (Kingsford Smith) is the major airport in New South Wales and Australia's principal international air terminal. In 2000 it handled a total of 22,393,629 passengers (14,195,306 on domestic flights). It is also the leading airport for freight, handling 428,704 tonnes in 2000. At 31 Aug. 2001 registered aircraft totalled 3,513.

Shipping. The main ports are at Sydney, Newcastle, Port Kembla and Botany Bay. 4,612 commercial and 84 passenger vessels called at ports in New South Wales in 1999–2000.

Telecommunications. At 30 June 2001 there were 11·2m. mobile telephone subscribers (8·6m. in 2000). In 2000 there were 1·25m. households with home computer access (53% of all households) and 785,000 households home Internet access (33%).

Postal Services. At June 2000 a total of 1,303 post offices, post office agencies and community mail agencies provided Australia Post services throughout NSW and the ACT.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Legal processes may be conducted in Local Courts presided over by magistrates or in higher courts (District Court or Supreme Court) presided over by judges. There is also an appellate jurisdiction. Persons charged with more serious crimes must be tried before a higher court.

Children's Courts remove children as far as possible from the atmosphere of a public court. There are also a number of tribunals exercising special jurisdiction, e.g. the Industrial Commission and the Compensation Court.

As at 25 June 2000 there were 7,328 persons held in prison (including 1,521 on remand). Police personnel as at 30 June 2001, 17,501.

Religion. At the 1996 census of those who stated a religion, 29% were Roman Catholic and 25% Anglican. These two religions combined had almost 3·3m. followers.

Education. The State government maintains a system of free primary and secondary education, and attendance at school is compulsory from 6 to 15 years of age. Non-government schools are subject to government inspection.

In 2000 there were 2,187 government schools with 759,623 pupils (455,914 primary and 303,709 secondary) and 49,768 teachers, and 901 non-government schools with 334,693 pupils (173,046 primary and 161,647 secondary) and 22,437 teachers.

There were 223,459 students in higher education in 2000, with the largest numbers enrolled in arts, humanities and social sciences, and business, administration and economics, each with 25% of total enrolments.

Student enrolments in 2000: University of Sydney (founded 1850), 35,121; University of New England at Armidale (incorporated 1954), 14,809; University of New South Wales (founded 1949), 31,498; University of Newcastle (granted autonomy 1965), 18,249; University of Wollongong, 12,657; Macquarie University in Sydney (founded 1964), 20,621; University of Technology, Sydney, 23,807; University of Western Sydney, 28,874; Charles Sturt University, 27,909.

Colleges of advanced education were merged with universities in 1990.

Post-school technical and further education is provided at State TAFE colleges. Enrolments in 2000 totalled 544,096.

Health. In 1999–2000 there were 24,401 medical practitioners, 3,975 dentists and 76,162 registered nurses. There were 16,469 beds in public hospitals and 6,222 private hospitals.

Welfare. The number of income support payments in June 2000 included: age, 577,924; disability support, 200,071; single parent, 130,114; child care assistance, 128,861; carer, 16,860.

Direct State government social welfare services are limited, for the most part, to the assistance of persons not eligible for Commonwealth government pensions or benefits, and the provision of certain forms of assistance not available from the Commonwealth government. The State also subsidizes many approved services for needy persons.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In addition to national broadcasting, at Sept. 2001 there were 22 commercial television services (including stations whose licence covers part of NSW as well as remote satellite services) and a total of 36 AM and 48 FM commercial radio services. The first cable-pay television service commenced in Sept. 1995, and satellite-delivered services in Nov. 1995.

Cinema. A major film studio development for Fox Studios, valued at $A120m., opened to the public in Nov. 1999. At 30 June 2000 there was a total of 456 cinema screens in New South Wales.

Tourism. In the year ended 30 June 1999, 1·75m. overseas visitors arrived for short-term visits. At 30 June 2000 there were 1,314 hotels, motels, guest houses and serviced apartments providing 63,153 rooms.

Libraries. In the year ended 30 June 1997 there were 406 public libraries processing 44·9m. loans of books and other materials. In 1998–99, 1·8m. people visited a library.

QUEENSLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Queensland was first visited by Capt. Cook in 1770. From 1778 it was part of New South Wales and was formed into a separate colony, with the name of Queensland, by letters patent of 8 June 1859, when responsible government was conferred. Although by 1868 gold had been discovered, wool was the colony's principal product. The first railway line was opened in 1865. Queensland federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Queensland comprises the whole northeastern portion of the Australian continent, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean and in the Gulf of Carpentaria. Estimated area 1,730,650 sq. km.

The increase in the population as shown by the censuses since 1901 has been as follows (including Aboriginals from 1966):

	Census counts			Intercensal increase
Year	Males	Females	Total	Numerical	Rate per annum %
1901	277,003	221,126	498,129	—	—
1911	329,506	276,307	605,813	107,684	1·98
1921	398,969	357,003	755,972	150,159	2·24
1933	497,217	450,317	947,534	191,562	1·86
1947	567,471	538,944	1,106,415	158,881	1·11
1954	676,252	642,007	1,318,259	211,844	2·53
1961	774,579	744,249	1,518,828	200,569	2·04
1966	849,390	824,934	1,674,324	144,857	1·84
1971	921,665	905,400	1,827,065	152,741	1·76
1976	1,024,611	1,012,586	2,037,197	210,132	2·20
1981	1,153,404	1,141,719	2,295,123	257,926	2·41
1986	1,295,630	1,291,685	2,587,315	292,192	2·43
1991	1,482,406	1,495,404	2,977,810	390,495	2·60
1996	1,673,220	1,695,630	3,368,850	391,040	2·63

At the 1996 census there were 95,518 Aboriginals and Torres Strait Islanders.

Since the 1981 census, official population estimates are according to place of usual residence and are referred to as estimated resident population. Estimated resident population at 30 June 2000, 3,512,356 (annual growth rate, 1·7%).

Statistics on birthplaces from the 1996 census are as follows: Australia, 78·4% (83·6% in 1986); UK and Ireland, 5·6% (6·1%); other countries, 12·4% (14·4%); at sea and not stated, 3·6% (1·4%).

Brisbane, the capital, had at 30 June 1999 (estimate) a resident population of 1,601,417 (Statistical Division). The estimated resident populations of the other major centres (Statistical Districts) at 30 June 1999 (preliminary) were: Gold Coast-Tweed, (including that part in New South Wales) 391,236; Sunshine Coast, 172,928; Townsville, 127,174; Cairns, 113,954; Mackay, 64,916; Rockhampton, 64,344; Bundaberg, 55,781; Gladstone, 39,100.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics (including Aboriginals) for calendar years:

	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Divorces
1996	47,769	22,281	20,913	10,996
1997	46,965	21,945	20,868	11,744
1998	47,046	22,321	21,257	11,349
1999	46,953	22,409	21,535	11,467

The annual rates per 1,000 population in 1999 were: births, 13·4; deaths, 6·4; marriages, 6·1. The infant mortality rate was 6·4 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy, 1998: 74·0 years for males, 80·3 for females.

CLIMATE

A typical subtropical to tropical climate. High daytime temperatures during Oct. to March give a short spring and long summer. Centigrade temperatures in the hottest inland areas often exceed the high 30s before the official commencement of summer on 1 Dec. Daytime temperatures in winter are quite mild, in the low- to mid-20s. Average rainfall varies from about 150 mm in the desert in the extreme southwestern corner of the State to about 4,000 mm in parts of the sugar lands of the wet northeastern coast, the latter being the wettest part of Australia.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Queensland, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was formed into a separate colony in 1859, and responsible government was conferred. The power of making laws and imposing taxes is vested in a parliament of one house—the Legislative Assembly—which comprises 89 members, returned from four electoral zones for three years, elected from single-member constituencies by compulsory ballot.

Queensland elects 26 members to the Commonwealth House of Representatives.

The Elections Act, 1983, provides franchise for all males and females, 18 years of age and over, qualified by six months' residence in Australia and three months in the electoral district.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Legislative Assembly representation following the State general election in Feb. 2001: Australian Labor Party (ALP), 66 seats; National Party (NP), 12; Liberal Party (LP), 3; ind. 5; One Nation, 3. The NP/LP coalition forms the opposition.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor of Queensland: Maj.-Gen. Peter Arnison, AC, CVO.

In Feb. 2003 the ALP administration was as follows:

ECONOMY

Budget. In 1998–99 current outlays by the state totalled $A16,345m.; revenue and grants received totalled $A16,488m.

Banking and Finance. In Sept. 2001 deposits at all banks in Queensland totalled $A62,844m. Other lending totalled $A85,632m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The government-owned sector of the state's electricity industry has been restructured, and since Dec. 1998 it has operated as part of the wholesale national electricity market. Part of the restructuring was the formation of a single corporation, Ergon Energy, by the amalgamation of the six former regional distribution corporations. In the year ended 30 June 1999 total consumption stood at 32,210m. kWh by 1,532,034 customers, including 9,638m. kWh by residential customers. Coal is the main fuel source for electricity generation in the state, producing 37,379m. kWh in the year ended 30 June 1999. In Feb. 1999 installed generation capacity stood at 7,415 MW.

Water. In the western portion of the State water is comparatively easily found by sinking artesian bores. Monitoring of water quality in Queensland is carried out by the Department of the Environment (estuarine and coastal waters) and the Department of Natural Resources (fresh water).

Minerals. There are large reserves of coal, bauxite, gold, copper, silver, lead, zinc, nickel, phosphate rock and limestone. Most of the coal produced comes from the Bowen Basin coalfields in central Queensland. Copper, lead, silver and zinc are mined in the northwest and the State's largest goldmines are in the north. The total value of metallic minerals in 1999–2000 was $A2·52bn. In 1999–2000 there were 43 coal mines in operation producing 124,348,239 tonnes of saleable coal (an increase of 10·3% on the previous year); and at 30 June 2000, 7,972 persons were employed in mining.

Agriculture. Queensland is Australia's leading beef-producing state and its chief producer of fruit and vegetables. In the year ended June 2000 there were 30,698 agricultural establishments farming 145·4m. ha. Livestock on farms and stations numbered 10,748,000 cattle, 10,600,000 sheep and lambs and 621,000 pigs. Total wool production, 45,686 tonnes. The total area under crops during 1998–99 was 3,014,000 ha.

The gross value of agricultural commodity production in 1999–2000 was estimated to be $A6·5bn. (1·5% increase on the previous year) which comprised crops, $A3·3bn.; livestock disposals, $A2·6bn.; and livestock products, $A544m.

Forestry. Of a total of 54m. ha of forests and woodlands in 1999, 6% was in national parks and World Heritage areas while 7% was in State forests and timber reserves outside World Heritage sites. Queensland's plantation forests supply around 40% of Australia's wood and paper products. The forestry industry is an important part of the state's economy, employing around 17,000 people with a gross output of $A1,700m.

Fisheries. Gross value of fisheries production, including crustaceans and molluscs, in 1998–99 came to $A241·6m.; total volume of fisheries production, 29,652 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

In 1999–2000 manufacturing industry turnover was $A34,109m. At 30 June 2000, 142,100 people were employed in manufacturing and a total of $A4,987m. wages and salaries were paid. The largest manufacturing sector was food, beverages and tobacco.

Labour. In May 2000 the labour force numbered 1,823,600, of whom 1,680,500 (736,000 females) were employed. Unemployment stood at 8·0% in 1999–2000, the lowest total for a decade.

Trade Unions. In Aug. 1999, 332,373 employees were members of a trade union (25·0% of total employment).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total value of direct overseas imports and exports (in $A1m.) f.o.b. port of shipment for both imports and exports:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Imports	8,636·8	9,751·0	10,809·9
Exports	13,566·6	16,288·2	15,900·2

In 1998–99 interstate exports totalled $A5,840·7m. and imports $A14,203·8m. Chief sources of imports in 1998–99 (in $A1m.): Japan, 2,227·8; EU, 1,989·4; USA, 1,921; Papua New Guinea, 629·3; New Zealand, 627·8. Exports went chiefly to: Japan, 4,446·0; EU, 2,319·0; South Korea, 1,473·0; USA, 1,024·2; Taiwan, 745·5.

The chief exports overseas in 1998–99 (in $A1m.) were: coal, 5,508·3; meat and meat preparations, 1,906·5; non-ferrous metals, 1,514·7; metalliferous ores and metal scrap, 1,018·2; machinery and transport equipment, 678·3. Principal overseas imports were: road vehicles, 2,379·8; petroleum and petroleum products, 1,068·5; machinery, specialized for particular industries, 805·5; general industrial machinery and equipment, 741·7; power generating machinery and equipment, 375·9.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 2001 there were 178,295 km of roads open to the public. Of these, 68,076 km were surfaced with sealed pavement. At 31 Oct. 1999 motor vehicles registered (in 1,000) totalled 2,242·4, comprising 1,741·1 passenger vehicles, 396·3 light commercial vehicles, 85·7 trucks, 73·2 motorcycles, 14·1 buses and 5·2 campervans. There were 313 fatalities in road accidents in 1999.

Rail. Queensland Rail is a State government-owned corporation. Total length of line at 30 June 1999 was 9,500 km, of which 1,875 km were electrified. In 1998–99, 42·0m. passengers and 111·9m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. Queensland is well served with a network of air services, with overseas and interstate connections. Subsidiary companies provide planes for taxi and charter work, and the Flying Doctor Service operates throughout western Queensland. In 1997–98 all Federal airports were leased to private sector operators—Brisbane, Archerfield, Coolangatta, Mount Isa and Townsville Airports (the latter is operated jointly with the Department of Defence). In 2000 Brisbane handled 10,534,293 passengers (8,084,979 on domestic flights); Cairns, 2,506,218 passengers (1,834,386 on domestic flights). The number of aircraft registered at 30 June 1999 was 2,423.

Shipping. Queensland has 14 modern trading ports, 2 community ports and a number of non-trading ports. In 1999–2000 general cargo imported through Queensland ports was 1,012,441 mass tonnes and general cargo exported was 1,264,913 mass tonnes. There were 6,377 commercial ship calls during 1999–2000.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 668,000 households with home computer access (50% of all households) and 408,000 households with home Internet access (31%).

Postal Services. At 1 July 1997 there were 446 post offices and postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by Higher Courts (Supreme and District), Magistrates' Courts and Children's Courts. The Supreme Court comprises the Chief Justice and 21 judges; the District Courts, 34 district court judges. Stipendiary magistrates preside over the Magistrates' and Children's Courts, except in the smaller centres, where justices of the peace officiate. A parole board may recommend prisoners for release.

In 1998–99 the Queensland Police Service recorded 409,722 offences, an average annual increase of 6·0% since 1989–90. As at 30 June 2000 the average daily number of prisoners stood at 4,482.

Education. Education is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 15 years and is provided free in government schools.

Primary and secondary education comprises 12 years of full-time formal schooling, and is provided by both the government and non-government sectors. In 1999 the State administered 1,300 schools with 273,710 primary students and 152,166 secondary students. In 1999 there were 29,164 teachers in government schools. There were 420 private schools in 1999 with 85,278 primary students and 83,430 secondary students. Educational programmes at private schools were provided by 11,109 teachers in 1999.

In 1999 there were 27,687 full-time students at TAFE institutes. The seven publicly funded universities had 125,185 full-time students in 2000.

Health. In 1998–99 there were 151 public acute hospitals with over 9,800 beds and 4 public psychiatric hospitals; 47 private acute hospitals and 5 private psychiatric hospitals. At 30 June 1999 there were 7,571 doctors, 3,614 specialists, 1,953 dentists and 35,329 registered nurses.

Welfare. Welfare institutions providing shelter and social care for the aged, the handicapped and children are maintained or assisted by the State. A child health service is provided throughout the State. Age, invalid, widows', disability and war service pensions, family allowances, and unemployment and sickness benefits are paid by the Federal government. The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) at 30 June 1999 was: age, 284,852; disability support, 105,276; carer, 7,770. There were 5,879 widows' and 80,318 single parent payments current at 30 June 1999, and basic family payment was being paid for 654,363 children under 16 years.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In addition to the national networks Queensland is served by 13 public radio stations (non-profit-making), 44 commercial radio stations and 3 commercial TV channels.

Tourism. Overseas visitors to Australia who specified Queensland as their primary destination numbered 1,309,800 in 1999, with the main source being from Asia with 52·7% of the State visitor total, of which Japanese made up 30·8%. Visitors from New Zealand accounted for 19·9%; Europe 14·0% (including UK and Ireland, 5·5%); and North America 6·3%.

Libraries. The State Library of Queensland received about 113,000 requests for information during 1998–99 and was visited by more than 309,000 people.

Theatre and Opera. The Queensland Performing Arts Complex at South Bank comprises a Concert Hall, Lyric Theatre, the Cremorne Theatre and a drama theatre, the Southbank Playhouse.

Museums and Galleries. In 1996–97 there were 37 museums at over 46 locations throughout Queensland with admissions totalling 2,114,100. The Queensland Museum focuses on science and human achievement. The Queensland Art Gallery is located at South Bank and during 1998–99 held 26 special exhibitions which attracted a total of 336,090 visitors.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

South Australia was surveyed by Tasman in 1644 and charted by Flinders in 1802. It was formed into a British province by letters of patent of Feb. 1836, and a partially elective legislative council was established in 1851. From 6 July 1863 the Northern Territory was placed under the jurisdiction of South Australia until the establishment of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1911.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area of South Australia is 983,480 sq. km. The settled part is divided into counties and hundreds. There are 49 counties proclaimed, and 536 hundreds, covering 23m. ha, of which 19m. ha are occupied. Outside this area there are extensive pastoral districts, covering 76m. ha, 49m. of which are under pastoral leases.

The resident population at 31 Dec. 2001 was 1,518,900 (annual growth rate, 0·5%); at 31 Dec. 1999 the population was 1,496,207. The 1996 census population was 1,427,936 (22,051 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders).

At the 1996 census the Adelaide Statistical Division had 1,045,854 persons (73·2% of South Australia's total population) in 25 councils and 4 municipalities and other districts. Urban centres outside this area (with 1996 census populations) are Whyalla (23,382), Mount Gambier (22,037), Port Augusta (13,914), Port Pirie (13,633) and Port Lincoln (11,678).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live Births	Deaths	Marriages	Divorces
1997	18,849	11,668	7,945	4,115
1998	17,979	11,432	8,022	4,159
1999	18,261	11,684	8,240	4,300
2000	18,018	17,439	–	–

The rates per 1,000 population in 2000 were: births, 11·9; deaths, 7·9; marriages, 5·5; divorces, 2·7. The infant mortality rate in 2000 was 4·6 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy for 1999–2000 was 76·6 years for men and 82·3 years for women.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present Constitution dates from 24 Oct. 1856. It vests the legislative power in an elected Parliament, consisting of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The former is composed of 22 members. Eleven members are elected at alternate elections for a term of at least six years and are elected on the basis of proportional representation with the State as one multi-member electorate. The House of Assembly consists of 47 members elected by a preferential system of voting for the term of a Parliament (approximately four years). Election of members of both Houses takes place by preferential secret ballot. Voting is compulsory for those on the Electoral Roll. The qualifications of an elector are to be an Australian citizen, or a British subject who was, at some time within the period of three months commencing on 26 Oct. 1983, enrolled under the Repealed Act as an Assembly elector or enrolled on an electoral roll maintained under the Commonwealth or a Commonwealth Territory, must be at least 18 years of age and have lived in the subdivision for which the person is enrolled for at least one month. By the Constitution Act Amendment Act, 1894, the franchise was extended to women, who voted for the first time at the general election of 25 April 1896. Certain persons are ineligible for election to either House.

Electors enrolled (30 Dec. 2002) numbered 1,050,000.

The executive power is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and an Executive Council, consisting of the Governor and the Ministers of the Crown. The Governor has the power to dissolve the House of Assembly but not the Legislative Council, unless that Chamber has twice consecutively with an election intervening defeated the same or substantially the same Bill passed in the House of Assembly by an absolute majority.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The House of Assembly, elected on 9 Feb. 2002, consisted of the following members: Australian Labor Party (ALP), 23; Liberal Party (LIB), 20; Independent (ind.), 2; National, 1; CLIC, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Marjorie Jackson-Nelson, AC, CVO, MBE.

ECONOMY

Budget. Non-financial public sector revenue and expenses (in $A1m.):

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Revenue	9,417	9,300	9,051
Expenditure	9,618	9,638	9,279

Performance. South Australia's 2000–01 gross state product represented 6·49% of Australia's total GDP. Economic growth was expected to slow to 2·5% in 2001–02 following growth of 2·75% in 2000–01.

Banking and Finance. In Sept. 2001 total deposits held by banks was $A21,633m. and loans totalled $A28,670m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In the year ended 30 June 1999 total consumption stood at 10,456m. kWh, including 3,814m. kWh by residential customers.

Minerals. The principal metallic minerals produced are copper, iron ore, uranium oxide, gold and silver. The total value of minerals produced in 2000–01 was $A2,152·3m. including copper, $A702·9m.; natural gas, $A426·6m.; uranium oxide, $A227·7m.; opals (estimate), $A38·3m.

Agriculture. In the year ended 31 March 2000 there were 15,905 establishments mainly engaged in agriculture with a total area under holding of 59·9m. ha. The gross value of agricultural commodities in 1999–2000 was $A2,999·7m. Total value of wool production, $A204·1m. The area of cereal crops in 1999–2000 totalled 2,853,000 ha. Estimated value (in $A1m.) of the chief crops in 1999–2000: wheat, 492·3; barley, 245·0; winegrapes, 484·3 (vineyards' total area, 61,141 ha, including 12,729 ha not yet bearing, representing 41·8% of Australia's total). Fruit culture is extensive with citrus and orchard fruits. The most valuable vegetable crops are potatoes, onions and carrots.

Livestock, 30 June 2000 preliminary figures: 1,152,000 cattle, 13,675,000 sheep and 402,000 pigs. Value of livestock products for 1999–2000, $A504·3m.

Irrigation. For the year ended 31 March 1999, 137,500 ha were under irrigated culture, being used as follows: vineyards, 44,700; fruit (excluding grapes) and nuts, 15,300; vegetables, 10,500; and pasture, 58,900.

Forestry. Total area of plantations at 30 June 2001 totalled 81,262 ha.

Fisheries. Gross value of fisheries production, including crustaceans and molluscs, in 1998–99 came to $A348·1m.; total volume of fisheries production, 26,862 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

The turnover for manufacturing industries for 1999–2000 was $A21,442·0m.; wages and salaries totalled $A3,084·8m.

Industry sub-division	Persons employed (1,000)	Turnover ($A1m.)
Food, beverages and tobacco	15·3	4,881·2
Textiles, clothing, footwear and leather manufacturing	3·4	716·1
Wood and paper products manufacturing	6·6	1,374·3
Printing, publishing and recorded media	5·4	833·3
Chemical, petroleum, coal and associated products	6·4	1,614·0
Non-metallic mineral products	2·8	710·1
Metal products manufacturing	11·0	2,827·4
Machinery and equipment	28·1	7,814·0
Other manufacturing	5·1	671·2
Total	84·0	21,442·0

Practically all forms of secondary industry are to be found, the most important being motor vehicle manufacture, saw-milling and the manufacture of household appliances, basic iron and steel, meat and meat products, and wine and brandy.

Labour. Two systems of industrial arbitration and conciliation for the adjustment of industrial relations between employers and employees are in operation—the State system, which operates when industrial disputes are confined to the territorial limits of the State, and the Federal system, which applies when disputes involve other parts of Australia as well as South Australia.

The industrial tribunals are authorized to fix minimum rates of wages and other conditions of employment, and their awards may be enforced by law. Industrial agreements between employers and organizations of employees, when registered, may be enforced in the same manner as awards.

As at Feb. 2001 the labour force stood at 674,400. There were 57,300 unemployed, a rate of 7·5%, down from 9·3% in Feb. 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Overseas imports and exports in $A1m. (year ending 30 June):

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Exports	4,983·5	5,301·0	6,179·5

Principal exports in 1999–2000 were (with values in $A1m.): wine, 898·4; road vehicles, parts and accessories, 883·9; metals and metal manufacture, 804·2; wheat, 473·1; fish and crustaceans, 393·6; petroleum and petroleum products, 218·5; wool and sheepskins, 179·0; meat and meat preparations, 160·1.

Principal imports in 1999–2000 were (with values in $A1m.): machinery, 1,164·7; road vehicles, parts and accessories, 838·9; petroleum and petroleum products, 515·5.

In 1999–2000 the leading suppliers of imports were (with values in $A1m.): Japan (831·4), USA (572·6), Saudi Arabia (240·9), UK (208·6), other European Union (678·1), New Zealand (120·9). Main export markets were USA (953·5), Japan (785·9), UK (624·9), other European Union (446·8), New Zealand (445·8), China (314·5), Hong Kong (255·6).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 1999 there were 27,117 km of sealed and 69,335 km of unsealed roads. Motor vehicles registered as at 30 June 1999: passenger vehicles, 838,485; other motor vehicles, 167,922; motorcycles, 26,129. In 1999 there were 153 road accident fatalities.

Rail. In Aug. 1997 the passenger operations of Australian National Railways were sold to Great Southern Railway and the freight operations to Australian Southern Railroad. At 30 June 1996 Australian National Railways operated 4,415 km of railway in country areas. TransAdelaide operates 120 km of railway in the metropolitan area of Adelaide.

There is a tramway in Adelaide that runs from the city centre to the coast. A planned joint South Australia and Northern Territory project 'The AustralAsia Rail Project' is a major infrastructure project involving the construction of 1,410 km standard gauge railway between Alice Springs and Darwin.

Civil Aviation. The main airport is Adelaide International Airport, which handled 3,868,854 passengers (3,599,032 on domestic flights) in 2000.

Shipping. There are 10 state and 5 private deep-sea ports. In 1999–2000, 1,714 commercial vessels arrived in South Australia. General cargo imported in 1999–2000 was 212,719 mass tonnes and general cargo exported was 626,266 mass tonnes.

Telecommunications. In 1998 residential telephone penetration was 98·0% (93·6% in 1986). In 2000 there were 295,000 households with home computer access (50% of all households) and 176,000 households with home Internet access (30%).

Postal Services. At 30 June 1999 there were 548 Australia Post retail facilities in South Australia and Northern Territory.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court, which incorporates admiralty, civil, criminal, land and valuation, and testamentary jurisdiction; district criminal courts, which have jurisdiction in many indictable offences; and magistrates courts, which include the Youth Court. Circuit courts are held at several places. At 1 July 2001 the police force numbered 3,808. The average daily number of prisoners in June 2001 was 1,389.

Religion. Religious affiliation at the 1996 census: Catholic, 296,048; Anglican, 228,151; Uniting Church, 180,604; Lutheran, 70,970; Orthodox, 42,053; Baptist, 26,251; Presbyterian, 23,994; other Christians, 74,868; non-Christians, 25,236; indefinite, 4,885; no religion, 310,908; not stated, 138,554.

Education. Education is compulsory for children between the ages of 6 and 15 years although most children are enrolled at age 5 or soon after. Primary and secondary education at government schools is secular and free. In Aug. 2001 there were 812 schools operating, of which 611 were government and 201 non-government schools. There were 114,287 children in government and 43,500 in non-government primary schools, and 61,935 children in government and 31,800 in non-government secondary schools. In 2000 there were eight Training and Further Education (TAFE) institutes delivering through 54 separate campuses across the state to 97,061 students. There were 24,738 students enrolled at the University of South Australia in 2000; University of Adelaide, 12,885; and Flinders University, 11,404.

Health. As at 30 June 2001 there were 80 public hospitals, 52 private hospitals. Beds available in public and private hospitals totalled 6,675.

Welfare. The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) on 30 June 2001 was: age, 169,370; disability support, 59,794. There were 57,588 Newstart and Mature Age allowances and 34,312 single parent payments current at 30 June 2001.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are 131 radio stations (24 AM and 107 FM) and 4 commercial TV stations, 1 community service TV station and the national ABC service.

Tourism. In the year ended 30 June 2000 international visitors totalled 350,100 (over 50% from Europe), an increase of 12%. At 30 June 2001 there were 234 hotels, motels, guest houses and serviced apartments with 10,596 rooms.

Festivals. Over 400 festivals, carnivals and special events take place each year. The Adelaide Festival Arts, founded in 1960, is held biennially in the Adelaide Festival Centre.

Libraries. In the year ending April 1999, 492,400 people visited a library. In June 1997, 83 authorities were operating 136 public libraries, including 46 school/community libraries and 9 mobile libraries.

Statistical Information: The State office of the Australian Bureau of Statistics is at 55 Currie St., Adelaide (GPO Box 2272). Although the first printed statistical publication was the Statistics of South Australia, 1854, with the title altered to Statistical Register in 1859, there is a manuscript volume for each year back to 1838. These contain simple records of trade, demography, production, etc. and were prepared only for the information of the Colonial Office; one copy was retained in the State.

The publications of the State office include the South Australian Year Book (now discontinued), a monthly South Australian Economic Indicators, a quarterly bulletin of building activity, and approximately 40 special bulletins issued each year as particulars of various sections of statistics become available.

TASMANIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Abel Janszoon Tasman discovered Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) on 24 Nov. 1642. The island became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales; in 1825 its connection with New South Wales was terminated; in 1851 a partially elected Legislative Council was established; and in 1856 responsible government came into operation. On 1 Jan. 1901 Tasmania was federated with the other Australian states into the Commonwealth of Australia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tasmania is a group of islands separated from the mainland by Bass Strait with an area (including islands) of 68,400 sq. km, of which 63,447 sq. km form the area of the main island. The population at 11 consecutive censuses (including full-blood Aboriginals from 1966) was:

	Population		Population
1947	257,078	1981	418,957
1954	308,752	1986	436,353
1961	350,340	1991	452,837
1966	371,435	1996	459,659
1971	390,413	2001	456,652
1976	402,868

At the census of 7 Aug. 2001, 21,910 were born in the UK or Ireland, 11,120 in other European countries and 386,036 in Australia. The resident population at 31 Dec. 2001 was 473,300 (annual growth rate, 0·2%).

The largest cities and towns (with populations at the 2001 census) are: Hobart (191,169), Launceston (95,604), Devonport (23,030) and Burnie (18,145).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Divorces
1997	6,007	3,809	2,672	1,321
1998	5,978	3,605	2,599	1,322
1999	6,032	3,783	2,499	1,391
2000	5,692	3,711	2,589	1,329

CLIMATE

Mostly a temperate maritime climate. The sea, never more than 115 km distant, suppresses temperature extremes. The prevailing westerly airstream leads to a marked variation of cloudiness, rainfall and temperature. The result is a west coast and highlands that are cool, wet and cloudy, and an east coast and lowlands that are milder, drier and sunnier.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament consists of the Governor, the Legislative Council and the House of Assembly. The Council has 15 members, elected by adults with 6 months' residence. Members sit for six years, with either two or three retiring annually. There is no power to dissolve the Council. Vacancies are filled by by-elections. The House of Assembly has 25 members; the maximum term for the House of Assembly is four years. Women received the right to vote in 1903. Proportional representation was adopted in 1907, the method now being the single transferable vote in five member constituencies. Casual vacancies in the House of Assembly are determined by a transfer of the preference of the vacating member's ballot papers to consenting candidates who were unsuccessful at the last general election.

A Minister must have a seat in one of the two Houses.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of July 2002 the Australian Labor Party won 14 seats in the House of Assembly, the Liberal Party 7 and the Tasmanian Greens 4.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The Legislative Council is predominantly independent without formal party allegiance; four members are Labor-endorsed.

Governor: Sir Guy Green, AC, KBE.

A majority Labor government was re-elected in July 2002, which in Feb. 2003 comprised:

Premier, Minister for Arts, Tourism, Parks and Heritage: Jim Bacon.

Deputy Premier, Minister for Economic Development, Energy and Resources, Racing, Sport and Recreation: Paul Lennon. Infrastructure: Jim Cox. Primary Industries, Water and Environment: Bryan Green. Cabinet Secretary and Treasury Spokesperson in Lower House: Steven Kons. Attorney General, Minister for Justice and International Relations: Judy Jackson. Health and Human Services, Police and Public Safety: David Llewellyn. Treasurer and Minister for Employment: David Crean. Minister for Education, Women: Paula Wriedt. Parliamentary Secretary to the Premier: Kathryn Hay. Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Premier: Lara Giddings.

Speaker of the House of Assembly: Michael Polley.

ECONOMY

Budget. Revenue is derived chiefly from taxation (pay-roll, motor, lottery and land tax, business franchises and stamp duties), and from grants and reimbursements from the Commonwealth government. General Purpose Payments (GPPs) are made to States from the Commonwealth and can be spent at the State's discretion.

Other Specific Purpose Payment (SPP) Grants from the Commonwealth are mainly used to provide essential services such as hospitals, housing, roads and educational services.

Consolidated Revenue Fund receipts and expenditure, in $A1m., for financial years ending 30 June:

	2000–01	2001–02
Revenue	2,301	2,420
Expenditure	2,297	2,416

Total State Government Sector Debt as at 30 June 2001 was, in real terms, $A2,036m. (2000, $A2,458m.).

In 2000–01 State government revenue from taxes amounted to $A547m., of which pay-roll tax provided $A165m.; motor tax, $A96m.; taxes on property, $A161m.; taxes on gambling, insurance and levies on statutory corporations, $A234m.; and franchise taxes, $A6m.

Banking and Finance. The total value of deposits at 30 June 2001 was $A3,489m. The value of loans at 30 June 2001 was $A5,327m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 2,502 MW. In the year ended 30 June 2000 total consumption stood at 9,563m. kWh, including 1,759m. kWh by residential customers. The disaggregation process has created the new Hydro-Electric Commission, Aurora Energy and Transend Networks.

Minerals. Output of principal metallic minerals in 2000–01 was (in tonnes): zinc, 143,200; iron ore pellets, 2,027,300; copper, 105,400; lead, 40,600; tin, 14,800.

Agriculture. There were 4,286 agricultural establishments at 30 March 2000 occupying a total area of 1·7m. ha. Principal crops (1999–2000): wheat (19,800 tonnes from 6,300 ha); barley (22,200 tonnes from 9,100 ha); oats (9,700 tonnes from 6,300 ha); peas (28,500 tonnes from 4,500 ha); potatoes (267,200 tonnes from 5,700 ha); hay (222,200 tonnes from 50,600 ha). The estimated gross value of recorded production from agriculture in 1999–2000 was (in $A1m.): livestock products, 217·2; livestock slaughterings and other disposals, 153·6; crops, 320·4; total gross value, 691·2. Livestock at 31 March 2001: cattle, 682,300; sheep, 3,483,700; pigs, 22,200. Wool produced during 2000–01 was 15,218 tonnes, valued at $A85·0m. In 2000–01, 5,949 tonnes of butter and 32,355 tonnes of cheese, were produced.

Forestry. Indigenous forests cover a considerable part of the State, and the sawmilling and woodchipping industries are very important. Production of sawn timber in 2000–01 was 339,000 cu. metres. Newsprint and paper are produced from native hardwoods, principally eucalypts.

Fisheries. The gross value of production from Tasmania's fisheries in 2000–01 was $A311·9m., a 12·7% increase on 1999–2000 figures.

INDUSTRY

The most important manufactures for export are refined metals, woodchips, newsprint and other paper manufactures, pigments, woollen goods, fruit pulp, confectionery, butter, cheese, preserved and dried vegetables, sawn timber, and processed fish products. The electrolytic-zinc works at Risdon near Hobart treat large quantities of local and imported ore, and produce zinc, sulphuric acid, superphosphate, sulphate of ammonia, cadmium and other by-products. At George Town, large-scale plants produce refined aluminium and manganese alloys. During 1999–2000, 5,145,300 tonnes (green weight) of woodchips were produced. In 1999–2000 employment in manufacturing establishments was 20,200; wages and salaries totalled $A745m.; turnover, $A5,490·3m.

Labour. There were an estimated 217,100 persons (based on trend estimates) in the labour force in Nov. 2002 and an estimated 374,900 civilian Tasmanians aged 15 and over, yielding a workforce participation rate of 57·9% compared to 58·7% in Nov. 2001.

Trade Unions. In 2000 Tasmania had the highest rate of trade union membership of any Australian State, at 31·3%. This compared with 34·6% in Aug. 1998 and 39·3% in Aug. 1996.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2000–01 exports totalled $A2,435·6m. to overseas countries. The principal countries of destination in 2000–01 (with values in $A1m.) for overseas exports were: Japan, 573·3; Hong Kong, 252·8; USA, 229·8; Taiwan, 214·0; Korea, 184·0. Exports to the European Community totalled $A154·0m. In 2000–01 direct imports into Tasmania totalled $A524·0m. from overseas countries.

Commodities by value (in $A1m.) exported to overseas countries in 1999–2000 included: non-ferrous metals, 793·2; metallic ores and metal scrap, 242·7; fish, crustaceans and molluscs, 176·7; road vehicles and transport equipment, 107·3; dairy products, 101·0; meat and meat preparations, 88·7; vegetables and fruit, 44·7.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were approximately 24,000 km of roads open to general traffic, of which 370 km were National Highway and 3,350 km were arterial State roads. Motor vehicles registered at 31 Oct. 2001 comprised 246,367 passenger vehicles, 76,432 commercial vehicles and 8,469 motorcycles. In 2001 there were 61 road accident fatalities.

Rail. Tasmania's rail network, incorporating 867 km of railways, is primarily a freight system with no regular passenger services. There are some small tourist railways, notably the newly rebuilt 34 km Abt Wilderness Railway on the west coast.

Civil Aviation. Regular passenger and freight services connect the south, north and northwest of the State with the mainland. During 1999–2000 the six main airports handled 1,736,000 passengers and 5,470 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. There are four major commercial ports, Burnie, Devonport, Launceston and Hobart. Total tonnage through these ports in 2000–01 was 13·6m. mass tonnes. Passenger ferry services connect Tasmania with the mainland and offshore islands.

In 2000–01 passenger/vehicle services carried 330,961 people, 127,124 motor vehicles and 21,771 Twenty-Foot Equivalent Units (TEUs).

Telecommunications. In April 1999 there were 34 post offices and 152 licensees. In 2000 there were 84,000 households with home computer access (45% of all households) and 48,000 households with home Internet access (26%). In 2000, 49% of all households had access to a mobile phone.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court of Tasmania, with civil, criminal, ecclesiastical, admiralty and matrimonial jurisdiction, established by Royal Charter on 13 Oct. 1823, is a superior court of record, with both original and appellate jurisdiction, and consists of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges. There are also inferior civil courts with limited jurisdiction, licensing courts, mining courts, courts of petty sessions and coroners' courts.

In 2000–01 there were 58,295 recorded offences, of which 51,339 were against property; 3,660 against the person; and 2,879 fraud and similar offences. The total police force at 30 June 2001 was 1,131. There are three prisons and one detention centre which received a combined total of 347 prisoners at 30 June 2001.

Religion. At the census of 2001 the following numbers of adherents of the principal religions were recorded:

Anglican Church	147,413	Other Christian	10,526
Roman Catholic	87,691	Indefinite and not stated	47,430
Uniting Church	30,376	No religion	78,672
Presbyterian	12,508	Non-Christian	2,975
Baptist	8,984
		Total	456,652

Education. Education is controlled by the State and is free, secular and compulsory between the ages of 6 and 16. In 2001 government schools had a total enrolment of 61,976 pupils, including 25,571 at secondary level; 67 private schools had a total enrolment of 20,821 pupils, including 10,354 at secondary level.

Vocational Education and Training is mostly provided by TAFE Tasmania through five state-wide product-aligned institutes. In 2001 there were 45,727 enrolments in Vocational Education and Training activities.

Tertiary education is offered at the University of Tasmania in Hobart and Launceston and the Australian Maritime College in Launceston. In 2001 the University (established 1890) had 12,820 students and 1,556 academic staff.

Health. In 2000–01 there were 109 public hospitals with 1,090 beds and nine private hospitals with 831 beds. There were 1,814 nurses employed in public hospitals.

Welfare. The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) on 30 June 2001 was: age, 48,499; disability support, 21,655; carer, 2,005. There were 976 widows' and 20,217 single parent payments current at 30 June 2001, and basic family payment was being paid for 83,433 children under 16 years.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 2002 there were four TV broadcasters and 21 radio stations.

Press. There are three daily papers with a combined circulation of 120,710 at March 2001. The largest circulation for a Tasmanian daily is for the Saturday edition of The Mercury, with a circulation of 65,097.

Tourism. In 2000–01 there was an estimated 531,000 adult visitors arrived to Tasmania.

Festivals. The Taste of Tasmania is a seven-day food and wine festival held on Hobart's waterfront over the New Year. The annual festival attracts approximately 200,000 patrons.

Libraries. The State Library of Tasmania delivers its services through a Statewide network of 49 public libraries and seven reference specialist libraries. These include the Tasmaniana Library, the W. L. Crowther Library, and the Allport Library and Museum of Fine Arts.

Theatre and Opera. The Theatre Royal in Hobart, established in 1834, has resumed its pre-eminent position in the city's cultural scene following extensive renovation.

Museums and Galleries. The Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery (TMAG) houses collections in the fields of fine and applied art, zoology, geology, botany, history, anthropology and applied science. The Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery was established in 1891.

VICTORIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first permanent settlement in the area was formed at Portland Bay in 1834. Regular government was first established in 1839. Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was proclaimed a separate colony in 1851 at much the same time as gold was discovered. A new constitution giving responsible government to the colony was proclaimed on 23 Nov. 1855. This event had far-reaching effects, as the population increased from 76,162 in 1850 to 589,160 in 1864. By this time the main impetus behind the search for gold had waned and the new arrivals availed themselves of the opening of the pastoral and agricultural lands to smaller holders and the gradual development of manufacturing industries. Victoria federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The State has an area of 227,420 sq. km, and, at 31 Dec. 2001, a resident population of 4,854,100 (annual growth rate, 1·3%). The 1996 census population was 4,373,520. Victoria has the greatest proportion of people from non-English-speaking countries of any State or Territory, with (1996) 2·3% from Italy, 1·4% from Greece and 1·3% from Vietnam. Of the 84,150 immigrants to Australia in 1998–99, 17,290, or 20·5%, settled in Victoria—second only to New South Wales.

Estimated population at 30 June 1999, within 11 'Statistical Divisions': Melbourne, 3,413,894; Barwon, 245,343; Goulburn, 186,500; Loddon, 161,263; Gippsland, 152,943; Central Highlands, 137,221; Western District, 98,954; Ovens-Murray, 90,452; Mallee, 88,118; East Gippsland, 80,652; Wimmera, 51,453.

Population of urban centres with over 10,000 inhabitants at the 1996 census: Melbourne, 2,865,329; Geelong, 125,382; Ballarat, 64,831; Bendigo, 59,936; Shepparton-Mooroopna, 31,945; Melton, 30,304; Warrnambool, 26,052; Albury-Wodonga (Wodonga Part), 25,825; Cranbourne, 24,752; Mildura, 24,142; Sunbury, 22,126; Traralgon, 18,993; Wangaratta, 15,527; Moe-Yallourn, 15,512; Morwell, 13,823; Sale, 13,366; Craigieburn, 12,919; Horsham, 12,591; Bacchus Marsh, 11,279; Ocean Grove-Barwon Heads, 11,272; Bairnsdale, 10,890; Echuca-Moama (Echuca part), 10,014.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was, in 1851, proclaimed a separate colony, with a partially elective Legislative Council. In 1856 responsible government was conferred, the legislative power being vested in a parliament of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. At present the Council consists of 44 members who are elected for two terms of the Assembly, one-half retiring at each election. The Assembly consists of 88 members, elected for four years from the date of its first meeting unless sooner dissolved by the Governor. Members and electors of both Houses must be aged 18 years and Australian citizens or those British subjects previously enrolled as electors, according to the Constitution Act 1975. No property qualification is required, but judges, members of the Commonwealth Parliament, undischarged bankrupts and persons convicted of an offence which is punishable by life imprisonment, may not be members of either House. Single voting (one elector one vote) and compulsory preferential voting apply to Council and Assembly elections. Enrolment for Council and Assembly electors is compulsory. The Council may not initiate or amend money bills, but may suggest amendments in such bills other than amendments which would increase any charge. A bill shall not become law unless passed by both Houses.

In the exercise of the executive power the Governor is advised by a Cabinet of responsible Ministers. Section 50 of the Constitution Act 1975 provides that the number of Ministers shall not at any one time exceed 22, of whom not more than 6 may sit in the Legislative Council and not more than 17 may sit in the Legislative Assembly.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections to the Legislative Assembly held on 18 Sept. 1999 the Labor Party won 41 seats with 45·5% of votes cast; the Liberal Party, 36 (42·2%); the National Party, 7 (4·9%); others, 3 (7·4%). Turn-out was 76·3%.

In the simultaneous elections to the Legislative Council the Liberal Party won 25 seats; the Labor Party, 13; and the National Party, 6.

ECONOMY

Budget. State expenditure 1999–2000: total outlay (in $A1m.), 20,321, including education, 5,629; health, 5,027; transport and communications, 2,029; public order and safety, 1,956; general public services, 838. State revenue 1999–2000: 22,027.

Local expenditure 1999–2000: total outlay (in $A1m.), 3,175, including transport and communications, 844; housing and community amenities, 579; recreation and culture, 569; social security and welfare, 430; general public services, 322. Local revenue 1999–2000: 3,123.

Performance. In 1999–2000 Victoria's gross state product represented 25·43% of Australia's total GDP.

Banking and Finance. The State Bank of Victoria, the largest bank in the State, provides domestic and international services for business and personal customers and is the largest supplier of housing finance in Victoria. In 1990 it ran into debt and was acquired by the Commonwealth from the Victorian government in Sept. 1990.

The 11 major trading banks in Victoria are the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, the Australia and New Zealand Banking Group, the Westpac Banking Corporation, the National Australia Bank, the Bank of Melbourne, the St George Bank, the Challenge Bank, the Metway Bank, the State Bank of New South Wales, Bendigo Bank and Citibank. Banks had a total of 1,217 branches and 1,262 agencies between them at 30 June 2000.

In Sept. 2001 bank deposits repayable totalled $A105,770m. and loans $A132,832m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In the year to 30 June 1999 total production was 39,767m. kWh; total consumption stood at 36,314m. kWh, including 10,631m. kWh by residential customers.

In 1993 the State government began a major restructure of the government-owned electricity industry along competitive lines. The distribution sector was privatized in 1995, and four generator companies in 1997.

About 90% of power generated is supplied by four brown-coal fired generating stations. There are two other thermal stations and three hydro-electric stations in northeast Victoria. Victoria is also entitled to approximately 30% of the output of the Snowy Mountains hydro-electric scheme and half the output of the Hume hydro-electric station, both of which are in New South Wales.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil in commercially recoverable quantities was first discovered in 1967 in two large fields offshore, in East Gippsland in Bass Strait, between 65 and 80 km from land. These fields, with 20 other fields since discovered, have been assessed as containing initial recoverable oil reserves of 4,063·4m. bbls. Estimated remaining oil reserves as at 30 June 2001 is 432·0m. bbls. Production of crude oil (2000–01), 59m. bbls.

Natural gas was discovered offshore in East Gippsland in 1965. The initial recoverable gas reserves were 272·0m. cu. metres. Estimated remaining gas reserves (30 June 2001), 117·68m. cu. metres. Production of natural gas (2000–01), 6·43m. cu. metres. Natural gas is distributed to residential and industrial consumers through a network of 23,400 km of mains.

Liquefied petroleum gas is produced after extraction of the propane and butane fractions from the untreated oil and gas.

Brown Coal. Major deposits of brown coal are located in the Central Gippsland region and comprise approximately 94% of the total resources in Victoria. In 1993 the resource was estimated to be 0·2m. megatonnes, of which about 52,000 megatonnes was economically recoverable. It is young and soft with a water content of 60% to 70%. In the Latrobe Valley section of the region, the thick brown coal seams underlie an area from 10 to 30 km wide extending over approximately 70 km from Yallourn in the west to the south of Sale in the east. It can be won continuously in large quantities and at low cost by specialized mechanical plant.

The primary use of these reserves is to fuel electricity generating stations. Production of brown coal in 1999–2000 was 67·4m. tonnes.

Minerals. Production, 1999–2000: gold, 4,791 kg; (in 1,000 tonnes) basalt, 13,074; sand for concrete, 4,977.

Land Settlement. Of the total area of Victoria (22·76m. ha), 13,973,915 ha on 30 June 1984 were either alienated or in the process of alienation. The remainder (8,786,085) constituted Crown land as follows: perpetual leases, grazing and other leases and licences, 2,160,352; reservations including forest and timber reserves, water, catchment and drainage purposes, national parks, wildlife reserves, water frontages and other reserves, plus unoccupied and unreserved including areas set aside for roads, 6,625,733.

Agriculture. In the year ended June 2000 there were 37,304 agricultural establishments (excluding those with an estimated value of agricultural operations less than $A5,000) with a total area of 13·3m. ha. The estimated gross value of agricultural production in 1999–2000 was $A6·8m. Principal crops produced in 1999–2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): wheat, 2,642; oats, 296; barley, 1,189; potatoes, 295.

Preliminary estimated value of livestock production in 2000–01 totalled $A2·1bn., including wool production $A409m.

Grape growing, particularly for winemaking, is an important crop. In 1999–2000, 449,000 tonnes of grapes were produced from 36,300 ha of vineyards. Other produce (estimate, in tonnes), 1999–2000: tomatoes, 249,200; apples, 98,200; oranges, 84,200.

Forestry. Commercial timber production is an increasingly important source of income. As at Sept. 2000 there were 318,633 ha of plantation. Of Victoria's 7·3m.

ha of native forest (June 1997), 6·2m. ha (85%) were publicly owned (2·7m. ha in conservation reserves).

Fisheries. The total catch in 2000–01 was 9,666 tonnes and was worth $A130·2m. Of this, crustaceans totalled 895 tonnes with a value of $A24·7m.

INDUSTRY

Total turnover in the manufacturing industry in 2000–01 was $A74,311·9m. At 30 June 2000 there were 292,100 persons employed in the manufacturing sector.

Labour. At Aug. 2001 there were 2,455,100 persons in the labour force (63·2% of the civilian population aged 15 years and over), of whom 2,303,100 were employed: wholesale and retail trade, 463,300; finance, insurance, property and business services, 349,800; manufacturing, 361,100; health and community services, 221,200; construction, 158,100; education, 165,700; culture, recreation, personal and other services, 143,600; transport and storage, 103,900; accommodation, cafes and restaurants, 91,000; agriculture, forestry and fishing, 91,300; government administration and defence, 80,600; communication services, 49,200; electricity, gas and water supply, 20,500; mining, 3,800. There were 152,000 unemployed persons in Aug. 2001 (6·2% of the labour force).

Trade Unions. There were 57 trade unions with a total membership of 680,000 at 30 June 1996.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. The total value of the overseas imports and exports of Victoria, including bullion and specie, was as follows (in $A1m.):

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Imports	31,014	33,717	36,485
Exports[1]	16,484	19,034	22,510

[1]Includes re-exports.

The chief exports in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) were: food and live animals chiefly for food, 5,772; machinery and transport equipment, 4,083; manufacturing goods, 2,901; crude materials, inedible (except fuels), 2,164; minerals, fuels, lubricants and related materials, 1,393. Exports in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) went mainly to Japan, 2,248; USA, 2,073; New Zealand, 1,876; Singapore, 1,518; China, 1,430; Republic of Korea, 1,308; Saudi Arabia, 1,206; Hong Kong, 1,062; Taiwan, 816; UK, 696.

The chief imports in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) were: machinery and transport equipment, 15,435; miscellaneous manufactured articles, 6,205; manufacturing goods, 4,773; chemical and related products, 3,885; minerals, fuels, lubricants and related materials, 2,309; food and live animals chiefly for food, 1,430. Imports in 2000–01 (in $A1m.) came mainly from the USA, 7,377; Japan, 4,828; China, 3,890; Germany, 2,585; UK, 1,842; New Zealand, 1,535; Republic of Korea, 1,065; Indonesia, 1,049; Malaysia, 1,037; Italy, 1,028.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are over 150,000 km of roads open for general traffic, consisting of (at 31 Oct. 2000) 1,004 km of National Highways, 6,524 km of state highways and freeways, 14,710 km of main, tourist and forest roads, and (at 30 June 1999) 133,960 km of other roads and streets. The number of registered motor vehicles (other than tractors and motor cycles) at 31 March 2001 was 3,222,941. There were 407 road accident fatalities in 2000.

Rail. The railways are the property of the State and the land is owned and managed by the Victorian Rail Track Corporation (VicTrack). The railway land and infrastructure was transferred from the Public Transport Corporation (PTC) to VicTrack during privatization in 1996–99. In 1999 the non-electrified intra-State railway was leased (for a total of 45 years) to Freight Victoria (trading as Freight Australia), a private company which in May 1999 purchased the business of V/Line Freight Corporation from the State. The passenger rail businesses were franchised to the following private operators in Aug. 1999: National Express, Melbourne Transport Enterprises Pty Ltd, and Metrolink Victoria Pty Ltd.

Victoria’s rail network consists of over 5,000 km of track, comprising 1,274 km of standard gauge (1,435 mm). There are 3,745 km of broad gauge (1,600 mm) of which 336 km are electrified. 849 km of standard gauge lines form part of the interstate rail network from Brisbane to Perth and are under the control of the Australian Rail Track Corporation. In 2000–01, 7·7m. tonnes of freight were carried by Freight Australia and there was a total of 139·4m. passenger boardings (11·5m. non-urban). Melbourne's tramway and light rail network extends to 241 km and is the tenth longest in the world. There were 131·4m. boardings in 2000–01.

Civil Aviation. There were 12,939,135 domestic and regional passenger movements and 3,043,169 international passenger movements in 2000 at Melbourne (Tullamarine) airport (Australia's second busiest airport after Sydney). Total freight handled in 2000 was 271,605 tonnes (international, 199,437; domestic, 72,168).

Shipping. The four major commercial ports are at Melbourne, Geelong, Portland and Hastings. Together, these ports serviced 4,045 ships (Melbourne, 3,019; Geelong, 555; Portland, 278; Hastings, 193) with a total trade of 44·8m. mass tonnes in 2001–02.

Telecommunications. In May 1998, 93·5% of households had a fixed telephone connected; 44·3% had mobile phones. In 2000 there were 973,000 households with home computer access (56% of all households) and 598,000 households with home Internet access (34%).

Postal Services. At June 2001 there were 1,055 retail outlets including 842 licensed post offices. Postal items handled by Australia Post in Victoria (1999–2000) totalled 1,637·2m.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and 21 puisne judges. There are a county court, magistrates' courts, a court of licensing and a bankruptcy court.

During 1996–97 the State's prisons were replaced with new facilities developed, owned and operated by the private sector. During 1999–2000 approximately 45% of Victoria's prison population was accommodated in the three private prisons. There are 10 public prisons remaining.

At 30 June 2000 the daily average of prisoners held stood at 3,153. Police personnel at 30 June 2001, 9,744.

Religion. There is no State Church, and no State assistance has been given to religion since 1875. At the 1991 census the following were the enumerated numbers of the principal religions: Catholic, 1,237,399; Anglican, 772,632; Uniting, 342,493 (including Methodist); Orthodox, 199,063; Presbyterian, 193,300; other Christian, 255,375; Muslim, 49,617; Jewish, 33,882; Buddhist, 42,350; no religion, 612,074; not stated, 474,921.

Education. In 2000 there were 1,629 government schools with 528,189 pupils and 35,660 full-time teaching staff plus full-time equivalents of part-time teaching staff: 313,369 pupils were in primary schools and 214,820 in secondary schools. As from 1990 students attending special schools have not been identified separately and have been allocated to either primary or secondary level of education. They are integrated where possible into mainstream education. There were, in 2000, 695 non-government schools, excluding commercial colleges, with 18,830 teaching staff and 273,506 pupils; 138,351 pupils at primary schools; and 135,155 pupils at secondary schools.

All higher education institutions, excluding continuing education and technical and further education (TAFE), now fall under the Unified National System, and can no longer be split into universities and colleges of advanced education. In addition, a number of institutional amalgamations and name changes occurred in the 12 months prior to the commencement of the 1992 academic year. There are ten publicly funded higher education institutions including eight State universities, Marcus Oldham College and the Australian Catholic University (partly privately funded), and the Melbourne University Private, established in 1998. At 31 March 2000 there were 185,978 students in higher education.

Health. In 1999–2000 there were 142 public hospitals with 12,072 beds, and 86 private hospitals; 17,660 nurses were employed in public hospitals. Total government outlay on health in 1999–2000 was $A5,027m.

Welfare. Victoria was the first State of Australia to make a statutory provision for the payment of Age Pensions. The Act came into operation on 18 Jan. 1901, and continued until 1 July 1909, when the Australian Invalid and Old Age Pension Act came into force. The Social Services Consolidation Act, which came into operation on 1 July 1947, repealed the various legislative enactments relating to age and invalid pensions, maternity allowances, child endowment, unemployment and sickness benefits and, while following in general the Acts repealed, considerably liberalized many of their provisions.

The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) on 30 June 1999 was: age, 439,595; disability support, 136,218; carer, 10,266. There were 7,680 widows' and 84,368 single parent payments current at 30 June 1999, and basic family payment was being paid for 789,899 children under 16 years.

CULTURE

Cinema. During the year ended April 1999, 2·6m. (68·3% of Victoria's population) people attended cinema screenings.

Tourism. In 1999–2000 the number of short-term overseas visitors to Australia who specified Victoria as their main destination was 685,950 (14·7% of total overseas visitors to Australia), with 466,480 nominating 'holiday' or 'visiting friends/relatives' as purpose of their visit. New Zealand represented the major source of international visitors with 19·9%; followed by the UK and Ireland (11·7%), USA (11·3%), Singapore (7·5%) and Japan (6·8%).

Libraries. During the year ended April 1999, 37·5% of Victoria's population visited national, State or local libraries.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1791 the British navigator George Vancouver took formal possession of the country around King George Sound. In 1826 the government of New South Wales sent 20 convicts and a detachment of soldiers to King George Sound and formed a settlement then called Frederickstown. The following year, Capt. James Stirling surveyed the coast from King George Sound to the Swan River, and in May 1829 Capt. Charles Fremantle took possession of the territory. In June 1829 Capt. Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement (now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia) and the towns of Perth and Fremantle and was appointed Lieut.-Governor.

Large grants of land were made to the early settlers and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population with varying success until, in 1850, with the colony languishing, the inhabitants' successfully petitioned for the colony to be made a penal settlement. Between 1850 and 1868 (in which year transportation ceased), 9,668 convicts were sent out. In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a legislative council and a legislative assembly. The legislative council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor but in 1893 it became elective. Western Australia federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

In the 1914–18 war Western Australia provided more volunteers for overseas military service in proportion to population than any other State (possibly because Western Australia had a higher proportion of British migrants and single men).

The worldwide depression of 1929 brought widespread unemployment (30% of trade union membership), and in 1933 over two-thirds voted to leave the Federation.

While there were modest improvements in the standard of living through the 1930s, it was the 1939–45 war which brought regular employment for all.

Japanese aircraft attacked the Western Australia coast in 1942. Talk of a 'Brisbane line', which would abandon the West to invasion, only served to reinforce Western Australia's sense of isolation from the rest of the nation. The post-war years saw increasing demand for wheat and wool but the 1954–55 decline in farm incomes led to diversification. Work began in the early 1950s on steel production and oil processing. Oil was discovered in 1953 but it was not until 1966 that it was commercially exploited. The discovery of deposits of iron ore in the Pilbara, bauxite in the Darling scarp, nickel in Kambalda and ilmenite from mineral sands led to the State becoming a major world supplier of mineral exports by 1965.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Western Australia lies between 113° 09' and 129° E. long. and 13° 44' and 35° 08' S. lat.; its area is 2,529,880 sq. km and it has 12,500 km of coastline.

The population at each census from 1947 was as follows[1]:

	Males	Females	Total		Males	Females	Total
1947	258,076	244,404	502,480	1976	599,959	578,383	1,178,342
1954	330,358	309,413	639,771	1981	659,249	642,807	1,300,056
1961	375,452	361,177	736,629	1986	736,131	722,888	1,459,019
1966	432,569	415,531	848,100	1991	793,626	792,767	1,586,393

Of the total 1996 census population, 1,178,331 were born in Australia. Married persons numbered 710,468 (355,594 males and 354,874 females); widowers, 13,656; widows, 59,635; divorced, 39,624 males and 48,986 females; never married, 233,048 males and 186,081 females. The resident population at 31 Dec. 2001 was 1,918,800 (annual growth rate of 1 3%).

Perth, the capital, had an estimated resident population of 1,400,500 at 30 June 2001.

Principal local government areas outside the metropolitan area, with population at 30 June 2000: Mandurah, 45,580; Kalgoorlie-Boulder, 32,042; Albany, 29,873; Bunbury, 28,779; Busselton, 22,751; Geraldton, 19,510; Roebourne, 14,320; Port Hedland, 13,171.

CLIMATE

Western Australia is a region of several climate zones, ranging from the tropical north to the semi-arid interior and Mediterranean-style climate of the southwest. Most of the State is a plateau between 300 and 600 metres above sea level. Except in the far southwest coast, maximum temperatures in excess of 40°C have been recorded throughout the State. The normal average number of sunshine hours per day is 8·0.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the colony reaching 60,000, it should be elective. In 1893 this limit of population being reached, the Colonial Parliament amended the Constitution accordingly.

The Legislative Council consists of 34 members elected for a term of four years. There are six electoral regions for Legislative Council elections. Four electoral regions return five members and the other two electoral regions seven members. Each member represents the entire region.

There are 57 members of the Legislative Assembly, each member representing one of the 57 electoral districts of the State. Members are elected for the duration of the Assembly which may be for a period of up to four years. The qualifications applying to candidates and electors are identical for the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. A candidate must be at least 18 years of age and free from legal incapacity, be an Australian citizen, and be enrolled, or qualified for enrolment, as an elector. A member of the Commonwealth Parliament or of the legislature of a territory or another state, an undischarged bankrupt or a debtor against whose estate there is a subsisting receiving order in bankruptcy, or a person who has been attainted or convicted of treason or felony, is disqualified from membership of the legislature. No person may hold office as a member of the Legislative Assembly and the Legislative Council at the same time. An elector must be at least 18 years of age, be an Australian citizen (or a British subject who was at some time within the three months preceding 26 Jan. 1984 an elector of the Assembly or the Commonwealth parliament), be free from legal incapacity, and must have resided in Western Australia for three months continuously, and in the electoral district for which he or she claims enrolment for a continuous period of one month immediately preceding the date of his or her claim. Enrolment is compulsory for all qualified persons. Voting at elections is on the preferential system and is compulsory for all enrolled persons. A system of proportional representation is used to elect members of the Legislative Council.

Ordinary members of the legislature were paid (with effect from 1 Sept. 2001) a salary of $A100,000 a year with an electorate allowance of $A21,000 a year. They also receive an additional electorate allowance ranging from $A400 to $A17,500 a year according to location of the electorate.

The Premier receives a salary of $A232,000 and other ministers $A180,000. No additional allowances are paid.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Legislative Assembly representation in Feb. 2003: Australian Labor Party, 32; Liberal Party, 16; National Party of Australia, 5; Independent Liberal Party, 2; ind., 2. Legislative Council following the State general election in Feb. 2001: Australian Labor Party, 13; Liberal Party, 12; Greens (WA), 5; One Nation, 3; National Party of Australia, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Lieut.-Gen. John M. Sanderson, AC.

Lieut.-Governor and Chief Justice: David Kingsley Malcolm, AC.

In Feb. 2003 the Cabinet comprised:

Premier, Minister for Public Sector Management, Federal Affairs, Science, Citizenship and Multicultural Interests: Dr Geoff Gallop.

Deputy Premier, Treasurer, Minister for Energy: Eric Ripper. Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries, the Midwest, Wheatbelt and Great Southern: Kim Chance. Housing and Works, Local Government and Regional Development, the Kimberley, Pilbara and Gascoyne: Tom Stephens. Consumer and Employment Protection: John Kobelke. Attorney General, Minister for Justice and Legal Affairs, Electoral Affairs, Peel and the South West: Jim McGinty. Environment and Heritage: Dr Judy Edwards. Police and Emergency Services: Michelle Roberts. Planning and Infrastructure: Alannah MacTiernan. State Development, Tourism, Small Business: Clive Brown. Education and Training, Sport and Recreation, Indigenous Affairs: Alan Carpenter. Community Development, Women's Interests, Seniors and Youth, Disability Services, Culture and the Arts: Sheila McHale. Health: Bob Kucera, APM. Racing and Gaming, Government Enterprises, Goldfields-Esperance: Nick Griffiths.

ECONOMY

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in $A1m.) in years ending 30 June:

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02[1]
Revenue	8,984·3	9,692·8	10,531·5	10,713·5
Expenditure	9,119·3	9,723·0	10,276·4	10,661·9

[1]Projected.

The general government net operating surplus of $A51·6m. projected for 2001–02 indicates that the State's finances have returned to a more sustainable path following the deficits of 1998–99 and 1999–2000.

Banking and Finance. In Sept. 2001 bank deposits totalled $A31,407m., and loans $A51,887.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Office of Energy was established to administer energy policy and regulatory functions previously managed by the State Electricity Commission of Western Australia (SECWA), which was split into two corporate utilities in 1995 (Western Power and AlintaGas). The Office of Energy reports directly to the Minister of Energy and provides advice on policy and co-ordinates economic and commercial issues in the Western Australian energy sector. Deregulation of the energy industry was passed by the Office of Energy during 1996–97. The gradual introduction of the Electricity Transmission Open Access Plan commenced on 1 July 1997, allowing independent generators to supply associated loads by utilizing Western Power's transmission system. Electricity users now have the option of obtaining power from Western Power or private sector operators. In the year ended 30 June 1999 total Western Power customer consumption stood at 11,407m. kWh, including 3,605m. kWh by residential customers.

Oil and Gas. Petroleum continued to be the State's largest resource sector with a sales increase of $A2·9bn. to $A10·6bn. in 2000–01. During the same year crude oil was the most valuable product with a 16% increase in the quantity of sales to 14bn. litres and value of sales at 52% to $A4·8bn. The State accounts for around 48% of Australia's oil and condensate production.

Western Australia has significant natural gas resources and, with a $A2·4bn. expansion of the North West Shelf liquefied natural gas (LNG) project, production will increase with exports forecast to rise by around $A1bn. when full production takes place in 2004. Total natural gas production, 2000–01: 18,641 gigalitres.

Water. The administration of Western Australia's water resources is the responsibility of the Water and Rivers Commission, and the Water Corporation is the primary provider of services. The operation and activities of the Water Corporation are monitored by the Office of Water Regulation.

Minerals. Mining is a significant contributor to the Western Australia economy. Until the mid-1960s the major mineral produced was gold. It was then replaced by iron ore in terms of value, and has at various times fallen behind nickel concentrates, bauxite, oil, mineral sands and salt. The State is the world's third largest producer of iron ore and accounts for around 97% of Australia's iron ore production.

Principal minerals produced in 2000–01 were: gold, 206,700 kg; iron ore, 170·6m. tonnes; diamonds, 22·4m. carats; crude oil, 18,812 megalitres. Most of the State's coal production (6·2m. tonnes in 2000) is used by Western Power's electricity generation.

Agriculture. In the year ended June 2000 there were 13,917 establishments mainly engaged in agriculture with a total area of 105·6m. ha of which 7·69m. ha were under crops. Estimated gross value of agricultural commodities in 1999–2000 totalled $A3,459·8m.

The State is Australia's biggest producer of wheat with 4·6m. ha planted which, in 1999–2000, yielded a record crop of 9·0m. tonnes valued at $A1·8bn. Other crop production in 1999–2000 (in tonnes), barley, 1·4m.; lupins for grain, 1·2m.; canola, 963,000; oats, 439,000; sugarcane, 460,556; onions, 91,900; potatoes, 82,100; apples, 41,823; bananas, 7,700; oranges, 5,400.

Value of livestock products in 1999–2000 totalled $A638·1m. (estimated wool production, $A486m.).

Total wool produced in 1999–2000 was 153,000 tonnes.

Forestry. The area of State forests and timber reserves at 30 June 1997 was 1,725,036 ha; production of sawn timber was 1,036,466 cu. metres in 1994–95. Jarrah and Karri hardwoods account for 69·0% and pine accounts for 28·9% of sawn timber production.

Fisheries. The total fisheries production in 1998–99 was 39,652 tonnes and was worth $A592·2m. Of this, crustaceans totalled 18,667 tonnes with a value of $A331·1m. Pearling was also a significant contributor, producing $A171·4m. worth of pearls, or 30% of the total value of Western Australia's fishing production.

INDUSTRY

Heavy industry is concentrated in the southwest, and is largely tied to export-orientated mineral processing, especially alumina and nickel. Other significant manufacturing industries include meat and seafood processing, production of timber and wood products, metal fabrication and production of industrial and mining machinery. The North West Shelf development has stimulated recent growth in industries involved in providing materials and equipment during the construction phase, as well as in new and existing industries using gas in processing.

The following table shows manufacturing industry statistics for 1999–2000:

Industry sub-division	Persons employed 1,000	Wages and salaries $A1m.	Turnover $A1m.
Food, beverages and tobacco	13·6	447·0	3,508·5
Textiles, clothing and leather products	3·2	86·2	386·6
Wood and paper products	4·3	144·0	834·9
Printing and publishing and recorded media	7·0	232·0	958·0
Petroleum, coal, chemical products	6·7	301·1	3,847·3
Non-metallic mineral products	4·6	199·4	1,250·9
Metal products	15·7	634·8	4,960·3
Machinery and equipment	12·9	468·3	2,202·1
Other manufacturing	6·3	142·6	703·0

Labour. The labour force comprised 943,900 employed and 66,100 unemployed persons in Nov. 2001 (an unemployment rate of 6·5%). The average weekly wage in Nov. 2001 was $A651·50 (males $A812·80, females $A486·10).

Trade Unions. In 1996 there were 54 trade unions with a total of 135,200 male members and 86,500 female members.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Foreign commerce is comprised in the statement of the commerce of the Commonwealth of Australia.

Value of foreign imports and exports (i.e. excluding inter-state trade) for years ending 30 June (in $A1m.):

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Imports	9,012	9,517	9,302
Exports	21,777	25,424	30,862

Selected overseas exports (in $A1m.) for 2000–01: iron ore and concentrates, 4,840; petroleum, petroleum products and related materials, 5,176; gold bullion, 3,166; wheat, 1,379; wool, 519.

The chief countries exporting to Western Australia in 2000–01 were (in $A1m.): USA, 1,383; Japan, 1,209; UK, 470. Main export markets in 2000–01 (in $A1m.): Japan, 8,186; Singapore, 1,768; UK, 363.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 2001 there were 173,970 km of sealed and unsealed roads comprising 10,815 km of National and State highways, 6,859 km of main roads and 125,962 km of unclassified local roads. In addition, there were 29,289 km of roads in forests and national parks and 1,045 km of private roads.

New motor vehicles registered during the year ended 30 June 2001 were 77,642.

In 1999 there were 217 fatalities in road accidents.

Rail. The Western Australian Government Railways Commission (WAGR) operates urban passenger services over 95 km of electrified track with country passenger services operating between Perth and regional centres at Kalgoorlie, Northam and Bunbury. In 1999–2000, 29·5m. passenger journeys were made on WAGR urban services. In 1999–2000, 31·1m. tonnes of freight were carried with grain accounting for around 35% of the total. In Dec. 2000 State-owned Westrail's freight business was sold to the Australian Railroad Group (ARG) with a 49-year lease of the rail freight network.

Civil Aviation. An extensive system of regular air services operates for passengers, freight and mail. In 2000 Perth International Airport handled 4,763,250 passengers (3,183,938 on domestic flights).

Shipping. In 1999–2000, 5,423 commercial vessels called at Western Australian ports (1,675 at Fremantle). General cargo imported in 1999–2000 was 334,989 mass tonnes and general cargo exported was 612,025 mass tonnes.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 390,000 households with home computer access (56% of all households) and 241,000 households with home Internet access (34%).

Postal Services. In 1995 the Australia Post Corporation had 441 outlets and 722,114 delivery points in Western Australia.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, consisting of a Chief Justice, 16 other judges and 2 masters; a District Court comprising a chief judge and 20 other judges; a Magistrates Court, a Chief Stipendiary Magistrate, 37 Stipendiary Magistrates and Justices of the Peace. All courts exercise both civil and criminal jurisdiction except Justices of the Peace who deal with summary criminal matters only. Juvenile offenders are dealt with by the Children's Court. Overall responsibility for the Children's Court is vested in a President, who has the status of a District Court Judge. A children's court may be constituted by a judge, a magistrate or two lay members. Each has different sentencing powers. For certain offences involving first offenders under the age of 16 years who have pleaded guilty, such cases may be dealt with by the Children's (suspended Proceedings) Panel which comprises a representative from the Department for Community Services and one from the Police Department. The Family Court also forms part of the justice system and comprises a Chief Judge, four other judges, seven magistrates/registrars, and exercises both State and Federal jurisdictions.

At June 2000 there was a daily average of 3,124 prisoners held. At 1 July 1999 police personnel stood at 4,676.

Religion. At the census of 6 Aug. 1996 the principal denominations were: Catholic, 427,848; Anglican, 410,233; Uniting, 87,549; Presbyterian and Reformed, 45,761; Baptist, 27,618; other Christian, 126,041. There were 48,294 persons practising non-Christian religions and 367,491 persons had no religion.

Education. School attendance is compulsory from the age of six until the end of the year in which the child attains 15 years. A non-compulsory year of education is available to children from the beginning of the year in which they reach five years of age, at pre-primary centres attached to most government primary schools, or at community-based and privately owned pre-school centres, and at some non-government schools. Children may be enrolled during their fourth year where vacancies exist. In Aug. 2002 there were 775 government primary and secondary schools (with 15,136 full-time equivalent teaching staff, excluding pre-primary teaching staff) providing free education to 250,096 primary and secondary students; in Aug. 2002 there were 308 non-government schools, providing education, for which fees are charged, to 108,629 kindergarten, pre-primary, primary and secondary students (with 7,745 full-time equivalent teaching staff in Aug. 2000, excluding pre-primary teaching staff).

Technical and Further Education (TAFE) is offered by the Department of TAFE, a sub-department of the Ministry of Education, and by three independent regional colleges. The latter also provide higher education facilities. Additionally, higher education is available through four state universities and one private (Notre Dame).

In 2002 there was a total of 70,932 students in tertiary education at the University of Western Australia, Murdoch University, the University of Notre Dame Australia, Curtin University of Technology and the Edith Cowan University.

Health. In Jan. 1999 there were 91 acute public hospitals, 28 acute private hospitals and 11 day hospitals.

Welfare. The Department for Community Development is responsible for the provision of welfare and community services throughout the State. Operations and planning are managed through a decentralized structure of 5 regions and 21 districts. There are 8 directorates (2 support, 1 special services and 5 regional).

Direct services provided to the community include emergency financial assistance, family and substitute care, and counselling and psychological services. The Department supervises children's Day Care Centres. There is a 24-hour emergency welfare service provided through the Crisis Care Unit. Specialist units work in the areas of child abuse, adoptions, youth activities and Family Court counselling.

The Department provides residential facilities for the temporary accommodation, care and training of children, is responsible for young offenders recommended for detention or remand by a Court, and also supervises young offenders subject to non-custodial court orders.

Age, invalid, widows', disability and service pensions, and unemployment benefits, are paid by the Federal government. The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) on 30 June 1999 was: age, 140,033; disability support, 47,768; carer, 2,602. There were 2,473 widows' and 38,694 single parent payments current at 30 June 1999, and basic family payment was being paid for 326,692 children under 16 years.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 1999–2000 there were 441,090 short-term overseas visitors. Of these, 96,050 were from the UK and Ireland, 73,230 from Singapore and 40,670 from Japan.

Festivals. The Festival of Perth is the oldest and largest annual international arts festival in the southern hemisphere. It is held annually for 3½ weeks in Feb. and March.

Libraries. The Libraries and Information Service of Western Australia (LISWA) within the Ministry for Culture and the Arts is responsible for delivering library archival and information services to the people of Western Australia. The State Reference Library is situated in the Alexander Library in the Perth Cultural Centre. Also located in the Alexander Library Building is the J. S. Battye Library of Western Australian History.

The provision of public library services is a partnership between LISWA and local government authorities. Through its Public Library Services Program, LISWA provides and maintains the bookstock and other resource materials for public libraries throughout the State.

Museums and Galleries. The Western Australian Museum was established in the early 1890s, and its headquarters and principal exhibition centre is located in the Perth Cultural Centre, with branches in Fremantle (Fremantle History Museum including Samson House, and the Western Australian Maritime Museum incorporating the Historic Boats Museum), Albany, Geraldton and Kalgoorlie. The Art Gallery of Western Australia is the oldest visual arts organization in the State, having acquired its first work of art in 1895. The Gallery is located in the Perth Cultural Centre and is housed in two buildings: the Main Galleries and the adjoining Centenary Galleries. The Gallery collects for, and maintains, the State Art Collection, comprising Western Australian, Australian and international works, with a particular emphasis on Western Australian and Aboriginal art.

AUSTRALIAN EXTERNAL TERRITORIES

AUSTRALIAN ANTARCTIC TERRITORY

An Imperial Order in Council of 7 Feb. 1933 placed under Australian authority all the islands and territories other than Adélie Land situated south of 60° S. lat. and lying between 160° E. long. and 45° E. long. The Order came into force with a Proclamation issued by the Governor-General on 24 Aug. 1936 after the passage of the Australian Antarctic Territory Acceptance Act 1933. The boundaries of Adélie Land were definitively fixed by a French Decree of 1 April 1938 as the islands and territories south of 60° S. lat. lying between 136° E. long. and 142° E. long. The Australian Antarctic Territory Act 1954 declared that the laws in force in the Australian Capital Territory are, so far as they are applicable and are not inconsistent with any ordinance made under the Act, in force in the Australian Antarctic Territory.

The area of the territory is estimated at 6,119,818 sq. km (2,362,875 sq. miles).

There is a research station on MacRobertson Land at lat. 67° 37' S. and long. 62° 52' E. (Mawson), one on the coast of Princess Elizabeth Land at lat. 68° 34' S. and long. 77° 58' E. (Davis), and one at lat. 66° 17' S. and long. 110° 32' E. (Casey). The Antarctic Division also operates a station on Macquarie Island.

COCOS (KEELING) ISLANDS

GENERAL DETAILS

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are two separate atolls comprising some 27 small coral islands with a total area of about 14·2 sq. km, and are situated in the Indian Ocean at 12° 05' S. lat. and 96° 53' E. long. They lie 2,768 km northwest of Perth and 3,685 km west of Darwin.

The main islands are West Island (the largest, about 10 km from north to south), on which there is an airport and an animal quarantine station, and most of the European community; Home Island, occupied by the Cocos Malay community; Direction, South and Horsburgh Islands, and North Keeling Island, 24 km to the north of the group.

The islands were discovered in 1609 by Capt. William Keeling but remained uninhabited until 1826. In 1857 the islands were annexed to the Crown; in 1878 responsibility was transferred from the Colonial Office to the government of Ceylon, and in 1886 to the government of the Straits Settlement. By indenture in 1886, Queen Victoria granted all land in the islands to George Clunies-Ross and his heirs in perpetuity (with certain rights reserved to the Crown). In 1903 the islands were incorporated in the Settlement of Singapore and in 1942–46 were temporarily placed under the Governor of Ceylon. In 1946 a Resident Administrator, responsible to the Governor of Singapore, was appointed.

On 23 Nov. 1955 the Cocos Islands were placed under the authority of the Australian government as the Territory of Cocos (Keeling) Islands. An Administrator, appointed by the Governor-General, is the government's representative in the Territory and is responsible to the Minister for Territories and Local Government. The Cocos (Keeling) Islands Council, established as the elected body of the Cocos Malay community in July 1979, advises the Administrator on all issues affecting the Territory.

In 1978 the Australian government purchased the Clunies-Ross family's entire interests in the islands, except for the family residence. A Cocos Malay co-operative was established to take over the running of the Clunies-Ross copra plantation and to engage in other business with the Commonwealth in the Territory, including construction projects. In 1993 the Australian government took control of the Clunies-Ross family residence also.

The population of the Territory (1994) was 670, distributed between Home Island (75%) and West Island (25%).

The islands are low-lying, flat and thickly covered by coconut palms, and surround a lagoon in which ships drawing up to 7 metres may be anchored, but which is extremely difficult for navigation.

There is an equable and pleasant climate, affected for much of the year by the southeast trade winds. Temperatures range over the year from 68° F (20° C) to 88° F (31·1° C) and rainfall averages 80" (2,000 mm) a year.

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands Act 1955 is the basis of the Territory's administrative, legislative and judicial systems. Under section 8 of this Act, those laws which were in force in the Territory immediately before the transfer continued in force there.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: William Leonard Taylor (appointed Feb. 1999).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 15 km of roads.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 National Jet operated scheduled flights to Christmas Island and Perth.

Telecommunications. In 1992 there were 190 radio receivers and 287 telephones.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 85% are Muslims and 15% Christians.

Education. In 1992 there were two primary schools (on Home Island and West Island) with 98 pupils and seven teachers and one teaching assistant, two secondary schools with 70 pupils and nine teachers and one teaching assistant, and 29 students in a technical school.

Health. In 1992 there was one doctor and seven nursing personnel, with five beds in clinics.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND

GENERAL DETAILS

Christmas Island is an isolated peak in the Indian Ocean, lat. 10° 25' 22" S., long. 105° 39' 59" E. It lies 360 km S. 8° E. of Java Head, and 417 km N. 79° E. from Cocos Islands, 1,310 km from Singapore and 2,623 km from Fremantle. Area about 135 sq. km. The climate is tropical with temperatures varying little over the year at 27° C. The wet season lasts from Nov. to April with an annual total of about 2,673 mm. The island was formally annexed by the UK on 6 June 1888, placed under the administration of the Governor of the Straits Settlements in 1889, and incorporated with the Settlement of Singapore in 1900. Sovereignty was transferred to the Australian government on 1 Oct. 1958. The population at the 1991 census was 1,275; 1994 estimate, 2,500, of whom 1,300 were of Chinese, 400 of Malay and 800 of Australian/European origin.

The legislative, judicial and administrative systems are regulated by the Christmas Island Act, 1958–73. They are the responsibility of the Commonwealth government and are operated by an Administrator. The Territory underwent major changes to its legal system when the Federal Parliament passed the Territories Law Reform Bill of 1992; Commonwealth and State laws applying in the state of Western Australia now apply in the Territory as a result, although some laws have been repealed to take into account the unique status of the Territory. The first Island Assembly was elected in Sept. 1985, and is now replaced by the elected members of the Christmas Island Shire Council.

Extraction and export of rock phosphate dust is the main industry. The government is also encouraging the private sector development of tourism.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Christmas Island Assembly has nine annually-elected members. The last elections were in Dec. 1999. Only non-partisans were elected and no parties exist.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: William Leonard Taylor (appointed Feb. 1999).

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. Australian currency is legal tender.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Annual energy consumption is around 25m. kWh with a maximum loading of 4·0 MW.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The Shire of Christmas Island has responsibility for approximately 140 km of roads with the remaining 100 km of haul roads and tracks maintained by Christmas Island Phosphates and Park Australia North. In 1999 there were 1,398 registered vehicles.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 National Jet operated scheduled flights to Perth and Cocos Island.

Shipping. In 1999 there were up to seven ships a month collecting phosphate products from the island.

Postal Services. There was one post office in 1999, operated by Australia Post licensees.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 50% of the population are Buddhists or Taoists, 16% Muslims and 30% Christians.

Education. In 1999 there were 530 students at the Christmas Island District High School of whom 15% were pre-primary, 60% primary and 25% secondary level pupils.

Health. There is a nine-bed hospital, the island's only one, which was completed in 1994. There are two doctors, one dentist, a director of nursing and 20 locally engaged staff. Specialists visit about every three months.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. A local radio and television station operate 24 hours per day. Local Radio VLU2 broadcasts in English, Malay and Chinese.

NORFOLK ISLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was formerly part of the colony of New South Wales and then of Van Diemen's Land (now known as Tasmania). It was a penal colony between 1788–1814 and 1825–55. In 1856 it was separated from the state of Tasmania and established as a distinct settlement and placed under the jurisdiction of the Australian State of New South Wales. Soon thereafter, 194 descendants of the Bounty mutineers were transferred to Norfolk Island from Pitcairn Island.

Following the passage of the Norfolk Island Act 1913 (Cth), the Island was accepted as a Territory of Australia with the Australian Federal Government having jurisdiction for the Island. In 1976 the High Court of Australia confirmed that Norfolk Island is part of the Commonwealth of Australia and that the Australian Federal Parliament had broad law-making power in respect of Norfolk Island under the Australian Constitution. The Norfolk Island Act 1979 (Cth)—an Act passed by the Australian Federal Parliament—provides the basis of the Island's legislative, administrative and judicial systems.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Situated 29° 02' S. lat. 167° 57' E. long.; area 3,455 ha; permanent population (Aug. 1996), 1,470.

Descendants of the Bounty mutineer families constitute the 'original' settlers and are known locally as 'Islanders', while later settlers, mostly from Australia and New Zealand, are identified as 'mainlanders'. 80% of the Island's permanent population are Australian citizens with 16% being New Zealand citizens. Descendants of the Pitcairn Islanders make up about 46% of the permanent resident population. Over the years the Islanders have preserved their own lifestyle and customs, and their language remains a mixture of West Country English, Gaelic and Tahitian.

CLIMATE

Sub-tropical. Summer temperatures (Dec.–March) average about 75°F (25°C), and 65°F (18°C) in winter (June–Sept.). Annual rainfall is approximately 50" (1,200 mm), most of which falls in winter.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

An Administrator, appointed by the Governor-General and responsible to the Minister for Territories and Local Government, is the senior government representative in the Territory.

The Norfolk Island Act 1979 gives Norfolk Island responsible legislative and executive government to enable it to run its own affairs to the greatest practicable extent. Wide powers are exercised by the Norfolk Island Legislative Assembly of nine members, elected for a period of three years, and by an Executive Council, comprising the executive members of the Legislative Assembly, who have ministerial-type responsibilities. The seat of administration is Kingston. The Norfolk Island Act confers wide-ranging powers on the Legislative Assembly. It can pass any law with respect to 'the peace, order and good government' of Norfolk Island. The only exceptions in the Act are laws with respect to euthanasia, the unjust acquisition of property, the raising of a military force or authorizing the coining of money. In effect, this means that the Norfolk Island Legislative Assembly can enact laws on virtually any topic that it wishes. Once the Legislative Assembly enacts a law, the Act also equips the Norfolk Island Government with broad executive powers and responsibilities to administer and enforce that law.

The Norfolk Island Act also provides for consultation with the Federal Government in respect of certain types of laws proposed by Norfolk Island's Legislative Assembly. Laws on topics that are not listed in schedule 2 of the Act must be referred to the Governor-General or to the Federal Minister responsible for Australia's Territories for consideration and advice prior to receiving royal assent. This is to ensure consistency with any relevant Federal Government policies or programmes and with national obligations under international law. The range of matters on which consultation is required has reduced since self-government was granted in 1979, with some 61 topics—some very broad in scope—having been added to Schedule 2 of the Norfolk Island Act to date.

RECENT ELECTIONS
At the last elections, on 29 Nov. 2001, only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
Administrator: Anthony J. Messner (since 1997).
Chief Minister: Geoffrey Robert Gardner (since 2001).

ECONOMY
The office of the Administrator is financed from Commonwealth expenditure which in 1999–2000 was $A560,000; local revenue for 1999–2000 totalled $A10,300,000; expenditure, $A10,400,000.

Public revenue is derived mainly from tourism, the sale of postage stamps, customs duties, liquor sales, telecommunications and electricity generation charges, company registration and licence fees. Residents are not liable for income tax on earnings within the Territory, nor are death and personal stamp duties levied.

Currency. Australian notes and coins are the legal currency.

Banking and Finance. There are two banks, Westpac and the Commonwealth Bank of Australia.

COMMUNICATIONS
Roads. There are 100 km of roads (53 km paved), some 2,800 passenger cars and 200 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. In 1999 there were scheduled flights to Auckland, Brisbane and Sydney.

Telecommunications. In 1999 there were 1,920 telephones.

Postal Services. There is one post office located in Burnt Pine.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS
Justice. The Island's Supreme Court sits as required and a Court of Petty Sessions exercises both civil and criminal jurisdiction. Appeals from decisions of the Norfolk Island Supreme Court are heard by the Federal Court of Australia and by the High Court of Australia.

Religion. 40% of the population are Anglicans.

Education. A school is run by the New South Wales Department of Education covering pre-school to Year 12. It had 320 pupils at 30 June 1999.

Health. In 1999 there were two doctors, one dentist, a pharmacist and a hospital with 24 beds. Visiting specialists attend the Island on a regular basis.

CULTURE
Broadcasting. In 1999 there were 1,500 television receivers and 1,600 radio receivers.

Press. There is one weekly with a circulation of 1,200.

Tourism. In 1998–99, 35,000 visitors travelled to Norfolk Island.

HEARD AND McDONALD ISLANDS

These islands, about 2,500 miles southwest of Fremantle, were transferred from UK to Australian control as from 26 Dec. 1947. Heard Island is about 43 km long and 21 km wide; Shag Island is about 8 km north of Heard. The total area is 412 sq. km (159 sq. miles). The McDonald Islands are 42 km to the west of Heard. Heard is an active stratovolcano that has erupted eight times since 1910, most recently in 1993. In 1985–88 a major research programme was set up by the Australian National Antarctic Research Expeditions to investigate the wildlife as part of international studies of the Southern Ocean ecosystem. Subsequent expeditions followed from June 1990 through to 1992.

TERRITORY OF ASHMORE AND CARTIER ISLANDS

By Imperial Order in Council of 23 July 1931, Ashmore Islands (known as Middle, East and West Islands) and Cartier Island, situated in the Indian Ocean, some 320 km off the northwest coast of Australia (area, 5 sq. km), were placed under the authority of the Commonwealth. Under the Ashmore and Cartier Islands Acceptance Act, 1933, the islands were accepted by the Commonwealth as the Territory of Ashmore and Cartier Islands. It was the intention that the Territory should be administered by the State of Western Australia but owing to administrative difficulties the Territory was deemed to form part of the Northern Territory of Australia (by amendment to the Act in 1938). On 16 Aug. 1983 Ashmore Reef was declared a National Nature Reserve. The islands are uninhabited but Indonesian fishing boats fish within the Territory and land to collect water in accordance with an agreement between the governments of Australia and Indonesia. It is believed that the islands and their waters may house considerable oil reserves.

TERRITORY OF CORAL SEA ISLANDS

The Coral Sea Islands, which became a Territory of the Commonwealth of Australia under the Coral Sea Islands Act 1969, comprises scattered reefs and islands over a sea area of about 1m. sq. km. The Territory is uninhabited apart from a meteorological station on Willis Island.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Governed by the Hapsburgs from 1282, Austria served thereafter as the centre of their expanding power and empire, an empire which lasted until 1918. At their greatest extent under Charles V (1519–55), the Hapsburg dominions included part of Hungary (wholly conquered from the Turks in 1688), Belgium, Italian territories, Spain and its vast empire. It remained the major power in Central Europe till defeated in 1866 by Prussia and her German allies, a position confirmed by the unification of Germany in 1870–71 under Prussian leadership. Empire politics turned increasingly on national rivalries and aspirations. Tension was particularly high among the Serbs of Bosnia (annexed 1908) who looked to the independent state of Serbia. It was at Sarajevo in Bosnia on 28 June 1914 that the heir to the throne, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, was assassinated by Serbian nationalists, an event that triggered the First World War. In 1918 the Empire disintegrated into its national units.

Christian Socialists dominated the governments of Austria (except for 1929–30) until 1938. But the Socialists were strong and the general strike of July 1927 and the rising of Feb. 1934 induced Chancellor Dolfuss to end parliamentary democracy and introduce Fatherland Front backed by the paramilitary Heimwehr. The Nazis who assassinated Dolfuss on 25 July 1934 helped to bring about the Anschluss or Union with Germany, which was achieved by a German invasion on 12 March 1938. Until 1945 Austria was Ostmark, a province of the Third Reich.

Although the 1943 Moscow Conference of Allied Foreign Ministers regarded Austria as the first victim of German aggression, Austria was occupied by Britain, France, USA and USSR (and paid reparations over a ten-year period). Independence came with the Austrian State Treaty of 15 May 1955. Austria became a member of the European Union on 1 Jan. 1995.

In Jan. 2000 the Freedom Party headed by the far-right leader Jörg Haider joined the government. Although Haider, described as a 'dangerous extremist' by EU leaders, did not take a post in the government, he continued to exercise political influence and remained popular with the Austrian electorate. However, in May 2000 he was succeeded as party leader by deputy-chancellor Susanne Riess-Passer. Meanwhile sanctions against Austria were imposed by the European Union in Feb. 2000, but lifted in Sept. 2000. In the parliamentary elections of Oct. 2002 the Freedom Party received less than half the number of votes that it had obtained in 1999. Nevertheless Chancellor Schüssel again asked the Freedom Party to join a coalition government.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Austria is bounded in the north by Germany and the Czech Republic, east by Slovakia and Hungary, south by Slovenia and Italy, and west by Switzerland and Liechtenstein. It has an area of 83,858 sq. km (32,378 sq. miles). Population (2001 census) 8,065,166; density, 96·2 per sq. km. Previous population censuses: (1923) 6·53m., (1934) 6·76m., (1951) 6·93m., (1971) 7·49m., (1981) 7·56m., (1991) 7·80m. In 1999, 64·6% of the population lived in urban areas.

In 1991, 93·4% of residents were of Austrian nationality and 94% were German-speaking, with linguistic minorities of Slovenes (29,000), Croats (60,000), Hungarians (33,000) and Czechs (19,000). Between 1986 and 1996 the number of foreigners living in Austria more than doubled, from just over 4% to just over 9%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7·95m.

The areas, populations and capitals of the nine federal states:

Federal States	Area (sq. km)	Population at censuses (1991)	(2001)	State capitals
Vienna (Wien)	415	1,539,848	1,562,676	Vienna
Lower Austria (Niederösterreich)	19,174	1,473,813	1,549,640	St Pölten

Federal States	Area (sq. km)	Population at censuses (1991)	(2001)	State capitals

Vorarlberg	2,601	331,472	351,565	Bregenz

The populations of the principal towns at 1 Jan. 2000 (and at the census of 1991): Vienna, 1,608,144 (1,539,848); Graz, 240,967 (237,810); Linz, 188,022 (203,044); Salzburg, 144,247 (143,978); Innsbruck, 111,752 (118,112); Klagenfurt, 91,141 (89,415); Villach, 57,422 (54,640); Wels, 56,894 (52,594); St Pölten, 49,352 (50,026).

The official language is German. For orthographical changes agreed in 1996 see GERMANY: Territory and Population.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics, 1999: live births, 78,138 (rate of 9·7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 78,200 (rate of 9·7 per 1,000 population); infant deaths, 341; stillborn, 316; marriages, 39,485; divorces, 18,512. In 1999 there were 1,555 suicides (rate of 19·2 per 100,000 population), of which 1,126 males and 429 females. Annual population growth rate, 1999, 0·17%. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 80·94 years for women and 75·06 years for men. In 1999 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 1999, was 4·4 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 children per woman. In 1999 some 364,000 Austrians resided permanently abroad: 185,000 lived in Germany, 28,000 in Switzerland, and 16,000 in both Australia and the USA. In 2001 Austria received 20,135 asylum applications (including 12,975 Afghans, 2,113 Iraqis and 1,874 Turks), equivalent to 2·50 per 1,000 inhabitants.

CLIMATE

The climate is temperate and from west to east in transition from marine to more continental. Depending to the elevation, the climate is also predominated by alpine influence. Winters are cold with snowfall. In the eastern parts summers are warm and dry.

Vienna, Jan. 0·0°C, July 20·2°C. Annual rainfall 624 mm. Graz, Jan. –1·0°C, July 19·4°C. Annual rainfall 825 mm. Innsbruck, Jan. –1·7°C, July 18·1°C. Annual rainfall 885 mm. Salzburg, Jan. –0·9°C, July 18·6°C. Annual rainfall 1,174 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1 Oct. 1920 was restored on 27 April 1945. Austria is a democratic federal republic comprising nine states (Länder), with a federal President (Bundespräsident) directly elected for not more than two successive six-year terms, and a bicameral National Assembly which comprises a National Council and a Federal Council.

The National Council (Nationalrat) comprises 183 members directly elected for a four-year term by proportional representation in a three-tier system by which seats are allocated at the level of 43 regional and nine state constituencies, and one federal constituency. Any party gaining 4% of votes cast nationally is represented in the National Council.

The Federal Council (Bundesrat) has 64 members appointed by the nine states for the duration of the individual State Assemblies' terms; the number of deputies for each state is proportional to that state's population. In April 2001 the ÖVP held 28 of the 64 seats, the SPÖ 23, the FPÖ 12 and the Greens 1.

The head of government is a Federal Chancellor, who is appointed by the President (usually the head of the party winning the most seats in National Council elections). The Vice-Chancellor, the Federal Ministers and the State Secretaries are appointed by the President at the Chancellor's recommendation.

National Anthem. 'Land der Berge, Land am Strome' ('Land of mountains, land on the river'); words by Paula Preradovic; tune attributed to Mozart.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 24 Nov. 2002. The Austrian People's Party (ÖVP) won 79 seats with 42·3% of votes cast (52 with 26·9% in 1999); the Social Democratic Party (SPÖ), 69 with 36·9% (65 with 33·2%); the Freedom Party (FPÖ), 18 with 10·2% (52 with 26·9%); and the Greens, 17 with 9·0% (14 with 7·4%). Turn-out was 80·5%.

In the presidential election held on 19 April 1998 Thomas Klestil (ÖVP) was re-elected for a second six-year term, obtaining 63·5% of the votes cast, with his nearest rival, Gertraud Knoll, polling 13·5% of votes cast. There were five candidates in total.

European Parliament. Austria has 21 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 49·0%. The SPÖ won 7 seats with 31·7% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: Party of European Socialists); the ÖVP, 7 with 30·6% (European People's Party); the FPÖ, 5 with 23·5% (Non-attached); the Greens, 2 with 9·2% (Greens). Other small parties received 5% of the votes cast between them.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Dr Thomas Klestil; b. 1933 (ÖVP; re-elected 19 April 1998; previously elected 24 May 1992 and sworn in 8 July 1992).

Following the elections of Nov. 1999, the ÖVP and the right-wing FPÖ agreed in Feb. 2000 to form a coalition government, with Dr Wolfgang Schüssel (ÖVP) as chancellor. In Sept. 2002 the coalition collapsed in the wake of a bitter power struggle within the FPÖ. Chancellor Schüssel called for new elections, held on 24 Nov 2002 and won by the ÖVP, which revived the coalition with the FPÖ. In March 2003 the government comprised:

Chancellor: Dr Wolfgang Schüssel; b. 1945 (ÖVP; sworn in 4 Feb. 2000).

Deputy-Chancellor and Minister for Social Security and Generations: Herbert Haupt (FPÖ).

Minister for Foreign Affairs: Benita Maria Ferrero-Waldner (ÖVP). Economic Affairs and Labour: Martin Bartenstein (ÖVP). Finance: Karl-Heinz Grasser (ind.). Interior: Ernst Strasser (ÖVP). Justice: Dieter Böhmdorfer (FPÖ). Defence: Günther Platter (ÖVP). Agriculture, Forestry and Environment: Josef Pröll (ÖVP). Health Affairs and Women's Issues: Maria Rauch-Kallat (ÖVP). Education, Science and Culture: Elisabeth Gehrer (ÖVP). Transport, Innovation and Technology: Hubert Gorbach (FPÖ). State Secretary in the Ministry for Finance: Alfred Finz (ÖVP). State Secretary in the Federal Chancellery: Franz Morak (ÖVP); Karl Schweitzer (FPÖ). State Secretary in the Ministry for Social Security and Generations: Ursula Hubner (FPÖ); Reinhart Waneck (FPÖ). State Secretary in the Ministry for Transport, Innovation and Technology: Herbert Kukacka (ÖVP).

DEFENCE

The Federal President is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. Conscription is for a seven-month period, with liability for at least another 30 days' reservist refresher training spread over eight to ten years. Since 1992 the total 'on mobilization strength' of the forces has been reduced from approximately 200,000 to 110,000 troops. In 2002 approximately 1,000 personnel from so-called 'prepared units' were deployed in peace support operations in places such as Afghanistan, Bosnia, Cyprus, the Golan Heights and Syria.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$1,609m. (US$196 per capita), representing 0·8% of GDP.

Army. The army is structured in five brigades and nine provincial military commands. Two brigades are mechanized, the rest infantry brigades. The mechanized brigades are equipped with Leopard 2/A4 main battle tanks. One of three infantry brigades is earmarked for airborne operations, the second is equipped with Pandur wheeled armoured personnel carriers and the third infantry brigade is specialized in mountain operations. The artillery units are brigade-directed. M-109 armoured self-propelled guns equip the artillery battalions. In addition to these standing units, some 20 infantry battalions under the direction of the provincial military commands are available on mobilization. Active personnel, 2000, 45,500 (to be 26,100) including 16,600 conscripts. Women started to serve in the armed forces on 1 April 1998.

Air Force. The Air Force Command comprises three aviation and three air-defence regiments with about 6,500 personnel, more than 150 aircraft and a number of fixed- and mobile radar stations. Some 23 Draken interceptors equip a surveillance wing responsible for the defence of the Austrian air space and a fighter-bomber wing operates SAAB 105s. Helicopters including the S-70 Black Hawk equip six squadrons for transport/support, communication, observation, and search and rescue duties. Fixed-wing aircraft including PC-6s, PC-7s, Skyvans and in the near future C-130 Hercules are operated as trainers and for transport. The procurement of a fourth generation fighter is also planned for the near future.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Austria is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO Partnership for Peace, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, CEI, Danube Commission, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Austria is a signatory to the Schengen Accord abolishing border controls between Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Trade and services account for about two-thirds of value added, and the industrial sector about one-third.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Austria ranked 15th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·8 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. The government aimed for a balanced budget in 2002, the first in 28 years, but this is not likely to be achieved until 2003. The most important sector in the economy is the service sector, accounting for 62% of economic output. Tourism plays an important role. EU membership has led to a more liberal market and many companies have been taken over by foreign, particularly German, companies. Lower taxes are planned for 2003 and the focus is on regulatory reform, the liberalization of public utilities and privatization. Monetary conditions have tightened owing to higher interest rates. The pension system, absorbing around 14·5% of GDP, is one of the most expensive in Europe. A major goal of the government is to reduce Austria's tax burden to 40% of GDP by 2010.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Austria; irrevocable conversion rate 13·7603 schillings to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the schilling ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €30·7bn.

Inflation was 2·3% in 2000 and 2·7% in 2001, with a forecast for 2002 of 1·8%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$12,020m. in June 2002 and gold reserves were 10·21m. troy oz. Total money supply was €9,258m. in June 2002.

Budget. The federal budget for calendar years provided revenue and expenditure as follows (in €1m.):

	2000	2001	2002[1]
Expenditure	55,393	58,988	59,350

[1]Provisional.

VAT is 20% (10% reduced rate).

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·7% in 1999 and 3·5% in 2000, but only 0·7% in 2001, with a forecast for 2002 of 0·9%. Total GDP was US$188·7bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Oesterreichische Nationalbank, central bank of Austria, opened on 1 Jan. 1923 but was taken over by the German Reichsbank on 17 March 1938. It was re-established on 3 July 1945. Its Governor is Klaus Liebscher.

In 2001 banking and insurance accounted for 6·8% of gross domestic product at current prices. In 2001 an average of 110,161 individuals were engaged in banking and insurance (banking 75,816 and insurance 29,276), representing 3·5% of Austria's wage and salary earners.

By the end of 2002, 906 credit institutions and branch offices from banks located in the European Union were active in Austria. 40 credit institutions from countries outside the EU have established representative offices. The leading banks with total assets in 2001 (in €1bn.) were: Bank Austria Group of Companies, 140·03; Erste Bank der Oesterreichischen Sparkassen AG, 55·94; Bank für Arbeit und Wirtschaft AG, 39·71; Raiffeisenzentralbank Österreich AG, 33·17; Oesterreichische Kontrollbank AG, 24·64.

There is a stock exchange in Vienna (VEX). It is one of the oldest in Europe and one of the smallest.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Austria's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 7·9 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Austria seventh in the world, with 64·2%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Austria is one of the world leaders in recycling. In 1996, 48% of all household waste was recycled.

Electricity. The Austrian electricity market was fully liberalized on 1 Oct. 2001. Installed capacity was 18·0m. kW in 1998. Production in 1999 was 60·35bn. kWh. Consumption per capita: 6,895 kWh (1998).

Oil and Gas. The commercial production of petroleum began in the early 1930s. Production of crude oil (in tonnes): 1998, 959,285.

The Austrian gas market was fully liberalized on 1 Oct. 2002. Production of natural gas (in 1,000 cu. metres): 1999, 1,740,652.

Minerals. The most important minerals are limestone and marble (1999 production, 26,408,576 tonnes), dolomite (1999 production, 7,968,072 tonnes), quartz and arenacious quartz, lignite, basalt, clay and kaolin.

Agriculture. In 1998, 149,600 persons were employed in agriculture as their main occupation. In 1998 the total cultivated area amounted to 3,422,449 ha. There were 252,110 farms in 1999. Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 Austria set aside 345,000 ha (10·1% of its agricultural land—one of the highest proportions in the world) for the growth of organic crops. Agriculture accounted for 1·4% of GDP, 4·9% of exports and 7·0% of imports in 1999.

The chief products (area in 1,000 ha, yield in tonnes) were as follows:

	1997		1998		1999
	Area	Yield	Area	Yield	Area	Yield
Barley	260·6	1,257,800	265·6	1,211,557	244·0	1,152,801
Oats	46·1	196,684	40·5	164,204	35·5	152,381
Potatoes	23·5	676,872	22·9	646,915	23·2	711,730
Rye	57·8	207,238	59·3	236,356	56·0	218,183
Sugarbeets	51·6	3,011,921	49·6	3,314,143	46·5	3,216,731
Wheat	259·8	1,352,281	264·4	1,341,820	260·6	1,416,200

Other important agricultural products include apples (410,000 tonnes in 1999) and pears (70,000 tonnes in 1999). Wine production in 1999 totalled 2,803,383 hectolitres.

Livestock (1999): cattle, 2,152,800; pigs, 3,433,000; sheep, 352,300; goats, 58,000; horses, 81,600; poultry, 14,498,000.

Forestry. Forested area in 1998, 3·9m. ha (47% of the land area), of which 76% was coniferous. Felled timber, in 1,000 cu. metres: 1996, 15,010·2; 1997, 14,725·8; 1998, 14,033·5; 1999, 14,083·9.

Fisheries. Total catch in 2000 came to 859 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Austria, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Telekom Austria AG (€5bn.); Österreichische Elektrizitätswirtschaft AG (€3bn.), a hydro-electric and thermal energy producer; and ÖMV AG (€3bn.), an energy, chemicals and plastics producer.

Output (in tonnes if not stated otherwise):

	1997	1998
Raw steel	1,349,687	1,424,599
Rolled steel	3,206,794	3,315,715
Cellulose	742,902	786,415
Paper and cardboard	3,793,664	3,893,220
Sawnwood (1,000 cu. metres)	7,334	6,629
Synthetic fibre yarn	46,939	45,138
Glass (flat) (1,000 sq. metres)	1,885	1,763
Sugar (refined)	501,421	473,945
Milk (1,000 litres)	1,360,597	1,367,806
Fertilizers	773,348	817,736

In 1998, 7,657 industrial establishments employed 571,048 persons, producing a value of 1,167bn. schillings (excluding VAT).

Labour. Austria has the second highest per capita income among the euro-12 countries and one of the lowest unemployment rates (4·1% in Jan. 2003). During 2000 Austria experienced its biggest fall in joblessness since the mid 1950s. Youth unemployment, at 4·5% in May 2000, was also one of the lowest in the world.

In Sept. 2000 there were 3,157,932 employed persons. In 1998, 890,000 people worked in personal social and public services, 617,000 in manufacturing, 482,000 in trade, 298,000 in finance, insurance and real estate, 265,000 in construction and 225,000 in transport and communications. In Sept. 2000 the number of registered jobseekers was 153,000.

The number of foreigners who may be employed in Austria is limited to 9% of the potential workforce. There were two strikes in 1997, with 25,800 participants (total strike hours, 153,000). There were no strikes in 1996 or 1998. Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost Austria an average of just four days per 1,000 employees a year (the lowest in the European Union), compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000.

Austria has one of the lowest average retirement ages but reforms passed in 1997 now make it less attractive to retire before 60. Only 15% of men and 6% of women in the 60–65 age range work, although the legal retirement ages are 60 for women and 65 for men.

Trade Unions. The 14 unions in the Austrian Trade Union Confederation (Österreichischer Gewerkschaftsbund, ÖGB) had 1,465,000 members in Dec. 1999.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The budgetary external debt was 393,400m. schillings in 1998.

Imports and Exports. Trade in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	65,252	62,936	66,983	68,051	67,415

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1920 Azerbaijan was proclaimed a Soviet Socialist Republic. From 1922, with Georgia and Armenia, it formed the Transcaucasian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic. Conflict with Armenia over the enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh escalated in 1988, leading to violent expulsions of Armenians in Azerbaijan and Azeris in Armenia. In 'Black January' 1990 Soviet tanks moved in to react to rioting in Baku, and over 100 civilians were killed. War broke out between the two countries in 1992, with a ceasefire agreed in 1994. The dispute over territory remains unsettled, although negotiations in Florida in 2001 promised a peaceful solution. In 1990 it adopted a declaration of republican sovereignty and on 18 Aug. 1991 the Supreme Soviet of Azerbaijan declared independence. Under the presidency of Heydar Aliyev, elected in Oct. 1993, parliament ratified association with the CIS on 20 Sept. 1993. A treaty of friendship and co-operation was signed with Russia on 3 July 1997 and Aliyev was re-elected in Oct. 1998, although the administration of the election was criticized by international observers.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Azerbaijan is bounded in the west by Armenia, in the north by Georgia and the Russian Federation (Dagestan), in the east by the Caspian sea and in the south by Turkey and Iran. Its area is 86,600 sq. km (33,430 sq. miles), and it includes the Nakhichevan Autonomous Republic and the largely Armenian-inhabited Nagorno-Karabakh.

The population at the 1999 census was 7,953,000 (4,119,000 females); density, approximately 92 per sq. km. In 1999, 56·9% of the population lived in urban areas. There are 65 towns (one in each region), eight of which have over 50,000 people. The population breaks down into 82·7% Azerbaijanis, 5·6% Armenians, 5·6% Russians and 2·4% Lezgis (1989 census).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 8·50m.

Chief cities: Baku (1999 census population, 1,786,700), Gandja (298,600) and Sumgait (281,600).

The official language is Azeri. On 1 Aug. 2001 Azerbaijan abolished the use of the Cyrillic alphabet and switched to using Latin script.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 1999: births, 117,500; deaths, 46,295; marriages, 37,400; divorces, 5,000. Rates, 1999 (per 1,000 population): births, 14·7; deaths, 5·8; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 16·2. Life expectancy in 1999: 74·8 years for women and 67·7 years for men. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·8%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·0 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is almost tropical in summer and the winters slightly warmer than in regions north of the Caucasus. Cold spells do occur, however, both on the high mountains and in the enclosed valleys. There are nine climatic zones. Baku, Jan. –6°C, July 25°C. Annual rainfall 318 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament is the 125-member Melli-Majlis. 100 seats are contested on a majority basis, and 25 distributed proportionally among political parties. For the majority seats there is a minimum 50% turn-out requirement. There is an 8% threshold. A constitutional referendum and parliamentary elections were held on 12 Nov. 1995.

Turn-out for the referendum was 86%. The new Constitution was approved by 91·9% of votes cast.

National Anthem. 'Azerbaijan! Azerbaijan!'; words by A. Javad, tune by U. Hajibayov.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections on 3 Oct. 1993 Heydar Aliyev was elected president unopposed, with 98·8% of votes cast; he was re-elected on 11 Oct. 1998 with 76·1% of votes cast and again on 11 Aug. 2002 with 88·4% of the vote.

At the parliamentary elections held on 5 Nov. 2000 and 7 Jan. 2001 the New Azerbaijan Party (NAP) gained 75 seats with 62·3% of votes cast; Popular Front Party gained 6 seats with 10·8%; the Party of Citizen's Solidarity, 3 seats with 6·3%; the Communist Party of Azerbaijan, 2 seats with 6·3%.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 17 months. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$213m. (US$28 per capita), representing 4·5% of GDP.

Army. Personnel, 1999, 69,900. In addition there is a reserve force of 575,700 Azerbaijanis who have received some kind of military service experience within the last 15 years. There is also a paramilitary Ministry of the Interior militia of about 10,000 and a border guard of approximately 5,000.

Navy. The flotilla is based at Baku on the Caspian Sea and numbered about 2,200 in 1999 including two small frigates.

Air Force. How many ex-Soviet aircraft are usable is not known but there are 49 combat aircraft and 15 armed helicopters. Personnel, 8,100 in 1999.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Azerbaijan is a member of the UN, the NATO Partnership for Peace, Council of Europe, OSCE, CIS, IMO, the World Bank, IMF, EBRD, BSEC, ECO, IOM, OIC and OEC. There is a dispute with Armenia over the status of the chiefly Armenian-populated Azerbaijani enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh. A ceasefire was negotiated from 1994 with 20% of Azerbaijan's land in Armenian hands and with 1m. Azeri refugees and displaced persons.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 20·3% of GDP, services 41·0% and industry 38·7%.

Currency. The manat (AZM) of 100 gyapiks replaced the rouble in Jan. 1994. Inflation was 1·8% in 2000 and 1·5% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$763m. in June 2002 and total money supply was 1,729·57bn. manats.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. manats):

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Revenue	1,920,245	1,881,015	2,350,032	3,076,024
Expenditure	2,254,334	2,283,635	3,028,574	3,993,139

Profits tax accounted for 498,000m. manats of the 1998 budget revenue and VAT accounted for 800,000m. manats. Of the 1998 expenditure, education accounted for 825,842·9m. manats, social protection 340,000m. manats, health 290,143m. manats and social welfare 88,275m. manats.

Performance. Total GDP was US$5·7bn. in 2001. Azerbaijan has one of the fastest growing economies in the world. Real GDP growth was 10·0% in 1998, 7·4% in 1999, 11·1% in 2000 and 9·9% in 2001. This was largely thanks to foreign investment into the country in anticipation of the forthcoming oil boom. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was –18·7%.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the National Bank (Chairman, Dr Elman Rustamov). In 1996 there were 112 commercial and four state-owned banks. With capital requirements increasing, the number of commercial banks is rapidly decreasing.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Azerbaijan's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 4·9 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Capacity in 1997 was 5m. kW. Output was 18,062m. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita was 1,584 kWh.

Oil and Gas. The most important industry is crude oil extraction. Baku is at the centre of oil exploration in the Caspian. Partnerships with Turkish, western European and US companies have been forged.

In 1999 oil reserves totalled 7bn. bbls. A century ago Azerbaijan produced half of the world's oil, but production today is less than 1% of the total. An estimated average of 9·0m. tonnes of oil are produced annually (1997). In July 1999 BP Amoco announced a major natural gas discovery in the Shakh Deniz offshore field, with reserves of at least 700bn. cu. metres and perhaps as much as 1,000bn. cu. metres. There were proven reserves of 850bn. cu. metres. Natural gas production in 1999 amounted to 5·6bn. cu. metres.

Accords for the construction of an oil pipeline from Baku, the Azerbaijani capital, on the Caspian Sea through Georgia to Ceyhan in southern Turkey, and a gas pipeline from Turkmenistan through Azerbaijan and Georgia, to Erzurum in northeastern Turkey, were signed in Nov. 1999. Work on the oil pipeline, which is expected to become operational in 2005, began in Sept. 2002.

Minerals. The republic is rich in natural resources: iron, bauxite, manganese, aluminium, copper ores, lead, zinc, precious metals, sulphur pyrites, nepheline syenites, limestone and salt. In 1995, 1·0m. tonnes of iron ore were produced. Cobalt ore reserves have been discovered in Dashkasan, and Azerbaijan has the largest iodine-bromine ore reserves of the former Soviet Union (the Neftchala region has an iodine-bromine mill).

Agriculture. In 1997 the total area devoted to agriculture was 4·5m. ha, of which 1·7m. ha was under crop and 223,747 ha were orchards and vineyards. In 1997, 34% of the economically active population was engaged in agriculture. Principal crops include grain, cotton, rice, grapes, citrus fruit, vegetables, tobacco and silk.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: wheat, 1,198; potatoes, 450; tomatoes, 331; barley, 202; apples, 180; watermelons, 180.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 1·94m.; sheep, 5·39m.; goats, 400,000; chickens, 14m. Livestock products (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 53; lamb and mutton, 36; cow's milk, 1,011; eggs, 29.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 990,000 ha, or 11·4% of the total land area.

Fisheries. About ten tonnes of caviar from the Caspian sturgeon are produced annually. Total catch in 2000 came to approximately 18,797 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

There are oil extraction and refining, oil-related machinery, iron and steel, aluminium, copper, chemical, cement, building materials, timber, synthetic rubber, salt, textiles, food and fishing industries. Output (1997) was, in tonnes: residual fuel oil, 3,868,000; distillate fuel oil, 2,157,000; jet fuel, 579,000; cement, 315,000; rolled ferrous metals, 200,000 (1993); mineral fertilizers, 30,000 (1993); processed meat, 16,500 (1993); milk products, 48,000 (1993); fabrics, 116m. sq. metres (1993); footwear, 4·1m. pairs (1993); 17,000 drilling and boring machines; 1,000 TV sets.

Labour. In 1997 the population of working age was 4·5m. of whom 2·9m. were employed. The unemployment rate in 1999 was 13·9%. The average monthly salary in 1997 was 125,500 manats.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total external debt was US$1,184m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$1,539·0m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$1,858·3m.

Petroleum and related products accounted for approximately 75% of exports in 1999. Cotton, chemicals, tobacco, beverages, air conditioners, wool and refrigerators are also important exports. Principal imports are machinery, power, cereals, steel tubes, sugar and sweets.

The main export markets in 1999 were Italy (34%), Russia (9%), Georgia (8%) and Turkey (7%). Leading import suppliers were Russia (21%), Turkey (13%), US (8%) and UK (6%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 24,981 km of roads (6,879 km highways and main roads) in 1998. Passenger cars in use in 1998 totalled 281,320 (36 per 1,000 inhabitants). In addition, there were 79,934 trucks and vans and 13,666 buses and coaches. There were 594 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Rail. Total length in 1994 was 2,118 km of 1,520 mm gauge (1,310 km electrified). Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 550m. and freight tonne-km to 4,613m.

There is a metro and tramway in Baku and a tramway in Sumgait.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Baku. Azerbaijan Airlines had international flights in 1998 to Aleppo, Ankara, Antalya, Ashgabat, Chelyabinsk, Delhi, Ekaterinburg, Istanbul, Kazan, Kharkov, Kyiv, London, Moscow, Nakhichevan, Nizhny Novgorod, Orenburg, Perm, St Petersburg, Samara, Tbilisi, Tehran, Tel Aviv, Trabzon, Turkmanbashi, Volgograd, Voronezh and Zaporozhye. In 1999 Azerbaijan Airlines flew 10·4m. km, carrying 571,700 passengers (187,500 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 651,000 GRT (including oil tankers, 176,000 GRT). In 1998 vessels totalling 3,967,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 1,483,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. Telephone main lines numbered 801,200 in 2000 (103·6 per 1,000 inhabitants). In 1999 there were 180,000 mobile phone subscribers and (1995) 2,500 fax machines. There were 12,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. There were 1,857 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The number of reported crimes in 1997 was 16,402 (compared to 18,533 in 1994), including 449 murders or attempted murders (605 in 1994). There were 219 crimes per 1,000 inhabitants (249 in 1994) and 80% of crimes were solved (69·3% in 1994).

The population in penal institutions in July 1997 was 24,881 (325 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty was abolished in 1998.

Religion. In 1997 the population was 92% Muslim (mostly Shia), the balance being mainly Russian Orthodox, Armenian Apostolic and Judaism.

Education. In 1996–97 there were 719,013 pupils and 35,514 teachers at 4,454 primary schools, and 819,625 pupils at secondary schools. There were 103,608 children enrolled at pre-school institutions. In 1997 there were 111,382 students at 25 institutes of higher education and 73 specialized secondary schools. There is a state university at Baku, with 94,300 students in 1993–94 (including correspondence students). The Azerbaijan Academy of Sciences, founded in 1945, has 30 research institutes. Adult literacy was estimated to be 99% in 1998.

In 1997 total expenditure on education came to 3·0% of GNP and represented 18·8% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1997 there were 29,300 doctors, 65,500 paramedics and 762 hospitals with 72,000 beds.

Welfare. In Jan. 1994 there were 797,000 age pensioners and 454,000 other pensioners.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Azerbaijan Radio broadcasts two national and one regional programme, a relay of Radio Moscow and a foreign service, Radio Baku (Azeri, Arabic, Iranian and Turkish). There are a number of private TV and radio stations. In 1997 there were 170,000 TV receivers and 175,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. In 1997 there were 696 cinemas.

Press. In 1997 Azerbaijan published 270 different newspapers and 45 magazines. In 1995, 422 newspapers were registered with the Ministry of Justice, but only about 50 were actually appearing. There is one daily, published by parliament, with a circulation of 5,000, and two independent thrice-weeklies with a combined circulation of 30,000. 73 journals were registered in 1995, but only 12 were appearing.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 170,000 foreign tourists, spending US$125m.

Libraries. There are 4,647 public libraries (1997).

Theatre and Opera. Azerbaijan had 26 professional theatres in 1997.

Museums and Galleries. There were 145 museums including a National Museum of History in 1997.

NAKHICHEVAN

This territory, on the borders of Turkey and Iran, forms part of Azerbaijan although separated from it by the territory of Armenia. Its population in 1989 was 95·9% Azerbaijani. It was annexed by Russia in 1828. In June 1923 it was constituted as an Autonomous Region within Azerbaijan. On 9 Feb. 1924 it was elevated to the status of Autonomous Republic. The 1996 Azerbaijani Constitution defines it as an Autonomous State within Azerbaijan.

Area, 5,500 sq. km (2,120 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1994), 315,000. Capital, Nakhichevan (66,800).

70% of the people are engaged in agriculture, of which the main branches are cotton and tobacco growing. Fruit and grapes are also produced.

In 1989–90 there were 219 primary and secondary schools with 60,200 pupils, and 2,200 students in higher educational institutions.

In Jan. 1990 there were 381 doctors and 2,445 junior medical personnel.

NAGORNO-KARABAKH

Established on 7 July 1923 as an Autonomous Region within Azerbaijan, in 1989 the area was placed under a ‘special form of administration’ subordinate to the USSR government. In Sept. 1991 the regional Soviet and the Shaumyan district Soviet jointly declared a Nagorno-Karabakh republic, which declared itself independent with a 99·9% popular vote (only the Armenian community took part in this vote as the Azeri population had already been expelled from Nagorno-Karabakh) in Dec. 1991. The autonomous status of the region was meanwhile abolished by the Azerbaijan Supreme Soviet in Nov. 1991, and the capital renamed Khankendi. A presidential decree of Jan. 1992 placed the region under direct rule. Azeri-Armenian fighting for possession of the region culminated in its occupation by Armenia in 1993 (and the occupation of seven other Azerbaijani regions outside it), despite attempts at international mediation. Since May 1994 there has been a ceasefire. Negotiations on settlements are conducted within the OSCE Minsk Group.

Area, 4,400 sq. km (1,700 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1990), 192,400. Capital, Khankendi (33,000). Populated by Armenians (76·9% at the 1989 census) and Azerbaijanis (21·5%).

In presidential elections held on 11 Aug. 1997 the hard-line independence candidate Arkady Gukasyan received more than 89% of votes cast, and was sworn in on 8 Sept. He was re-elected on 11 Aug. 2002 with 88·4% of votes cast. Legislative elections were held on 18 June 2000. The Democratic Artsakh Party, which supports President Gukasyan, won 13 seats; the Armenian Revolutionary Federation 9; the Armenakan Party 1; and independents 10. The Prime Minister is Anushavan Danielyan.

Main industries are silk, wine, dairying and building materials. Crop area is 67,200 ha; cotton, grapes and winter wheat are grown. There are 33 collective and 38 state farms.

In 1989–90, 34,200 pupils were studying in primary and secondary schools, 2,400 in colleges and 2,100 in higher educational institutions.

BAHAMAS

Commonwealth of The Bahamas

Capital: Nassau
Population estimate, 2000: 304,000
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 17,012
HDI/world rank: 0·826/41

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

For most of the period from the 17th century, the Bahamas were governed by Britain. Internal self-government with cabinet responsibility was introduced on 7 Jan. 1964 and full independence achieved on 10 July 1973.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas consists of over 700 islands and inhabited cays off the southeast coast of Florida extending for about 260,000 sq. miles. Only 22 islands are inhabited. Land area, 5,382 sq. miles (13,939 sq. km).

The areas and populations of the major islands in 1990 were as follows:

	Area (in sq. km)	Population		Area (in sq. km)	Population
New Providence	207	172,196	Bimini Islands	23	1,639
Grand Bahama	1,373	40,898	Inagua Islands	1,671	985
Eleuthera, Harbour Island and Spanish Wells	518	10,584	Berry Islands	31	628
			San Salvador	163	465
Abaco	1,681	10,003	Crooked Island	238	412
Andros	5,957	8,177	Acklins Island	389	405
Exuma Islands	290	3,556	Mayaguana	285	312
Long Island	448	2,949	Ragged Island	23	89
Cat Island	388	1,698	Rum Cay	78	53

Census population for 2000 was 303,611.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 341,000.

In 1999, 87·9% of the population were urban. The capital is Nassau on New Providence Island (212,432 in 2000); the other large town is Freeport (45,000 in 1999) on Grand Bahama.

English is the official language. Creole is spoken among Haitian immigrants.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 estimates: births, 6,300; deaths, 1,600. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): birth, 21·47; death, 5·45; marriage (1996), 9·3; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 1999, 18. Expectation of life was 64·9 years for males and 73·6 years for females in 1999. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·9%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·6 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Winters are mild and summers pleasantly warm. Most rain falls in May, June, Sept. and Oct., and thunderstorms are frequent in summer. Rainfall amounts vary over the islands from 30" (750 mm) to 60" (1,500 mm). Nassau, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,179 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas is a free and democratic sovereign state. Executive power rests with Her Majesty the Queen, who appoints a Governor-General to represent her, advised by a Cabinet whom he appoints. There is a bicameral legislature. The Senate comprises 16 members all appointed by the Governor-General, nine on the advice of the Prime Minister, four on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition, and three after consultation with both of them. The House of Assembly consists of 40 members elected from single-member constituencies for a maximum term of five years.

National Anthem. 'Lift up your head to the rising sun, Bahamaland'; words and tune by T. Gibson.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In parliamentary elections held on 2 May 2002 the Progressive Liberal Party (PLP) won 50·8% of votes cast and 29 out of 40 seats, the Free National Movement (FNM) 41·1% (7) and ind. 5·2% (4). Turn-out was 82·4%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

DEFENCE

The Royal Defence Force is a primarily maritime force tasked with naval patrols and protection duties in the extensive waters of the archipelago. Personnel in 1999 numbered 860, and the base is at Coral Harbour on New Providence Island.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$25m. (US$94 per capita), representing 0·6% of GDP.

Navy. The Navy operates 19 vessels including seven patrol craft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas is a member of the UN, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, the Commonwealth, ACS, CARICOM, FAO, IBRD, ICAO, ILO, IMF, Intelsat, ITU, UNESCO, UNIDO, WHO, WIPO and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Services contributed an estimated 92% of GDP in 1997.

Overview. The government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas is committed to building an economic environment in which free enterprise can flourish, where the government assumes its proper role as regulator and facilitator of economic development. The National Investment Policy is designed to support an investment-friendly climate; guarantees the complementarity of Bahamian and overseas investments; fosters appropriate links with all sectors of the economy, in particular, the tourism and financial services sectors.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Bahamian dollar (BSD) of 100 cents. American currency is generally accepted. Inflation was 2·0% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$461m. in June 2002 and total money supply was B$812m.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in B$1m.):

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	685·9	729·0	761·3	869·1	940·8
Expenditure	719·7	829·3	807·2	884·5	916·6

The main sources of revenue are import duties, stamp duty from land sales, work permits and residence fees, and accommodation tax. There is no direct taxation.

Performance. The Bahamas experienced a recession during the period 1988–94; this was mainly due to the recession in the USA leading to a fall in the number of American tourists. The economy has been growing since, and there are continuing efforts to diversify. Freeport's tax-free status was extended by 25 years in 1995, and import duties were reduced in the 1996–97 budget. 1996 saw an increase in growth but the budget deficit is increasing; an overall deficit of US$190m. was projected for 1997–98, 3 times the 1996–97 deficit, and 5% of GDP.

Real GDP growth was 5·0% in 2000 but the general downturn in the world economy resulted in negative growth of 0·5% in 2001. Total GDP in 2000 was US$4·8bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of The Bahamas was established in 1974. Its Governor is Julian Francis. The Bahamas is an important centre for offshore banking. Financial business produces about 20% of GDP. In Dec. 1996, 425 banks and trust companies were licensed, about half being branches of foreign companies.

The Bahamas was one of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

A stock exchange, the Bahamas International Securities Exchange (BISX), was inaugurated in May 2000.

Weights and Measures. The Bahamas follows the USA in using linear, dry and liquid measure.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas the carbon dioxide emissions of the Bahamas in 1998 were the equivalent of 6·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. In 1996 installed capacity was 424 MW, all thermal. Output, 1998, 1·34bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 4,859 kWh in 1997.

Oil and Gas. The Bahamas does not have reserves of either oil or gas, but oil is refined in the Bahamas. The Bahamas Oil Refining Company (BORCO), in Grand Bahama, operates as a terminal which trans-ships, stores and blends oil.

Minerals. Aragonite is extracted from the seabed.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were some 6,000 ha of arable land and 4,000 ha of permanent crops. Production (in 1,000 tonnes), 2000: sugarcane, 45; fruit, 22 (notably grapefruit, lemons and limes); vegetables, 21.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 1,000; sheep, 6,000; goats, 15,000; pigs, 6,000; chickens, 5m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 158,000 ha or 15·8% of the total land area (18% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 17,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The estimated total catch in 2000 amounted to 10,500 tonnes, mainly lobsters, and exclusively from sea fishing. Total value in 1995 of fish landings was B$59·7m.

INDUSTRY

Tourism and offshore banking are the main industries. Two industrial sites, one in New Providence and the other in Grand Bahama, have been developed as part of an industrialization programme. The main products are pharmaceutical chemicals, salt and rum.

Labour. The workforce was estimated at 146,600 in 1996. Around 30% of the economically active population work in trade, restaurants and hotels. Unemployment was 6·9% in 2001.

Trade Unions. In 1996 there were 43 unions, the largest being The Bahamas Hotel Catering and Allied Workers' Union (5,000 members).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Public-sector foreign debt was US$372,862 in Dec. 1997. There is a freeport zone of Grand Bahama. Although a member of CARICOM, the Bahamas is not a signatory to its trade protocol.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	1,287·4	1,410·7	1,737·1	1,808·1	1,905·0
Exports f.o.b.	273·3	295·0	362·9	379·9	549·8

The principal exports are oil products and trans-shipments, chemicals, fish, rum and salt. In 1997 the main export markets were USA (77%) and France (12%); the USA was the source of 91% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were about 2,500 km of roads in 1996 (1,450 km paved). In 1996 there were around 46,000 passenger cars and 12,000 lorries and vans.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Nassau, Freeport (Grand Bahama Island) and Moss Town (Andros). The national carrier is the state-owned Bahamasair, which in 1998 flew to Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Newark, Orlando and West Palm Beach as well as providing services between different parts of the Bahamas. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Bahamas-based carriers flew 6·8m. km, carrying 1,719,000 passengers (944,000 on international flights).

Shipping. The Bahamas' shipping registry consists of a fleet of 27·7m. GRT, a figure exceeded only by the fleets of Panama and Liberia. There were nearly 1,300 vessels in 1998, including 255 tankers.

Telecommunications. New Providence and most of the other major islands have automatic telephone systems in operation, interconnected by a radio network, while local distribution within the islands is by overhead and underground cables. In 2000 there were 114,300 telephone main lines in use or 375·9 per 1,000 inhabitants. International telecommunications service is provided by a submarine cable system to Florida, USA, and an INTELSAT Standard 'A' Earth Station and a Standard 'F2' Earth Station. International operator-assisted and direct dialling telephone services are available to all major countries. There is an automatic Telex system and a packet switching system for data transmission, and land mobile and marine telephone services. In 2001 there were 120,000 mobile phone subscribers and (1995) 500 fax machines. There were 13,100 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1997 there were over 120 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. English Common Law is the basis of the Bahamian judicial system, although there is a large volume of Bahamian Statute Law. The highest tribunal in the country is the Court of Appeal. New Providence has 15 Magistrates' Courts and Grand Bahama has three.

The strength of the police force (1995) was 2,223 officers.

There were 64 murders in 1999 (a rate of 21·5 per 100,000 population). The death penalty is in force, the most recent execution being carried out in Jan. 2000. The population in penal institutions in Jan. 1998 was 1,401 (485 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Religious adherents at the 1996 census: Baptist, 32%; Anglican/Episcopalian, 20%; Roman Catholic, 19%; Protestant, 12%; Church of God, 6%; Methodist, 6%.

Education. Education is compulsory between five and 16 years of age. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 95·7% (94·9% among males and 96·4% among females). In 1996 there were 210 schools (49 independent). Total school enrolment, Sept. 1996, 61,118. Courses lead to The Bahamas General Certificate of Secondary Education (BGCSE). Independent schools provide education at primary, secondary and high school levels.

The four institutions offering higher education are: the government-sponsored College of The Bahamas, established in 1974; the University of the West Indies (regional), affiliated with the Bahamas since 1960; The Bahamas Hotel Training College, sponsored by the Ministry of Education and the hotel industry; and The Bahamas Technical and Vocational Institute, established to provide basic skills. Several schools of continuing education offer secretarial and academic courses.

Health. In 1996 there was a government general hospital (436 beds) and a psychiatric/geriatric care centre (502 beds) in Nassau, and a hospital in Freeport (82 beds). The Family Islands, comprising 20 health districts, had 13 health centres and 107 main clinics in 1996. There were two private hospitals (86 beds) in New Providence in 1993.

Welfare. Social Services are provided by the Department of Social Services, a government agency which grants assistance to restore, reinforce and enhance the capacity of the individual to perform life tasks, and to provide for the protection of children in the Bahamas.

The Department's divisions comprise: community support services, child welfare, family services, senior citizens, Family Island and research planning, training and community relations.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Broadcasting Corporation of the Bahamas is a government-owned company which operates five radio broadcasting stations and a TV service with one channel, ZNS TV 13. In 1998, five independent radio stations were operating. In 1997 there were 67,000 television and 215,000 radio receivers. TV colour is by NTSC. There is cable TV on Grand Bahama, New Providence and the majority of the Family Islands.

Cinema. In 1998 there were four cinemas.

Press. There were three national dailies and one weekly in 1998.

Tourism. Tourism is the most important industry, accounting for about 70% of GDP. In 1998 there were 1,590,000 stop-over and 1,730,000 cruise-ship visitors. Tourist expenditure was US$1,415m. in 1998.

Festivals. Junkanoo is the quintessential Bahamian celebration, a parade or 'rush-out', characterized by colourful costumes, goatskin drums, cowbells, horns and a brass section. It is staged in the early hours of 26 Dec. and the early hours of 1 Jan.

Libraries. There were eight libraries in the Bahamas in 1998.

Theatre and Opera. The Bahamas had one National Theatre in 1998, the Dundas Centre for the Performing Arts.

Museums and Galleries. In 1998 there were four museums and 13 art galleries.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bahrain was controlled by the Portuguese from 1521 until 1602. The Khalifa family gained control in 1783 and has ruled since that date. British assistance was sought to retain independence and from 1861 until 1971 Bahrain was in all but name a British protectorate. Bahrain declared its independence in 1971. Shaikh Isa bin Salman Al-Khalifa became the Amir. A constitution was ratified in June 1973 providing for a National Assembly of 30 members, popularly elected for a four-year term, together with all members of the cabinet (appointed by the Amir). However, in 1975 the National Assembly was dissolved and the Amir began ruling by decree. In 1987 the main island was joined to the Saudi mainland by a causeway. In Feb. 2002 Bahrain became a kingdom, with the Amir proclaiming himself king.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Kingdom of Bahrain forms an archipelago of 36 low-lying islands in the Arabian (Persian) Gulf, between the Qatar peninsula and the mainland of Saudi Arabia. The total area is 706·6 sq. km.

The island of Bahrain (578 sq. km) is connected by a 1·5-mile causeway to the second largest island, Muharraq to the northeast, and by a causeway with the island of Sitra to the east. A causeway links Bahrain with Saudi Arabia. From Sitra, oil pipelines and a causeway carrying a road extend out to sea for 3 miles to a deep-water anchorage.

Population (1996 est.) 598,600 (males, 349,100; females, 249,500), of which 369,200 were Bahraini and 229,400 non-Bahraini. The population density was 850 per sq. km. In 1999, 91·8% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 744,000.

There are 12 regions: Central, Eastern, Hamad Town, Hidd Town, Isa Town, Jidhafs, Manama, Muharraq, Northern, Rifa'a, Sitra, Western. Manama, the capital and commercial centre, had a 1999 population of 162,000. Other towns (1991 census population) are Muharraq (74,254), Rifa'a (45,596), Jidhafs (44,769), Sitra (36,755) and Isa Town (34,509).

Arabic is the official language. English is widely used in business.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics 1999: births, 14,280 (Bahraini, 11,269); deaths, 1,920 (Bahraini, 1,557). Rates (per 1,000) for Bahrainis in 1999: birth, 28·0; death, 3·87; natural increase, 24·13; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 8·7 (1999). For non-Bahrainis: birth, 11·4; death, 1·4; natural increase, 10. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 71·4 years for men and 75·6 years for women. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·4%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·7 children per woman. In 1999 there were 3,673 marriages and 834 divorces.

The Shia make up 70% of the national population, half of whom are under 15.

CLIMATE

The climate is pleasantly warm between Dec. and March but from June to Sept. the conditions are very hot and humid. The period June to Nov. is virtually rainless. Bahrain, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 97°F (36°C). Annual rainfall 5·2" (130 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ruling family is the Al-Khalifa who have been in power since 1783.

The constitution changing Bahrain from an Emirate to a Kingdom dates from 14 Feb. 2002. The new constitutional hereditary monarchy has a bicameral legislature, inaugurated on 14 Dec. 2002. National elections for a legislative body took place on 24 and 31 Oct. 2002 (the first for 27 years). One chamber is a directly elected assembly while the second (upper) chamber, a Shura consultative council of experts, is appointed by the government. Both chambers have 40 members. All Bahraini citizens over the age of 21—men and women—are able to vote for the elected assembly. In the Oct. 2002 national elections women stood for office for the first time.

National Anthem. 'Bahrain ona, baladolaman' ('Our Bahrain, secure as a country'); words by M. S. Ayyash, tune anonymous.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 24 and 31 Oct. 2002 the first national elections since Dec. 1973 were held. Despite a call from opposition parties for the election to be boycotted, turn-out was over 50%. 21 out of 40 seats were won by secular candidates, with the remaining seats going to Sunni and Shia representatives. There were eight women among a total of 177 candidates running for the legislature, although males won all of the seats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The present king (formerly Amir), HH Shaikh Hamad bin Isa Al-Khalifa, KCMG (b. 1950), succeeded on 6 March 1999 and became king on 14 Feb. 2002.

In March 2003 the cabinet was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Shaikh Khalifa bin Salman Al-Khalifa; b. 1936. He is currently the longest-serving prime minister of any sovereign country, having been Bahrain's Prime Minister since it became independent in Aug. 1971.

DEFENCE

The Crown Prince is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. An agreement with the USA in Oct. 1991 gave port facilities to the US Navy and provided for mutual manoeuvres.

Military expenditure totalled US$435m. in 2000 (US$706 per capita), representing 6·4% of GDP.

Army. The Army consists of one infantry brigade, one artillery brigade and one air defence battalion. Personnel, 1999, 8,500. In addition there is a National Guard of approximately 900 and a paramilitary police force of 9,000.

Navy. The Naval force based at Mina Sulman numbered 1,000 in 1999.

Air Force. Personnel (1999), 1,500. Equipment includes 24 combat aircraft and 26 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bahrain is a member of the UN, WTO, the League of Arab States, the Gulf Co-operation Council, OAPEC (Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries) and OIC.

In March 2001 the International Court of Justice ruled on a long-standing dispute between Bahrain and Qatar over the boundary between the two countries and ownership of certain islands. Both countries accepted the decision.

ECONOMY

In 1996 services accounted for an estimated 53% of GDP and industry 46%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Bahraini dinar (BHD), divided into 1,000 fils. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$1,675m., total money supply was BD602m. and gold reserves were 150,000 troy oz. There was deflation of 1·2% in 2001.

In 2001 the six Gulf Arab states—Bahrain, along with Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates—signed an agreement to establish a single currency by 2010.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in BD1m.):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	526·6	615·2	633·2	516·5	653·5	1,065·9
Expenditure	594·1	581·3	620·0	644·6	699·3	777·0

Bahrain is suffering from low oil prices, as it relies on oil for 50% of government revenue.

Performance. Total GDP in 2000 was US$8·0bn. Real GDP growth was 5·3% in 2000 and 4·8% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Bahrain Monetary Agency (Governor, Ahmed bin Mohammed Al-Khalifa) has central banking powers. In 1998 Bahrain hosted 180 different financial institutions including 46 offshore banking units. In 1994, 38 foreign banks had representative offices. Offshore banking units may not engage in local business; their assets totalled US$62,503m. in March 1996.

There is a stock exchange linked with those of Kuwait and Oman.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Bahrain's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 29·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. In 1997 installed capacity was 1m. kW; 4·77bn. kWh were produced in 1998. Electricity consumption per capita was 7,645 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. In 1931 oil was discovered. Operations were at first conducted by the Bahrain Petroleum Co. (BAPCO) under concession. In 1975 the government assumed a 60% interest in the oilfield and related crude oil facilities of BAPCO. Oil reserves in 1997 were 210m. bbls. Crude oil runs to refinery in 1996 amounted to 14·2m. bbls. Production (1996) was around 39,000 bbls. a day.

There were known natural gas reserves of 110bn. cu. metres in 1999. Production in 1999 was 8·5bn. cu. metres. Gas reserves are government-owned.

Water. Water is obtained from artesian wells and desalination plants and there is a piped supply to Manama, Muharraq, Isa Town, Rifa'a and most villages.

Agriculture. There are about 900 farms and smallholdings (average 2·5 ha) operated by about 2,500 farmers who produce a wide variety of fruits (22,000 tonnes in 2000) including dates (17,000 tonnes). In 2000 an estimated 12,000 tonnes of vegetables were produced. The major crop is alfalfa for animal fodder.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 11,000; camels, 1,000; sheep, 18,000; goats, 16,000.

In 2000 an estimated 5,000 tonnes of lamb and mutton, 5,000 tonnes of poultry meat, 3,000 tonnes of eggs and 14,000 tonnes of fresh milk were produced. Agriculture contributed 1% of GDP in 1997.

Fisheries. In 1990 the government operated a fleet of two large and five smaller trawlers totalling 1,004 GRT. The total catch in 2000 was 11,718 tonnes, exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Industry is being developed with foreign participation: aluminium smelting (and ancillary industries), shipbuilding and repair, petrochemicals, electronics assembly and light industry. Aluminium production was 480,000 tonnes in 1997.

Traditional crafts include boatbuilding, weaving and pottery.

Labour. The workforce (estimate 1996) was 272,100 of which 103,500 were Bahraini. There were 5,100 unemployed persons in 1995.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Totally foreign-owned companies have been permitted to register since 1991.

In 2001 Bahrain, along with Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates agreed to the complete implementation of a customs union by 2003.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) totalled US$4,373·4m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$5,700·5m. In 1999 mineral fuels and related materials made up 62% of exports and 35% of imports. In 1999 the main export markets were Saudi Arabia, USA and India; the main import sources were Australia (6%), Saudi Arabia (6%), USA (6%) and UK (5%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. A 25-km causeway links Bahrain with Saudi Arabia. In 1998 there were 3,164 km of roads (76·9% paved), including 414 km of main roads and 450 km of secondary roads. Bahrain has one of the densest road networks in the world. In 1998 there were 196,143 vehicles in use, including 157,208 passenger cars (244·5 per 1,000 inhabitants). The average distance covered by a passenger car in the course of 1998 was 25,725 km (18,280 km in 1992).

Civil Aviation. Bahrain has a 25% share (with Oman, Qatar and UAE) in Gulf Air. In 2000 Bahrain International Airport handled 3·38m. passengers (all on international flights) and 146,800 tonnes of freight. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Bahrain-based carriers flew 20·8m. km, carrying 1,307,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant fleet totalled 284,000 GRT, including oil tankers 54,000 GRT. The port of Mina Sulman is a free transit and industrial area; about 800 vessels are handled annually. In 1994, 3,864 passengers arrived and 3,963 departed by sea.

Telecommunications. The government has a 37% stake in Bahrain Telecommunications (BATELCO). In 2000 there were 171,000 telephone lines (249·7 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 95,000 PCs were in use (138·7 for every 1,000 persons). In 1997 there were 6,620 fax machines. Bahrain had 94,000 mobile phone subscribers in Dec. 1998 and 105,000 Internet users in March 2001.

Postal Services. There were 12 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The new constitution which came into force in Feb. 2002 includes the creation of an independent judiciary. The State Security Law and the State Security Court were both abolished in the lead-up to the change to a constitutional monarchy.

Religion. Islam is the state religion. In 1997, 84% of the population were Muslim (63% Shia and 21% Sunni). There are also Christian, Jewish, Bahai, Hindu and Parsee minorities.

Education. Adult literacy was 87·1% in 1999 (male, 90·5%; female, 82·2%). Government schools provide free education from primary to technical college level. Schooling is in three stages: primary (six years), intermediate (three years) and secondary (three years). Secondary education may be general or specialized.

Government school statistics for 1993–94:

	Pupils		Schools		Teachers
	Boys	Girls	Boys	Girls	Male	Female

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

When the Indian sub-continent gained independence from Britain in 1947, it was partitioned according to religion. West Bengal became part of India while East Bengal elected to join Pakistan as East Pakistan. The province, however, was separated from West Pakistan physically and ethnically. Differences became unmanageable when East Pakistan's Awami League, campaigning for greater autonomy, won the majority of seats in the federal parliament in Dec. 1970. There was civil war from March to Dec. 1971. With the help of Indian troops, the Pakistani forces were defeated and the East broke away as an independent state to become the Republic of Bangladesh. The constitution of 1972 provided parliamentary democracy but in Jan. 1975 the president banned political parties. There followed a succession of coups until 1991 when democratic parliamentary elections were held. Continuing unrest reflected the increasing strength of Islamic fundamentalism.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bangladesh is bounded in the west and north by India, east by India and Myanmar and south by the Bay of Bengal. The area is 57,295 sq. miles (148,393 sq. km). In 1992 India granted a 999-year lease of the Tin Bigha corridor linking Bangladesh with its enclaves of Angarpota and Dahagram. At the 1991 census the population was 111,455,000 (54,141,000 females). Estimate, July 1997: 125,430,000. Population density, 845 per sq. km. The most recent census took place in Jan. 2001; population (provisional), 129,247,233 (65,841,419 males).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 167·93m.

In 2001, 76·6% of the population lived in rural areas. The country is administratively divided into five divisions, subdivided into 64 zila. Area (in sq. km) and population (in 1,000) in 1994 of the five divisions:

	Area	Population
Barisal division	13,297	7,757
Chittagong division	46,367	29,015
Dhaka division	31,119	33,940
Khulna division	22,274	13,243
Rajshahi division	34,513	27,500

The populations of the chief cities (1991 census) were as follows:

Dhaka[1]	3,397,187	Mymensingh	185,517	Nawabganj	121,205
Chittagong[2]	1,363,998	Barisal	163,481	Pabna	104,479

Dhaka: The capital of Bangladesh, Dhaka is in the south of the country. It grew in stature when it became the seat of Moghul rule in the Bengal province (1608–39, 1660–1704). It was part of the British empire from 1765 until the partition in 1947, when it became the capital of East Bengal province. In 1956 it was named as the capital of East Pakistan. During the war of independence in 1971 it suffered great damage but has since risen to prominence as an important industrial centre and seat of learning.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 births, 2,625,000; deaths, 633,000. In 1998 the birth rate was 19·9 per 1,000 population; death rate, 4·8; marriage rate, 1994, 10·7; infant mortality, 1999, 58 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 58·9 years for females and 59·0 years for males. The annual population growth rate by the late 1990s was almost half the 3·1% of the early 1970s. The fertility rate dropped from 6·2 births per woman in 1980–85 to 3·4 births per woman in 1990–95. By 1999 it had declined still further to 3·0 births. Bangladesh has had one of the largest reductions in its fertility rate of any country in the world over the past 20 years. It has also made some of the best progress in recent years in reducing child mortality. The number of deaths per 1,000 live births among children under five was reduced from nearly 150 in 1990 to around 90 in 1999.

CLIMATE

A tropical monsoon climate with heat, extreme humidity and heavy rainfall in the monsoon season, from June to Oct. The short winter season (Nov.–Feb.) is mild and dry. Rainfall varies between 50" (1,250 mm) in the west to 100" (2,500 mm) in the southeast and up to 200" (5,000 mm) in the northeast. Dhaka, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 81" (2,025 mm). Chittagong, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 108" (2,831 mm). In mid-1998 the Ganges and other rivers flowing into Bangladesh burst their banks causing a deluge that covered two-thirds of the country. More than 22m. were made homeless and 700 died in the floods.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Bangladesh is a unitary republic. The Constitution came into force on 16 Dec. 1972 and provides for a parliamentary democracy. The head of state is the President, elected by parliament every five years, who appoints a Vice-President. A referendum of Sept. 1991 was in favour of abandoning the executive presidential system and opted for a parliamentary system. Turn-out was low. The most recent amendment to the constitution was in 1996 and allowed for a caretaker government, which the president may instal to supervise elections should the parliament be dissolved. There is a Council of Ministers to assist and advise the President. The President appoints the government ministers.

Parliament has one chamber of 300 members directly elected every five years by citizens over 18. There are additionally 30 seats reserved for women members elected by Parliament.

National Anthem. ‘Amar Sonar Bangla, ami tomay bhalobashi’ (‘My golden Bengal, I love you’); words and tune by Rabindranath Tagore.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Iajuddin Ahmed was declared president-elect on 5 Sept. 2002 after the opposition Bangladesh Awami League failed to put forward a rival candidate.

In parliamentary elections of 1 Oct. 2001 the Bangladesh Jatiyatabadi Dal (BJD) and its coalition partners gained 47% of votes cast. The BJD itself gained 191 seats, with allies the Jamaat-e-Islami Bangladesh (JIB) gaining 18, the Jatiya Dal–Naziur (JD-N) 4 and the Islami Oikya Jote (IOJ) 2. The Bangladesh Awami League (BAL) gained 62 seats (40%), the Jatiya Dal–Ershad (JD-E) 14 (7·5%) with remaining seats going to other parties. Turn-out was 74·9%.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 22·2% of GDP, services 49·9% and industry 27·9%.

Overview. The National Economic Council is responsible for policy. The prospective development of large natural gas reserves is expected to push up annual growth to 7–8%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the taka (BDT) of 100 poisha, which was floated in 1976. Foreign exchange reserves in June 2002 were US$1,543m. and gold reserves 112,000 troy oz. Inflation was 1·9% in 2001. Total money supply was Tk.231,658m. in May 2002.

Budget. The fiscal year ends on 30 June. Budget, 1996–97: revenue, US$3·6bn.; expenditure, US$5·3bn.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·6% in 2000 and 4·7% in 2001. Total GDP was US$46·7bn. in 2001. Corporate earnings grew by 9% in 1997. Trade liberalization measures were introduced 1994–96.

Banking and Finance. Bangladesh Bank is the central bank (Governor, Dr Fakhruddin Ahmed). There are three nationalized commercial banks, 11 private commercial banks, four specialized banks and seven foreign commercial banks. In May 1992 the Bangladesh Bank had Tk.22,402m. deposits, Tk.33,612m. foreign liabilities and Tk.57,619m. assets. The scheduled banks had Tk.244,533m. deposits, Tk.53,442m. assets and Tk.36,289m. borrowings from the Bangladesh Bank. Post office savings deposits were Tk.6,265·7m. in 1994.

There is a stock exchange in Dhaka.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was introduced from July 1982, but some imperial and traditional measures are still in use. One maund = 37·32 kg = 40 seers; one seer = 0·93 kg.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Bangladesh's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1997, 3m. kW; electricity generated, 1997, 11·5bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was 81 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. In May 2000 it was estimated that Bangladesh had proven natural gas reserves of 311,000m. cu. metres in about 20 mainly onshore fields. Some international companies believe the actual figure to be very much higher. Total natural gas production in 1999 amounted to 8·1bn. cu. metres.

Water. A Ganges water-sharing accord was signed with India in 1997, ending a 25-year dispute which had hindered and dominated relations between the two countries.

By 2000 it was estimated that 85m. people out of the total population of 128m. had been accidentally poisoned over the previous 30 years through arsenic-contaminated drinking water. A World Health Organization report has described it as 'the largest mass poisoning of a population in history'.

Minerals. The principal minerals are lignite, limestone, china clay and glass sand. There are reserves of good-quality coal of 300m. tonnes. Production, 1992–93: limestone, 23,209m. tonnes (value Tk.13·93m.); china clay, 1,637m. tonnes (Tk.12·48m.).

Agriculture. In 1995 the agricultural population was 74·13m., of whom 37·18m. were economically active. There were 7·9m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·34m. ha of permanent crops. 3·84m. ha were irrigated in 1998. Bangladesh is a major producer of jute: production, 2000, 1·53m. tonnes. Rice is the most important food crop; production in 2000 (in 1m. metric tonnes), 35·82. Other major crops (1m. tonnes): sugarcane, 6·95; wheat, 1·90; potatoes, 1·70; bananas, 0·56.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Barbados was settled by the British during the 1620s and developed as a sugar plantation economy, initially on the basis of slavery until its abolition in the 1840s. In 1951 universal suffrage was introduced, followed in 1954 by cabinet government. Full internal self-government was attained in Oct. 1961. On 30 Nov. 1966 Barbados became an independent sovereign state within the Commonwealth.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Barbados lies to the east of the Windward Islands. Area 166 sq. miles (430 sq. km). In 2000 the census population was 268,792, giving a density of 625·1 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 277,000.

In 1999, 50·5% of the population were rural. Bridgetown is the principal city: population (including suburbs), 133,000 in 1999.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2001: births, 4,051; deaths, 2,047; birth rate, 15·0 per 1,000 population; death rate, 8·9; infant mortality, 16·3 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life, 1999, males 73·9 years and females 78·9. Annual population growth rate, 1990–2000, 0·2%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·3 children per woman.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The head of state is the British sovereign, represented by an appointed Governor-General. Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Assembly. The Senate comprises 21 members appointed by the Governor-General, 12 being appointed on the advice of the Prime Minister, two on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition and seven at the Governor-General's discretion. The House of Assembly comprises 30 members elected every five years. In 1963 the voting age was reduced to 18.

The Privy Council is appointed by the Governor-General after consultation with the Prime Minister. It consists of 12 members and the Governor-General as chairman. It advises the Governor-General in the exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy and in the exercise of his disciplinary powers over members of the public and police services.

Following the victory of the Barbados Labour Party in the Jan. 1999 elections, the severing of links with Britain is expected to proceed, with amendments to the constitution allowing for the replacement of the Queen as head of state by a Barbadian president.

National Anthem. 'In plenty and in time of need'; words by Irvine Burgie, tune by V. R. Edwards.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Belarus was fully integrated with Russia until the Gorbachev reforms of the mid-1980s encouraged demands for greater freedom. On 25 Aug. 1991 Belarus declared its independence and in Dec. it became a founder member of the CIS. The Communists retained power in Belarus despite formidable opposition and it was not until a new constitution was adopted in March 1994 that the economic reformers began to influence events. Alexander Lukashenka was elected president in July 1994. By 1996, only 11% of state enterprises had been privatized and the government remains pro-Russian, striving for eventual unification with Russia within the Russia–Belarus Union. A referendum held over 9–24 Nov. 1996 extended the President's term of office from three to five years and increased his powers to rule by decree. The last parliamentary elections were criticized by the OSCE for a lack of transparency.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belarus is situated along the western Dvina and Dnieper. It is bounded in the west by Poland, north by Latvia and Lithuania, east by Russia and south by Ukraine. The area is 207,600 sq. km (80,134 sq. miles). The capital is Minsk. Other important towns are Homel, Vitebsk, Mahilyou, Bobruisk, Hrodno and Brest. On 2 Nov. 1939 western Belorussia was incorporated with an area of over 108,000 sq. km and a population of 4·8m. Census population, 1999, 10,045,237; density, 48·4 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·82m.

In 1999, 70·7% of the population lived in urban areas. Major ethnic groups: 78% Belorussians, 13% Russians, 4% Poles, 3% Ukrainians, 1% Jews, 1% others.

Belarus comprises 6 provinces. Areas and estimated populations:

Province	Area sq. km	Population 1995	Capital	Population 1999
Brest	32,300	1,508,000	Brest	300,400
Homel	40,400	1,594,000	Homel	503,700
Hrodno	25,000	1,209,000	Hrodno	308,900
Mahilyou	29,000	1,259,000	Mahilyou	371,300
Minsk	40,800	3,288,000	Minsk	1,729,000
Vitebsk	40,100	1,439,000	Vitebsk	358,800

Belorussian is the national language. Russian is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 93,102 (rate of 9·2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 141,805 (rate of 14·0 per 1,000 population). In 1999 abortions totalled 1,451 per 1,000 live births—one of the highest rates in the world. In 1996 there were 68 divorces per 100 marriages, also one of the highest rates in the world. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·0%. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 62·8 years for men and 74·4 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 11·4 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Moderately continental and humid with temperatures averaging 20°F (–6°C) in Jan. and 64°F (18°C) in July. Annual precipitation is 22–28" (550–700 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was adopted on 15 March 1994. It provides for a President who must be a citizen of at least 35 years of age, have resided for 10 years in Belarus and whose candidacy must be supported by the signatures of 70 deputies or 100,000 electors.

There is an 11-member Constitutional Court. The chief justice and five other judges are appointed by the President.

Four referendums held on 14 May 1995 gave the President powers to dissolve parliament; work for closer economic integration with Russia; establish Russian as an official language of equal status with Belorussian; and introduce a new flag.

At the referendum of 9–24 Nov. 1996 turn-out was 84·05%. 79% of votes cast were in favour of the creation of an upper house of parliament nominated by provincial governors and 70% in favour of extending the presidential term of office by two years to five years. The Supreme Soviet was dissolved and a 110-member lower House of Representatives established.

National Anthem. 'Magutny Bozha' ('Mighty God'); words by Natalla Arsiennieva, tune by Mikola Revienski.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 15 and 29 Oct. 2000. Non-partisans (pro-government) won 81 of the 110 seats, the Communist Party of Belarus 6, the Agrarian Party of Belarus 5, the Republican Party of Labour and Justice 2, and the Liberal Democratic Party, the Social Democratic Party of People's Accord and the Social and Sporting Party 1 each. 13 seats remained vacant. Observers claimed the elections failed to meet international standards for a democratic poll; many opposition candidates boycotted the second round. A partial re-run of the elections was held on 18 March 2001.

Presidential elections were held on 9 Sept. 2001. Alyaksandr Lukashenka was re-elected with 75·6% of votes cast against 15·4% for Uladzimir Hancharyk and 2·5% for Syarhey Haydukevich. The election took place amid accusations of vote rigging. No independent observers were allowed to watch the count. However, experts estimated that the opposition actually gained between 30% and 40% of the votes. Turn-out was 83·9%.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 18 months. A treaty with Russia of April 1993 co-ordinates their military activities. All nuclear weapons had been transferred to Russia by Dec. 1996. Total active armed forces in 1999 numbered 80,900.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$366m. (US$36 per capita), representing 4·0% of GDP.

Army. In 1999 ground forces numbered 43,350, including 40,000 conscripts and 2,100 women. In addition there were 289,500 reserves.

Air Force. In 1999 the Air Force operated 152 combat aircraft, including MiG-23s, MiG-29s, Su-24s, Su-25s and Su-27s, and 44 attack helicopters. Personnel, 1999, 22,450 including 10,000 in Air Defence.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A treaty of friendship with Russia was signed on 21 Feb. 1995. A further treaty signed by the respective presidents on 2 April 1997 provided for even closer integration.

Belarus is a member of the UN, CIS, IMF, the World Bank, European Bank, OSCE, CEI and the NATO Partnership for Peace.

ECONOMY

In 1998 industry contributed 46·1% of GDP, services 40·5% and agriculture 13·4%. In 1999 an estimated 20% of economic output was being produced by the private sector.

Currency. The rouble was retained under an agreement of Sept. 1993 and a treaty with Russia on monetary union of April 1994. Foreign currencies ceased to be legal tender in Oct. 1994. In Nov. 2000 President Lukashenka and President Putin of Russia agreed the introduction of a single currency, with the Russian rouble to be introduced in Belarus by 2005 and a single currency in 2008. The draft agreement has to be ratified by the parliaments of the two countries. The inflation rate in 1994 was 2,434%. By 2000 it was down to 169% before falling in 2001 to 61%. Foreign exchange reserves in June 2002 were US$392m. and total money supply was 1,047·53bn. roubles.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. roubles):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	37·10	58·99	117·83	206·59	876·23	2,646·02
Expenditure	40·33	62·51	121·79	213·23	933·88	2,639·80

In 1995 VAT constituted 28·4% of revenue, profits tax 23·8%, income tax 9·4% and excise tax 8·0%. Main items of expenditure in 1995 were education (17·5%), health (15·2%), subsidies (10·8%) and transfers (9·4%).

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·8% in 2000 and 3·0% in 2001. Total GDP in 1998 was US$22·6bn. It was predicted in 2000 that GDP would increase by between 24% and 33% by 2005.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is the National Bank (Chairman, Petr P. Prokopovich). In 1996 there were 36 commercial banks (three specialized), one development bank and one commercial savings bank.

In early 1998 Belarus experienced a major currency collapse, and within the space of a month the value of the rouble dropped from around 45,000 to the dollar to 67,000 to the dollar.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in Belarus were the equivalent of 6·0 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 7m. kW in 1997. Production was 21·89bn. kWh in 1998. Consumption per capita in 1998 was 2,762 kWh.

Oil and Gas. In 1996 output of crude petroleum totalled 37m. bbls. Natural gas production in 1996 was nine petajoules.

Minerals. Particular attention has been paid to the development of the peat industry with a view to making Belarus as far as possible self-supporting in fuel. There are over 6,500 peat deposits. There are rich deposits of rock salt and of iron ore.

Agriculture. Belarus is hilly, with a general slope towards the south. It contains large tracts of marshland, particularly to the southwest.

Agriculturally, it may be divided into three main sections—Northern: growing flax, fodder, grasses and breeding cattle for meat and dairy produce; Central: potato growing and pig breeding; Southern: good natural pasture land, hemp cultivation and cattle breeding for meat and dairy produce. In 1997 agriculture employed 19·6% of the workforce.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1m. tonnes) in 2000: potatoes, 8·5; barley, 1·70; rye, 1·45; sugarbeet, 1·50; wheat, 0·95; cabbage, 0·52; oats, 0·52; milk, 4·32; eggs, 0·19. In 2000 there were 4·33m. cattle; 3·57m. pigs; 221,000 horses; and 30m. chickens.

Since 1991 individuals may own land and pass it to their heirs, but not sell it. In 1997 there were 6·18m. ha of arable land and 144,000 ha of permanent crops. There were 2,700 farms in 1993. The private and commercial sectors accounted for 38% of the value of agricultural output in 1993 (particularly potatoes and vegetables). It was predicted in 2000 that agricultural output would increase by between 20% and 30% by 2005.

Forestry. Forests occupied 74,000 sq. km, or 35·5% of the land area, in 1995 (33·9% in 1990). There are valuable reserves of oak, elm, maple and white beech. Timber production in 1999 was 17·75m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Fish landings in 2000 amounted to 553 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

There are food-processing, chemical, textile, artificial silk, flax-spinning, motor vehicle, leather, machine-tool and agricultural machinery industries. Output in 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): fertilizers (1995), 3,350; cement, 1,876; wheat flour (1995), 1,417; crude steel, 1,220; footwear (1995), 13m. pairs; 13,002 lorries; 26,500 tractors (1995); 454,000 TV sets; 795,000 refrigerators; 6,787m. cigarettes; linen fabrics (1995), 41·5m. sq. metres; woven cotton, 48m. sq. metres. Machine-building equipment and chemical products are also important.

Most industry is still state-controlled. It was predicted in 2000 that industrial output would increase by between 24% and 28% by 2005.

Labour. In 1998 the labour force totalled 4,558,000. In 1994, out of 4,696,000 economically active people, 1,245,600 were in manufacturing and 1,099,700 in community, social and personal services. In 1998 there were 108,000 unemployed persons, or 2·4% of the workforce. It was predicted in 2000 that labour productivity and wages would rise by between 20% and 30% by 2005.

Trade Unions. Trade unions are grouped in the Federation of Trade Unions of Belarus.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$850m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports f.o.b. were valued at US$7,824·9m. and exports f.o.b. at US$6,986·8m. The main import suppliers in 1999 were Russia (56%), Germany (10%), Ukraine (6%) and Poland (3%). Principal export markets were Russia (55%), Ukraine (5%), Latvia (4%) and Poland (4%). Main import commodities are petroleum, natural gas, rolled metal and coal. Export commodities include machinery and transport equipment, diesel fuel, synthetic fibres and consumer goods.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14) ended with the cession of Belgium to the Austrian Hapsburgs. Briefly annexed to France during the Napoleonic war, Belgium and Holland were reunited by the Treaty of Paris (1815) to form one state. The Belgians rose in revolt and the kingdom of Belgium was formed as an independent state in 1830. By the Treaty of London, 15 Nov. 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. In 1914 Belgian neutrality was violated and, as a consequence, Britain declared war on Germany. In the Second World War Belgium was again invaded by Germany. In the post-war years, linguistic rivalry between the Flemish (Dutch)-speaking north of the country and the French-speaking Walloons of the south led to bitter political divisions. Belgium's sole colony, the Belgian Congo, gained independence in 1960. Following constitutional reforms voted by Parliament in May 1993, Belgium became a federal state.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belgium is bounded in the north by the Netherlands, northwest by the North Sea, west and south by France, and east by Germany and Luxembourg. Its area is 30,528 sq. km. The Belgian exclave of Baarle-Hertog in the Netherlands has an area of 7 sq. km and a population (1996) of 2,702. Population (1991 census), 9,978,681. Population (2001 estimate) 10,263,414, (5,245,395 females); density, 336·2 per sq. km. There were 845,700 resident foreign nationals as at 1 Jan. 2002. In 1999, 97·3% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 10·30m.

Dutch (Flemish) is spoken by the Flemish section of the population in the north, French by the Walloon south. The linguistic frontier passes south of the capital, Brussels, which is bilingual. Some German is spoken in the east. Each language has official status in its own community. (Bracketed names below signify French or Dutch alternatives.)

Brussels: Formerly capital of the Netherlands and under control, at varying times, of the French, Spanish, Austrians and the Germans, Brussels is now one of the administrative focal points for Europe. It houses the headquarters of both the EU and NATO. Capital of Belgium since its creation as a kingdom in 1831, it is a notable manufacturer of chemicals and machinery. Constitutional changes since 1970 have consolidated its status as the seat of Belgium's federal government.

Cool temperate climate influenced by the sea, giving mild winters and cool summers. Brussels, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 64°F (17·8°C). Annual rainfall 33" (825 mm). Ostend, Jan. 38°F (3·3°C), July 62°F (16·7°C). Annual rainfall 31" (775 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

According to the constitution of 1831, Belgium is a constitutional, representative and hereditary monarchy. The legislative power is vested in the King, the federal parliament and the community and regional councils. The King convokes parliament after an election or the resignation of a government, and has the power to dissolve it in accordance with Article 46 of the Constitution.

The reigning King is Albert II, born 6 June 1934, who succeeded his brother, Baudouin, on 9 Aug. 1993. Married on 2 July 1959 to Paola Ruffo di Calabria, daughter of Don Fuleo and Donna Luisa Gazelli de Rossena. Offspring: Prince Philippe, Duke of Brabant, b. 15 April 1960; Princess Astrid, b. 5 June 1962; Prince Laurent, b. 19 Oct. 1963. Prince Philippe married Mathilde d'Udekem d'Acoz, 4 Dec. 1999. Offspring: Princess Elizabeth, b. 25 Oct. 2001. Princess Astrid married Archduke Lorenz of Austria, 22 Sept. 1984. Offspring: Prince Amedeo, b. 21 Feb. 1986; Princess Maria Laura, b. 26 Aug. 1988; Prince Joachim, b. 9 Dec. 1991; Princess Luisa Maria, b. 11 Oct. 1995. Prince Laurent married Claire Coombs, 12 April 2003.

The Dowager Queen. Queen Fabiola de Mora y Aragón, daughter of the Conde de Mora y Aragón and Marqués de Casa Riera; married to King Baudouin on 15 Dec. 1960. Sister of the King. Josephine Charlotte, Princess of Belgium, b. 11 Oct. 1927; married to Prince Jean of Luxembourg, 9 April 1953. Half-brother and half-sisters of the King. Prince Alexandre, b. 18 July 1942; Princess Marie Christine, b. 6 Feb. 1951; Princess Maria-Esmeralda, b. 30 Sept. 1956.

A constitutional amendment of June 1991 permits women to accede to the throne.

The King receives a basic annual tax-free sum from the civil list of €6,048,000 for the duration of his reign; Queen Fabiola receives €1,115,000; Prince Philippe, €768,400; Princess Astrid and Prince Laurent, €272,000 each. These figures are adapted annually in accordance with the general price index.

Constitutional reforms begun in Dec. 1970 culminated in May 1993 in the transformation of Belgium from a unitary into a 'federal state, composed of communities and regions'. The communities are three in number and based on language: Flemish, French and German. The regions also number three, and are based territorially: Flemish, Walloon and the Capital Brussels.

Since 1995 the federal parliament has consisted of a 150-member Chamber of Representatives, directly elected by obligatory universal suffrage from 20 constituencies on a proportional representation system for four-year terms; and a Senate of 71 members (excluding senators by right, i.e. certain members of the Royal Family). 25 senators are elected by a Flemish, and 15 by a French, electoral college; 21 are designated by community councils (10 Flemish, 10 French and 1 German). These senators co-opt a further 10 senators (6 Flemish and 4 French).

The federal parliament's powers relate to constitutional reform, federal finance, foreign affairs, defence, justice, internal security, social security and some areas of public health. The Senate is essentially a revising chamber, though it may initiate certain legislation, and is equally competent with the Chamber of Representatives in matters concerning constitutional reform and the assent to international treaties.

The number of ministers in the federal government is limited to 15. The Council of Ministers, apart from the Prime Minister, must comprise an equal number of Dutch- and French-speakers. Members of parliament, if appointed ministers, are replaced in parliament by the runner-up on the electoral list for the minister's period of office. Community and regional councillors may not be members of the Chamber of Representatives or Senate.

National Anthem. 'La Brabançonne'; words by C. Rogier, tune by F. van Campenhout. The Flemish version is 'O Vaderland, o edel land der Belgen' ('Oh Fatherland, noble land of the Belgians').

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the 150-member Chamber of Representatives were held on 18 May 2003. The Flemish Liberal and Democratic Party (VLD) won 25 seats with 15·4% of votes cast; The Socialist Party (PS) won 25 seats (13·0%); the Reformist Movement (MR) won 24 seats (11·4%); SPA (Socialist Party Different)-Spirit coalition won 23 seats (14·9% of the vote); the Christian Democratic and Flemish Party (CD&V) won 21 seats (13·3%); the Vlaams Blok (Flemish Block, VB) won 18 seats (11·6%); the Humanist Democratic Centre (CDH) won 8 seats (5·5%); Ecolo won 4 seats (3·1%); the New Flemish Alliance (N-VA) won 1 seat (3·1%); and the National Front (FN) won 1 seat (2·0%). Agalev (2·5%) and Vivant (1·2%) won no seats. Prime Minister Guy Verhofstadt's VLD won two more seats than in the 1999 elections.

Voting for the 40 electable seats in the Senate took place on the same day. SPA-Spirit and VLD both won 7 seats; CD&V and PS won 6; MR and VB, 5; CDH, 2; and Ecolo and FN 1. There are also 31 indirectly elected senators.

European Parliament. Belgium has 25 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 95·0%. The Flemish Liberal and Democratic Party won 3 seats with 13·6% (group in European Parliament: European Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); the CVP, 3 with 13·5% of votes cast (European People's Party); the PRL, 3 with 10·0% (European Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party; European People's Party); the PS, 3 with 9·6% (Party of European Socialists); Ecolo, 3 with 8·4% (Greens); the Vlaams Blok, 2 with 9·4% (non-affiliated); the SP, 2 with 9·0% (Party of European Socialists); Agalev, 2 with 7·5% (Greens); VU-ID21, 2 with 7·6% (European Radical Alliance); the PSC, 1 with 5·0% (European People's Party); the CSP, 1 with 0·2% (European People's Party).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the coalition government ('rainbow coalition' of liberals, socialists and environmentalists) comprised:

Prime Minister: Guy Verhofstadt; b. 1953 (VLD; in office since 12 July 1999).

Deputy Prime Ministers: Laurette Onkelinx (also Minister of Employment); Louis Michel (also Minister of Foreign Affairs); Johan Vande Lanotte (also Minister of Budget, Social Integration and Social Economy); Isabelle Durant (also Minister of Transportation).

Minister of Agriculture: Annemie Neyts. Defence: André Flahaut. Health, Environment and Consumer Affairs: Jef Tavernier. Social Affairs and Pensions: Frank Vandenbroucke. Economics and Research: Charles Picqué. Finance: Didier Reynders. Interior: Antoine Duquesne. Public Administration: Luc van den Bossche. Justice: Marc Verwilghen. Telecommunications and State-owned Companies: Rik Daems.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995 and the Armed Forces were restructured, with the aim of progressively reducing the size and making more use of civilian personnel. The Interforces Territorial Command is responsible for assignments to assure the safety of the National Territory and for logistic support in those fields which are mutual for the different forces.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$3,335m. (US$328 per capita), representing 1·4% of GDP. The budget for 1999 was BEF100·8bn. (US$2,700m.).

Army. The Army consists of three divisions: the Intervention Force, the Combat Support Division and the Logistical Support Division. Total strength (1999) 26,400 including 1,500 women. In addition there is a reserve force of 105,000 personnel.

Navy. The naval forces, based at Ostend and Zeebrugge, include three frigates. Naval personnel (1999) totalled 2,600.

The naval air arm comprises three general utility helicopters.

Air Force. The Belgian Royal Air Force has a strength of (1999) 11,500 personnel and comprises a Tactical Air Force and a Training and Support Command (schools and logistical units). The Tactical Air Force operates 90 combat aircraft including F-16s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Belgium is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, BIS, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, WEU, OSCE, CERN, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM, Antarctic Treaty and the International Organization of the Francophonie. Belgium is a signatory to the Schengen Accord abolishing border controls between Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Services contributed 71·2% of GDP in 1997, with industry accounting for 27·6% and agriculture just 1·1%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Belgium ranked equal 20th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·1 out of 10 in the annual index.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Belgium; irrevocable conversion rate BEF40·3399 to EUR1. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a ‘dual circulation’ period before the Belgian franc ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €24·0bn.

In June 2002 gold reserves were 8·29m. troy oz (20·54m. troy oz in 1995) and foreign exchange reserves US$8,517m. Total money supply was €10,626m. in June 2002. Inflation was 2·7% in 2000, falling to 2·4% in 2001.

Budget. Federal government receipts and expenditure in BEF1m.:

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	2,520,834	2,801,700	2,889,828	2,981,437
Expenditure	2,736,305	2,656,545	2,739,332	2,935,352

VAT is 21% (reduced rate, 6%).

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·0% in 2000 but only 1·0% in 2001. Total GDP was US$227·6bn. in 2001.

Wage-price performance has remained relatively stable during this upswing. According to the Jan. 1999 OECD Economic Survey: 'The end of the 1995–96 real wage freeze was followed by modest acceleration in wage increases and compensation per employee. Contributing factors to this include the introduction of the law on employment and competitiveness, which limits on an ex ante basis the maximum increase in compensation per employee in the private sector to the expected weighted average increase in Germany, France and the Netherlands.'

Banking and Finance. The National Bank of Belgium was established in 1850. The Governor—in 2003, Guy Quaden—is appointed for a five-year period. Its shares are listed on Euronext (Brussels); half of them are nominative held by the state.

The law of 22 Feb. 1998 has adapted the status of the National Bank of Belgium in view of the realization of the Economic and Monetary Union.

The National Bank of Belgium is within the ESCB-framework in charge of the issue of banknotes, the execution of exchange rate policy and monetary policy. Furthermore, it is the Bank of banks and the cashier of the federal state.

The law of 22 March 1993 defines the legal provisions governing banking activity. It transposes into Belgian legislation the European Directive of 15 Dec. 1989 on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions; and the Directive of 6 April 1992 on the supervision of credit institutions on a consolidated basis.

The term 'credit institutions' covers the Belgian credit institutions and those which come under the law of another country, be it a member of the European Union or not, with a registered office in Belgium. The activity of credit institutions must consist of receiving deposits and other repayable funds from the public, and granting credit on their own account.

The law of 4 Dec. 1990 on financial transactions and financial markets defines the legal framework for collective investment institutions, the sole object of which is the collective investment of capital raised from the public. It transposes into Belgian legislation the European Directive of 20 Dec. 1985 on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities.

The law of 6 April 1995 relating to secondary markets, status and supervision of investment firms, intermediaries and investment consultants, provides the credit institutions with direct access to securities' stock exchanges. Stock exchange legislation was also subject to an important reform. The law fundamentally modifies the competitive environment and strengthens exercise conditions for securities' dealers.

On 31 Dec. 2001, 113 credit institutions with a balance sheet totalling €846bn. were established in Belgium: 67 governed by Belgian law and 46 by foreign law. 431 collective investment institutions (157 Belgian and 274 foreign) were marketed in Belgium and supervised by the Banking and Finance Commission; and 85 investment firms were operating in Belgium with the approval of the Banking and Finance Commission.

There is a stock exchange (a component of Euronext) in Brussels. Euronext was created in Sept. 2000 through the merger of the Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris bourses.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Belgium's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 9·9 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. The production of electricity amounted to 79,792m. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita was 7,249 kWh. 56% of production in 1998 was nuclear-produced. Belgium had seven nuclear reactors in 2001. Capacity (1997) was 13m. kW.

Oil and Gas. Production of gas in 1998 was 379,373m. cu. metres.

Water. Total capacity for 1998 was 1,038·18m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Output (in tonnes) for four calendar years:

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Coke	3,696,076	3,549,789	3,401,431	3,003,744

In 2001 there were 29,767 horses, 3,037,757 cattle, 156,132 sheep, 12,631 goats and 6,833,721 pigs.

Forestry. In 1996 forest covered 608,151 ha (19·9% of the total land area).

Fisheries. In 2000 the fishing fleet had a total tonnage of 22,975 GRT. Total catch, 2000, 29,800 tonnes, almost totally from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Belgium, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Tractebel SA (€18bn.), a global energy and service business; Interbrew SA (€13bn.); and Electrabel (€13bn.), Belgium's leading energy producer.

Output (1998) of sugar factories and refineries, 995,053 tonnes; 11 distilleries, 320,000 litres of alcohol; breweries, 1,481·6m. litres of beer; mineral water (1997), 822·8m. litres; cigarettes (1997), 18bn. (units); margarine factories, 304,321 tonnes. Output, 1997, in 1,000 tonnes: distillate oil, 12,520; crude steel, 10,780; cement, 8,052; residual fuel oil, 7,444; petrol, 6,103.

Labour. Retirement age is flexible for men and 60–65 years for women. In 2001 (Labour Force Survey), 66,305 persons worked in the primary sector (agriculture, fishing and mining), 1,055,186 in the secondary sector (industry and construction) and 2,934,119 in the tertiary sector (services). The unemployment rate was 7·6% in Dec. 2002. In French-speaking Wallonia the rate is more than double that in Flemish-speaking Flanders. In Oct. 1999 the participation rate of the active population in the labour market was one of the lowest in the EU, at 56·8%.

Trade Unions. The main trade union organizations are the Confederation of Christian Trade Unions (CSC/ACV), the Belgian Socialist Confederation of Labour (FGTB/ABVV) and the Federation of Liberal Trade Unions of Belgium (CGSLB/ACLVB).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1922 the customs frontier between Belgium and Luxembourg was abolished; their foreign trade figures are amalgamated.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Length of roads, 1999: motorways, 1,691 km; other state roads, 12,542 km; provincial roads, 1,349 km; local roads, about 130,900 km. Belgium has one of the densest road networks in the world. The number of motor vehicles registered on 1 Aug. 2001 was 5,542,964, including 4,739,850 passenger cars, 14,676 buses, 526,344 trucks, 46,302 non-agricultural tractors, 293,630 motorcycles and 54,513 special vehicles. Road accidents caused 1,470 fatalities in 2000.

Rail. The main Belgian lines were a State enterprise from their inception in 1834. In 1926 the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Belges (SNCB) was formed to take over the railways. The State is sole holder of the ordinary shares of SNCB, which carry the majority vote at General Meetings. The length of railway operated in 2000 was 3,471 km (electrified, 2,705 km). Revenue in 1998 was BEF81,715m.; expenditure, BEF75,441m. In 2000, 61·28m. tonnes of freight and 153·3m. passengers were carried.

The regional transport undertakings Société Régionale Wallonne de Transport and Vlaamse Vervoermaatschappij operate electrified light railways around Charleroi (19 km) and from De Panne to Knokke (68 km). There is also a metro and tramway in Brussels (165 km), and tramways in Antwerp (180 km) and Ghent (29 km).

Civil Aviation. The former national airline SABENA (Société anonyme belge d'exploitation de la navigation aérienne) was set up in 1923. In 1997 its fleet comprised 33 aircraft. In 1999 SABENA flew 179·1m. km, carrying 9,965,200 passengers. However, in Nov. 2001 it filed for bankruptcy after failing to secure financial assistance from its part-owner Swissair, which itself was on the verge of collapse. Its successor, Delta Air Transport (DAT), a former SABENA subsidiary, was given a new identity in Feb. 2002 as SN Brussels Airlines. Some 60 other airlines operate services. In 2000 Brussels National Airport handled 21,521,000 passengers (21,515,000 on international flights) and 676,400 tonnes of freight. Antwerp is the second busiest airport in terms of passenger numbers and Charleroi the third busiest.

Shipping. On 1 Jan. 1999 the merchant fleet was composed of 19 vessels of 345,058 tonnes. There were eight shipping companies in 1997. In 1997 vessels totalling 337,862,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 333,694,000 NRT cleared. In 1996, 14,628 vessels entered, and 14,653 cleared, the port of Antwerp.

The length of navigable inland waterways was 1,493·3 km in 1995. 104m. tonnes of freight were carried on inland waterways in 1998.

Telecommunications. In 2000 telephone main lines numbered 5,060,900 (502·4 per 1,000 inhabitants) and there were 3·5m. PCs in use (344·5 for every 1,000 persons). Belgium had 4·0m. mobile phone subscribers in Nov. 2000 and 3·76m. Internet users in Aug. 2002. There were 190,000 fax machines in 1996.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,635 post offices, with a gross revenue totalling BEF50,540m.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Judges are appointed for life. There is a court of cassation, five courts of appeal and assize courts for political and criminal cases. There are 27 judicial districts, each with a court of first instance. In each of the 222 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are also various special tribunals. There is trial by jury in assize courts. The death penalty, which had been in abeyance for 45 years, was formally abolished in 1991.

The Gendarmerie ceased to be part of the army in Jan. 1992.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 1997 was 8,342 (80 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid by the State. In 1997 there were 8·96m. Roman Catholics. Numbers of clergy, 1996: Roman Catholic, 3,899; Protestant, 84; Anglican, 9; Jews, 26; Greek Orthodox, 39. There are eight Roman Catholic dioceses subdivided into 260 deaneries. The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod. There is also a Central Jewish Consistory, a Central Committee of the Anglican Church and a Free Protestant Church.

Education. Following the constitutional reform of 1988, education is the responsibility of the Flemish and Walloon communities. There were (1996–97) 4,107 pre-primary schools, with 424,521 pupils; 4,401 primary schools, with 737,823 pupils and 82,168 teachers; and 1,727 secondary schools, with 796,945 pupils and 115,262 teachers. In higher education, there were 229,749 students and 38,014 teachers in 17 university and 134 non-university colleges and institutes. There are five royal academies of fine arts and five royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, Antwerp and Mons.

Total expenditure on education in 1996 amounted to 3·3% of GNP and represented 7·0% of total government expenditure.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. On 1 Jan. 1998 there were 39,240 physicians, 7,360 dentists and 14,597 pharmacists. Hospital beds numbered 75,360 in 1995. Total health spending accounted for 8·7% of GDP in 2000. In Jan. 2000 the Belgian government agreed to decriminalize the use of cannabis. Euthanasia became legal on 24 Sept. 2002. The Belgian Chamber of Representatives had given its approval on 16 May 2002 to a measure adopted by the Senate on 26 Oct. 2001. Belgium was the second country to legalize euthanasia, after the Netherlands.

Welfare. Expenditure in 2000: social security (wage earners) €39,114·47m., (self employed) €3,315·46m.; pensions €5,712·17m.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is organized according to the language communities. VRT, RTBF and BRF fulfil the public service of broadcasting in Dutch, French and German respectively. TV colour is by PAL.

VRT (Vlaamse Radio- en Televisieomroep) is organized by decree as a public-sector public-limited company. It has seven radio and three TV services: Radio 1, Radio 2, Klara, Studio Brussel, Radio Donna, DAB klassiek and RVi; TV1, Canvas and Ketnet. In July 2000 VRT started a new branch, e-VRT, which is responsible for the organization and development of a truly multimedia e-service platform and e-service network in Flanders.

RTBF has five radio and three TV services: La Première, FW, Musique 3, Bruxelles Capitale, Radio 21; RTBF International, La Une, La Deux.

BRF transmits a radio programme from three stations.

There are also four commercial networks: VTM (Dutch, cable only), VT4 (under British licence; Dutch, cable only), RTL-TVI (French, one station), Canal Plus (pay TV; French, three channels; Dutch, two channels).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From the 17th century, British settlers, later joined by British soldiers and sailors disbanded after the capture of Jamaica from Spain in 1655, governed themselves under a form of democracy by public meeting. A constitution was granted in 1765 and, with some modification, continued until 1840 when an executive council was created. In 1862 what was then known as British Honduras was declared a British colony with a legislative assembly and a Lieut.-Governor under the Governor of Jamaica. The administrative connection with Jamaica was severed in 1884. Universal suffrage was introduced in 1964 and thereafter the majority of the legislature were elected rather than appointed. In June 1974 British Honduras became Belize. Independence was achieved on 21 Sept. 1981 and a new constitution introduced.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belize is bounded in the north by Mexico, west and south by Guatemala and east by the Caribbean. Fringing the coast there are three atolls and some 400 islets (cays) in the world's second longest barrier reef (140 miles), which was declared a world heritage site in 1997. Area, 22,965 sq. km.

There are six districts as follows, with area, population estimates and chief city:

District	Area (in sq. km)	Population 2000	Chief City	Population 2000
Belize	4,307	68,197	Belize City	49,050
Cayo	5,196	52,564	San Ignacio	13,260
Corozal	1,860	32,708	Corozal	7,888
Orange Walk	4,636	38,890	Orange Walk	13,483
Stann Creek	2,554	24,548	Dangriga	8,814
Toledo	4,413	23,297	Punta Gorda	4,329

Population (2000 census), 240,204 (121,278 males); density, 10·5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 268,000.

In 1999 an estimated 53·6% of the population were urban. The proportion of the population considered as rural had been 52·5% in 1990. No other country saw such a considerable percentage swing away from urbanization over the same period. In 1995 some 45,000 Belizeans were working abroad.

The capital is Belmopan (1996 population, 6,490).

English is the official language. Spanish is widely spoken. In 1996 the main ethnic groups were Mestizo (Spanish-Maya), 44%; Creole (African descent), 30%; Mayans, 11%; and Garifuna (Caribs), 7%.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The People's Republic of Benin is the former Republic of Dahomey. Dahomey was a powerful, well-organized state from the 17th century, trading extensively in slaves through the port of Whydah with the Portuguese, British and French. On the coast an educated African elite grew up in the 19th century.

After the defeat of Dahomey, whose monarchy was abolished, the French occupied territory inland up to the River Niger and created the colony of Dahomey as part of French West Africa. The African elite protested frequently at French rule and, as African nationalism blossomed after the Second World War, Dahomey saw lively political activity.

After Dahomey became independent on 1 Aug. 1960 civilian government was interrupted by long periods of military rule. In Oct. 1972 Gen. Mathieu Kérékou seized power and installed a new left-wing regime committed to socialist policies. A constitution was adopted in 1977, based on a single Marxist-Leninist party, the Parti de la Révolution Populaire du Bénin (PRPB). Benin is beset with economic problems, factional fighting and frequent plots to overthrow the regime.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Benin is bounded in the east by Nigeria, north by Niger and Burkina Faso, west by Togo and south by the Gulf of Guinea. The area is 112,622 sq. km, and the population, census 1992, 4,855,349. Estimate (1996) 5·71m.; density, 50·7 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 8·28m.

In 1999, 58·5% of the population were rural.

The areas, populations and capitals of the six provinces are as follows:

Province	Sq. km	Census 1992	Capital	Census 1992
Atakora	31,200	648,330	Natitingou	57,535
Atlantique	3,200	1,060,310	Cotonou	533,212[1]
Borgou	51,000	816,278	Parakou	106,708
Mono	3,800	646,954	Lokossa	52,909
Ouéme	4,700	869,492	Porto-Novo	177,660
Zou	18,700	813,985	Abomey	65,725

[1]1999 population, 716,000.

Other large towns (with 1992 census population): Djougou (132,192), Bohicon (81,121), Kandi (74,169), Ouidah (64,068).

In 1992 the main ethnic groups numbered (in 1,000): Fon, 1,930; Yoruba, 590; Adja, 540; Aizo, 420; Bariba, 420; Somba, 320; Fulani, 270. The official language is French. Over half the people speak Fon.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 (estimates) births, 267,000; deaths, 76,000. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): births, 46·0; deaths, 13·0. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 99. Expectation of life in 1999 was 52·0 years for males and 55·4 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·3%. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

In coastal parts there is an equatorial climate, with a long rainy season from March to July and a short rainy season in Oct. and Nov. The dry season increases in length from the coast, with inland areas having rain only between May and Sept. Porto-Novo, Jan. 82°F (27·8°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,300 mm). Cotonou, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 53" (1,325 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Benin Party of Popular Revolution (PRPB) held a monopoly of power from 1977 to 1989.

In Feb. 1990 a 'National Conference of the Active Forces of the Nation' proclaimed its sovereignty and appointed Nicéphore Soglo Prime Minister of a provisional government. At a referendum in Dec. 1990, 93·2% of votes cast were in favour of the new constitution, which has introduced a presidential regime. The President is directly elected for renewable five-year terms. Parliament is the 83-member National Assembly, elected by proportional representation for four-year terms.

A 30-member advisory Social and Economic Council was set up in 1994. There is a Constitutional Court.

National Anthem. 'L'Aube Nouvelle' ('New Dawn'); words and tune by Gilbert Dagnon.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held in two rounds on 4 and 22 March 2001. There were four candidates for the first round, won by President Mathieu Kérékou with 45·4% of votes cast, ahead of former president Nicéphore Soglo with 27·1%. Following the withdrawal of both Nicéphore Soglo and the third-placed candidate, both of whom claimed that the election had been flawed, President Kérékou was re-elected with 84·06% of votes cast in the run-off against the fourth-placed candidate, Bruno Amoussou. Turn-out in the first round was 87·7% and in the second round 53·4%.

Parliamentary elections were held on 30 March 2003. The Presidential Movement won 52 of 83 seats (of which the Union for the Benin of the Future 31, the African Movement for Development and Progress 9, the Key Force 5 and smaller parties 7), the Rebirth of Benin 15, the Party of Democratic Renewal 11 and the Star Alliance 2, with 2 results unavailable.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A sovereign kingdom in the Himalayas, Bhutan was governed by a spiritual ruler and a temporal ruler—the Dharma and Deb Raja—from the 17th century. The interior was organized into districts controlled by governors and fort commanders. These officials formed the electoral council appointing the Deb Raja. During the 19th century civil wars were fought between district governors for the office of the Deb Raja. The election became a formality and the governors of Tongsa and Paro were the most frequently chosen because they were the strongest. In 1863 a British attempt to bring stability to Bhutan led to war on the frontier with India.

In 1907 the office of Dharma Raja came to an end. The governor of Tongsa, Ugyen Wangchuk, was then chosen Maharajah of Bhutan, the throne becoming hereditary in his family (the title is now King of Bhutan). He concluded a treaty with the British in 1910 allowing internal autonomy but British control of foreign policy. The treaty was renewed with the Government of India in 1949. In the early 1990s, tens of thousands of 'illegal immigrants', mostly Nepali-speaking Hindus, were forcibly expelled. Some ten years on, there are still nearly 90,000 people claiming to be Bhutanese refugees in camps set up by the UNHCR in eastern Nepal.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bhutan is situated in the eastern Himalayas, bounded in the north by Tibet and on all other sides by India. In 1949 India retroceded 32 sq. miles of Dewangiri, annexed in 1865. Area about 18,000 sq. miles (46,500 sq. km); population estimate, 1997, 1·87m.; density, 40 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·71m.

In 1999, 93·1% of the population lived in rural areas. Only Rwanda has a larger proportion of its population living in rural areas. A Nepalese minority makes up 30–35% of the population, mainly in the south. The capital is Thimphu (1999, 28,000 population).

The official language is Dzongkha.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 (estimates) births, 74,000 (rate of 41·4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 25,000 (rate of 14·4 per 1,000 population). Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 60·3 years for men and 62·8 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 80 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·2%; fertility rate, 1999, 5·4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is largely controlled by altitude. The mountainous north is cold, with perpetual snow on the summits, but the centre has a more moderate climate, though winters are cold, with rainfall under 40" (1,000 mm). In the south, the climate is humid sub-tropical and rainfall approaches 200" (5,000 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is no formal constitution. The monarchy acts in consultation with a National Assembly (Tshogdu), which was reinstituted in 1953. But King Wangchuck is leaning towards democracy. In July 1998 the National Assembly was given the right to dismiss him. This has 150 members and meets at least once a year. Two-thirds are representatives of the people and are elected for a three-year term. All Bhutanese over 30 years may be candidates.

The reigning King is Jigme Singye Wangchuck (b. 1955), who succeeded his father Jigme Dorji Wangchuck (died 21 July 1972).

In 1907 the Trongsa Penlop (the governor of the province of Trongsa in central Bhutan), Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, GCIE, KCSI, was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhutan. The Bhutanese title is Druk Gyalpo, and his successor is now addressed as King of Bhutan. Educated in Britain, King Wangchuk is opposed to certain western influences such as television and jeans. The stated goal is to increase Gross National Happiness.

12 monastic representatives are elected by the central and regional ecclesiastical bodies, while the remaining members are nominated by the King, and include members of the Council of Ministers (the Cabinet) and the Royal Advisory Council.

National Anthem. 'Druk tsendhen koipi gyelknap na' ('In the Thunder Dragon Kingdom'); words by Dasho Shinkar Lam, tune by A. Tongmi.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister and Minister of Agriculture: Lyonpo Kinzang Dorji; b. 1951 (in office since 14 Aug. 2002).

Minister of Education and Health: Sanjay Nedup. Finance: Hishey Zimba. Foreign Affairs: Jigme Thinley. Home Affairs: Thinley Gyamtso. Law: Sonam Tobgye. Trade and Industry: Khandu Wangchuck. Chairman, Royal Advisory Council: Vacant.

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence spending totalled US$20m. (US$10 per capita), representing 5·6% of GDP.

Army. In 1996 there was an army of 6,000 men. Three to five weeks militia training was introduced in 1989 for senior students and government officials, and three months training for some 10,000 volunteers from the general population in 1990 and 1991. Since 1992 only refresher training has been implemented.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bhutan is a member of the UN, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan and SAARC.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 38·2% of GDP in 1998, with services accounting for 25·3% and industry 36·5%.

Overview. The 8th development plan (1997–2002) allowed for expenditure of Nu35,169m. Hydro-electric power and industries were stressed. The 9th development plan (2003–07) focuses on decentralization, and aims to bring electricity to 15,000 rural households as part of a plan to make Bhutan fully electrified by 2020, supported by the Asian Development Bank.

Currency. The unit of currency is the ngultrum (BTN) of 100 chetrum, at parity with the Indian rupee. Indian currency is also legal tender. Foreign exchange reserves were US$273m. in May 2002. Total money supply in May 2002 was Nu4,922m. In 2001 inflation was 5·0%.

Budget. Current provincial revenue and expenditure in Nu1m. for fiscal years ending 30 June:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01[1]
Revenue	2,424·2	3,133·0	3,656·9	4,585·4	4,777·0
Expenditure	4,630·6	4,588·4	7,284·0	8,334·2	9,081·2

[1]Provisional.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 6·1% in 2000 and 5·9% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$0·5bn.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Bhutan was established in 1968. The headquarters are at Phuentsholing with 26 branches throughout the country. The Royal Monetary Authority (founded 1982) acts as the central bank. Deposits (Dec. 1995) Nu2,816·3m. Foreign exchange reserves in 1997: US$120m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Bhutan's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity at June 1995 was 342,000 kW (of which 336,000 kW were hydro-electric). Production (1998) was 1,788m. kWh. In 1995, 38 towns and 297 villages had electricity. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 213 kWh. Bhutan exports electricity to India.

Minerals. Large deposits of limestone, marble, dolomite, slate, graphite, lead, copper, coal, talc, gypsum, beryl, mica, pyrites and tufa have been found. Most mining activity (principally limestone, coal, slate and dolomite) is on a small-scale. Output, 1998 estimates: limestone, 272,000 tonnes; dolomite, 255,000 tonnes; cement, 150,000 tonnes; coal, 69,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. The area under cultivation in 1996 was 0·36m. ha. The chief products (2000 production in 1,000 tonnes) are maize (70), oranges (58), rice (50), potatoes (34), wheat (20), sugarcane (13), millet, barley, apples, handloom cloth, timber and cardamom.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 435,000; pigs, 75,000; sheep, 59,000; goats, 42,000; horses, 30,000.

Forestry. In 1996, 2·98m. ha were forested. Timber production in 1999 was 1·75m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catch in 2000 amounted to an estimated 300 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

In 1995 there were 3,206 licensed industrial establishments, of which 1,785 were service, 1,085 construction and 336 manufacturing industries. Of the latter, 167 were forest-based, 81 agriculture-based and 35 mineral-based.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force totalled 888,000 (60% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt in 2000 amounted to US$198m. and cumulative debt service payments in 1999 totalled US$7m.

Financial support is received from India, the UN and other international aid organizations.

Imports and Exports. Trade with India dominates but oranges and apples, timber, cardamom and liquor are also exported to the Middle East, Singapore and Europe. Exports in 1997 amounted to US$117·9m. and imports to US$137·4m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were about 3,285 km of roads, of which 1,543 km were highways and main roads, and 10,384 cars, buses, coaches, trucks and vans plus 5,959 motorcycles and mopeds. A number of sets of traffic lights were installed during the late 1990s but all have subsequently been removed as they were considered to be eyesores. There had previously been just one set.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 Druk-Air made two weekly flights to Delhi via Káthmandu and four weekly services to Bangkok via Dhaka and Rangoon (Yangon) or Calcutta. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Bhutan-based carriers flew 1·0m. km, carrying 31,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 13,300 telephone main lines (19·7 per 1,000 inhabitants).

An international microwave link connects Thimphu to the Calcutta and Delhi satellite connections. A telecommunications link between Thimphu and London by Intelsat-satellite was inaugurated in 1990. Thimphu and Phuentsholing are connected by telex to Delhi. There were 1,000 fax machines in 1997 and 4,000 PCs (5·2 for every 1,000 persons) were in use in 2000. The country's first Internet cafe was opened in March 2000 in the capital Thimphu. There were 500 Internet users in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 103 post offices. Prior to the opening of the country to tourism in 1974 the main source of foreign exchange was the sale of commemorative postage stamps.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court consists of eight judges appointed by the King. There is a Magistrate's Court in each district, under a Thrimpon, from which appeal is to the High Court at Thimphu.

Religion. Government estimates, 1995: 70% of the population are Mahayana Buddhists, 25% Hindu and 5% Muslim.

Education. In April 1996 there were 9,257 pupils and 225 teachers in community schools, 53,097 pupils and 1,374 teachers in primary schools, 18,762 pupils and 650 teachers in 20 junior high and 10 high schools, and 1,795 pupils and 203 teachers in technical, vocational and tertiary-level schools. There were 1,248 students and 61 teachers in seven private schools. Many students receive higher technical training in India, as well as under the UN Development Programme and the Colombo Plan, in Australia, Germany, New Zealand, Japan, Singapore, the USA and the UK. Adult literacy was 42% in 1998.

Health. There were (1996) 27 hospitals, 32 dispensaries, 97 basic health units, 10 indigenous dispensaries, 454 outreach clinics, 19 malaria centres and 3 training institutes. In 1994 beds totalled 970; there were 100 doctors and 578 paramedics in 1994. Free health facilities are available to 90% of the population.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1994 there were 52 radio stations for internal administrative communications, and 13 hydro-met stations. Bhutan Broadcasting Service (autonomous since 1992) broadcasts a daily programme in English, Sharchopkha, Dzongkha and Nepali. The first television station was launched in 1999. Satellite and cable television are illegal. In 1997 there were 11,000 TV receivers and 37,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. There are two cinemas in Thimphu and four others.

Press. There is one weekly newspaper, published in English, Dzongkha and Nepali. Total circulation (1996) about 12,000.

Tourism. Bhutan was not formally opened to foreign tourists until 1974, but tourism is now the largest source of foreign exchange. In 1999, 7,000 tourists visited Bhutan, bringing revenue of US$9m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bolivia was part of the Inca Empire until conquered by the Spanish in the 16th century. Independence was won and the Republic of Bolivia was proclaimed on 6 Aug. 1825. During the first 154 years of its independence, Bolivia had 189 governments, many of them installed by coups. In the 1960s the Argentinian revolutionary and former minister of the Cuban government, Ernesto 'Che' Guevara, was killed in Bolivia while fighting with a left-wing guerrilla group. In 1971 Bolivian instability reached a peak with the brief establishment of a revolutionary Popular Assembly during the regime of Gen. Torres. Later repression under Gen. Hugo Banzer took a heavy toll on the left-wing parties. Banzer was followed by a succession of military-led governments until civilian rule was restored in Oct. 1982 when Dr Siles Zuazo became president. He introduced a period of economic reform embracing free markets and open trade, since when 'Bolivia has been a model of democratic stability'. (The Economist, 24 June 2000).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bolivia is a landlocked state bounded in the north and east by Brazil, south by Paraguay and Argentina, and west by Chile and Peru, with an area of some 424,165 sq. miles (1,098,581 sq. km). A coastal strip of land on the Pacific passed to Chile after a war in 1884. In 1953 Chile declared Arica a free port and Bolivia has certain privileges there.

Population estimate, 2000: 8,328,700 (63·7% urban); density, 7·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 10·23m.

Area and population of the departments (capitals in brackets) at the 1992 census and as estimated in 2000:

Departments	Area (sq. km)	Census 1992	Estimate 2001
Beni (Trinidad)	213,564	276,174	362,521
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	51,524	453,756	531,522
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	55,631	1,110,205	1,455,711
La Paz (La Paz)	133,985	1,900,786	2,350,466
Oruro (Oruro)	53,588	340,114	391,870
Pando (Cobija)	63,827	38,072	52,525
Potosí (Potosí)	118,218	645,889	709,013
Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)	370,621	1,364,389	2,029,471
Tarija (Tarija)	37,623	291,407	391,226
Total	1,098,581	6,420,792	8,274,325

Population (2000 estimates, in 1,000) of the principal towns: Santa Cruz, 1,034; La Paz, 1,004; Cochabamba, 616; El Alto, 569; Oruro, 248; Sucre, 223; Tarija, 163; Potosí, 162.

Spanish is the official and commercial language. The Amerindian languages Aymará and Quechua are spoken exclusively by 22% and 5·2% of the population respectively; Tupi Guaraní is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

The annual population growth rate has been estimated at 2·74% for the years 1992–2001; in 1999 births totalled an estimated 265,000 (birth rate of 32·4 per 1,000 population); deaths totalled an estimated 72,000 (rate, 8·8 per 1,000); infant mortality (1999), 63 per 1,000 live births, the highest in South America. Expectation of life (1999) was 60·4 years for men and 63·8 years for women. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·2 children per woman, also the highest in South America.

CLIMATE

The varied geography produces different climates. The low-lying areas in the Amazon Basin are warm and damp throughout the year, with heavy rainfall from Nov. to March; the Altiplano is generally dry between May and Nov. with sunshine but cold nights in June and July, while the months from Dec. to March are the wettest. La Paz, Jan. 55·9°F (13·3°C), July 50·5°F (10·3°C). Annual rainfall 20·8" (529 mm). Sucre, Jan. 58·5°F (14·7°C), July 52·7°F (11·5°C). Annual rainfall 20·1" (510 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Bolivia's first constitution was adopted on 19 Nov. 1826. The President is elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term. If 50% of the vote is not obtained, the result is determined by a secret ballot in Congress amongst the leading two candidates. The President appoints the members of his Cabinet. There is a bicameral legislature; the Senate comprises 27 members, three from each department, and the Chamber of Deputies 130 members, all serving terms of five years. A constitutional amendment of 1996 introduced direct elections for 65 deputies; the remainder are nominated by party leaders. Voting is compulsory.

National Anthem. 'Bolivianos, el hado propicio' ('Bolivians, the propitious fate'); words by I. de Sanjinés, tune by B. Vincenti.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 30 June 2002. Former president Gonzalo Sánchez de Lozada (the Nationalist Revolutionary Movement) won 22·5% of votes cast against 20·9% for Evo Morales (Movement Towards Socialism), 20·91% for Manfred Reyes Villa (New Republican Force) and 16·3% for former president Jaime Paz Zamora (Movement of the Revolutionary Left). Turn-out was 63·4%. In the run-off held on 4 Aug. 2002 Gonzalo Sánchez de Lozada was elected president by parliament with 84 votes against 43 for Evo Morales.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Gonzalo Sánchez de Lozada; b. 1930 (Nationalist Revolutionary Movement; in office since 6 Aug. 2002, having previously been president from 1993 to 1997).

Vice-President: Carlos Diego Mesa Gilbert.

In March 2003 the cabinet was composed as follows:

Minister of Foreign Affairs and Worship: Carlos Saavedra Bruno. Treasury: Javier Comboni Salinas. Economic Development: Jorge Torres Obleas. Sustainable Development and Planning: Moira Paz Cortéz. Presidency: José Guillermo Justiniano Sandoval. Health: Javier Torréz Goitia Caballero. Defence: Freddy Teodovic Ortiz. Government: Yerko Kukoc del Carpio. Labour: Juan Subirana Suárez. Education: Hugo Carvajal. Housing and Basic Services: Carlos Morales Landívar. Agriculture, Livestock and Rural Development: Arturo Liebers Valdivieso. Ministers Without Portfolio: Fernando Illanes; Hernán Paredes Muñóz; Francisco Javier Suárez Ramírez; Silvia Amparo Velarde Olmos.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for 12 months at the age of 18 years. There has been optional pre-military training for high school pupils since 1998.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$128m. (US$16 per capita), representing 1·4% of GDP.

Army. There are six military regions. Strength (1999): 25,000 (18,000 conscripts), including a Presidential Guard infantry regiment under direct headquarters command.

Navy. A small force exists for river and lake patrol duties. Personnel in 1999 totalled 4,500, including 1,700 marines and 1,800 conscripts. There were three Naval Areas and six Naval Districts, covering Lake Titicaca and the rivers.

Air Force. The Air Force, established in 1923, has 50 combat aircraft and 10 armed helicopters. Personnel strength (1999) about 3,000 (2,000 conscripts).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bolivia is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, LAIA, the Andean Group, IOM and the Amazon Pact, and is an associate member of Mercosur.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 15·4% of GDP, industry 28·7% and services 55·9%.

Overview. Following the collapse of the international tin market in 1985 and severe inflation, a New Economic Policy was introduced liberalizing foreign trade, ending price controls and subsidies and freezing public-sector wages. A privatization programme affecting some 60 state-owned enterprises was instituted in June 1992. A programme of capitalization aims to attract foreign investment into state enterprises in oil, telephones, electricity supply, railways, airlines and smelters, while distributing 50% of the shares to adult citizens, to be held in retirement accounts.

Currency. The unit of currency is the boliviano (BOB) of 100 centavos, which replaced the peso on 1 Jan. 1987 at a rate of one boliviano = 1m. pesos. Inflation was 4·6% in 2000 and 1·6% in 2001. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$557m., total money supply was 4,163m. bolivianos and gold reserves totalled 911,000 troy oz.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. bolivianos):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	5,336·5	6,564·7	7,092·3	8,300·8	8,638·3	9,278·7
Expenditure	6,801·6	8,627·4	9,193·7	10,339·8	11,166·9	12,314·4

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·4% in 2000 and 1·2% in 2001. Total GDP was US$8·0bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank (President, Juan Antonio Morales Anaya) is the bank of issue. In 1998 there were 14 commercial banks operating, including five foreign and eight specialized development banks.

There are stock exchanges in La Paz and Santa Cruz.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legal, but the old Spanish system is also employed.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. In 1998 Bolivia's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 1·5 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. Installed capacity was estimated to be 1,010,520 kW in 1997. Production from all sources (1998), 2·58bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 409 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. There are petroleum and natural gas deposits in the Santa Cruz–Camiri areas. Production of oil in 2000 was 11,424,058 bbls. Work has begun on a US$1·9bn. pipeline from eastern Bolivia to São Paulo in Brazil. Natural gas output was 2·6bn. cu. metres in 2001 with proven reserves of 120bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Mining accounts for 5·76% of GDP (1996 estimate). Tin-mining had been the mainstay of the economy until the collapse of the international tin market in 1985. Estimated production, 2000 (in tonnes): zinc, 141,983; tin, 12,039; lead, 9,090; antimony, 2,072; wolfram, 671; silver, 410; gold, 12,374 fine kg.

Agriculture. The rural population was estimated at 3,012,260 in 1996, 39·70% of total population. There were 1·87m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·23m. ha of permanent crops. Output in 1,000 tonnes in 2000 was: sugarcane, 3,602; soybeans, 1,232; potatoes, 927; bananas, 695; maize, 653; cassava, 515; rice, 310; plantains, 187. In 1992, 77,000 tonnes of coca (the source of cocaine) were grown. Since 1987 Bolivia has received international (mainly US) aid to reduce the amount of coca grown, with compensation for farmers who co-operate.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 6,725,000; sheep, 8,752,000; pigs, 2,793,000; goats, 1,500,000; asses and mules, 712,000; horses, 322,000; chickens, 74m.

Forestry. Forests covered 48·3m. ha (44·6% of the land area) in 1995, down from 51·2m. ha in 1990. Tropical forests with woods ranging from the 'iron tree' to the light balsa are exploited. Timber production in 1999 was 1·91m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 2000 the total catch was 6,106 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

In 1998 it was estimated that the industrial sector employed a total of 51,214 persons. The principal manufactures are mining, petroleum, smelting, foodstuffs, tobacco and textiles.

Labour. Out of 3,884,251 people (54·8% male) in employment in 2001, 44·1% were in agriculture, ranching and hunting, 14·0% in retail and repair, 9·2% in industrial manufacturing, 4·9% in construction and 4·6% in transport, storage and communications. The unemployment rate in 1997 was 11·4%. In 1998 the minimum wage was 300 bolivianos a month.

Trade Unions. Unions are grouped in the Confederación de Obreros Bolivianos.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

An agreement of Jan. 1992 with Peru gives Bolivia duty-free transit for imports and exports through a corridor leading to the Peruvian Pacific port of Ilo from the Bolivian frontier town of Desaguadero, in return for Peruvian access to the Atlantic via Bolivia's roads and railways. The mining code of 1991 gives tax incentives to foreign investors. Foreign debt was US$5,762m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) amounted to US$1,610·1m. (US$1,539·0m. in 1999); exports (f.o.b.) US$1,229·6m. (US$1,051·2m. in 1999). Main exports (2001 provisional, in US$1m.): soybeans and products, 272·9; natural gas, 237·4; zinc, 120·7; gold, 89·9; food products, 58·1; tin, 51·1; silver ore, 48·9; other fuels, 47·4; wood and products, 41·1. Main import commodities are road vehicles and parts, machinery for specific industries, cereals and cereal preparations, general industrial machinery, chemicals, petroleum, food, and iron and steel.

Main export markets, 2001 (provisional, in US$1m.): Brazil, 286·7; Colombia, 186·0; Switzerland, 175·4; USA, 156·8; Venezuela, 96·1; UK, 72·3. Main import suppliers, 2001 (provisional, in US$1m.): Argentina, 289·1; USA, 281·7; Brazil, 277·3; Chile, 142·6; Peru, 107·1; China, 69·7.

Imports and exports pass chiefly through the ports of Arica and Antofagasta in Chile, Mollendo-Matarani in Peru, through La Quiaca on the Bolivian-Argentine border, and through river-ports on the rivers flowing into the Amazon.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The total length of the road system was 49,400 km in 1996, of which 3,660 km were national roads. Estimated total vehicles in use in 1997 was 397,112.

Rail. In 1994 the state railway ENFE network totalled 3,697 km of metre gauge, comprising unconnected Eastern (1,423 km) and Andina (2,274 km) systems. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 270m. and freight tonne-km to 908m.

Civil Aviation. The two international airports are La Paz (El Alto) and Santa Cruz (Viru Viru). The national airlines are the state-owned Aerosur (domestic services only) and Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano (97·5% state-owned), which in 1998 ran scheduled services between La Paz and Arica, Buenos Aires, Guayaquil, Lima, Miami, Montevideo and Trinidad, as well as many internal services. In 1999 Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano flew 18·8m. km, carrying 1,525,900 passengers (658,800 on international flights).

Shipping. Lake Titicaca and about 19,000 km of rivers are open to navigation.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 504,200 telephone main lines (60·5 per 1,000 persons) and 140,000 PCs in use (16·8 per 1,000 persons). In 1999 Bolivia had 420,300 mobile phone subscribers. There were five Internet Service Providers in 1999; Internet users numbered 78,000 in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 159 post offices, or 1 for every 46,600 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court, superior department courts (of five or seven judges) and courts of local justice. The Supreme Court, with headquarters at Sucre, is divided into two sections, civil and criminal, of five justices each, with the Chief Justice presiding over both. Members of the Supreme Court are chosen on a two-thirds vote of Congress. The death penalty was abolished for ordinary crimes in 1997.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 5,412 (70 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The Roman Catholic church was disestablished in 1961. It is under a cardinal (in Sucre), an archbishop (in La Paz), six bishops and vicars apostolic. It had 6·87m. adherents in 1997. There were also 700,000 Evangelical Protestants and 200,000 followers of other faiths.

Education. Adult literacy was 85·2% in 1999 (male, 92·5%; female, 78·3%). Primary instruction is free and obligatory between the ages of six and 14 years. In 1999 there were 13,365 schooling facilities. In 1998 state schools were attended by 2,056,084 pupils and employed 15,132 teachers. The national rate of school attendance (6–19-year-olds) reaches 74·3%.

In 1994–95 there were 7 universities, 2 technical universities, 1 Roman Catholic university, 1 musical conservatory, and colleges in the following fields: business, 6; teacher training, 4; industry, 1; nursing, 1; technical teacher training, 1; fine arts, 1, rural education, 1; physical education, 1. In 1997 state universities had 162,538 students and 7,490 teaching staff. In 1998 there were 35 private universities with 32,253 students and 3,538 teaching staff.

In 1999 total expenditure on education came to 8·0% of GNP.

Health. In 1998 there were 2,561 doctors and 5,077 nurses, and 230 hospitals and 9,185 hospital beds (1 per 897 persons).

Welfare. The pensions and social security systems in Bolivia were reformed in 1996. Instead of a defined-benefit publicly managed pension system, a defined-contribution system based on privately managed individual capitalization accounts was introduced. There are now two funds: the Collective Capitalization Fund, made up of 50% of the shares of capitalized companies formerly owned by the state, and the Individual Capitalization Fund, made up of contributions of those associated to the new system with a monthly income of above US$50. A solidarity bonus, BONOSOL—worth approximately US$250 a year—is paid to all Bolivians over the age of 65.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The broadcasting authority is the Dirección General de Telecomunicaciones. In 1999 there were 321 radio stations. Broadcasts are in Spanish, Aymará and Quechua. There were 5·25m. radios in 1997. There were 48 television stations in 1997 and 900,000 televisions (colour by NTSC) in 1997.

Cinema. 4 full-length films were made in 1995.

Press. There were 18 daily newspapers in 1996 with a combined circulation of 420,000, at a rate of 55 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 410,000 foreign tourists. Receipts totalled US$170m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Settled by Slavs in the 7th century, Bosnia was conquered by the Turks in 1463 when much of the population was gradually converted to Islam. At the Congress of Berlin (1878) the territory was assigned to Austro-Hungarian administration under nominal Turkish suzerainty. Austria-Hungary's outright annexation in 1908 generated international tensions which contributed to the outbreak of the First World War. After 1918 Bosnia Hercegovina became part of a new kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes under the Serbian monarchy. Its name was changed to Yugoslavia in 1929. (See SERBIA AND MONTENEGRO for developments up to and beyond the Second World War.)

On 15 Oct. 1991 the National Assembly adopted a 'Memorandum on Sovereignty', the Serbian deputies abstaining. This envisaged Bosnian autonomy within a Yugoslav federation. Though boycotted by Serbs, a referendum in March 1992 supported independence. In March 1992 an agreement was reached by Muslims, Serbs and Croats to set up three autonomous ethnic communities under a central Bosnian authority.

Bosnia-Herzegovina declared itself independent on 5 April 1992. Fighting broke out between the Serb, Croat and Muslim communities, with particularly heavy casualties and destruction in Sarajevo, leading to extensive Muslim territorial losses and an exodus of refugees. UN-sponsored ceasefires were repeatedly violated.

On 13 Aug. 1992 the UN Security Council voted to authorize the use of force if necessary to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid to besieged civilians. Internationally sponsored peace talks were held in Geneva in 1993, but Serb-Muslim-Croat fighting continued.

In Dec. 1994 Bosnian Serbs and Muslims signed a countrywide interim ceasefire. Bosnian Croats also signed in Jan. 1995. However, Croatian Serbs and the Muslim secessionist forces under Fikret Abdić did not sign the agreement, and fighting continued. On 16 June 1995 Bosnian government forces launched an attack to break the Bosnian Serb siege of Sarajevo. On 11 July Bosnian Serb forces began to occupy UN security zones despite retaliatory NATO air strikes, and on 28 Aug. shelled Sarajevo.

To stop the shelling of UN safe areas, more than 60 NATO aircraft attacked Bosnian Serb military installations on 30–31 Aug. On 26 Sept. in Washington the foreign ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Yugoslavia (the latter negotiating for the Bosnian Serbs) agreed a draft Bosnian constitution under which a central government would handle foreign affairs and commerce and a Serb Zone, and a Muslim-Croat Federation would run their internal affairs. A ceasefire came into force on 12 Oct. 1995.

In Dayton (Ohio) on 21 Nov. 1995 the prime ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Yugoslavia initialled a US-brokered agreement to end hostilities. The Bosnian state was divided into a Croat-Muslim Federation containing 51% of Bosnian territory and a Serb Republic containing 49%. A central government authority representing all ethnic groups with responsibility for foreign and monetary policy and citizenship issues was established, and free elections held. On 20 Dec. 1995 a NATO contingent (IFOR) took over from UN peacekeeping forces to enforce the Paris peace agreements and set up a 4-km separation zone between the Serb and Muslim-Croat territories. There are still some 15,000 NATO troops in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

'Bosnia is not now a failed state, but it is a center for the trafficking of women and narcotics, a hide-out for war criminals and a steady drain on Western aid and defense budgets. It's not likely to collapse soon, but neither will foreign troops and administrators likely be able to safely pull out for many years to come'. (International Herald Tribune, 13 Nov. 2002).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The republic is bounded in the north and west by Croatia and in the east and southeast by Serbia and Montenegro. It has a coastline of only 20 km with no harbours. Its area is 51,129 sq. km. The capital is Sarajevo.

Population at the 1991 census: 4,377,033 (34·2% urban), of which the predominating ethnic groups were Muslims (1,905,829), Serbs (1,369,258) and Croats (755,892). Population of the principal cities in 1991: Sarajevo, 415,631 (est. 1999, 522,000); Banja Luka, 142,644; Zenica, 96,238. By 1996, following the civil war, 1,319,250 Bosnians had taken refuge abroad, including 0·45m. in Serbia and Montenegro, 0·32m. in Germany, 0·17m. in Croatia and 0·12m. in Sweden.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·27m.

In 1999 Bosnia-Herzegovina had the fastest-growing population in Europe, with a rise of 4·6% on the 1998 figure. In 1995 an estimated 58·9% of the population lived in rural areas.

The official language is Serbo-Croat.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 36,000; deaths, 69,000. Rates per 1,000, 1996: birth, 7·9; death, 15·4. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –1·3%. Life expectancy at birth, 1996, was 51·2 years for men and 61·4 years for women. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 15 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is generally continental with steady rainfall throughout the year, although in areas nearer the coast it is more Mediterranean.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 18 March 1994, in Washington, Bosnian Muslims and Croats reached an agreement for the creation of a federation of cantons with a central government responsible for foreign affairs, defence and commerce. It was envisaged that there would be a president elected by a two-house legislature alternating annually between the nationalities.

On 31 May 1994 the National Assembly approved the creation of the Muslim Croat federation. Alija Izetbegović remained the unitary states' President. An interim government with Hasan Muratović as Prime Minister was formed on 30 Jan. 1996.

The Dayton Agreement including the new constitution was signed and came into force on 14 Dec. 1995. The government structure was established in 1996 as follows:

Heading the state is a three-member Presidency (one Croat, one Muslim, one Serb) with a rotating president. The Presidency is elected by direct universal suffrage, and is responsible for foreign affairs and the nomination of the prime minister. There is a two-chamber parliament: the Chamber of Representatives (which meets in Sarajevo) comprises 42 directly elected deputies, two-thirds Croat and Muslim and one-third Serb; and the Chamber of Peoples (which meets in Lukavica) comprises five Croat, five Muslim and five Serb delegates.

Below the national level the country is divided into two self-governing entities along ethnic lines.

The Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina is headed by a President and Vice-President, alternately Croat and Muslim, a 140-member Chamber of Representatives and a 74-member Chamber of Peoples. The Serb Republic is also headed by an elected President and Vice-President, and there is a National Assembly of 83 members, elected by proportional representation.

Central government is conducted by a Council of Ministers, which comprises Muslim and Serb Co-Prime Ministers and a Croat Deputy Prime Minister. The Co-Prime Ministers alternate in office every week.

National Anthem. 'Intermezzo'; tune by Dusan Sestić; no words.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 5 Oct. 2002 for the Presidium and the federal parliament. Seats for the three-member rotating presidency went to Serb, Croat and Muslim nationalist parties. The elected members were as follows: Sulejman Tihić (Muslim; Party of Democratic Action—SDA); Dragan Čović (Croat; Croatian Democratic Community—HDZ); and Mirko Šarović (Serb; Social Democratic Party—SDS). In the parliamentary elections, the Party for Democratic Action won ten seats with 32·5% of the vote, against five seats for both the Croat Democratic Union and the Serb Democratic Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Presidency Chairman: Borislav Paravac (Serb; SDS). Presidency Members: Sulejman Tihić (Muslim; SDA); Dragan Čović (Croat; HDZ). Mirko Šarović was sworn in as presidency chairman on 28 Oct. 2002, but resigned on 2 April 2003. He was replaced by Borislav Paravac, also of the Social Democratic Party.

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

Prime Minister and Minister of European Integration: Adnan Terzić (Muslim; SDA); b. 1960 (sworn in 23 Dec. 2002).

Minister of Civil Affairs: Safet Halilović. Finance and Treasury: Ljerka Marić. Foreign Affairs: Mladen Ivanić. Foreign Trade and Economic Relations: Mila Gadžić. Human Rights and Refugees: Mirsad Kebo. Justice: Slobodan Kovać. Security: Bariša Čolak. Transportation and Communications: Branko Dokić.

UN High Representative: Lord Ashdown (UK); b. 1941 (sworn in 27 May 2002).

Office of the High Representative: http://www.ohr.int/

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$183m. (US$46 per capita), representing 3·7% of GDP.

Army. In 1999 the Army numbered some 40,000 with reserves of 150,000. The Croatian Defence Council also had personnel of some 16,000 active in the country, with 50 main battle tanks, while the forces of the Serb Republic were estimated at up to 30,000, with 500 main battle tanks. The Croatian Defence Council is to merge with the Army to form the armed forces of a Muslim-Croat Federation. The USA is assisting in training and equipping the armed forces.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bosnia-Herzegovina is a member of the UN, BIS, OSCE and the Central European Initiative.

The Serb Republic and Yugoslavia (now Serbia and Montenegro) signed an agreement on 28 Feb. 1997 establishing 'special parallel relations' between them. The agreement envisages co-operation in cultural, commercial, security and foreign policy matters, allows visa-free transit of borders and includes a non-aggression pact. A customs agreement followed on 31 March.

ECONOMY

Overview. Privatization is under way but extremely slowly. The private sector only generates approximately 40% of GDP.

Currency. A new currency, the konvertiblna marka (BAM) consisting of 100 pfening, was introduced in June 1998. Initially trading at a strict 1-to-1 against the Deutsche Mark, it is now pegged to the euro at a rate of 1·95583 convertible marks to the euro. Inflation was 3·3% in 2001. Total money supply was 3,117m. convertible marks in June 2002.

Budget. Revenue in 1997 was 618m. Deutsche Marks; expenditure was 598·5m. Deutsche Marks.

Performance. Bosnia-Herzegovina had one of the fastest growing economies in the world during the second half of the 1990s. Real GDP growth was 10·0% in both 1998 and 1999, but then 4·5% in 2000 and 2·3% in 2001. Total GDP was US$4·8bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Dayton agreement stipulated that the governor of the Central Bank must not be a Bosnian citizen. The present Governor is Peter Nicholl (New Zealand). In 1998 there were 59 commercial banks.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Bosnia-Herzegovina's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 1·2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Capacity was 2·41m. kW in 1995. Production in 1998 was 2·22bn. kWh. In 1996 consumption per capita was 772 kWh.

Minerals. Output, 1995: iron ore, 150,000 tonnes; bauxite, 75,000 tonnes; lignite, 1,640,000 tonnes (1997).

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 500,000 ha of arable land and 150,000 ha of permanent crops. 2000 yields (in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 900; potatoes, 365; wheat, 275; cabbages, 120; plums, 90; barley, 64. Livestock in 2000: cattle, 462,000; sheep, 672,000; pigs, 150,000; poultry, 3m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 27,100 sq. km, or 53·1% of the total land area. Timber production in 1999 was 40,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. Estimated total fish catch in 2000: 2,500 tonnes (exclusively freshwater).

INDUSTRY

In 1991 there were 7,823 enterprises (4,563 private, 1,882 social, 655 limited companies, 322 co-operatives and 157 public). Production (in 1,000 tonnes) 1995: cement, 150; aluminium (1994), 89; crude steel (1990), 1,421. Cars (1990), 38,000 units; tractors (1990), 34,000 units; lorries (1990), 16,000 units; televisions (1990), 21,000 sets.

Labour. The labour force totalled 1,719,000 in 1996 (62% males). Unemployment in 2001 was nearly 40%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$2,828m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. 2000 external trade (in US$1m.): exports f.o.b., 1,066·2; imports f.o.b., 2,896·0. In 2000 main export markets were Italy, 31·5%; Germany, 13·8%; Slovenia, 7·6%. Principal import sources in 2000 were Slovenia, 16·1%; Germany, 13·6%; Italy, 13·0%. In 2000 the EU accounted for 65·4% of Bosnia-Herzegovina's exports and 43·8% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 21,846 km of roads, 3,722 km of which were highways or main roads. There were 96,182 passenger cars in use in 1996 (23 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 9,783 vans and trucks. There were 199 road accident fatalities in 1996.

Rail. There were 1,021 km of railways in 1991 (795 km electrified); they carried 554m. passenger-km and 1,946m. tonne-km of freight. It is estimated that up to 80% of the rail network was destroyed in the civil war, and it was not until July 2001 that the first international services were resumed. There are three state-owned rail companies—the Bosnia and Herzegovina railway company (ZBH), the Herzeg-Bosnia Railway company (ZHB), and the Serb Republic Railway and Transport Company (ZTP).

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Sarajevo (Butmir) and Banja Luka. In 1998 there were direct flights to Belgrade, Istanbul, Ljubljana, Munich, Tivat, Vienna, Zagreb and Zürich. In 2000 Sarajevo handled 355,000 passengers (all international) and 1,200 tonnes of freight Telecommunications. Telephone main lines numbered 408,800 in 2000, equivalent to 102·9 per 1,000 inhabitants. There were 52,600 mobile phone subscribers in 1999 and 45,000 Internet users in 2001. Three state-owned companies run the telephone networks in different parts of the country, the largest of which is the Saravevo-based PTT Bih.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 159 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The population in penal institutions in Jan. 1998 was 769 (30 per 100,000 of national population).

Police. The European Union Police Mission (EUPM) in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the EU's first civilian crisis management operation, took over from the UN's International Police Task Force on 1 Jan. 2003. It aims to help the authorities develop their police forces to the highest European and international standards.

Religion. In 1998 there were estimated to be 1,350,000 Sunni Muslims, 960,000 Serbian Orthodox, 460,000 Roman Catholics and 600,000 followers of other religions.

Education. In 1990–91 there were 543,500 pupils in 2,205 primary schools (23,400 teachers), 173,100 in 238 secondary schools (9,000 teachers) and 37,500 in 44 tertiary schools (2,800 teachers). In 1995 there were four universities.

Health. In 1996 there were 4,500 doctors, 550 dentists and 11,900 nurses.

Welfare. There were 380,000 pensions in 1990 (including 140,000 old age).

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 940,000 radio receivers and 1,000 TV receivers.

Press. There were two daily newspapers in 1995 with a combined circulation of 520,000, at a rate of 146 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 89,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$13m.

Population estimate, 2000: 1·54m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 7,184
HDI/world rank: 0·572/126

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Tswana or Batswana people are the principal inhabitants of the country formerly known as Bechuanaland. The territory was declared a British protectorate in 1895. Britain ruled through her High Commissioner in South Africa until the post was abolished in 1964. Frequent suggestions for the addition of Bechuanaland and the other two High Commission Territories to South Africa were rejected, the Africans being strongly against the idea. Economically, however, the country was very closely tied to that of South Africa and has remained so. In Dec. 1960 Bechuanaland received its first constitution. Further constitutional change brought full self-government in 1965 and full independence on 30 Sept. 1966. For years Botswana had great difficulties with the neighbouring settler regime in Rhodesia, until that country became Zimbabwe in 1980. Relations with South Africa were also strained until the ending of apartheid. Today the country enjoys stability and a fast-growing economy.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Botswana is bounded in the west and north by Namibia, northeast by Zambia and Zimbabwe, and east and south by South Africa. The area is 581,730 sq. km. Population (1991 census), 1,326,796 (45·7% urban). Estimate, 2000, 1,540,000; density, 2·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·63m.

In 1999, 50·3% of the population were rural. Between 1990 and 1995 there was a 10% rise in the urban population every year, the largest percentage increase anywhere in the world in the same period.

The country is divided into town districts (Central, Chobe, Ghanzi, Kgalagadi, Kgatleng, Kweneng, Ngamiland, Ngwaketse, North East and South East).

The main towns (with population, 1998) are Gaborone (192,845), Francistown (92,516), Selebi-Phikwe (46,766), Molepolole (44,564), Kanye (35,515); 1991: Serowe (30,260), Mahalapye (28,079), Maun (26,769), Lobatse (26,052) and Mochudi (25,542).

The official languages are Setswana and English. Setswana is spoken by over 90% of the population and English by approximately 40%. More than ten other languages, including Shona, San and Hottentot, are spoken in various tribal areas.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 (estimates) births, 49,000; deaths, 25,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 33·3; deaths, 17·0. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 46. As a result of the impact of AIDS, expectation of life in 1999 was 41·6 years for males and 41·9 for females, down from an overall average of 65 years in 1993. Approximately 36% of all adults are infected with HIV, the highest percentage of any country, with well over half of those aged between 25 and 29 having the disease. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·5% per annum. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

In winter, days are warm and nights cold, with occasional frosts. Summer heat is tempered by prevailing northeast winds. Rainfall comes mainly in summer, from Oct. to April, while the rest of the year is almost completely dry with very high sunshine amounts. Gaborone, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 55°F (12·8°C). Annual rainfall varies from 650 mm in the north to 250 mm in the southeast. The country is prone to droughts.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution adopted on 30 Sept. 1966 provides for a republican form of government headed by the President with three main organs: the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary. The executive rests with the President who is responsible to the National Assembly. The President is elected for five-year terms by the National Assembly.

The National Assembly consists of 47 members, 40 elected by universal suffrage, and seven elected by itself. Elections are held every five years. Voting is on the first-past-the-post system.

The President is an ex officio member of the Assembly.

There is also a House of Chiefs to advise the government. It consists of the Chiefs of the eight tribes who were autonomous during the days of the British protectorate, plus four members elected by and from among the sub-chiefs in four districts; these 12 members elect a further three politically independent members.

National Anthem. 'Fatshe leno la rona' ('Blessed be this noble land'); words and tune by K. T. Motsete.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the National Assembly elections of 16 Oct. 1999 the Botswana Democratic Party (BDP) gained 33 seats with 54·2% of the vote (27 in 1994), the Botswana National Front 6 with 24·6% (13 in 1994) and the Botswana Congress Party 1 with 11·3% (0 in 1994).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Festus Mogae; b. 1939 (BDP; sworn in on 1 April 1998).

Vice-President: Lieut.-Gen. Seretse Ian Khama.

In March 2003 the cabinet was as follows:

Minister of Finance and Development Planning: Baledzi Goalathe. Foreign Affairs: Mompati Merahfe. Communications, Science and Technology: Boyce Sebetela. Health: Joy Phumaphi. Works, Transport and Communications: Tebelelo Seretse. Conservation, Wildlife and Tourism: Venson Pelonomi. Mineral Resources, Energy and Water Affairs: Boometswe Mokgothu. Education: Pontashego Kedikilwe. Labour and Home Affairs: Thebe Mogami. Agriculture: Johnny Swarts. Lands and Housing: Margaret Nasha. Local Government: Michael Tshipinare. Trade and Industry: Jacob Nkate. Presidential Affairs and Public Administration: Daniel Kwelagobe.

Government Website: http://www.gov.bw

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$245m. (US$151 per capita), representing 5·5% of GDP.

Army. The Army personnel (2000) numbered more than 11,000, including the air wing and a commando unit.

Air Force. The Air Wing operated 50 combat aircraft in 2000 and numbered more than 2,000.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Botswana is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, the African Union, African Development Bank, SADC and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3·6% of GDP in 1998, industry 46·1% and services 50·4%.

Overview. The Eighth National Development Plan is running from 1997 to 2003. It is intended to stimulate industries and economic activities that can take over from mines and create jobs.

Currency. The unit of currency is the pula (BWP) of 100 thebe. Inflation was 7·2% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$5,683m. in June 2002. Total money supply was P2,409m. in May 2002.

Budget. The fiscal year begins in April. Government finance for recent years (in P1m.):

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Revenue	8,218·2	7,677·6	11,921·7
Expenditure	7,406·1	9,065·4	11,411·9

1993–94 revenue (in P1m.) included: mineral taxes, 2,456; customs pool, 830; other revenue, 1,858. Expenditure: recurrent, 3,470; development and capital transfer, 1,735.

Performance. In 2001 real GDP growth was 4·9% (8·6% in 2000). In 2001 total GDP was US$5·1bn.

Banking and Finance. There were four commercial banks at 1 Jan. 1996 with 46 branches. Total assets were P3,729m. at 30 Nov. 1995. The Bank of Botswana (Governor, Linah Mohohlo), established in 1976, is the central bank. The National Development Bank, founded in 1964, has six regional offices, and agricultural, industrial and commercial development divisions. The Botswana Co-operative Bank is banker to co-operatives and to thrift and loan societies. The government-owned Post Office Savings Bank operates throughout the country.

There is a stock exchange.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Botswana's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 2·4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 197,000 kW in 1993. Production in 1998 was 1bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 747 kWh in 1993. The coal-fired power station at Morupule supplies cities and major towns.

Water. Surface water resources are about 18,000m. cu. metres a year. Nearly all flows into northern districts from Angola through the Okavango and Kwando river systems. The Zambezi, also in the north, provides irrigation in the Chobe District. In the southeast, there are dams to exploit the ephemeral flow of the tributaries of the Limpopo. 80% of the land has no surface water, and must be served by some 6,000 boreholes.

Minerals. Botswana is the world's biggest diamond producer in terms of value; in 2000 the total value was estimated to be US$2·1bn. Debswana, a partnership between the government and De Beers, runs three mines producing around 17·5m. carats a year, with plans to double the capacity of the largest mine from 6m. to 12m. carats a year. Coal reserves are estimated at 17,000m. tonnes. There is also copper, salt and soda ash. Mineral production, 2000: diamonds, 24,700,000 carats (the second largest quantity after Australia); copper (1997), 18,350 tonnes; nickel ore (1996), 17,461 tonnes; coal (1997), 776,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. 70–80% of the total land area is desert. 80% of the population is rural, 71% of all land is 'tribal', protected and allocated to prevent over-grazing, maintain small farmers and foster commercial ranching. Agriculture provides a livelihood for over 80% of the population, but accounts for only 3% of GDP (1997). In 1998, 343,000 ha were arable and 3,000 ha permanent crops. There were 6,000 tractors in 1998 and 95 harvester-threshers. Cattle-rearing is the chief industry after diamond-mining, and the country is more a pastoral than an agricultural one, crops depending entirely upon the rainfall. In 2000, 300,000 persons were economically active in agriculture. In 2000 there were: cattle, 2·5m.; goats, 2·2m.; sheep, 350,000; asses, 330,000; chickens, 4m. In 1995, 80% of cattle were owned by traditional farmers, about half owning fewer than 20 head. A serious outbreak of cattle lung disease in 1995–96 led to the slaughter of around 300,000 animals.

Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): pulses, 17; vegetables, 17; sorghum, 14; roots and tubers, 13; sunflower seeds, 7; maize, 6; seed cotton, 3.

17% of the land is set aside for wildlife conservation and 20% for wildlife management areas, with four national parks and game reserves.

Forestry. Forests covered 139,000 sq. km, or 24·6% of the total land area, in 1995 (25·2% in 1990). There are forest nurseries and plantations. Concessions have been granted to harvest 7,500 cu. metres in Kasane and Chobe Forestry Reserves, and up to 2,500 cu. metres in the Masame area. In 1999, 1·70m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries. In 2000 the total catch was 166 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Meat is processed, and textiles, foodstuffs and soap manufactured. 565 companies were registered at the end of 1992. Rural technology is being developed and traditional crafts encouraged.

Labour. In 1999, 255,607 persons were in formal employment. At the 1991 census there were 276,950 paid employees (including informal employment) and 28,764 self-employed. A further 76,101 persons worked on a non-cash basis, e.g. as family helpers. 60,757 were seeking work. In March 1994 there were 12,342 Botswana nationals employed in the mines of South Africa. In 1991 there were 57,001 building workers, 34,322 in trade and 29,325 in domestic service. Botswana's biggest individual employer is the Debswana Diamond Company, with a workforce (1997) of nearly 6,000. In April 1998 the unemployment rate was 21%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Botswana is a member of the Southern African Customs Union (SACU) with Lesotho, Namibia, South Africa and Swaziland. There are no foreign exchange restrictions. External debt in 2000 totalled US$413m.

Imports and Exports. In 1999 imports (f.o.b.) totalled US$1,996·5m. More than three-quarters of all imports are from the SACU countries, the main commodities being machinery and electrical equipment, foodstuffs, vehicles and transport equipment, textiles and petroleum products.

In 1999 exports (f.o.b.) totalled US$2,671·0m., including diamonds (74·6% of exports in 1998), vehicles, copper, nickel and beef.

In addition to the SACU countries, other significant trading partners are the UK, Zimbabwe and the USA for exports; and South Korea, Zimbabwe and the UK for imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 some 4,600 km of road were bitumen-surfaced out of a total of 18,482 km. In 1996 there were 66,330 motor vehicles in use (22,540 cars and 44,000 trucks and vans). In 1995 there were 410 deaths in road accidents.

Rail. The main line from Mafeking in South Africa to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe traverses Botswana. With three branches the total length was 971 km in 1994. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 71m. and freight tonne-km to 1,278m.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Gaborone (Sir Seretse Khama) and at Maun and six domestic airports. The national carrier is the state-owned Air Botswana. Direct flights are operated to the UK, South Africa and Zimbabwe. In 1998 Air Botswana flew 2·6m. km, carrying 123,700 passengers (92,500 on international flights). In Oct. 1999 an Air Botswana pilot who had been suspended two months earlier crashed an empty passenger plane into the airline's two serviceable aeroplanes at Gaborone Airport, killing himself and destroying the airline's complete fleet in the process. In 2000 Gaborone handled 224,794 passengers (170,186 on international flights).

Telecommunications. There were 150,300 main telephone lines in 2000 (92·7 per 1,000 inhabitants), and 60,000 PCs were in use (37·0 per 1,000 persons). In 1996 there were 3,500 fax machines. In July 2000 Internet users numbered 12,000 and in Sept. 2000 there were 140,000 mobile phone subscribers, compared to just 23,000 in 1998.

Postal Services. There are 109 post offices and 65 agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Law is based on the Roman-Dutch law of the former Cape Colony, but judges and magistrates are also qualified in English common law. The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction in respect of criminal and civil appeals emanating from the High Court, and in all criminal and civil cases and proceedings. Magistrates' courts and traditional courts are in each administrative district. As well as a national police force there are local customary law enforcement officers. The death penalty is still in force and was used in 2001.

Religion. Freedom of worship is guaranteed under the Constitution. About 50% of the population is Christian. Non-Christian religions include Bahais, Muslims and Hindus.

Education. Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 76·4% (male, 73·8%; female, 78·9%). Basic free education, introduced in 1986, consists of 7 years of primary and 3 years of junior secondary schooling. In 1994 enrolment in 670 primary schools was 310,128 with 11,371 teachers, and 93,250 pupils at secondary level with 5,678 teachers. In 1993 there were 1,261 students in teacher training colleges. 'Brigades' (community-managed private bodies) provide lower-level vocational training. The Department of Non-Formal Education offers secondary-level correspondence courses and is the executing agency for the National Literacy Programme. There is 1 university (6,673 students in 1995–96).

In 1997 expenditure on education came to 8·6% of GNP and 20·6% of total government spending.

Health. In 1994 there were 16 general hospitals, a mental hospital, 13 health centres, 200 clinics and 310 health posts. There were also 701 stops for mobile health teams. In 1994 there were 339 doctors and 3,329 nurses.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Radio Botswana broadcasts daily on two channels in English and Setswana. A commercial television company transmits on a 50 km-radius from Gaborone (colour by PAL). There were 237,000 radio and 31,000 TV sets in 1997.

Press. The government owned Daily News is distributed free. There are also four weekly independent newspapers. The Gazette, The Botswana Guardian and The Mid-Week Sun are middle-of-the-road politically. For a more distinctive political slant there is the left-wing Mmegi (The Reporter). The press in Botswana is free from censorship.

Tourism. There were 740,000 foreign visitors in 1998 and receipts totalled US$175m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Brazil, South America's largest country, was colonized by the Portuguese in the 16th century and remained under Portuguese rule until independence in 1822. Bursts of economic growth were interspersed by periods of intense political rivalry which held up development. Brasília, supposed to be the catalyst for development of Brazil's huge interior, was built in the late 1950s when there was massive inflation. In 1964 the military took power, inaugurating 20 years of single party rule and censored press.

Brazil's military regime was not as brutal as those of Chile or Argentina, but at its height, around 1968 and 1969, the use of torture was widespread. The generals benefited from the Brazilian economic miracle in the late '60s and '70s when the economy was growing more than 10% every year. Brazil became one of the biggest industrial nations in the world, but unco-ordinated growth spawned corruption and inflation. By the 1980s Brazil had descended into economic chaos. Efforts to bring order to the economy climaxed in 1994 when Fernando Henrique Cardoso, a former finance minister responsible for the 'Plano Real', the economic plan to end inflation, was elected president. He instituted a radical privatization programme, a lowering of trade barriers and tight financial control, a programme which met with success up to 1997 when Brazil was hit by economic turbulence spreading from the Far East. In Oct. 2002 Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva ('Lula'), a left-wing former union leader, came to power on a wave of popular support.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Brazil is bounded in the east by the Atlantic and on its northern, western and southern borders by all the South American countries except Chile and Ecuador. The total area (including inland water) is 8,514,215 sq. km. Population as at censuses of 1996 and 2000:

Population density, 19·9 per sq. km. The 2000 census showed 83,576,015 males and 86,576,015 females. The urban population comprised 81·2% of the population in 2000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 191·44m.

The official language is Portuguese.

The principal metropolitan areas (census, 1996) were São Paulo (16,583,234), Rio de Janeiro (10,192,097), Belo Horizonte (3,803,249), Porto Alegre (3,246,869), Recife (3,087,967), Salvador (2,709,084), Fortaleza (2,582,820), Curitíba (2,425,361) and Belém (1,485,569).

Approximately 54% of the population of Brazil is white, 40% mixed white and black, and 5% black. There are some 260,000 native Indians, compared to nearly 5m. when the country was discovered in 1500.

Rio de Janeiro: Although situated on the southeast coast and deprived of status as national capital since 1960, Rio is still the pulsing heart of Brazil. Backed by mountains and possessing the famed Copacabana beach, many colonial buildings remain as a reminder of the Portuguese arrival in 1502. A major port for the export of sugar, iron ore and coffee, Rio's roads and city centre buckle and bend under the weight of the teeming population.

São Paulo: Founded by Jesuit missionaries on 25 Jan. 1554, the city is Brazil's biggest and is one of the largest in the world. It is 55 km from the Atlantic coast, southwest of Rio de Janeiro, and is Latin America's foremost industrial centre, accounting for a third of Brazil's total exports. It has an international airport and is served by the nation's busiest port, Santos.

Brasília: The idea of a centralized Brazilian capital to replace vulnerable, coastal Rio was first mooted in 1789 but the site was not selected until 1956. After four years of construction Brasília was inaugurated as the new capital in 1960. Crammed with fascinating modern architecture, original plans to house 500,000 occupants have been outstripped by rapid population growth, necessitating the building of satellite towns.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 estimates: births, 3,295,000 (rate of 20·1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 1,102,000 (6·7 per 1,000 population). Life expectancy in 1999 was 63·9 for males and 71·8 for females. 1999 growth rate, 1·3%; infant mortality (1999), 38 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Because of its latitude, the climate is predominantly tropical, but factors such as altitude, prevailing winds and distance from the sea cause certain variations, though temperatures are not notably extreme. In tropical parts, winters are dry and summers wet, while in Amazonia conditions are constantly warm and humid. The northeast sertão is hot and arid, with frequent droughts. In the south and east, spring and autumn are sunny and warm, summers are hot, but winters can be cold when polar air-masses impinge. Brasília, Jan. 72°F (22·3°C), July 68°F (19·8°C). Annual rainfall 60" (1,512 mm). Belém, Jan. 78°F (25·8°C), July 80°F (26·4°C). Annual rainfall 105" (2,664 mm). Manaus, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 92" (2,329 mm). Recife, Jan. 80°F (26·6°C), July 77°F (24·8°C). Annual rainfall 75" (1,907 mm). Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 83°F (28·5°C), July 67°F (19·6°C). Annual rainfall 67" (1,758 mm). São Paulo, Jan. 75°F (24°C), July 57°F (13·7°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,584 mm). Salvador, Jan. 80°F (26·5°C), July 74°F (23·5°C). Annual rainfall 105" (2,669 mm). Porto Alegre, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 62°F (16·7°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,502 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present Constitution came into force on 5 Oct. 1988, the eighth since independence. The President and Vice-President are elected for a four-year term. To be elected candidates must secure 51% of the votes, otherwise a second round of voting is held to elect the President between the two most voted candidates. Voting is compulsory for men and women between the ages of 18 and 70, and optional for illiterates, persons from 16 to 18 years old and persons over 70. A referendum on constitutional change was held on 21 April 1993. Turn-out was 80%. 66·1% of votes cast were in favour of retaining a republican form of government, and 10·2% for re-establishing a monarchy. 56·4% favoured an executive presidency, 24·7% parliamentary supremacy.

A constitutional amendment of June 1997 authorizes the re-election of the President for one extra term of four years.

Congress consists of an 81-member Senate (three Senators per federal unit) and a 513-member Chamber of Deputies. The Senate is two-thirds directly elected (50% of these elected for eight years in rotation) and one-third indirectly elected. The Chamber of Deputies is elected by universal franchise for four years. There is a Council of the Republic which is convened only in national emergencies.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the first round of presidential elections held on 6 Oct. 2002, Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva (Workers' Party) won 46·4% of votes cast, twice as many votes as his nearest opponent, José Serra (Brazilian Social Democracy Party), who won 23·2%. The two other candidates, Anthony Garotinho and Ciro Gomes, won 17·9% and 12% respectively. In the run-off held on 27 Oct. 2002 Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva won 61·3% against 38·7% for José Serra, the biggest ever winning margin in a Brazilian presidential election.

Parliamentary elections were also held on 6 Oct. 2002 for both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate.

In the elections to the 513-seat Chamber of Deputies, the Workers' Party (PT) won 91 seats; the Liberal Front Party (PFL), 84; the Brazilian Democratic Movement Party (PMDB), 74; the Brazilian Social Democracy Party (PSDB), 71; the Brazilian Progressive Party (PPB), 49; the Liberal Party (PL), 26; the Brazilian Labour Party (PTB), 26; the Brazilian Socialist Party (PSB), 22; the Democratic Labour Party (PDT), 21; the Socialist People's Party (PPS), 15; the Communist Party of Brazil (PCdoB), 12; others, 22.

Following the Senate elections the Brazilian Democratic Movement Party had 19 seats; the Liberal Front Party, 19; the Worker's Party, 14; the Brazilian Social Democracy Party, 11; the Democratic Labour Party, 5; the Brazilian Socialist Party, 4; the Liberal Party, 3; the Brazilian Labour Party, 3; the Socialist People's Party, 1; the Democratic Socialist Party, 1; and the Brazilian Progressive Party, 1.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 12 months, extendable by six months.

In 2001 defence expenditure totalled US$10,511m. (US$61 per capita), representing 2·1% of GDP. In 1985 expenditure was just US$5,854m.

Army. There are seven military commands and 12 military regions. Strength, 2002, 189,000 (40,000 conscripts). There is an additional potential first-line 1,115,000 of whom 400,000 are subject to immediate recall. There is a second-line reserve of 225,000 and a paramilitary Public Police Force of some 385,600.

Navy. The principal ship of the Navy and Brazil's only aircraft carrier is the 32,700-tonne São Paulo (formerly the French Foch), commissioned in 1963 and purchased in 2000. There are also four diesel submarines and 14 frigates including four bought from the UK in 1995 and 1996. Fleet Air Arm personnel only fly helicopters.

Naval bases are at Rio de Janeiro, Recife, Belém, Floriancholis and Salvador, with river bases at Ladario and Manaus.

Active personnel, 2002, totalled 48,600 (3,200 conscripts), including 13,900 Marines and 1,150 in Naval Aviation.

Air Force. The Air Force has an air defence command, tactical command, maritime command, transport command and training command. Personnel strength (2002) 50,000 (5,000 conscripts). There were 264 combat aircraft in 2002, including Mirage F-103s and F-5Es, and 29 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Brazil is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, LAIA, Mercosur and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 8·4% of GDP in 1998, industry 46·1% and services 50·3%.

Overview. With strong performance in 2002, economic policy for 2003 includes major pension reforms and measures to combat poverty. In 2002 the IMF approved a US$30·4bn. stand-by credit agreement. The government aims for a budget surplus of 4·25% for 2003 to cut its public debt of 56% of GDP. Since 1999 there has been a free-floating exchange rate and monetary policy has been led by a 4% inflation target. However, in 2003 inflation reached double figures for the first time since 1995. There are plans to make the central bank autonomous.

Currency. The unit of currency is the real (equal to 100 centavos), which was introduced on 1 July 1994 to replace the former cruzeiro real at a rate of 1 real (R$1) = 2,750 cruzeiros reais (CR$2,750). The real was devalued in Sept. 1994, March 1995, June 1995 and Jan. 1999. Inflation fell from nearly 2,076% in 1994 to 3·2% in 1998, before rising to 6·8% in 2001. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$41,838m.; gold reserves totalled 0·46m. troy oz (4·57m. troy oz in 1995). Total money supply in May 2002 was R$74,988m.

Budget. 2000 (in R$1m.): revenue was 235,062 (158,781 in 1999) and expenditure 247,253 (163,709 in 1999). Internal federal debt, July 1996, was R$176,478m. Internal states and municipalities (main securities outstanding), R$49,672m.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·5% in 2000 but only 1·5% in 2001. In March 1999 an IMF agreement introduced a tight monetary policy with an emphasis on reducing the ratio of debt to GDP. Total GDP in 2001 was US$502·5bn.

Banking and Finance. On 31 Dec. 1964 the Banco Central do Brasil (President, Henrique Meirelles) was founded as the national bank of issue.

The Bank of Brazil (founded in 1853 and reorganized in 1906) is a state-owned commercial bank; it had 2,927 branches in 2000 throughout the country. The largest private banks are Banco Bradesca, Banco Itaú and Unibanco. On 31 Dec. 1996 deposits were R$33,604m. In 2000 there were 190 banking establishments with 14,892 branches (26 commercial banks with 3,352 branches and 164 multiple banks with 11,540 branches), plus 19 investment banks with 45 branches.

In Nov. 1998 the IMF announced a US$41·5bn. financing package to help shore up the Brazilian economy. In Aug. 2001 it gave approval for a new US$15bn. stand-by credit, and in Aug. 2002 granted an additional US$30bn. loan to try to prevent a financial meltdown that was threatening to devastate the region.

Brazil received US$22·5bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2001, down from a record US$33·5bn. in 2000. Spain was the leading investor in 2000, providing 21·3% of foreign capital, ahead of the USA.

There are nine stock exchanges of which Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo are the most important. All except São Paulo are linked in the National Electronic Trading System (Senn).

Weights and Measures. The metric system has been compulsory since 1872.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Brazil's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 1·8 tonnes per capita.

Brazil has the world's biggest river system and about a quarter of the world's primary rainforest. Current environmental issues are deforestation in the Amazon Basin, air and water pollution in Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo (the world's fourth largest city), and land degradation and water pollution caused by improper mining activities. Contaminated drinking water causes 70% of child deaths.

Electricity. Hydro-electric power accounts for over 90% of Brazil's total electricity output. Although Brazil was only the 10th largest electricity producer overall in the world in 1998, it was the 3rd largest producer of hydro-electric power. Installed electric capacity (1998) 61,312 MW, of which 55,857 MW were hydro-electric. In July 2001 the government announced that supply would be increased by 20,000 MW by the end of 2003 to help solve the country's worst energy crisis in modern times. There are two nuclear power plants, supplying some 1·5% of total output. Production (2000) 348,000 GWh (95% hydro-electric). Consumption per capita in 1998 was 1,846 kWh.

Oil and Gas. There are 13 oil refineries, of which 11 are state-owned. Crude oil production (2000), 71,843,896 cu. metres. Crude oil reserves were estimated at 7·3bn. bbls. in 1999. Brazil began to open its markets in 1999 by inviting foreign companies to drill for oil, and in 2000 the monopoly of the state-owned Petrobrás on importing oil produucts was removed.

Gas production (2000), 13,327,562,000 cu. metres with reserves (in 1997) of 230bn. cu. metres. One of the most significant developments has been the construction of the 3,150-km Bolivia–Brazil gas pipeline, one of Latin America's biggest infrastructure projects, costing around US$2bn. (£1·2bn.). The pipeline runs from the Bolivian interior across the Brazilian border at Puerto Suárez-Corumbá to the far southern port city of Porto Alegre. Gas from Bolivia began to be pumped to São Paulo in 1999.

Minerals. The chief minerals are bauxite, gold, iron ore, manganese, nickel, phosphates, platinum, tin and uranium. Output figures, 1999 (in tonnes): phosphate rock, 27,000,000; bauxite, 12,880,000; salt, 5,958,000; hard coal (1996), 5,647,000; asbestos (crude ore), 3,950,000; manganese ore, 1,674,000; aluminium, 1,245,000; magnesite, 868,604; graphite, 650,000; chrome (crude ore), 420,000; barytes, 48,789; zirconium, 29,448; tin (tin content), 13,202; lead (lead content in concentrate), 10,281; mica, 5,000; quartz crystal, 1,470. Deposits of coal exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catarina and Paraná. Total reserves were estimated at 11,950m. tonnes in 2000.

Iron is found chiefly in Minas Gerais, notably the Cauê Peak at Itabira. The government is opening up iron-ore deposits in Carajás, in the northern state of Pará, with estimated reserves of 35,000m. tonnes, representing a 66% concentration of high-grade iron ore. Total output of iron ore, 1999, mainly from the Vale do Rio Doce mine at Itabira, was 194m. tonnes. Brazil is the second largest producer of iron ore after China.

Gold is chiefly from Pará, Mato Grosso and Minas Gerais; total production (1999), 48·7 tonnes. Silver output (1999), 42 tonnes. Diamond output in 1998 was 900,000 carats, with the principal output coming from Minas Gerais and Mato Grosso.

Agriculture. In 1995, 30·22m. people depended on agriculture. There were 4·86m. farms in 1995. There were 53·3m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 12·0m. ha of permanent crops. 2·66m. ha were irrigated.

Production (in tonnes):

	1999	2000
Apples	4,724,062	5,800,627
Bananas (1,000 bunches)	552,778	630,149

Brazil is the world's leading producer of sugarcane, oranges and coffee (and the second largest consumer of coffee after the USA). Harvested coffee area, 1998, 2,081,591 ha, principally in the states of Minas Gerais, Espírito Santo, São Paulo and Paraná. Harvested cocoa area, 1998, 709,997 ha. Bahia furnished 84% of the output in 1998. Two crops a year are grown. Harvested castor-bean area, 1998, 60,979 ha. Tobacco is grown chiefly in Rio Grande do Sul and Santa Catarina.

Rubber is produced chiefly in the states of Acre, Amazonas, Rondônia and Pará. Output, 1997 (preliminary), 32,959 tonnes (natural). Brazilian consumption of rubber in 1996 was 150,676 tonnes. Plantations of tung trees were established in 1930; output, 1995, 993 tonnes.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 169·9m.; pigs, 31·6m.; sheep, 14·8m.; goats, 9·3m.; horses, 5·8m.; mules, 1·35m.; asses, 1·24m.; chickens, 843m. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 6,460; pork, bacon and ham, 1,804; poultry meat, 6,020; cow's milk, 22,134; hen's eggs, 1,400; wool, 24; honey, 18.

Forestry. With forest lands covering 5,439,053 sq. km in 2000, only Russia had a larger area of forests. In 1995, 65·2% of the total land area of Brazil was under forests, down from 66·7% in 1990. In 1990 the total area under forests was 5,639,000 sq. km. The loss of 128,000 sq. km of forests between 1990 and 1995 was the biggest in any country in the world over the same period, and more than twice the area lost in Indonesia, the country with the second biggest reduction in forest area. Nevertheless, an independent study commissioned by NASA found that the rate of deforestation was on the decline and stated that the government had been extremely active since 1990 in reducing the rate of illegal deforestation. In 1996 the government ruled that Amazonian landowners could log only 20% of their holdings, instead of 50%, as had previously been permitted. Timber production in 1999 totalled 197·90m. cu. metres. In 1997 the government's environmental agency, Ibama, levied fines of nearly US$11m. on illicit loggers. In 2001 Ibama seized 25,600 cu. metres (US$40m. worth) of illegally-cut mahogany.

Fisheries. In 2000 the fishing industry had a catch of 693,710 tonnes (74% sea fishing and 26% inland).

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Brazil, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Petróleo Brasileiro SA (Petrobras), R$56bn.; Companhia Vale do Rio Doce, the world's largest iron ore producer (R$23bn.); and Centrais Elétricas Brasileiras SA (Eletrobrás), the electricity holding company (R$19bn.).

The main industries are textiles, shoes, chemicals, cement, lumber, iron ore, tin, steel, aircraft, motor vehicles and parts, and other machinery and equipment. The National Iron and Steel Co. at Volta Redonda, State of Rio de Janeiro, furnishes a substantial part of Brazil's steel. Total output, 2000: crude steel, 27,763,000 tonnes; rolled steel, 18,201,000 tonnes; cast iron, 27,854,000 tonnes; cement, 39,559,000 tonnes; paper, 7·1m. tonnes. Production of rubber tyres for motor vehicles (1994), 33,820,000 units; motor vehicles (2000), 1,667,985 units; TV sets (2000), 5,289,000 units; refrigerators (2000), 3,239,000 units; distillate fuel oil (1997), 24,236,000 tonnes; residual fuel oil (1997), 14,993,000 tonnes; beer (1997), 6,658·2m. litres; soft drinks (1997), 5,460·2m. litres.

Labour. The workforce in 1998 numbered 69,963,113, of whom 16,338,100 worked in agriculture and 13,210,555 worked in industry (including the construction industry). A constitutional amendment of Oct. 1996 prohibits the employment of children under 14 years. However, in 2000 more than 14% of children between 10 and 14 were working. In 1999 there was a minimum monthly wage of R$136. In 2000, 7·1% of the workforce was unemployed (7·5% in 1999).

Trade Unions. The main union is the United Workers' Centre (CUT).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1990 Brazil repealed most of its protectionist legislation. Import tariffs on some 13,000 items were reduced in 1995. Since 1991 direct foreign investment on equal terms with domestic has been permitted. Foreign investment reached an annual average of US$21·6bn. in 1997–98, much of it as a result of the privatization programme. In 1991 the government permitted an annual US$100m. of foreign debt to be converted into funds for environmental protection. Total foreign debt in 2000 was US$237,953m. (the highest in the world).

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years (in US$1m.):

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports	61,347	57,733	49,272	55,783
Exports	52,987	51,140	48,011	55,086

Principal imports in 1999 were: machinery and transport equipment, 42·9%; chemicals, 18·4%; manufactured goods, 10·0%; petroleum and related products, 9·0%; and food and live animals, 6·9%.

Principal exports in 1999 were: machinery and transport equipment, 23·7%; food and live animals, 21·6%, including coffee (5·1%), oilcake (3·1%), orange juice (2·6%) and sugar (2·4%); iron ore, 5·7%; footwear, 2·7%; and aluminium, 2·5%. Brazil is the world's leading sugar exporter.

Main export markets, 1999: USA, 23%; Argentina, 11%; Netherlands, 5%; Germany, 5%; Japan, 5%; Italy, 4%. Main import suppliers: USA, 24%; Argentina, 12%; Germany, 9%; Japan, 5%; Italy, 5%; France, 4%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 there were 1,724,929 km of roads, of which 164,988 km were paved. In 2000 there were 33,707,640 vehicles registered. Some 56% of freight is carried by truck.

Rail. The Brazilian railways have largely been privatized: all six branches of the large RFFSA network were under private management by the end of Aug. 1997. In 2000 RFFSA (Rede Ferroviária Federal S.A.) had a route-length of 21,316 km and FERROBAN (Ferrovias Bandeirantes S.A.) a route-length of 4,235 km. Total route-length nationwide was 29,283 km in 2000. Two-thirds is narrow (1·0 metre) gauge, the rest either broad (1·60) or a mix of the two. Passenger-km travelled in 1996 came to 13,999m. and freight tonne-km to 128·79bn.

There are several important independent freight railways, including the Vitoria à Minas (898 km in 1993), the Ferroeste (238 km), the Carajas (1,076 km in 1991) and the Amapa (194 km). There are metros in São Paulo (44 km), Rio de Janeiro (23 km), Belo Horizonte (14 km), Porto Alegre (28 km) and Brasília (38·5 km).

Civil Aviation. There are major international airports at Rio de Janeiro-Galeão (Antonio Carlos Jobim International) and São Paulo (Guarulhos) and some international flights from Brasília, Porto Alegre, Recife and Salvador. The three main airlines are Viação Aérea Rio Grande do Sul (Varig), with 33% of the market, TAM and Viação Aérea São Paulo (Vasp). In 1999 Varig carried 10,064,000 passengers, TAM carried 4,775,000 passengers and VASP 4,190,000 passengers.

Brazil's busiest airport is Guarulhos (São Paulo), which handled 13,163,000 passengers in 2000 (up from 6·45m. in 1992) and 348,200 tonnes of freight, followed by Congonhas (São Paulo) with 7,757,514 passengers (in 1998), and Rio de Janeiro with 5,416,000 passengers and 117,900 tonnes of freight in 2000.

Shipping. Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 43,000 km. Santos and Rio de Janeiro are the two leading ports; there are 19 other large ports. During 1997, 28,973 vessels entered and cleared the Brazilian ports; vessels totalling 82,593,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 192,889,000 NRT cleared. In 1997 Santos handled 0·85m. container units. In 1995 the merchant fleet comprised 249 vessels totalling 10·22m. DWT, representing 1·55% of the world's total fleet tonnage. 16 vessels (14·67% of tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. In 1998, total tonnage registered, 4·17m. GRT, including oil tankers 1·83m. GRT.

Telecommunications. The state-owned telephone system was privatized in 1998. There were 30,926,300 telephone main lines in 2000 (181·8 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone services were opened to the private sector in 1996. By March 2001 there were 24·4m. mobile phone subscribers, with Telefónica/Portugal Telecom having 41·4% of the market share, Bell South 17·6% and Telecom Italia Mobile 16·8%. There were 13·98m. Internet users in Sept. 2002, up from 3·1m. in July 1999. In 2000 PCs numbered 7·5m. (44·1 per 1,000 persons) and in 1997 there were 500,000 fax machines. There were still 28,000 telex subscribers in 1996, although telex usage has declined considerably in recent years.

Postal Services. In 2000 there were 25,957 post offices. A total of 6,009,791,111 items were handled in 1996.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Federal Court of Justice at Brasília composed of 11 judges, and a Supreme Court of Justice; all judges are appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. There are also Regional Federal Courts, Labour Courts, Electoral Courts and Military Courts. Each state organizes its own courts and judicial system in accordance with the federal Constitution.

In Dec. 1999 President Cardoso created the country's first intelligence agency (the Brazilian Intelligence Agency) under civilian rule. It replaced informal networks which were a legacy of the military dictatorship, and will help authorities crack down on organized drug gangs.

The prison population was 167,000 in Dec. 1997 (105 per 100,000 of national population). Brazil's annual murder rate, in excess of 25 per 100,000 population, is on the increase and is more than five times that of the USA.

Religion. In 1997 there were estimated to be 115,500,000 Roman Catholics (including syncretic Afro-Catholic cults having spiritualist beliefs and rituals) and 37,000,000 Evangelical Protestants, with 7,200,000 followers of other religions. Roman Catholic estimates in 1991 suggest that 90% were baptized Roman Catholic but only 35% were regular attenders. In 1991 there were 338 bishops and some 14,000 priests. In Feb. 2001 there were eight Cardinals. There are numerous sects, some evangelical, some African-derived (e.g. Candomble).

Education. Elementary education is compulsory from seven to 14. Adult literacy in 1999 was 84·9 % (male, 84·8%; female, 84·9%). There were 50,646 literacy classes in 1993 with 1,584,147 students and 75,413 teachers. In 2000 there were 84,617 pre-primary schools, with 4,421,332 pupils and 228,335 teachers; 181,504 primary schools, with 35,717,948 pupils and 1,538,011 teachers; 19,456 secondary schools, with 8,192,948 pupils and 430,467 teachers; and 1,097 higher education institutions, with 2,369,945 students and 173,836 teachers. In 1999, 95·7% of children between the ages of 7 and 14 were enrolled at schools. However, only a third of Brazilian teenagers attend school. In Jan. 2001 President Cardoso announced a National Education Plan that involves teaching 10m. young people and adults to read and write within five years and eradicating illiteracy within a decade.

The tertiary education sector includes 114 universities (53 private, 37 federal, 20 state and 4 municipal), 85 private and 3 municipal college faculty federations, and 671 other higher education institutions (514 private, 80 municipal, 57 state and 20 federal).

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 5·2% of GNP.

Health. In 1999 there were 48,815 hospitals and clinics (26,209 private), of which 7,806 were for in-patients (5,193 private). There were a total of 484,945 hospital beds in 1999 (341,871 private). In 1997 there were 205,828 doctors, 160,000 dentists (1993) and (1992) 57,047 pharmacists.

Brazil has been one of the most successful countries in the developing world in the campaign against AIDS. It is reported to have reduced AIDS-related deaths by 40% between 1996 and 2000.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1995 there were 2,033 radio and 119 television stations (colour by PAL M). In 1997 there were 71m. radio and 36·5m. television receivers.

Press. In 1996 there were 380 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 6,472,000, at a rate of 40 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1999, 5,107,000 tourists visited Brazil. Argentina is the country of origin of the largest number of visitors, ahead of the USA, Uruguay and Paraguay. Receipts in 1999 totalled US$3·99bn.

Festivals. New Year's Eve in Rio de Janeiro is always marked with special celebrations, with a major fireworks display over the bay at Copacabana Beach. Immediately afterwards, preparations start for Carnival, which in 2004 will begin on 21 Feb., when the parade of samba schools takes place.

Libraries. In 1993 Brazil had a National Library with 5·28m. volumes, and in 1994 a total of 2,739 public libraries.

BRUNEI

Negara Brunei Darussalam—State of Brunei Darussalam

Capital: Bandar Seri Begawan
Population estimate, 2000: 328,000
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 16,779
HDI/world rank: 0·856/32

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Brunei became an independent Sultanate in the 15th century, controlling most of Borneo, its neighbouring islands and the Suhi Archipelago. By the end of the 16th century, however, the power of Brunei was on the wane. By the middle of the 19th century the State had been reduced to its present limits. Brunei became a British protectorate in 1888. The discovery of major oilfields in the western end of the State in the 1920s brought economic stability to Brunei and created a new style of life for the population. Brunei was occupied by the Japanese in 1941 and liberated by the Australians in 1945. Self-government was introduced in 1959 but Britain retained responsibility for foreign affairs. In 1965 constitutional changes were made which led to direct elections for a new Legislative Council. Full independence and sovereignty were gained in Jan. 1984.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Brunei, on the coast of Borneo, is bounded in the northwest by the South China Sea and on all other sides by Sarawak (Malaysia), which splits it into two parts, the smaller portion forming the Temburong district. Area, 2,226 sq. miles (5,765 sq. km). Population (1991 census) 260,482; 1996 estimate, 299,900, giving a density of 52 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 388,000.

In 1999, 71·7% of the population lived in urban areas. The four districts are Brunei/Muara (1995: 195,000), Belait (60,000), Tutong (32,500), Temburong (8,500). The capital is Bandar Seri Begawan (estimate 1999: 85,000); other large towns are Kuala Belait (1991: 21,163) and Seria (1991: 21,082). Ethnic groups include Malays 64% and Chinese 20%.

The official language is Malay but English is in use.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 7,360; deaths, 871. Rates, 1999: birth per 1,000 population, 22·3; death, 2·6. There were 1,874 marriages in 1993. Life expectancy in 1999: males, 73·6 years; females, 78·3. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·5%. Infant mortality, 1999, 6·0 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical marine, hot and moist, but nights are cool. Humidity is high and rainfall heavy, varying from 100" (2,500 mm) on the coast to 200" (5,000 mm) inland. There is no dry season. Bandar Seri Begawan, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 131" (3,275 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Sultan and Yang Di Pertuan of Brunei Darussalam is HM Paduka Seri Baginda Sultan Haji Hassanal Bolkiah Mu'izzadin Waddaulah. He succeeded on 5 Oct. 1967 at his father's abdication and was crowned on 1 Aug. 1968. On 10 Aug. 1998 his son, Oxford-graduate Prince Al-Muhtadee Billah, was inaugurated as Crown Prince and heir apparent.

On 29 Sept. 1959 the Sultan promulgated a Constitution, but parts of it have been in abeyance since Dec. 1962. There is no legislature and supreme power is vested in the Sultan.

National Anthem. 'Ya Allah, lanjutkan lah usia' ('O God, long live His Majesty'); words by P. Rahim, tune by I. Sagap.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the Council of Ministers was composed as follows:

Prime Minister, Minister of Defence and of Finance: The Sultan.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Prince Haji Mohammad Bolkiah. Home Affairs: Pehin Dato Haji Isa bin Ibrahim. Education: Pehin Dato Haji Abdul Aziz bin Umar. Health: Ahmed bin Jumaat. Industry and Primary Resources: Pehin Dato Haji Abdul Rahman bin Mohammad Taib. Religious Affairs: Pehin Dato Dr Haji Mohammad Zain bin Serudin. Development: Pengiran Dato Dr Haji Ismail bin Damit. Culture, Youth and Sports: Pehin Dato Haji Hussain bin Mohammad Yusof. Communications: Dato Haji Zakaria bin Sulaiman.

Government Website: http://www.brunei.gov.bn/

DEFENCE

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$348m. (US$1,060 per capita), representing 5·8% of GDP.

Army. The armed forces are known as the Task Force and contain the naval and air elements. Only Malays are eligible for service. Strength (1999) 3,900.

There is a 2,000-strong paramilitary Gurkha reserve unit.

Navy. The Royal Brunei Armed Forces Flotilla includes three fast missile-armed attack craft. Personnel in 1999 numbered 700. The Flotilla is based at Muara.

Air Wing. The Air Wing of the Royal Brunei Armed Forces was formed in 1965. Personnel (1999), 400. There are no combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Brunei is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, APEC, Mekong Group, ASEAN and the OIC.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 2·8% of GDP, industry 44·5% and services 52·7%. The fall in oil prices in 1997–98 led to the setting up of an Economic Council to advise the Sultan on reforms. An investigation was mounted into the affairs of the Amedeo Corporation, Brunei's largest private company run by Prince Jefri, the Sultan's brother.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Brunei dollar (BND) of 100 cents, which is at parity with the Singapore dollar (also legal tender). Inflation in 2001 was 1·1%.

Budget. Revenues in 1995 were an estimated US$2·5bn. Expenditure in 2000 was put at US$3·2bn.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·8% in 2000 but the general downturn in the world economy resulted in negative growth of 0·4% in 2001. Total GDP in 1998 was US$4·9bn.

Banking and Finance. The Brunei Currency Board is the note-issuing monetary authority. In 1993 there were seven banks (one incorporated in Brunei), with a total of 33 branches. Savings deposits totalled B$999·3m. in 1993 and fixed time deposits B$1,935·4m. Total bank assets in 1993 were B$6,567·7m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Brunei's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 17·1 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 344,000 kW in 1995. Production in 1998 was 2·56bn. kWh and consumption per capita was 7,676 kWh.

Oil and Gas. The Seria oilfield, discovered in 1929, has passed its peak production. The high level of crude oil production is maintained through the increase of offshore oilfields production. Production was 55m. bbls. in 1996. The crude oil is exported directly, and only a small amount is refined at Seria for domestic uses. There were proven oil reserves of 1·4bn. bbls. in 1999.

Natural gas is produced (11·3bn. cu. metres in 1999) at one of the largest liquefied natural gas plants in the world and is exported to Japan. There were proven reserves of 390bn. cu. metres in 1999.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 3,000 ha of arable land and 4,000 ha of permanent crops. The main crops produced in 2000 were (estimates, in 1,000 tonnes) vegetables, 9; fruit, 6 (notably bananas and pineapples); cassava, 2.

Livestock in 2000: cattle, 2,000; buffaloes, 6,000; pigs, 6,000; goats, 4,000; chickens, 6m.

Forestry. Forests covered 448,000 ha, or 82·4% of the total land area, in 1995 (down from 85% in 1990). Most of the interior is under forest, containing large potential supplies of serviceable timber. Timber production in 1999 was 296,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The 2000 catch totalled 2,487 tonnes, almost exclusively from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Brunei depends primarily on its oil industry. Other minor products are rubber, pepper, sawn timber, gravel and animal hides. Local industries include boatbuilding, cloth weaving and the manufacture of brass- and silverware.

Labour. The labour force totalled 131,000 in 1996 (66% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1998 (and 1997) imports totalled US$1,566·0m. (US$2,110·4m.); exports US$2,306·8m. (US$2,657·1m.). In 1998 liquefied natural gas accounted for 52·6% of exports, and crude oil 33·7%. In 1998 Singapore supplied 23% of imports, Malaysia 17% and the USA 15%. Japan took 53% of all exports, South Korea 18%, and USA 9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were in 1996, 1,712 km of roads, of which 75% were surfaced. The main road connects Bandar Seri Begawan with Kuala Belait and Seria. In 1998 there were 94,136 private cars and 13,803 vans and trucks. There were 50 fatalities in road accidents in 1998.

Civil Aviation. Brunei International Airport handled 949,000 passengers (all international) in 1999. The national carrier is the state-owned Royal Brunei Airlines (RBA). In 1998 RBA operated services to Abu Dhabi, Balikpapan, Bangkok, Beijing, Brisbane, Calcutta, Darwin, Denpasar Bali, Dubai, Frankfurt, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Jeddah, Kota Kinabalu, Kuala Lumpur, Kuching, Labuan, London, Manila, Miri, Mulu, Osaka, Perth, Singapore, Surabaya and Taipei. In 1997 RBA flew 35·3m. km, carrying 876,800 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. Regular shipping services operate from Singapore, Hong Kong, Sarawak and Sabah to Bandar Seri Begawan, and there is a daily passenger ferry between Bandar Seri Begawan and Labuan. 97 sea-going vessels were licensed in 1993. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 366,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There is a telephone network (80,500 telephone main lines in 2000, or 245·2 per 1,000 inhabitants) linking the main centres. In 1999 mobile phone subscribers numbered 49,100 (142 per 1,000 persons), and in 2000 there were 23,000 PCs (70·1 for every 1,000 persons). There were 4,000 Internet users in Dec. 1999 and 2,000 fax machines in 1995.

Postal Services. There were 17 post offices in 1993.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court comprises a High Court and a Court of Appeal and the Magistrates' Courts. The High Court receives appeals from subordinate courts in the districts and is itself a court of first instance for criminal and civil cases. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London is the final court of appeal. Shariah Courts deal with Islamic law. 25,310 crimes were reported in 1993.

The Royal Brunei Police numbers 1,750 officers and men (1997). In addition, there are 500 additional police officers mostly employed on static guard duties. The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 285 (90 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The official religion is Islam. In 1991, 67% of the population were Muslim (mostly Malays), 13% Buddhists and 10% Christian.

Education. The government provides free education to all citizens from pre-school up to the highest level at local and overseas universities and institutions. In 1994 there were 165 kindergartens and schools, with 10,717 children and 506 teachers in kindergartens. In 1996 there were 43,291 pupils at primary schools. There were 2,961 teachers in secondary schools for 30,470 pupils; and 6 technical and vocational colleges (one teacher training college) with 1,966 students and 370 teachers.

In 1993 the University of Brunei Darussalam (founded 1985) had 1,138 students and 207 teachers. An institute of advanced education had 310 students and 71 teachers.

Adult literacy rate, 1999, 91·0% (male, 94·3%; female, 87·3%).

Health. Medical and health services are free to citizens and those in government service and their dependants. Citizens are sent overseas, at government expense, for medical care not available in Brunei. Flying medical services are provided to remote areas. In 1995 there were ten hospitals; there were 251 doctors, 38 dentists, 15 pharmacists, 278 midwives and 1,228 nursing personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio Television Brunei operates on medium- and shortwaves in Malay, English, Chinese and Nepali. Number of receivers (1997): radio 93,000 and television 77,000 (colour by PAL).

Press. In 1996 there was one local newspaper with a circulation of 21,000.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 964,000 foreign tourists. Receipts totalled US$37m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bulgarians take their name from an invading Asiatic horde (Bulgars) and their language from the Slav population, with whom they merged after 680. The Bulgarians carved out empires against a background of conflict with Byzantium and Serbia but after the Serb-Bulgarian defeat at Kosovo in 1389 Bulgaria finally succumbed to Ottoman encroachment. The Ottoman empire's decline, however, engendered rebellion which met with brutal repression, provoking great power intervention. By the Treaty of Berlin (1878), Macedonia and Thrace reverted to Turkey, Eastern Rumelia became semi-autonomous and Bulgaria proper became a principality under Turkish suzerainty.

After Austria annexed Bosnia in 1908, Bulgaria declared itself independent. To block Austrian expansion into the Balkans, Russia encouraged Greece, Serbia, Montenegro and Bulgaria to attack Turkey (First Balkan War, 1912), but in the dispute which followed over the territorial spoils Bulgaria failed to secure her claims against her formal allies by force (Second Balkan War, 1913). Territorial aspirations led Bulgaria to join the First World War on the German side.

Economic decline caused by the war produced social unrest. Ferdinand was forced to abdicate in favour of his son, Boris III, in Oct. 1918. Bedevilled by Macedonian terrorism and the effects of the world economic depression, parliamentary government was ended by a military coup in May 1934. In 1935 Boris established a royal dictatorship under which political parties were banned. Boris died in 1943 and was succeeded by a regency.

Increasingly drawn into the German economic orbit, Bulgaria joined the Nazis against Britain in March 1941. In Sept. 1944 the Soviet Union declared war and sent its troops across the frontiers. The Communist-dominated Fatherland Front formed a government and a referendum in 1946 abolished the monarchy. Demonstrations in Sofia in Nov. 1989, occasioned by the Helsinki Agreement ecological conference, broadened into demands for political reform. In Dec. the National Assembly approved 21 measures of constitutional reform, including the abolition of the Communist Party's sole right to govern. But attempts at economic reform led to strikes and unrest. In 1996 Petar Stoyanov was elected as an anti-Communist pro-reform President. In the election the following April the anti-Communist Union of Democratic Forces (UDF) coalition, led by Ivan Kostov and Alexander Bozhkov, swept back to power.

In 2002 Bulgaria was one of seven countries invited to join NATO in 2004. Its EU membership target date is 2007.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Bulgaria is 110,994 sq. km (42,855 sq. miles). It is bounded in the north by Romania, east by the Black Sea, south by Turkey and Greece, and west by Serbia and Montenegro and the Republic of Macedonia. The country is divided into nine regions.

Area and population in 2001 (census):

Region	Area (sq. km)	Population	Region	Area (sq. km)	Population
Bourgas	14,724	802,932	Rousse	10,843	702,292
Haskovo	13,824	816,874	Sofia (city)	1,311	1,173,811
Lovech	15,150	924,505	Sofia (region)	19,021	930,958
Montana	10,607	559,449	Varna	11,929	887,222
Plovdiv	13,585	1,175,628	Total	110,994	7,973,671

The capital, Sofia, has regional status.

The population of Bulgaria at the census of 1992 was 8,472,724 (females, 4,515,936); population density 76·3 per sq. km. Bulgaria's population has been declining since the mid-1980s. It has been falling at such a rate that by 2000 it was the same as it had been in the early 1960s. In 1999, 69·3% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7·19m.

Population of principal towns (2001 census): Sofia, 1,096,389; Plovdiv, 340,638; Varna, 314,539; Bourgas, 193,316; Rousse, 162,128; Stara Zagora, 143,989; Pleven, 122,149; Sliven, 100,695; Dobrich, 100,379.

Ethnic groups at the 1992 census: Bulgarians, 7,271,185; Turks, 800,052; Gypsies, 313,396.

Bulgarian is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: live births, 72,291; deaths, 111,786; marriages, 34,300; divorces (1998), 10,409. Rates per 1,000 population, 1999: birth, 8·8; death, 13·6; marriage, 4·2; divorce (1998), 1·3; infant mortality, 14·5 per 1,000 live births (1999). Abortions totalled 72,382 in 1999. In 1997 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Expectation of life in 1999 was 67·1 years among males and 74·8 years among females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –0·6%; fertility rate, 1999, 1·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The southern parts have a Mediterranean climate, with winters mild and moist and summers hot and dry, but further north the conditions become more Continental, with a larger range of temperature and greater amounts of rainfall in summer and early autumn. Sofia, Jan. 28°F (–2·2°C), July 69°F (20·6°C). Annual rainfall 25·4" (635 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted at Turnovo in July 1991. The President is directly elected for not more than two five-year terms. Candidates for the presidency must be at least 40 years old and have lived for the last five years in Bulgaria. American-style primary elections were introduced in 1996; voting is open to all the electorate.

The 240-member National Assembly is directly elected by proportional representation. The President nominates a candidate from the largest parliamentary party as Prime Minister.

National Anthem. 'Gorda stara planina' ('Proud and ancient mountains'); words and tune by T. Radoslavov.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held in two rounds on 11 and 18 Nov. 2001. Georgi Parvanov won the first round against five opponents with 36·4% of votes cast; turn-out was 39·2%. He also won the run-off round against the incumbent president Petar Stoyanov, with 54·1% of votes cast; turn-out was 54·4%.

At the elections of 17 June 2001 the National Movement Simeon II, the party of former King Simeon II, won 120 of the 240 seats with 42·7% of the vote; incumbent prime minister Ivan Kostov's United Democratic Forces coalition (consisting of the Union of Democratic Forces, the Bulgarian Agrarian People's Union-PU, the Democratic Party, the Bulgarian Social Democratic Party and the National Democratic Party) won 51 seats with 18·2%; the Coalition for Bulgaria (headed by the Bulgarian Socialist Party) won 48 seats with 17·1%; and the Movement for Rights and Freedoms (consisting of the Movement for Rights and Freedoms, the Liberal Union and Euroroma) won 21 seats with 7·5%. Turn-out was 66·7%.

DEFENCE

Conscription was reduced from 18 to 12 months in 1992.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$347m. (US$42 per capita), representing 2·8% of GDP. In 1985 the total had been US$2,425m., equivalent to US$288 per capita and representing 14·0% of GDP.

Army. There are three military districts based around Sofia, Plovdiv and Sliven. In 1999 the Army had a strength of 43,400, including 33,300 conscripts. In addition there are reserves of 303,000, 12,000 border guards and 18,000 railway and construction troops.

Navy. The Navy, all ex-Soviet or Soviet-built, includes one old diesel submarine and one small frigate. The Naval Aviation Wing operates nine armed helicopters. The naval headquarters is at Varna, and there are bases at Atiya and at Vidin on the Danube. Personnel in 1999 totalled 5,260 (2,000 conscripts).

Air Force. The Air Force had (1999) 18,300 personnel (14,500 conscripts). There are 227 combat aircraft, including MiG-21s, MiG-23s and Su-25s, and 43 attack helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bulgaria is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO Partnership for Peace, Council of Europe, OSCE, CEI, BSEC, Danube Commission, IOM, Antarctic Treaty and the International Organization of the Francophonie, and is an Associate Member of the EU and an Associate Partner of the WEU. At the European Union's Helsinki Summit in Dec. 1999 Bulgaria, along with five other countries, was invited to begin full negotiations for membership in Feb. 2000. Entry into the EU is unlikely before 2007.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 18·8% of GDP in 1998, industry 25·5% and services 55·7%.

Overview. A Centre for Mass Privatization was set up in 1994; by mid-1999 nearly 2,000 privatization deals had been completed. Privatized firms enjoy a five-year tax exemption.

Currency. The unit of currency is the lev (BGN) of 100 *stotinki.*In May 1996 the lev was devalued by 68%. A new lev was introduced on 5 July 1999, at 1 new lev = 1,000 old leva. Runaway inflation (123·0% in 1996 rising to 1,061% in 1997) forced the closure of 14 banks in 1996. However, by 2001 the rate was down to 7·5%. In June 1997 the new government introduced a currency board financial system which stabilized the lev and renewed economic growth. Under it, the lev is pegged to the euro at one euro = 1·95583 new leva. Foreign exchange reserves were estimated to be US$3,835m. in June 2002; gold reserves were 513,000 troy oz. Total money supply was 4,603m. leva in April 2002.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year.

Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. new leva):

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	5,269·5	6,530·1	8,913·1	9,678·6	11,087·1
Expenditure	7,722·9	6,731·4	8,689·2	9,901·3	11,356·1

VAT was first introduced in 1995. In 1996 there was an increase in VAT from 18% to 22%. The current account deficit was estimated to be US$–161m. in 1998.

Performance. Total GDP in 2001 was US$12·7bn. Real GDP growth was 5·8% in 2000 and 4·5% in 2001. In 1997–98 the country pulled itself back from economic and financial disaster. Its success in stabilizing the economy, in the wake of the collapse of the banking system and the lurch into hyperinflation in early 1997, has exceeded expectations.

Banking and Finance. The National Bank (Governor, Svetoslav Gavriiski) is the central bank and bank of issue. There is a commercial bank, Bulbank (founded 1964) and a State Savings Bank, the latter serving local enterprises as well as the public. In 1996 there were savings accounts totalling 81,606m. leva. There were 41 commercial banks in 1996.

There is a stock exchange in Sofia.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use. On 1 April 1916 the Gregorian calendar came into force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Bulgaria's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 5·7 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Bulgaria has little oil, gas or high-grade coal, and energy policy is based on the exploitation of its low-grade coal and hydro-electric resources. But the country is a major distribution centre for energy in the Black Sea region, a fact underlined by the 1997 deal with Russia which guarantees gas supplies to Bulgaria, while clearing the way for the construction of a transit gas pipeline between Russia and western Turkey. In 2001 there were six nuclear reactors in use, at the country's sole nuclear power plant in Kozloduy (dating from the 1970s). In Dec. 2002 it was announced that the two oldest reactors would close in 2003, with a further two to follow by 2006. The closure of the oldest reactor is a condition for the country's EU membership, proposed for 2007. To compensate, the government plans to complete a nuclear plant in Belene, started in the 1980s but suspended in 1990 because of lack of funds and environmental protests. Installed electrical capacity was 12m. kW in 1997. Output, 1998, 38·42bn. kWh (53% thermal, 40% nuclear and 7% hydro-electric). Consumption per capita: 3,166 kWh (1998).

Oil and Gas. Oil is extracted in the Balchik district on the Black Sea, in an area 100 km north of Varna, and at Dolni Dubnik near Pleven. There are refineries at Bourgas (annual capacity 5m. tonnes) and Dolni Dubnik (7m. tonnes). Crude oil production (1996) was 32,000 tonnes; natural gas (1996), 2 petajoules.

Minerals. Production in 1996: manganese ore, 13,100 tonnes; iron ore, 282,000 tonnes; lignite, 26·93m. tonnes. There are also deposits of gold, silver and copper.

Agriculture. Agricultural land covered 6,164,000 ha in 1996, of which 4,693,000 ha were arable. In 1996 sown area was 2,902,000 ha; there were 277,000 ha of meadows and 1,471,000 ha of commons and pastures. By 1999, 60% of Bulgarian households worked a plot of land, often on a part-time basis. In 2000 around 25% of the labour force was employed in agriculture.

Legislation of 1991 and 1992 provided for the redistribution of collectivized land to its former owners up to 30 ha. There were 2,073 agricultural collectives and firms in 1992 and 2,435 private farms in 1996.

Production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): wheat, 2,800; maize, 937; barley, 684; potatoes, 566; grapes, 450; tomatoes, 446; sunflower seeds, 438; melons and watermelons, 384; chillies and green peppers, 207; cucumbers and gherkins, 170; cabbages, 140. Bulgaria is a leading producer of attar of roses (rose oil). Bulgaria produced 139,000 tonnes of wine in 2000. Other products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: meat, 445; cow milk, 1,200; goat milk, 200; sheep milk, 106; eggs, 90.

Livestock (2000, in 1,000): cattle, 682; sheep, 2,549; pigs, 1,512; goats, 1,046; poultry, 14,000.

There were 25,000 tractors in use in 1998.

Forestry. Forest area, 1996, was 3,878,000 ha, or nearly 35% of the total land area (1·29m. ha coniferous, 2·58m. ha broad-leaved). 16,000 ha were afforested in 1997. Timber production in 1999 totalled 3·04m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 2000 total catch was 6,998 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing. As recently as 1988 the catch amounted to 106,000 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

In 1996 there were 342,261 registered economic units. Units by ownership: state, 9,682; municipal, 9,820; joint-stock companies, 3,588; co-operatives, 5,410; social organizations, 6,306; associations, 2,483; foreign ventures, 9,005; resident, 307,448. In 1996 the private sector accounted for 45·9% of production.

Production, 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): crude steel, 2,628; rolled steel (1996), 1,898; cement, 1,654; pig iron, 1,643; artificial fertilizers (1996), 559; sulphuric acid, 556; paper (1998), 150; cotton, 98m. sq. metres; woven wool, 17m. sq. metres; cigarettes, 43·3bn. (units); 6,000 TV sets; and 21,000 refrigerators.

Labour. In Nov. 1996, 646,600 employees worked in the private sector. There is a 42½-hour five-day working week. Retirement is at 55 for women and 60 for men, or 52 and 57 after 25 years in the last employment. The average wage (excluding peasantry) was 13,269 leva per month in 1996; minimum wage was 1,200 leva per month. Population of working age (males 16–59; females 16–54), 1996, 4,746,790 (47·6% females). At the end of 1996 the economically active population was 3,576,200 (1,681,000 females), of whom 3,085,400 were employed. Unemployment was 17·9% in 2000.

Trade Unions. An independent white-collar trade union movement, Podkrepa, was formed in 1989. It claimed 100,000 members in July 1990. The former official Central Council of Trade Unions reconstituted itself in 1990 as the Confederation of Independent Trade Unions.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Legislation in force as of Feb. 1992 abolished restrictions imposed in 1990 on the repatriation of profits and allows foreign nationals to own and set up companies in Bulgaria. Western share participation in joint ventures may exceed 50%. Total foreign debt was US$10,026m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports (f.o.b.) for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports	4,702·6	4,559·3	4,574·2	5,087·4	5,987·6
Exports	4,890·2	4,939·6	4,193·5	4,006·4	4,812·2

Leading export commodities are non-precious metals and articles, textile materials and articles, mineral products and chemical industry produce. Leading import commodities are mineral products, machinery and apparatus, electrical equipment and parts, textile materials and articles, and transportation facilities.

Main export markets in 1997: Italy, 12·0%; Turkey, 9·2%; Germany, 8·9%; Greece, 8·0%; Russia, 7·8%. Main import suppliers: Russia, 24·9%; Germany, 10·6%; Italy, 6·6%; Greece, 3·8%; Ukraine, 3·4%. Trade with the EU has been steadily growing, with exports to the EU increasing from 39% of all exports in 1996 to 56% in 2000, and imports from the EU rising from 35% of the total in 1996 to 51% in 2000.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 36,759 km of roads, including 319 km of motorways and 3,080 km of main roads. 817m. passengers and 40·67m. tonnes of freight were carried in 1996. In 1998 there were 1,809,350 passenger cars (219·8 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 515,70 motorcycles or mopeds. There were 6,905 road accidents in 1998 with 1,003 fatalities.

Rail. In 1998 there were 4,290 km of 1,435 mm gauge railway (2,655 km electrified). Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 4·74bn. and freight tonne-km to 6·15bn.

There is a tramway in Sofia.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Sofia (Vrazhdebna), which handled 1,128,000 passengers (1,049,000 on international flights) and 9,400 tonnes of freight in 2000. The state-owned Balkan is the national carrier. In 1999 it flew 18·5m. km, carrying 695,400 passengers (627,400 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant fleet totalled 1,091,000 GRT, including oil tankers 145,000 GRT. Bourgas is a fishing and oil-port. Varna is the other important port. There were 74,000 km of inland waterways in 1996. 11,000 passengers and 1m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Telecommunications. The Bulgarian Telecommunications Company is in the process of being privatized. Only about 15% of local exchanges had been digitalized by early 1999. In 2000 there were 2,881,800 telephone main lines (350·4 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 361,000 PCs in use (43·9 per 1,000 persons). Bulgaria had approximately 585,000 Internet users in April 2001. There were 2·5m. mobile phone subscribers in 2002 and 15,000 fax machines in 1995.

Postal Services. In 1996 there were 3,502 post and telecommunications offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A law of Nov. 1982 provides for the election (and recall) of all judges by the National Assembly. There are a Supreme Court, 28 provincial courts (including Sofia) and regional courts. Jurors are elected at the local government elections. The Prosecutor General and judges are elected by the Supreme Judicial Council established in 1992.

The population in penal institutions in July 1998 was 11,814 (140 per 100,000 of national population). The maximum term of imprisonment is 20 years. The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1998.

Religion. 'The traditional church of the Bulgarian people' (as it is officially described) is that of the Eastern Orthodox Church. It was disestablished under the 1947 Constitution. In 1953 the Bulgarian Patriarchate was revived. The Patriarch is Maksim (enthroned 1971). The seat of the Patriarch is at Sofia. There are 11 dioceses (each under a Metropolitan), 10 bishops, 2,600 parishes, 1,700 priests, 400 monks and nuns, 3,700 churches and chapels, one seminary and one theological college.

Anti-Maksim schismatics set up a rival synod in 1992 and elected Pimen as Patriarch in 1996.

In 1992 there were some 70,000 Roman Catholics with 53 priests, in three bishoprics. At the 1992 census, 7,349,544 Christians were recorded and 1,110,295 Muslims (Pomaks). There is a Chief Mufti elected by regional muftis.

Education. Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 98·3% (male, 98·9%; female, 97·7%). Education is free, and compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 16.

In 1996 there were 3,713 kindergartens with 247,000 children and 23,353 teachers; 3,286 primary schools with 71,431 teachers and 944,733 pupils; 129 special needs schools with 2,336 teachers and 13,849 pupils; 7 vocational technical schools with 125 teachers and 3,384 pupils; 203 secondary vocational technical schools with 5,113 teachers and 77,299 pupils; 337 technical colleges and schools of art with 13,943 teachers and 125,887 students; 46 post-secondary institutions with 3,018 teachers and 24,981 students; 42 institutes of higher education with 23,285 teachers and 235,701 students. There are four state universities, an American university, and universities of mining and geology, architecture, civil engineering and geodesy. The Academy of Sciences was founded in 1869.

There were also 62 private schools with 5,874 pupils in 1996–97.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 3·1% of GNP and 7·0% of total government spending.

Health. All medical services are free. Private medical services were authorized in Jan. 1991. In 1996 there were 289 hospitals and clinics with 86,160 beds. There were 29,529 doctors, 5,467 dentists, 1,736 pharmacists, 6,576 midwives, 6,910 medical auxiliaries and 51,269 nurses. In 2000 health spending represented 4·3% of GDP.

Welfare. Retirement and disability pensions and temporary sick pay are calculated as a percentage of previous wages (respectively 55–80%, 35–100%, 69–90%) and according to the nature of the employment. Free medical treatment is available to all, but private practice also exists. Medicines are free to people with chronic conditions or on low incomes.

In 1996 there were 2,381,128 recipients of pensions; disbursements were 121,191m. leva. The average annual pension was 49,681 leva.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is under the aegis of the state-controlled Bulgarian National Radio and Bulgarian Television. There are four national and six regional radio programmes. A service for tourists is broadcast from Varna. There are two TV programmes; Bulgaria also receives transmissions from the French satellite channel TV5. There are two independent TV channels—Nova TV (New Television) and 7 Dni (7 Days). Colour programmes are by the SECAM V system. Radio receivers in 1997, 4·5m.; televisions, 3·3m.

Cinema. There were 219 cinemas in 1996 (attendance, 3·69m.). In 1995 gross box office receipts came to 219m. leva; 11 full-length films were made.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly known as Upper Volta, the country's name was changed in 1984 to Burkina Faso, meaning 'the land of honest men'. The area it covers was settled by farming communities until their invasion by the Mossi people in the 11th century, who successfully resisted Islamic crusades and attacks by neighbouring empires for seven centuries until conquered by the French between 1895 and 1903.

France made Upper Volta a separate colony in 1919, only to abolish it as such in 1932, dividing its territory between the Ivory Coast (now Côte d'Ivoire), French Sudan (now Mali) and Niger. In 1947 the territory of Upper Volta was reconstituted. Upper Volta remained a desperately poor country often hit by drought, particularly in 1972–74 and again in 1982–84. The military has held power for most of the period after independence. In Aug. 1983 a coup brought to power Capt. Thomas Sankara, a leading radical, who headed a left-wing regime. Sankara was overthrown and killed in a coup on 15 Oct. 1987, the fifth since 1960, led by his friend Capt. Blaise Compaoré.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Burkina Faso is bounded in the north and west by Mali, east by Niger and south by Benin, Togo, Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire. Area: 274,122 sq. km; 1996 census population, 10,312,609 (82·1% rural in 1999), giving a density of 37·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 15·76m.

The largest cities are Ouagadougou, the capital (1999 estimate, 1,026,000), Bobo-Dioulasso (300,000 in 1993), Koudougou (105,000 in 1993), Ouahigouya (38,604 in 1985), Banfora (35,204 in 1985 and Kaya (25,799 in 1985).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From 1890 Burundi was part of German East Africa and from 1919 part of Ruanda-Urundi administered by Belgium as a League of Nations mandate. Internal self-government was granted on 1 Jan. 1962, followed by independence on 1 July 1962. In April 1972 fighting broke out between rebels from both Burundi and neighbouring countries and the ruling Tutsi, apparently with the intention of destroying the Tutsi hegemony. Up to 120,000 died. On 1 Nov. 1976 President Micombero was deposed by the Army, as was President Bagaza on 3 Sept. 1987. Pierre Buyoya assumed the presidency on 1 Oct. 1987.

On 1 June 1993 President Buyoya was defeated in elections by Melchior Ndadaye, who thus became the country's first elected president and the first Hutu president, but on 21 Oct. President Ndadaye and six ministers were killed in an attempted military coup. A wave of Tutsi-Hutu massacres broke out, costing thousands of lives. On 6 April 1994 the new president, Cyprien Ntaryamira, was also killed, possibly assassinated, together with the President of Rwanda.

On 25 July 1996 the army seized power, installing Maj. Pierre Buyoya, a Tutsi, as president for the second time. In June 1998 Maj. Buyoya drew up a settlement for a power-sharing transitional government and the replacement of the prime minister by two vice-presidents, one Hutu and one Tutsi. Extremists on both sides denounced the agreement. An attempted coup in April 2001 failed. In July 2001 it was agreed that a three-year transitional government should be installed with Pierre Buyoya as president and Domitien Ndayizeye, a Hutu, as vice-president for the first 18 months, after which the roles would be reversed. A further attempted coup shortly after the announcement of the agreement also failed, although fighting continued. A ceasefire was eventually signed in Dec. 2002 by the government and the Forces for the Defence of Democracy, the country's principal rebel movement. More than 200,000 people have been killed in civil conflict since 1993.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Burundi is bounded in the north by Rwanda, east and south by Tanzania and west by the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and has an area of 27,834 sq. km (10,759 sq. miles). The population at the 1990 census was 5,292,793; estimate (1996) 5,356,000; population density, 192·4 per sq. km. Only 8·7% of the population was urban in 1998 (91·3% rural).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 8·66m.

There are 15 regions, all named after their chief towns. Area and population:

Region	Area (in sq. km.)	Population (1990 census)
Bubanza	1,093	222,953
Bujumbura	1,334	608,931
Bururi	2,515	385,490
Cankuzo	1,940	142,707
Cibitoke	1,639	279,843
Karuzi	1,459	287,905
Kayanza	1,229	443,116
Kirundo	1,711	401,103
Kitega	1,989	596,174
Makamba	1,972	223,799
Muhinga	1,825	373,382
Muramuya	1,530	441,653
Ngozi	1,468	482,246
Rutana	1,898	195,834
Ruyigi	2,365	238,567

The capital, Bujumbura, had an estimated population of 321,000 in 1999. The second largest town, Gitega, had a population in 1990 of 102,000.

There are three ethnic groups—Hutu (Bantu, forming over 83% of the total); Tutsi (Nilotic, less than 15%); Twa (pygmoids, less than 1%). The local language is Kirundi. French is also an official language. Kiswahili is spoken in the commercial centres.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 268,000; deaths, 111,000. Rates, 1995 (per 1,000 population): birth, 44·2; death, 18·3. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 39·6 years for men and 41·5 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 106 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·1%; fertility rate, 1999, 6·1 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, modified by altitude. The eastern plateau is generally cool, the easternmost savanna several degrees hotter. The wet seasons are from March to May and Sept. to Dec. Bujumbura, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 33" (825 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1981 provided for a one-party state. In Jan. 1991 the government of President Buyoya, leader of the sole party, the Party of Unity and National Progress (Uprona), proposed a new constitution which was approved by a referendum in March 1992 (with 89% of votes cast in favour), legalizing parties not based on ethnic group, region or religion and providing for presidential elections by direct universal suffrage.

There used to be a National Assembly with 81 members elected from 16 constituencies by proportional representation. There was a 5% threshold. On 16 July 1998 the National Assembly was reformed into a National Transition Assembly, whereby 40 additional members were appointed from a mix of political parties and civil society. In July 2001 agreement was reached on President Pierre Buyoya's presidency for the first 18 months of a three-year transition period of multi-ethnic broad-based government. In accordance with the terms of the Arusha peace accord, initially he was being assisted by Hutu Vice-President Domitien Ndayizeye, after which the roles were to be reversed for the second 18 months. The transitional government was established on 1 Nov. 2001. On 30 April 2003 Domitien Ndayizeye became president but Alphonse Marie Kadege, like Pierre Buyoya a Tutsi from the Party of Unity and National Progress, became the vice-president.

National Anthem. 'Uburundi Bwacu' ('Dear Burundi'); words by a committee, tune by M. Barengayabo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections of 1 June 1993 the electorate was 2·36m.; turn-out was 97·18%. Melchior Ndadaye was elected against former President Buyoya and one other opponent with 64·79% of votes cast, and was sworn in on 10 July 1993.

Following Ndadaye's assassination Cyprien Ntaryamira was elected President by the National Assembly on 13 Jan. 1994 to serve out President Ndadaye's five-year term of office. After Ntaryamira's death and possible assassination, Sylvestre Ntibantunganya (b. 1956; Frodebu) was elected President by the National Assembly on 5 Sept. 1994 against five opponents.

At the parliamentary elections of 29 June 1993, 740 candidates stood representing 6 parties. The Front for Democracy in Burundi (Frodebu) gained 65 seats with 71·4% of votes cast, and Uprona, 16 with 21·4%. A number of Frodebu MPs elected in June 1993 have been killed in the meantime. 40 additional members were elected on 16 July 1998.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

On 30 April 2003 Domitien Ndayizeye (b. 1953; Frodebu) was installed as President in accordance with the agreement reached in July 2001 on a three-year transition period of multi-ethnic broad-based government. The Vice-President is Alphonse Marie Kadege (Uprona).

In May 2003 the transitional government also comprised:

Minister of Foreign Affairs and Co-operation: Thérence Sinunguruza. Interior and National Security: Salvator Nthabose. Justice: Fulgence Dwima Bakana. National Defence: Maj.-Gen. Vincent Niyungeko. Planning, Development and Reconstruction: Séraphine Wakana. Local Development: Casimir Ngendanganya. Reintegration: Françoise Ngendahayo. Peace Mobilization and National Reconciliation: Luc Rukingama. Country Planning, Environment and Tourism: Barnabé Muteragiranwa. Agriculture and Livestock: Pierre Ndikumagenge. Handicrafts, Professional Training and Adult Literacy: Godefroy Hakizimana. Employment and Social Security: Dismas Nditabiriye. Public Service: Cyrille Hicintuka. Finance: Athanase Gahungu. Governance and Privatization: Didace Kiganahe. Commerce and Industry: Charles Karikurubu. National Education: Prosper Mpawenayo. Welfare and Promotion of Women: Marie Goreth Nduwimana. Youth, Sports and Culture: Rodolphe Baranyizigiye. Health: Jean Kamana. Communication and Government Spokesperson: Albert Mbonerane. Minister in the Presidency responsible for the fight against AIDS: Génévière Sindabizera. Public Works and Equipment: Gaspard Kobako. Transport and Telecommunications: Séverin Ndikumugongo. Energy and Mining: André Nkundikije. Institutional Reforms, Human Rights, and Parliamentary Relations: Alphonse Barancira.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 54·1% of GDP in 1998, services 29·5% and industry 16·4%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Burundi franc (BIF) of 100 centimes. The inflation rate in 2001 was 9·3%. In June 2002 gold reserves were 1,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves US$26m. Total money supply was 481,193m. Burundi francs in April 2002.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. Burundi francs):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	48,397	46,401	46,253	66,333	72,047
Expenditure	76,403	75,405	80,800	98,061	105,181

Performance. In 2000 real GDP growth was negative, at –0·1%, but there was then growth of 2·4% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$0·7bn.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of the Republic of Burundi is the central bank and bank of issue. There are three commercial banks; a state development bank, a savings bank and a property investment bank.

Weights and Measures. The metric system operates.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 55,000 kW in 1991. Production was 127m. kWh in 1998. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 24 kWh.

Minerals. Gold is mined on a small scale. Deposits of nickel (280m. tonnes) and vanadium remain to be exploited. There are proven reserves of phosphates of 17·6m. tonnes.

Agriculture. The main economic activity is agriculture, which contributed 53% of GDP in 1997. In 1998, 0·77m. ha were arable and 0·33m. ha permanent crops. Beans, cassava, maize, sweet potatoes, groundnuts, peas, sorghum and bananas are grown according to the climate and the region.

The main cash crop is coffee, of which about 95% is arabica. It accounts for 90% of exports, and taxes and levies on coffee constitute a major source of revenue. A coffee board (OCIBU) manages the grading and export of the crop. Production (2000) 19,000 tonnes. The main agricultural crops (2000 production, in 1,000 tonnes) are bananas (1,514), sweet potatoes (687), cassava (657), dry beans (187), sugarcane (174), maize (118), taro (81), sorghum (61), rice (52), peas (30) and potatoes (24).

Livestock (2000): 550,000 goats, 390,000 cattle, 120,000 sheep, 50,000 pigs and 4m. chickens.

Forestry. Forests covered 317,000 ha, or 12·3% of the total land area, in 1995 (324,000 ha and 12·6% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 1·8m. cu. metres, the majority of it for fuel.

Fisheries. There is a small commercial fishing industry on Lake Tanganyika. In 2000 the estimated total catch was 10,000 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

In 1994 manufacturing contributed 20% of GDP. Textile and leather industries constituted 20% of production, foodstuffs 13% and agricultural industries 9%. In 1998 production of sugar totalled 24,000 tonnes. Other major products (1994 figures) are beer (138·3m. litres), cigarettes (584,580,000 units) and blankets (248,438 units).

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 3,337,000 (51% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

With Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Burundi forms part of the Economic Community of the Great Lakes. Foreign debt was US$1,100m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	100·0	96·1	123·5	97·3	107·9
Exports f.o.b.	40·4	87·5	64·0	55·0	49·1

Main exports are coffee, manufactures and tea. Main export markets, 1999: Belgium, 31%; Switzerland, 18%; UK, 14%. Main import suppliers, 1999: Belgium, 15%; Saudi Arabia, 13%; Italy, 12%; Zambia, 5%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 14,480 km of roads of which approximately 1,030 km were paved. An estimated 37,240 vehicles were in use in 1996, including 19,200 passenger cars (2·8 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Civil Aviation. There are regular services to Johannesburg and Sharjah. In 1998 scheduled airline traffic of Burundi-based carriers flew 800,000 km, carrying 12,000 passengers (all on international flights). Bujumbura International airport handled 52,257 passengers and 3,898 tonnes of freight in 2000.

Shipping. There are lake services from Bujumbura to Kigoma (Tanzania) and Kalémie (Democratic Republic of the Congo). The main route for exports and imports is via Kigoma, and thence by rail to Dar es Salaam.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 20,000 main telephone lines (3·0 per 1,000 inhabitants). In 1995 there were 4,000 fax machines, and in 1999, 800 mobile phone subscribers. The number of Internet users in July 2000 was 2,000.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cambodia was made a French protectorate in 1863. A nationalist movement began in the 1930s, and anti-French feeling strengthened in 1940–41 when the French submitted to Japanese demands for bases in Cambodia. Anti-French guerrillas, active from 1945, gave the impetus to a communist-led revolution. A fragile peace was established before Cambodia gained independence in 1953 but in 1967 the Khmer Rouge took up arms to support peasants against a rice tax. Their aim was to establish a communist rice-growing dynasty, a combination of Maoism and ancient xenophobic nationalism. From 1970 hostilities extended throughout most of the country involving US and North Vietnamese forces. During 1973 direct US and North Vietnamese participation came to an end, leaving a civil war which continued with large-scale fighting between the Khmer Republic, supported by US arms, and the United National Cambodian Front including ‘Khmer Rouge’ communists, supported by North Vietnam and China. After unsuccessful attempts to capture Phnom Penh in 1973 and 1974, the Khmer Rouge defeated the American backed leader Lon Nol in April 1975, when the remnants of the republican forces surrendered the city.

From 1975 the Khmer Rouge instituted a harsh and highly centralized regime. All cities and towns were forcibly evacuated and the citizens set to work in the fields. In 1978, in response to repeated border attacks, Vietnam invaded Cambodia. On 7 Jan. 1979 Phnom Penh was captured by the Vietnamese, and the Prime Minister, Pol Pot, fled. Over 2m. Cambodian lives were lost from 1975 to 1979. On 23 Oct. 1991 the warring factions and 19 countries signed an agreement in Paris instituting a ceasefire in Cambodia to be monitored by UN troops. Following the election of a constituent assembly in May 1993, a new constitution was promulgated on 23 Sept. 1993 restoring parliamentary monarchy. The Khmer Rouge continued hostilities, refusing to take part in the 1993 elections. By 1996 the Khmer Rouge had split into two warring factions. The leader of one, Ieng Sary, who had been sentenced to death in his absence for genocide, was pardoned by the King in Sept. 1996. In early Nov. 1996 Ieng Sary and some 4,000 of his forces threw in their lot with government forces.

In July 1997 Hun Sen, the second prime minister, engineered a coup which led to the exiling of first prime minister, Prince Norodom Ranariddh. However, on 30 March 1998 he returned as guest of a Japanese-brokered plan to ensure ‘fair and free’ elections. These took place on 26 July 1998 against a background of violence and general intimidation. Hun Sen’s Cambodian People’s Party declared victory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cambodia is bounded in the north by Laos and Thailand, west by Thailand, east by Vietnam and south by the Gulf of Thailand. It has an area of about 181,035 sq. km (69,898 sq. miles).

Population, 11,437,656 (1998 census), of whom 5,926,248 were females. In 1994, 88·6% of the population were Khmer, 5·5% Vietnamese and 3·1% Chinese. In 1999, 77·8% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 16·63m.

The capital, Phnom Penh, had an estimated population of 938,000 in 1999. Other cities are Kompong Cham and Battambang. Ethnic composition, 1994: Khmer, 89%; Vietnamese, 5%; Chinese, 3%; Cham, 2%; Lao-Thai, 1%.

Khmer is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 estimated births, 429,000; deaths, 156,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 43·5; deaths, 15·8. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 86. Expectation of life in 1999 was 54·1 years for males and 58·6 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·8%. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·5 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with high temperatures all the year. Phnom Penh, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,308 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A parliamentary monarchy was re-established by the 1993 constitution. Prince Norodom Sihanouk (b. 31 Oct. 1922) regained the throne (which had been abolished in 1955) as King on 23 Sept. 1993. He had previously reigned from 1941 to 1955. The protocol of succession is to be determined by a Throne Council consisting of the Speaker and two Deputy Speakers, the First and Second Prime Ministers and two Buddhist patriarchs. In Jan. 1996 King Sihanouk's wife, Queen Monineath, was dubbed 'First Lady'.

There is a 122-member constituent assembly, which on 14 June 1993 elected Prince Sihanouk head of state. On 21 Sept. it adopted a constitution (promulgated on 23 Sept.) by 113 votes to five with two abstentions making him monarch of a parliamentary democracy. The constitution converted the constituent assembly into a legislature sitting for a five-year term.

National Anthem. 'Nokoreach' ('Royal state'); words by Chuon Nat, tune adapted from a Cambodian folk song.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 27 July 1998. Under the UN-brokered constitution, a party had to win two-thirds of seats in the 122-member Parliament in order to form a government. With a 90% turn-out, the Cambodian People's Party (KPK) won 64 seats with 41·4% of the vote, the royalist FUNCINPEC party of Prince Norodom Ranariddh won 43 seats with 31·7%, and the party of the government critic Sam Rainsy won 15 seats with 14·1%. Opposition parties claimed a wide range of irregularities and there were re-counts in a number of districts.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled to take place on 27 July 2003.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

Prime Minister: Hun Sen; b. 1951 (KPK; sworn in on 30 Nov. 1998).

DEFENCE

The King is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$192m. (US$17 per capita), representing 6·1% of GDP.

Army. Strength (1999) 99,000. There are also provincial forces numbering some 45,000 (although perhaps only 19,000 are combat capable) and paramilitary local forces organized at village level.

Navy. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled about 3,000 including a naval infantry of 1,500.

Air Force. Aviation operations were resumed in 1988 under the aegis of the Army. Personnel (1999), 2,000. Of the 24 combat aircraft operated only 8 MiG-21s are serviceable.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cambodia is a member of the UN, Asian Development Bank, ASEAN, Colombo Plan, Mekong Group, IOM, and the International Organization of the Francophonie.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 50·6% of GDP in 1998, industry 14·8% and services 34·6%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the riel (KHR) of 100 sen. Inflation was 14·7% in 1998. Foreign exchange reserves were US$718m. in June 2002. Total money supply in May 2002 was 713,831m. riels. Inflation in 2001 was 0·2%.

Budget. In 1996 revenues were 797·5bn. riels and expenditure 1,395·1bn. riels.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 7·7% in 2000 and 6·3% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$3·4bn.

Banking and Finance. The banking system consists of the National Bank of Cambodia, which is the bank of issue; the Central Bank and 28 commercial banks (2 state-owned, 17 privately-owned, 6 foreign and 3 joint venture banks). The National Bank of Cambodia is studying the possibility of setting up a stock market and a capital market for stimulating the flow of capital from foreign countries.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Cambodia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 100,000 kW in 1995. Production (1998) was 210m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 20 kWh. A long-term plan for hydro-electricity has been issued by the government.

Water. In 1995, 65% of the urban and 26% of the rural population had access to safe water.

Minerals. There are phosphates and high-grade iron-ore deposits. Some small-scale gold panning and gem (mainly zircon) mining is carried out.

Agriculture. The majority of the population is engaged in agriculture, fishing or forestry. In 1998 there were 3·7m. ha of arable land and 107,000 ha of permanent crops. Before the spread of war, the high productivity provided for a low but well-fed standard of living for the peasant farmers, the majority of whom owned the land they worked before agriculture was collectivized. A relatively small proportion of the food production entered the cash economy. The war and unwise pricing policies led to a disastrous reduction in production, so much so that the country became a net importer of rice. Private ownership of land was restored by the 1989 Constitution.

A crop of 3·76m. tonnes of rice was produced in 2000. Production of other crops, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): bananas, 147; sugarcane, 140; maize, 95; cassava, 68; oranges, 63; coconuts, 56.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 3·0m.; pigs, 2·60m.; buffaloes, 710,000; poultry, 13m.

Forestry. Some 9·8m. ha, or 55·7% of the land area, were covered by forests in 1995, nearly half of which is reserved by the government to be awarded to concessionaires. Such areas are not at present worked to any extent. The remainder is available for exploitation by the local residents, and as a result some areas are over-exploited and conservation is not practised. Timber exports have been banned since Dec. 1996. In 1990 the area under forests was 10·65m. ha. There are substantial reserves of pitch pine. Rubber plantations are a valuable asset with production at around 40,000 tonnes per year. There are plans to expand the area under rubber cultivation from 50,000 ha to 800,000 ha. Timber production in 1999 was 8·16m. cu. metres. In 1997 forestry represented 43% of foreign trade.

Fisheries. 1999 catch, 269,100 tonnes (231,000 tonnes from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

Some development of industry had taken place before the spread of open warfare in 1970, but little was in operation by the 1990s except for rubber processing, seafood processing, jute sack making and cigarette manufacture. In the private sector small family concerns produce a wide range of goods. Apart from rice mills, about 70 factories were functioning in 1994. Light industry is generally better developed than heavy industry.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 5,322,000. Females constituted 52% of the labour force in 1999—the highest proportion of women in the workforce anywhere in the world. More than 60% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment has been encouraged since 1989. Legislation of 1994 exempts profits from taxation for eight years, removes duties from various raw and semi-finished materials and offers tax incentives to investors in tourism, energy, the infrastructure and labour-intensive industries. External debt was US$2,357m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	1,071·8	1,064·0	1,073·2	1,211·5	1,525·1
Exports f.o.b.	643·6	736·0	899·9	979·9	1,327·1

The main exports are timber, rubber, soybeans and sesame. Main imports include cigarettes, construction materials, petroleum products, machinery and motor vehicles. Principal export destinations, 1998: USA (37%), Singapore (17%), Thailand (10%) and Germany (9%). Major import sources, 1998: Thailand (16%), Hong Kong (12%), Singapore (9%) and Mainland China (9%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 35,769 km of roads in 1997, of which 2,700 km were paved. 52,919 passenger cars were in use in 1997 (up from 20,085 in 1992) and 456,800 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 172 fatalities in road accidents in 1997.

Rail. Main lines link Phnom Penh with Sisophon near the Thai border and the port of Kompong Som (total 603 km, metre gauge). After a long period of disruption due to political unrest, limited services were restored on both lines in 1992. Passengers carried, 1994, 500,000; freight carried, 1994, 100,000 tonnes.

Civil Aviation. Pochentong airport is 8 km from Phnom Penh and handled 861,000 passengers (641,000 on international flights) in 2000. Royal Air Cambodge was reconstituted in Jan. 1995 with 60% of the equity government-owned. There are regular domestic services, and in 1998 there were international flights to Bangkok, Chongqing, Guangzhou, Ho Chi Minh City, Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, Taipei and Vientiane.

Shipping. There is an ocean port at Kompong Som; the port of Phnom Penh can be reached by the Mekong (through Vietnam) by ships of between 3,000 and 4,000 tonnes. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 60,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There are telephone exchanges in all the main towns. Number of telephone main lines in 2000 totalled 30,900 (2·4 per 1,000 persons). In 1997 mobile phone subscribers numbered 33,500 and there were 3,000 fax machines. In 1999, 76·3% of all telephone subscribers were mobile phone subscribers—the highest ratio of mobile to fixed-line subscribers of any country in the world. In 2000, 15,000 PCs were in use (1·1 for every 1,000 persons). In Dec. 2000 there were 6,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 30 post offices, or one for every 328,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 2,909. In March 2003 the government announced plans to establish a special court in partnership with the UN to try leaders of the former Khmer Rouge regime.

Religion. The Constitution of 1989 reinstated Buddhism as the state religion; it had 8·2m. adherents in 1994. About 2,800 monasteries were active in 1994. There are small Roman Catholic and Muslim minorities.

Education. In 1997–98 there were 2,011,772 pupils and 43,282 teachers in 5,026 primary schools, and in general secondary education 19,135 teachers for 312,934 pupils. In 1994–95 there were 16,350 students in vocational establishments. There is a university (with 8,400 students and 350 academic staff in 1995–96) and a fine arts university. Adult literacy in 1999 was 68·9% (male, 80·1%; female, 57·7%).

Health. In 1993 there were 5,642 doctors, 9,950 nurses and 3,235 midwives.

Cambodia has made great progress in the reduction of undernourishment in the past 20 years. Between 1980 and 1996 the proportion of undernourished people declined from 62% of the population to 33%—the biggest reduction outside of Africa.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is provided by the state-owned Voice of the People of Cambodia and Cambodian Television (colour by PAL). In 1997 there were an estimated 94,000 TV and 1·34m. radio sets.

Press. There are 21 newspapers, two of which are in English.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 368,000 foreign visitors, up from 25,000 in 1991. Tourist numbers in the 1990s increased at a faster rate in Cambodia than in any other country. Receipts in 1999 totalled US$190m.

CAMEROON

République du Cameroun—
Republic of Cameroon

Capital: Yaoundé
Population estimate, 2000: 14·88m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,703
HDI/world rank: 0·512/135

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The name Cameroon derives from camaráes (prawns), introduced by Portuguese navigators. Called Kamerun in German and Cameroun in French, the estuary was later called the Cameroons River by British navigators. The Duala people living there were important traders, selling slaves and later palm oil to Europeans. On 12 July 1884 they signed a treaty establishing German rule over Kamerun. Originally covering the Duala's territory on the Wouri, this German colony later expanded to cover a large area inland, home to a number of African peoples. In the First World War Allied forces occupied the territory which was partitioned between France and Britain. British Cameroons consisted of British Southern Cameroons and British Northern Cameroons, adjoining Nigeria. France's mandated territory of Cameroun occupied most of the former German colony. The Dualas continued to take the lead in anti-colonial protest.

In 1946 the French and British territories became Trust Territories of the UN. In French Cameroun the Union des Populations du Cameroun (UPC), founded in 1948, became the major nationalist party, calling for independence and 'reunification' with British Cameroons. In Dec. 1956, when elections were held prior to self-government, the UPC began a guerrilla war against the French and the new Cameroonian government. On 1 Jan. 1960 French Cameroun gained independence. The UPC guerrillas were largely defeated by 1963. On 11 Feb. 1961 British Southern Cameroons voted in a referendum to join ex-French Cameroun, while British Northern Cameroons chose to join Nigeria. The country's name was changed to the Republic of Cameroon in 1984.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cameroon is bounded in the west by the Gulf of Guinea, northwest by Nigeria, east by Chad and the Central African Republic, and south by the Republic of the Congo, Gabon and Equatorial Guinea. The total area is 475,440 sq. km. On 29 March 1994 Cameroon asked the International Court of Justice to confirm its sovereignty over the oil-rich Bakassi Peninsula, occupied by Nigerian troops. The dispute continued for eight years, with Equatorial Guinea also subsequently becoming involved. In Oct. 2002 the International Court of Justice rejected Nigeria's claims and awarded the peninsula to Cameroon. All parties agreed to accept the Court's judgment. Population (1987 census) 10,494,000. Estimate (July 1996) 14,261,600 (7,150,400 females); density, 30·0 per sq. km. In 1999, 52% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 18·35m.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the 10 provinces were:

Province	Sq. km	Census 1987	Chief town	Estimate 1981
Adamaoua	63,691	495,185	Ngaoundéré	47,508
Centre	68,926	1,651,600	Yaoundé	1,120,000[1]
Est	109,011	517,198	Bertoua	18,254
Extrême-Nord	34,246	1,855,695	Maroua	124,000[2]
Littoral	20,239	1,354,833	Douala	1,320,000[3]

Sud	47,110	373,798	Ebolowa	22,222
Sud-Ouest	24,471	838,042	Buéa	29,953[2]

[1]1999. [2]1991. [3]1995.

The population is composed of Sudanic-speaking people in the north (Fulani, Sao and others) and Bantu-speaking groups, mainly Bamileke, Beti, Bulu, Tikar, Bassa and Duala, in the rest of the country. The official languages are French and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 526,000 (rate of 39·9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 164,000 (rate of 12·4 per 1,000 population). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·9%. Infant mortality, 1999, 95 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy in 1999: males, 49·1 years; females, 50·8. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, with high temperatures and plentiful rain, especially from March to June and Sept. to Nov. Further inland, rain occurs at all seasons. Yaoundé, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,555 mm). Douala, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 160" (4,026 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1972 Constitution, subsequently amended, provides for a President as head of state and government. The President is directly elected for a five-year term, and there is a Council of Ministers whose members must not be members of parliament.

The National Assembly, elected by universal adult suffrage for five years, consists of 180 representatives. After 1966 the sole legal party was the Cameroon People's Democratic Movement (RDPC), but in Dec. 1990 the National Assembly legalized opposition parties.

National Anthem. 'O Cameroon, Thou Cradle of our Fathers'/'O Cameroun, Berceau de nos Ancêtres'; words by R. Afame, tune by R. Afame, S. Bamba and M. Nko'o.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 12 Oct. 1997. The electorate in 1992 was 4,195,687. Paul Biya was elected against two opponents by 92·6% of votes cast.

The most recent National Assembly elections were held on 30 June 2002. The conservative Rassemblement Démocratique du Peuple Camerounais (RDPC) won 133 seats, the Social-Democratic Front (SDF) 21, the Union Démocratique du Cameroun (UDC) 5, the Union des Populations du Cameroun (UPC) 3, and others won 18 seats.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European in Canada was John Cabot in 1497. France claimed possession in 1534. The territories which now constitute Canada came under British power at various times by settlement, conquest or cession. For the most part such efforts were directed at gaining advantage over the indigenous Indian and Eskimo communities as well as displacing French colonial rule. Conflict also broke out, however, with the fledgling United States in the Anglo-American war of 1812–14. Since then, Canada and the USA have maintained the world's longest undefended border. Nova Scotia was occupied in 1628 by settlement at Port Royal, was ceded back to France in 1632 and was finally ceded by France in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht. The Hudson's Bay Company's charter, conferring rights over all the territory draining into Hudson Bay, was granted in 1670. Canada, with all its dependencies, including New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, was formally ceded to Great Britain by France in 1763; Vancouver Island was acknowledged to be British by the Oregon Boundary Treaty of 1846; and British Columbia was established as a separate colony in 1858. As originally constituted, Canada was composed of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada (now Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. They were united under the British North America Act, 1867. The Act provided that the constitution of Canada should be 'similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom'; that the executive authority should be vested in the Sovereign and carried out by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power should be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses: the Senate, membership of which is by appointment, and the House of Commons, whose members are elected.

In 1931 the Statute of Westminster emancipated the Provinces as well as the Dominion from the operation of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, thus removing any remaining limitations on Canada's legislative autonomy.

Provision was made in the British North America Act for the admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the Northwest Territories and Newfoundland into the Union. In 1869 Rupert's Land, or the Northwest Territories, was purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company; the province of Manitoba was erected from this territory and admitted into the confederation on 15 July 1870. On 20 July 1871 the province of British Columbia was admitted and Prince Edward Island on 1 July 1873. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the provisional districts of Alberta, Athabaska, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, and were admitted on 1 Sept. 1905. Newfoundland formally joined Canada as its 10th province on 31 March 1949. In Feb. 1931 Norway formally recognized the Canadian title to the Sverdrup group of Arctic islands. Canada thus holds sovereignty in the whole Arctic sector north of the Canadian mainland.

In 1982 an amended constitution replaced the British North America Act to give Canada prerogative over all future constitutional changes. At the same time a charter of Rights and Freedoms was introduced recognizing the nation's multi-cultural heritage, affirming the existing rights of native peoples and the principle of equality of benefits to the provinces.

In April 1999 the predominantly-Inuit territory of Nunavut came into existence.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Canada is bounded in the northwest by the Beaufort Sea, north by the Arctic Ocean, northeast by Baffin Bay, east by the Davis Strait, Labrador Sea and Atlantic Ocean, south by the USA and west by the Pacific Ocean and USA (Alaska). The area is 9,984,670 sq. km, of which 891,163 sq. km are fresh water. 2001 census population, 30,007,094 (15,693,393 females), giving a density of 3·0 per sq. km. In 2001, 79·7% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 33·22m.

Population at previous censuses:

1851	2,436,297	1911	7,206,643	1971	21,568,311
1861	3,229,633	1921	8,787,949	1976[1]	22,992,604
1871	3,689,257	1931	10,376,786	1981	24,343,181
1881	4,324,810	1941	11,506,655	1986[1]	25,309,331

1901	5,371,315	1961	18,238,247	1996[1]	28,848,761[2]

[1]It became a statutory requirement to conduct a census every five years in 1971.
[2]Excludes data from incompletely enumerated Indian reserves and Indian settlements.

Of the total population in 2001, 80·9% were Canadian-born. Alberta had the biggest population increase between 1996 and 2001 with 10·3%, whilst Newfoundland had the biggest population reduction with –7·0%, more than double the 2·9% rate of decline recorded between 1991 and 1996.

The population (2001) born outside Canada in the provinces was in the following ratio (%): Alberta, 14·9; British Columbia, 26·1; Manitoba, 12·1; New Brunswick, 3·1; Newfoundland, 1·6; Northwest Territories, 6·4; Nova Scotia, 4·6; Nunavut, 1·7; Ontario, 26·8; Prince Edward Island, 3·1; Quebec, 9·9; Saskatchewan, 5·0; Yukon, 10·6.

Figures for the 2001 census population according to ethnic origin (leading categories), were[1]:

Canadian	11,682,680	Chinese	1,094,700
English	5,978,875	Ukrainian	1,071,060
French	4,668,410	North American Indian	1,000,890

Irish	3,822,660	Polish	817,085
German	2,742,765	East Indian	713,330
Italian	1,270,370

[1]Census respondents who reported multiple ethnic origins are counted for each origin they reported.

The aboriginal population (those persons identifying with at least one aboriginal group, and including North American Indian, Métis or Inuit) numbered 976,305 in 2001. In 2001, 59·1% of the population gave their mother tongue as English and 22·9% as French (English and French are both official languages); Chinese was reported as the third most common language, accounting for 2·9% of the total population. In 2001, 1·8m. residents were immigrants who arrived between 1991 and 2001, accounting for 6·2% of the total population; 58% came from Asia (including the Middle East), 20% from Europe, 11% from the Caribbean, Central and South America, 8% from Africa, and 3% from the USA.

Ottawa: Situated in the southeast of the province of Ontario, Ottawa has a population of just over 1m., with two-thirds English speaking and one-third French speaking. The city lies on the Ottawa River, which has been used by native Canadians as a highway for thousands of years. As well as being the seat of Canadian federal government, Ottawa is an important centre for health and life science research and the development of space and environmental technology.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for period from July–June:

	Live births	Deaths
1998–99	338,963	222,538
1999–2000	333,954	229,138
2000–01	329,791	227,076
2001–02	327,187	231,232

Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·2%. Birth rate, 2000–01 (per 1,000 population), 10·7; death rate, 7·3. Marriages, 2001, numbered 153,234; divorces, 70,292. In 1997 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females, followed by 30–34 for males and 20–24 for females. Suicides, 1997, 3,681 (12·3 per 100,000 population). Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 75·9 years for men and 81·4 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·6 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from polar conditions in the north to cool temperate in the south, but with considerable differences between east coast, west coast and the interior, affecting temperatures, rainfall amounts and seasonal distribution. Winters are very severe over much of the country, but summers can be very hot inland. See individual provinces for climatic details.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In Nov. 1981 the Canadian government agreed on the provisions of an amended constitution, to the end that it should replace the British North America Act and that its future amendment should be the prerogative of Canada. These proposals were adopted by the Parliament of Canada and were enacted by the UK Parliament as the Canada Act of 1982. This was the final act of the UK Parliament in Canadian constitutional development. The Act gave to Canada the power to amend the Constitution according to procedures determined by the Constitutional Act 1982. The latter added to the Canadian Constitution a charter of Rights and Freedoms, and provisions which recognize the nation's multi-cultural heritage, affirm the existing rights of native peoples, confirm the principle of equalization of benefits among the provinces, and strengthen provincial ownership of natural resources.

Under the Constitution legislative power is vested in Parliament, consisting of the Queen, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate and a House of Commons. The members of the Senate are appointed until age 75 by summons of the Governor-General under the Great Seal of Canada. Members appointed before 2 June 1965 may remain in office for life. The Senate consists of 105 senators: 24 from Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 6 from Manitoba, 6 from British Columbia, 6 from Alberta, 6 from Saskatchewan, 6 from Newfoundland, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 1 from the Yukon Territory, 1 from the Northwest Territories, and 1 from Nunavut. Each senator must be at least 30 years of age and reside in the province for which he or she is appointed. The House of Commons is elected by universal secret suffrage, by a first-past-the-post system, for five-year terms. Representation is based on the population of all the provinces taken as a whole with readjustments made after each census.

The Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on a Renewed Canada released a unanimous report on 28 Feb. 1992 (Beaudoin-Dobbie Report). Another constitutional document was released on 16 July 1992 by the provincial premiers which summarized the multilateral meetings on the Constitution. A final constitutional accord was arrived at by the provinces and the federal government in Aug. 1992. At a national referendum on 26 Oct. 1992 proposed constitutional reforms were rejected by 54·4% of votes cast.

Indians have representation in the Assembly of First Nations (Chief, Matthew Coon Come).

The office and appointment of the Governor-General are regulated by letters patent of 1947. In 1977 the Queen approved the transfer to the Governor-General of functions discharged by the Sovereign. The Governor-General is assisted by a Privy Council composed of Cabinet Ministers.

DEFENCE

The armed forces are unified and organized in functional commands: Land Forces (army), Air Command (air forces) and Maritime Command (naval and naval air forces). In 2002 the armed forces numbered 52,300 (6,100 women); reserves, 35,400.

Military expenditure totalled US$7,745m. in 2001 (US$250 per capita), representing 1·1% of GDP.

Army. The Land Forces numbered 19,300 in 2002 including 1,600 women. Reserves include a Militia of 14,000 and 3,500 Canadian Rangers.

Navy. The naval combatant force, which forms part of the Maritime Command of the unified armed forces, is headquartered at Halifax (Nova Scotia), and includes 2 diesel submarines, 4 destroyers and 12 helicopter-carrying frigates. Naval personnel in 2002 numbered about 9,000, with 4,000 reserves. The main bases are Halifax, where about two-thirds of the fleet is based, and Esquimalt (British Columbia).

Air Force. The air forces numbered 13,500 in 2002 (1,700 women) with 140 combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Canada is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, the Commonwealth, OAS, OECD, OSCE, APEC, BIS, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM, Antarctic Treaty and the International Organization of the Francophonie.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3% of GDP in 1998, industry 31% and services 66%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Canada ranked equal 7th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9·0 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. The economy expanded strongly until late 2000, but is now suffering from the weaker US economy. Greater integration of the two economies follows a relaxation of trade barriers throughout the 1990s. The Bank of Canada has relaxed its monetary policy. In 2001, with interest rates at a 40-year low, the stock market fell and the currency was depressed. Growth in employment and disposable income together with lower tax and interest rates supported consumer spending. In Feb. 2000 the government introduced the largest tax cuts in Canadian history. Budget 2000 introduced a five-year programme to improve the infrastructure.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Canadian dollar (CAD) of 100 cents. In June 2002 gold reserves were 0·86m. troy oz and foreign exchange reserves totalled US$32,831m. Total money supply was $258,252m. CDN in June 2002. Inflation was 2·7% in 2000 and 2·5% in 2001.

Budget. Consolidated federal, provincial, territorial and local government revenue and expenditure for fiscal years ending 31 March (in $1m. CDN):

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Revenue	373,531	382,797	409,884	436,631
Expenditure	372,695	386,147	398,406	416,646

In 2000–01 revenue included (in $1m. CDN): income taxes, 187,683; consumption taxes, 85,422; sales of goods and services, 32,753; contributions to Social Insurance Plans, 30,633. Expenditure included social services, 107,437; health, 69,384; education, 61,742; debt charges, 61,568.

On 1 Jan. 1991 a 7% Goods and Services Tax (GST) was introduced, superseding a 13·5% Manufacturers' Sales Tax.

Performance. Total GDP was US$677,178m. in 2001. Real GDP growth was 4·5% in 2000 and 1·5% in 2001, rising to an estimated 3·3% in 2002.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Canada (established 1935) is the central bank and bank of issue. The Governor (David Dodge) is appointed by the Bank's directors for seven-year terms. The Minister of Finance owns the capital stock of the Bank on behalf of Canada. Banks in Canada are chartered under the terms of the Bank Act, which imposes strict conditions on capital reserves, returns to the federal government, types of lending operations, ownership and other matters. In June 2000 there were 50 chartered banks, 11 domestic and 39 foreign, with 8,267 branches in all provinces and both territories in Canada. The total assets owned by the domestic banks in 1999 came to $1,277bn. CDN. The First Nations Bank was founded in Dec. 1996 to provide finance to Inuit and Indian entrepreneurs.

Bank charters expire every 10 years which gives the federal government an opportunity to review and amend sections of the Bank Act. Extensive changes were brought into force in June 1992. As a result of the substantial revision, bank charters were only renewed for five years. The chartered banks make regular detailed returns to and are subject to periodic inspection by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, an official appointed by the government.

The Bank Act of 1980 required chartered banks to maintain a statutory primary reserve of 10% on demand deposits, 3% on foreign-currency deposits and 2% on notice deposits, with an additional 1% on the portion of notice deposits exceeding $500m. CDN. This reserve is required to be maintained in the form of notes and deposits with the Bank of Canada. A secondary reserve of 4% in the form of treasury bills, government bonds, etc., is also required.

There are stock exchanges at Calgary (Alberta Stock Exchange), Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Weights and Measures. The legal weights and measures are in transition from the Imperial to the International system of units. The Metric Commission, established in June 1971, co-ordinates Canada's conversion to the metric system.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Canada's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 15·4 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Canada fourth in the world, with 70·6%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Generating capacity, 1997, 112m. kW. Net electricity generation in 1995 was 544m. MWh, of which 503m. MWh was to meet domestic demand. Of the total generated, 62% was from hydrogeneration, 21% from thermal generation and 17% from nuclear generation. In 2001 there were 14 nuclear reactors in use. Production, 1998, 550·85bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 15,071 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. Oil reserves in 1999 were 6·8bn. bbls.; gas (1999), 1,810,000m. cu. metres. Production of crude petroleum, 1998, 128·4m. cu. metres; natural gas (1999), 176,797m. cu. metres. Canada is the third largest producer of natural gas, after Russia and the USA. Canada's first off-shore field, 250 km off Nova Scotia, began producing in June 1992.

Water. Annual average water usage in Canada is 1,600 cu. metres per person—less than in the USA but nearly twice the average for an industrialized nation.

Minerals. Mineral production in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): sand and gravel, 225,338; coal, 75,360; iron ore, 36,586; lignite, 37,434 (1997); salt, 13,034; aluminium, 2,370; peat, 1,125; zinc, 992; copper, 691; asbestos, 321; nickel, 198; lead, 150; uranium, 9·99 (the highest of any country in the world); silver, 1·14; gold, 155 (2000); cobalt, 2; cadmium, 1·5 (1994); lime, 2,461; gypsum, 7,974 (1995); diamonds, 2·3m. carats (1999).

Agriculture. According to the census of 1991 the total land area was 9,221,175 sq. km, of which 677,444 sq. km was agricultural.

Grain growing, dairy farming, fruit farming, ranching and fur farming are all practised. In 2000, 2·4% of the economically active population was engaged in agriculture. Total farm cash receipts (2000) $38,298,728,817 CDN. There were 711,335 tractors in 1998 and 132,453 harvester-threshers.

The following table shows the value of farm cash receipts for 1997, for selected agricultural commodities, in $1m. CDN:

Crops	13,933	Livestock and products	14,581
Wheat	3,593	Beef	5,222
Barley	732	Hogs	2,985
Canola	2,038	Poultry	1,298
Oats	274	Dairy	3,710
Deferred grain receipts	102
Other cereals and oilseeds	1,962
Other crops	4,507

Average farm size, 598 acres. In 1996, 252,839 farms (of which 67,531 were beef cattle farms; 24,411 dairy; 29,526 wheat; 51,577 other grain and oilseed) reported total gross farm receipts of $2,500 CDN or more.

Output (in 1,000 tonnes) and harvested area (in 1,000 ha) of crops:

	Output		Harvested Area
	1999	2000	1999	2000

Onions	181	189	5	5
Cabbages	180	167	9	8
Sunflower seeds	122	119	79	69

Canada is the world's leading barley and rapeseed producer and the second largest producer of oats.

Livestock. In parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, stockraising is still carried on as a primary industry, but the livestock industry of the country at large is mainly a subsidiary of mixed farming. The following table shows the numbers of livestock (in 1,000) by provinces in 2001:

Provinces	Milch cows	Total cattle and calves	Sheep and lambs	Pigs
Newfoundland and Labrador	4·7	9·5	7·9	2·7
Prince Edward Island	14·6	84·8	3·6	126·1
Nova Scotia	23·9	108·4	24·9	124·9
New Brunswick	19·0	91·2	9·6	137·0
Quebec	407·2	1,362·8	254·1	4,267·4
Ontario	363·5	2,140·7	337·6	3,457·3
Manitoba	42·4	1,424·4	84·8	2,540·2
Saskatchewan	30·1	2,899·5	149·4	1,109·8
Alberta	84·0	6,615·2	307·3	2,027·5
British Columbia	71·4	814·9	83·3	165·8
Total	1,061·0	15,551·4	1,262·4	13,958·8

Other livestock totals (2000): horses, 385,000; chickens, 158m.; turkeys, 5m.

Livestock products. Slaughterings in 2000: pigs, 19·96m.; cattle, 3·77m.; sheep, 0·53m. Production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 1,675; beef and veal, 1,260; poultry meat, 1,065; horsemeat, 18; lamb and mutton, 11; cow's milk, 8,090; hens' eggs, 357; cheese, 351; honey, 32; hides, 94.

Fruit production in 2000, in 1,000 tonnes: apples, 532; grapes, 61; peaches and nectarines, 27; strawberries, 24; pears, 20; raspberries, 14.

Forestry. Forestry is of great economic importance, and forestry products (pulp, newsprint, building timber) constitute Canada's most valuable exports. As of 1986, the total area of land covered by forests was estimated at 453·3m. ha. In 1995 the area classed as productive forest land was estimated at 2,446 sq. km, or 26·5% of the total land area, up from 2,437 sq. km in 1990 as a result of afforestation.

In 1999, 185·66m. cu. metres of roundwood was produced.

Fur Trade. In 1996, 1,467,500 wildlife pelts valued at $34,541,000 CDN, and 948,800 ranch-raised pelts valued at $41,265,300 CDN were produced.

Fisheries. In 1993 the fishing fleet comprised 432 vessels totalling 169,900 GRT.

In 2000 the total catch was 993,605 tonnes (952,938 tonnes from sea fishing). In 1997 Atlantic landings totalled 679,283 tonnes and Pacific landings 226,183 tonnes. Value of sea fisheries landed in 1996 totalled $1,536m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Canada, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: The Thomson Corporation ($28bn. CDN), a media and photography company; BCE Inc. ($28bn. CDN), a telecommunications company; and Nortel Networks Corporation ($26bn. CDN), a telecom equipment manufacturer.

Principal manufactures in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): petrol, 28,353 (1997); distillate oil, 27,541 (1997); mechanical wood pulp (1992), 22,830; paper and cardboard (1997), 18,969; cement, 12,124; crude steel, 10,819 (1999); crude iron and alloys, 8,640 (1996); newsprint, 8,623; residual fuel oil, 6,792 (1997); jet fuel, 4,140 (1997); sulphuric acid, 4,100 (1997); aluminium, 2,390 (1999); kerosene, 2,177 (1997); synthetic rubber, 191; sugar, 103; motor vehicles (1997), 2·58m. units; cigarettes (1996), 49·4bn. units; sawn timber (1997), 64·8m. cu. metres; plywood (1997), 1·83m. cu. metres; chipboard (1992), 3·26m. cu. metres.

Labour. In 1997 there were (in 1,000), 13,940·5 (6,291·7 females) in employment, distributed as follows: community, social and personal services, 4,191·2; trade, restaurants and hotels, 3,283·9; manufacturing, 2,166·2; finance, insurance and real estate, 1,799·8; transport, storage and communication, 897·1; construction, 747·3; agriculture, forestry, hunting and fishing, 537·5; utilities, 139·9. In Jan. 2003 the unemployment rate stood at 7·4%.

In 1995, 1,607,000 working days were lost in industrial disputes.

Trade Unions. Union membership in early 2000 was 3·7m., of whom nearly 70% belonged to the Canadian Labour Congress. Newfoundland is the most unionized province, with 40% of all paid employees being union members.

It is generally established by legislation, both federal and provincial, that a trade union to which the majority of employees in a unit suitable for collective bargaining belong, is given certain rights and duties. An employer is required to meet and negotiate with such a trade union to determine wage rates and other working conditions of employees. The employer, the trade union and the employees affected are bound by the resulting agreement. If an impasse is reached in negotiation, conciliation services provided by the appropriate government board are available. Generally, work stoppages do not take place until an established conciliation or mediation procedure has been carried out, and are prohibited while an agreement is in effect.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

A North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between Canada, Mexico and the USA was signed on 7 Oct. 1992 and came into force on 1 Jan. 1994.

Imports and Exports. Trade in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	174,352	200,516	204,631	220,064	244,538
Exports f.o.b.	205,443	217,739	217,406	242,820	281,148

Canada is heavily dependent on foreign trade, with exports and imports equivalent to 82% of GDP. Exports to the USA accounted for over 30% of GDP in 1998. Main export markets, 1998 (in $1m. CDN): USA, 270,560·5; Japan, 9,635·5; EU, 17,837·3; other OECD countries, 7,487·0; other countries, 17,879·9. Main import suppliers (in $1m. CDN): USA, 234,177·3; Japan, 9,657·0; EU, 25,424·0; other OECD countries, 11,377·3; other countries, 23,348·2.

Main categories of exports, 1998 (in $1m. CDN): vehicles and parts, 79,246·8 (of which passenger cars and chassis, 43,599·9; motor vehicle parts, 21,621·4); machinery and equipment, 78,770·2 (industrial and agricultural machinery, 16,598·1; aircraft and other transport equipment, 16,245·6); industrial goods and materials, 57,356·1 (metals and alloys, 19,720·2; chemicals, plastics and fertilizers, 17,513·7); forestry products, 35,464·6 (lumber and sawmill products, 16,569·6; newsprint and other paper and paperboard products, 12,761·9). Imports (in $1m. CDN): machinery and equipment, 101,599·2 (of which industrial and agricultural machinery, 28,200·9; office machines and equipment, 16,037·9); vehicles and parts, 66,753·0 (motor vehicle parts, 39,459·5); industrial goods and materials, 60,295·6 (chemicals and plastics, 21,502·0; metals and metal ores, 15,344·6).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 901,903 km of roads. In 1995, 16,571 km were motorways, 123,187 km highways and main roads, 178,161 km secondary roads and 583,983 km other roads.

In general, highways are controlled and maintained by the provinces, who also have the responsibility of providing assistance to their municipalities and townships. Federal expenditures are directed largely to the maintenance of national park highways, Indian Reserve roads and designated provincial/territorial highway construction projects. The Alaska Highway is part of the Canadian highway system.

In 1991 intercity and rural bus services carried 15·3m. passengers 163·6m. vehicle-km, earning $408·2m. CDN.

Motor vehicles registered totalled 17,988,000 in 1998; they included 13,887,000 passenger cars, 3,626,000 trucks and truck tractors, 68,000 buses and 334,000 motorcycles and mopeds.

There were 3,064 fatalities in road accidents in 1997.

Rail. Canada has two great trans-continental systems: the Canadian National Railway system (CN), a body privatized in 1995 which operated 31,764 km (2000) of routes, and the Canadian Pacific Railway (CP), operating 22,590 km (2000). A government-funded organization, VIA Rail, operates passenger services; 4·0m. passengers were carried in 2000. There are several provincial and private railways operating 17,528 km (2000).

There are metros in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, and tram/light rail systems in Calgary, Edmonton and Toronto.

Civil Aviation. Civil aviation is under the jurisdiction of the federal government. The technical and administrative aspects are supervised by Transport Canada, while the economic functions are assigned to the National Transportation Agency.

The busiest Canadian airport is Toronto (Lester B. Pearson International), which in 2000 handled 28,930,000 passengers (16,612,000 on international flights), ahead of Vancouver International, with 16,007,000 passengers (8,306,000 on domestic flights) and Montreal (Dorval International), with 8,493,000 passengers (5,751,000 on domestic flights). Toronto is also the busiest airport for freight, handling 392,000 tonnes in 2000.

Air Canada (privatized in July 1989) took over its main competitor, Canadian Airlines, in April 2000. In 1999 Air Canada flew 356·6m. km and carried 16,520,600 passengers, and Canadian Airlines International flew 211·9m. km and carried 7,496,900 passengers (3,667,300 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant marine comprised 835 vessels over 100 GRT including 27 oil tankers. Total tonnage, 1998, 2·5m. GRT, including oil tankers, 0·3m. GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 74,422,000 net registered tons entered ports and vessels totalling 124,999,000 NRT cleared.

The major canals are those of the St Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway. Main commodities moved along the seaway are grain, iron ore, coal, other bulk and steel. Total traffic on the Montreal-Lake Ontario (MLO) section of the seaway was 39,246,000 tonnes in 1998; on the Welland Canal section, 40,657,000 tonnes. There were 4,366 vessel transits in 1998, of which 1,438 were ocean vessels.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 20,802,900 telephone main lines in use (676·5 per 1,000 persons); telephone provision was delivered in 1996 by about 100 companies to 98·7% of households. Canada had 16·84m. Internet users in March 2002. There were 12m. PCs in 2000 (390·2 for every 1,000 persons), 7m. mobile phone subscribers in 1999 (229·6 for every 1,000 persons) and 1·1m. fax machines in 1997.

Postal Services. The Canada Post Corporation processed 10bn. pieces of mail in 2000–01. Revenue from operations reached $5·9bn. CDN, an increase of $305m. CDN over 1999–2000. Consolidated net income for the year was $84m. CDN, an increase of $9m. CDN from the $75m. CDN reported for 1999–2000. The Corporation has some 20,000 retail locations.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court in Ottawa, having general appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases throughout Canada. The Exchequer Court (established in 1875) was replaced by the Federal Court in 1971. This has a Trial Division, consisting of the Associate Chief Justice and nine other judges, and an Appeal Division, consisting of the Chief Justice and three other judges. Its seat is in Ottawa, but each Division may sit in any place in Canada. There is a Superior Court in each province and county courts, with limited jurisdiction, all the judges being appointed by the Governor-General. Police, magistrates and justices of the peace are appointed by the provincial governments.

There were 2,353,926 Criminal Code Offences (excluding traffic) reported in 2000. There were 269 violent crimes per 100,000 population in 1996 (598 per 100,000 in the USA). In 2001 there were 554 homicides in Canada, giving a rate of 1·8 homicides per 100,000 population (the same as 1999, which was the lowest rate for 32 years). The population in penal institutions in 1998 was 34,166 (115 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1998.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP). The RCMP is a civil force maintained by the federal government. Established in 1873 as the North-West Mounted Police, it became the Royal North-West Mounted Police in 1904. Its sphere of operations was expanded in 1918 to include all of Canada west of Thunder Bay. In 1920 the force absorbed the Dominion Police, its headquarters was transferred from Regina to Ottawa, and its title was changed to Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The force is responsible to the Solicitor-General of Canada and is controlled by a Commissioner who is empowered to appoint peace officers in all the provinces and territories of Canada.

The responsibilities of the RCMP are national in scope. The administration of justice within the provinces, including the enforcement of the Criminal Code of Canada, is the responsibility of provincial governments, but all the provinces except Ontario and Quebec have entered into contracts with the RCMP to enforce criminal and provincial laws under the direction of the respective Attorneys-General. In addition, in these eight provinces the RCMP is under agreement to provide police services to municipalities. The RCMP is also responsible for all police work in the Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut, enforcing federal law and territorial ordinances. The 14 Divisions, alphabetically designated, make up the strength of the RCMP across Canada; they comprise 52 sub-divisions which include 800 detachments. Headquarters Division, as well as the Office of the Commissioner, is located in Ottawa.

Assisting the criminal investigation work of the RCMP is the Directorate of Identification Services. Its services, together with those of divisional and sub-divisional units, and of six Forensic Laboratories, are available to police forces throughout Canada. The Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC) at RCMP Headquarters, a national computer network, is staffed and operated by the RCMP. Law Enforcement agencies throughout Canada have access to information on stolen vehicles, licences and wanted persons.

In Feb. 2001 the Force had a total strength of 20,000 including regular members, special constables, civilian members and public service employees. It maintained 8,677 motor vehicles, 92 police service dogs and 156 horses.

The Force has 14 divisions actively engaged in law enforcement, one Headquarters Division and one training division. Marine services are divisional responsibilities and the Force currently has 402 boats at various points across Canada. The Air Directorate has stations throughout the country and maintains a fleet of 21 fixed-wing aircraft and eight helicopters.

Total police personnel in Canada in June 2000 numbered 56,020. There were 7,658 female police officers, up from 3,573 in June 1990. Policing costs in 1999 totalled $6·4bn. CDN.

Religion. Most recent statistics available (1997):

Religious body	Inclusive membership	Number of churches	Number of clergy
Anglican Church of Canada	780,897	2,499	3,240
Canadian Baptist Ministries	138,000	1,136	1,107

United Church of Canada	2,018,808	4,044	3,939

Membership of other denominations: Jews (1996), 0·35m.; Muslims (1996), 0·35m.; Latter-day Saints (Mormons) (2001), 161,000; Mennonites (1995), 114,000; Jehovah's Witnesses (1996), 110,659; Salvation Army (1996), 92,330. In Feb. 2001 the Roman Catholic church had five Cardinals.

Education. Under the Constitution the provincial legislatures have powers over education. These are subject to certain qualifications respecting the rights of denominational and minority language schools. School board revenues derive from local taxation on real property, and government grants from general provincial revenue.

In 1996–97 there were 16,096 elementary and secondary public and private schools and 198 community colleges. There were 541,650 children in pre-elementary institutions; 4,969,317 children in elementary and secondary schools with 306,498 teachers; and 388,976 students in community colleges.

Enrolment for Indian and Inuit children in elementary/secondary schools for 1999–2000: federal schools, 1,708; band-operated schools, 71,823; provincial/private schools, 45,839; giving a total of 119,370 students funded by the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs (DIAND). However, this total represents only a portion of Indian and Inuit students attending elementary/secondary schools.

In 1995–96 there were 48 universities, 1 technical university, 4 university colleges, 10 colleges, 1 Dominican college, 1 college of agriculture, 1 college of art and design, 2 open universities, 2 polytechnics, higher schools of business, public administration, and technology, and institutes of education, microbiology and virology, and scientific research. In 1996–97 there were 572,179 full-time and 248,231 part-time university students with 36,035 teachers. In 1995–96 there were 6,984 tertiary-level students per 100,000 population, the highest proportion of any country.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

In 1996 public education expenditure represented 7% of GDP.

Health. Constitutional responsibility for healthcare services rests with the provinces and territories. Accordingly, Canada's national health insurance system consists of an interlocking set of provincial and territorial hospital and medical insurance plans conforming to certain national standards rather than a single national programme. These national standards, which are set out in the Canada Health Act, include: provision of a comprehensive range of hospital and medical benefits; universal population coverage; access to necessary services on uniform terms and conditions; portability of benefits; and public administration of provincial and territorial insurance plans.

Provinces and territories satisfying these national standards are eligible for federal financial transfer payments. The provinces and territories are entitled to receive equal-per-capita federal health contributions escalated annually by the 3-year average increase in nominal GNP. These federal contributions are paid in the form of a combination of tax point and cash transfers. Over and above these health transfers, the federal government also provides financial support for such provincial and territorial extended healthcare service programmes as nursing-home care, certain home care services, ambulatory healthcare services and adult residential care services.

The national health insurance programmes were introduced in stages. The Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act was passed in 1957, providing prepaid coverage to all Canadians for in-patient and, at the option of each province and territory, out-patient hospital services. The Medical Care Act was introduced in 1968 to extend universal coverage to all medically equipped services provided by medical practitioners. The Canada Health Act, which took effect on 1 April 1984, consolidated the original federal health insurance legislation and clarified the national standards that provinces and territories are required to meet in order to qualify for full federal health contributions.

The approach taken by Canada is one of state-sponsored health insurance. Accordingly, the advent of insurance programmes produced little change in the ownership of hospitals, almost all of which are owned by non-government non-profit corporations, or in the rights and privileges of private medical practice. Patients are free to choose their own general practitioner. Except for a small percentage of the population whose care is provided for under other legislation (such as serving members of the Canadian Armed Forces and inmates of federal penitentiaries), all residents are eligible, regardless of whether they are in the workforce. Benefits are available without upper limit so long as they are medically necessary, provided any registration obligations are met.

In addition to the benefits qualifying for federal contributions, provinces and territories provide additional benefits at their own discretion. Most fund their portion of health costs out of general provincial and territorial revenues. There are no co-charges for medically necessary short-term hospital care or medical care. Most provinces and territories have charges for long-term chronic hospital care geared, approximately, to the room and board portion of the OAS-GIS payment mentioned under Welfare. Public sector spending accounts for about 72·2% of total national health expenditure. Health spending accounted for 9·1% of GDP in 2000.

In 1997 there were estimated to be 66,600 doctors, giving a rate of 455 persons per doctor.

Welfare. The social security system provides financial benefits and social services to individuals and their families through programmes administered by federal, provincial and municipal governments, and voluntary organizations. Federally, Human Resources and Labour is responsible for research into the areas of social issues, provision of grants and contributions for various social services, and the administration of income security programmes, including the Old Age Security programme, the Guaranteed Income Supplement, the Spouse's Allowance, and the Canada Pension Plan and Canada Assistance Plan.

The Old Age Security (OAS) pension is payable to persons 65 years of age and over who satisfy the residence requirements stipulated in the Old Age Security Act. The amount payable, whether full or partial, is also governed by stipulated conditions, as is the payment of an OAS pension to a recipient who absents himself from Canada. OAS pensioners with little or no income apart from OAS may, upon application, receive a full or partial supplement known as the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS). Entitlement is normally based on the pensioner's income in the preceding year, calculated in accordance with the Income Tax Act. The spouse of an OAS pensioner, aged 60 to 64, meeting the same residence requirements as those stipulated for OAS, may be eligible for a full or partial Spouse's Allowance (SPA). SPA is payable, on application, depending on the annual combined income of the couple (not including the pensioner spouse's basic OAS pension or GIS). In 1979 the SPA programme was expanded to include a spouse, who is eligible for SPA in the month the pensioner spouse dies, until the age of 65 or until remarriage (Extended Spouse's Allowance). Since Sept. 1985 SPA has also been available to low income widow(er)s aged 60–64 regardless of the age of their spouse at death. In Aug. 1999 the basic OAS pension was $396·80 CDN monthly; the maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement was $496·07 CDN monthly for a single pensioner or a married pensioner whose spouse was not receiving a pension or a Spouse's Allowance, and $323·12 CDN monthly for each spouse of a married couple where both were pensioners. The maximum Spouse's Allowance for the same quarter was $740·54 CDN monthly (equal to the basic pension plus the maximum GIS married rate), and $817·57 CDN for widow(er)s.

The Canada Pension Plan (CPP) is designed to provide workers with a basic level of income protection in the event of retirement, disability or death. Benefits may be payable to a contributor, a surviving spouse or an eligible child. Actuarially adjusted retirement benefits may begin as early as age 60 or as late as age 70. Benefits are determined by the contributor's earnings and contributions made to the Plan. Contribution is compulsory for most employed and self-employed Canadians 18 to 65 years of age. The CPP does not operate in Quebec, which has exercised its constitutional prerogative to establish a similar plan. In 1999 the maximum retirement pension payable under CPP was $751·67 CDN; the maximum disability pension was $903·55 CDN; and the maximum surviving spouse's pension was $451·00 CDN (for survivors 65 years of age and over) or 60% of the retirement pension which the deceased contributor would have received at age 65. The survivor pension payable to a surviving spouse under 65 (maximum of $414·46 CDN in 1999) is composed of two parts: a flat-rate component and an earnings-related portion. In 1999 CPP was funded by equal contributions of 3·5% of pensionable earnings from the employer and 3·5% from the employee (self-employed persons contribute the full 7%), in addition to the interest on the investment of excess funds. In 1999 the range of yearly pensionable earnings was from $3,500 CDN to $37,400 CDN. A person who earned and contributed at less than the maximum level generally receives monthly benefits at rates lower than the maximum allowable under CPP. There are, however, drop-out provisions that offer some protection as a result of child rearing, periods of disablement, unemployment or other periods of no or low earnings. In June 1999 over 5m. Canadians received Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits.

Social security agreements co-ordinate the operation of the Old Age Security and the CPP with the comparable social security programmes of certain other countries.

In Nov. 1992 the Federal government replaced the Family Allowances programme with a new Child Tax Benefit, administered jointly by Human Resources and Labour and Revenue Canada. The programme delivered Canada its first payments in Jan. 1993.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission is an independent authority established by parliament in 1968 to regulate public and private radio and television. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation operates two national TV networks, one in English and one in French, and there are three private TV networks (colour by NTSC). In 1995 there were 2,245 cable TV systems, and in 1997 there were 7,867,000 subscribers to cable television—approximately 69% of all households with TV licences in 1997 had cable TV. There were 21·5m. TV receivers and 32·3m. radio receivers in 1997.

There were 841 originating radio stations operating in 1996, of which 333 were AM and 508 FM. There were also 968 radio re-broadcasters.

Press. In 1996 there were 107 daily papers (total circulation, 4·72m., giving a rate of 159 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 1,071 non-daily papers with a circulation of 21,235,000, or 715 per 1,000 inhabitants. In 1996 a total of 19,900 book titles were published.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 19,557,000 foreign tourists, around 90% of whom were from the USA. Revenue from visitors was US$10,025m.

Festivals. The Calgary Stampede in July is not only the world's largest rodeo, but also a series of concerts and a carnival. The Toronto International Film Festival in Sept. is second only to Cannes.

Libraries. In 1995 there was one National Library and 3,672 public libraries with 76,464,000 volumes.

Museums and Galleries. In 1997–98 there were 1,368 museums with over 26m. visitors. Revenue totalled $651m. CDN.

CANADIAN PROVINCES

GENERAL DETAILS

The ten provinces each have a separate parliament and administration, with a Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council at the head of the executive. They have full powers to regulate their own local affairs and dispose of their revenues, provided only that they do not interfere with the action and policy of the central administration. Among the subjects assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures are: the amendment of the provincial constitution, except as regards the office of the Lieut.-Governor; property and civil rights; direct taxation for revenue purposes; borrowing; management and sale of Crown lands; provincial hospitals, reformatories, etc.; shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer and other licences for local or provincial purposes; local works and undertakings, except lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, etc., extending beyond the province or connecting with other provinces, and excepting also such works as the Canadian Parliament declares are for the general good; marriages, administration of justice within the province; education. On 18 July 1994 the federal and provincial governments signed an agreement easing inter-provincial barriers on government procurement, labour mobility, transport licences and product standards. Federal legislation of Dec. 1995 grants provinces a right of constitutional veto.

[1]Excludes data from incompletely enumerated Indian reserves and Indian settlements.
[2]Comparison of the 1991 census data with data from earlier censuses is affected by a change in the definition of the 1991 census population. Persons in Canada on student authorizations, Minister's permits, and as refugee claimants were enumerated in the 1991 census but not in previous censuses. These persons are referred to as non-permanent residents.
[3]Nunavut only came into existence in 1999.
[4]The population of the Northwest Territories declined so steeply between 1996 and 2001 because of the formation of Nunavut, previously part of the Northwest Territories, in 1999.

Local Government. Under the terms of the British North America Act the provinces are given full powers over local government. All local government institutions are, therefore, supervised by the provinces, and are incorporated and function under provincial acts.

The acts under which municipalities operate vary from province to province. A municipal corporation is usually administered by an elected council headed by a mayor or reeve, whose powers to administer affairs and to raise funds by taxation and other methods are set forth in provincial laws, as is the scope of its obligations to, and on behalf of, the citizens. Similarly, the types of municipal corporations, their official designations and the requirements for their incorporation vary between provinces. The following table sets out the classifications as at the 1996 census:

	Federal electoral districts	Economic regions	Census divisions

Following the creation of Nunavut (part of the Northwest Territories) on 1 April 1999, both the Northwest Territories and Nunavut have one federal electoral district. The Northwest Territories has two census divisions and Nunavut has three.

Justice. The administration of justice within the provinces, including the enforcement of the Criminal Code of Canada, is the responsibility of provincial governments, but all the provinces except Ontario and Quebec have entered into contracts with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) to enforce criminal and provincial law. In addition, in these eight provinces the RCMP is under agreement to provide police services to municipalities.

ALBERTA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The southern half of Alberta was administered from 1670 as part of Rupert’s land by the Hudson’s Bay Company. Trading posts were set up after 1783 when the North West Company took a share in the fur trade. In 1869 Rupert’s land was transferred from the Hudson’s Bay Company (which had absorbed its rival in 1821) to the new Dominion and in the following year this land was combined with the former Crown land of the North Western Territories to form the Northwest Territories. In 1882 ‘Alberta’ first appeared as a provisional ‘district’, consisting of the southern half of the present province. In 1905 the Athabasca district to the north was added when provincial status was granted to Alberta.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 661,848 sq. km, 642,317 sq. km being land area and 16,531 sq. km water area. The population at the 2001 census was 2,974,807. Alberta has the fastest growing population of any Canadian province, with a 10·3% increase since the 1996 census. The urban population (2001), centres of 1,000 or over, was 80·9% and the rural 19·1%. Population (15 May 2001) of the 14 cities, as well as the 2 specialized municipalities: Calgary, 878,866; Edmonton, 616,104; Red Deer, 67,707; Lethbridge, 67,374; St Albert, 53,081; Medicine Hat, 51,249; Grande Prairie, 36,983; Airdrie, 20,382; Leduc, 15,032; Spruce Grove, 15,983; Camrose, 14,854; Fort Saskatchewan, 13,121; Lloydminster (Alberta portion), 13,148; Wetaskiwin, 11,154; Specialized Municipality of Wood Buffalo (Fort McMurray), 41,466; Specialized Municipality of Strathcona County (Sherwood Park), 71,986.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2001 numbered 37,006 (a rate of 11·5 per 1,000 population), and deaths 18,068 (rate of 5·9 per 1,000 population). There were 18,717 marriages in 2001 and 7,922 divorces in 2000.

CLIMATE

Alberta has a continental climate of warm summers and cold winters—extremes of temperature. For the capital city, Edmonton, the hottest month is usually July (mean 17·5°C), while the coldest are Dec. and Jan. (–12°C). Rainfall amounts are greatest between May and Sept. In a year, the average precipitation is 461 mm (19·6") with about 129·6 cm of snowfall.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution of Alberta is contained in the British North America Act of 1867, and amending Acts; also in the Alberta Act of 1905, passed by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, which created the province out of the then Northwest Territories. All the provisions of the British North America Act, except those with respect to school lands and the public domain, were made to apply to Alberta as they apply to the older provinces of Canada. On 1 Oct. 1930 the natural resources were transferred from the Dominion to provincial government control. The province is represented by five members in the Senate and 26 in the House of Commons of Canada.

The executive is vested nominally in the Lieut.-Governor, who is appointed by the federal government, but actually in the Executive Council or the Cabinet of the legislature. Legislative power is vested in the Assembly in the name of the Queen.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are elected by the universal vote of adults, 18 years of age and older.

RECENT ELECTIONS

There are 83 members in the legislature. In March 2003 there were 74 Progressive Conservatives, 7 Liberals and 2 New Democrats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Lois Hole, CM (sworn in 10 Feb. 2000).

As of Feb. 2003 the members of the Ministry were as follows:

ECONOMY

GDP per person in 2000 was $47,402 CDN.

Budget. The budgetary revenue and expenditure (in $1m. CDN) for years ending 31 March were as follows:

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Revenue	17,815	16,882	20,168	25,597	22,027
Expenditure	15,156	15,788	17,377	19,024	20,919

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·4% in 2000.

Banking and Finance. Personal income per capita (2001), $30,993 CDN.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. There are five national parks in Alberta totalling 63,045 sq. km, the largest area of any province in Canada. There are also 518 parks and protected areas in Alberta covering 2,752,969 ha.

Oil and Gas. Oil sands underlie some 60,000 sq. km of Alberta, the four major deposits being: the Athabasca, Cold Lake, Peace River and Buffalo Head Hills deposits. Some 7% (3,250 sq. km) of the Athabasca deposit can be exploited through open-pit mining. The rest of the Athabasca, and all the deposits in the other areas, are deeper reserves which must be developed through in situ techniques. These reserves reach depths of 760 metres. In 2001, 86,679,000 cu. metres of crude oil were produced with gross sales value of $18,234·8m. CDN. Alberta produced 69% of Canada's crude petroleum output in 2001. 18,608,000 cu. metres of synthetic crude oil were produced in 2000.

Natural gas is found in abundance in numerous localities. In 2001, 133,283,000 cu. metres valued at $26,303·7m. CDN were produced in Alberta.

Minerals. Coal production in 2001 was 30,911,020 tonnes with 6,893,677 tonnes of coal being exported.

Value of total mineral production was $49,832·5m. CDN in 2001.

Agriculture. There were 53,652 farms in Alberta in 2001 with a total area of 21,067,486 ha. About 9,728,181 ha are land in crop (2001 census). The majority of farms are made up of cattle, followed by grains and oilseed, and wheat. For particulars of livestock see CANADA: Agriculture.

Farm cash receipts in 2001 totalled $8,322·0m. CDN of which crops contributed $2,299·4m. CDN, livestock and products $5,186·7m. CDN, and direct payments $835·9m. CDN.

Forestry. Forest land in 1999 covered some 38,210,000 ha. In 1999, 42,210 ha of forest was harvested.

Fisheries. The largest catch in commercial fishing is whitefish. Perch, tullibee, walley, pike and lake trout are also caught in smaller quantities. Commercial fish production in 2000–01 was 2,023 tonnes, value $3·27m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

The leading manufacturing industries are food and beverages, petroleum refining, metal fabricating, wood industries, primary metal, chemical and chemical products and non-metallic mineral products.

Manufacturing shipments had a total value of $42,552·0m. CDN in 2001. Greatest among these shipments were (in $1m. CDN): food, 9,143; refined petroleum and coal products, 7,449; chemicals and chemical products, 7,010; machinery, 3,363; fabricated metal products, 2,716; wood products, 2,200; computer and electronic products, 2,004; paper and allied products, 1,503; non-metal mineral products, 1,202; and primary metal, 1,008.

Total retail sales in 2001 were $34,602m. CDN, as compared with $31,712·3m. CDN in sales. Main sales in 2001 were (in $1m. CDN): automobiles, 9,309·4; food, 7,316·0; general merchandise, 3,859·4; fuel 2,638·5; and automotive parts, accessories and services, 2,068·0.

Labour. In 2001 the labour force was 1,710,700 (771,600 females), of whom approximately 1,632,100 (736,900) were employed. In 2001 a total of 44,100 new jobs were created. Alberta's unemployment rate dropped to 4·6% in 2001, compared to the national average of 7·2%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Alberta's domestic commodity exports were valued at $56·9bn. CDN in 2001. The largest export markets were the USA, Japan, China, Mexico and South Korea, which together accounted for approximately 94% of Alberta's international exports. Mining and energy accounted for 71% of exports in 2001.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2002 there were 16,012 km of primary highways, 14,717 km secondary highways and 137,298 km of local municipal roads.

On 31 March 2002 there were 2,296,748 motor vehicles registered, including 1,067,625 passenger vehicles.

Rail. In 2002 the length of main railway lines was 7,067 km. There are light rail networks in Edmonton (12·3 km) and Calgary (32·7 km).

Civil Aviation. Calgary International is a major international airport. It handled 8,090,000 passengers (5,751,000 on domestic flights) in 2000.

Telecommunications. The primary telephone system is owned and operated by the Telus Corporation. Telus Corporation had 1,998,366 telephone subscriber lines (including residential and business lines) in service in 2002.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Judicial authority of the province is the Court of Appeal. Judges of the Court of Appeal and Court of Queen's Bench are appointed by the Federal government and hold office until retirement at the age of 75. There are courts of lesser jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters. The Court of Queen's Bench has full jurisdiction over civil proceedings. A Provincial Court which has jurisdiction in civil matters up to $2,000 CDN is presided over by provincially appointed judges. Youth Courts have power to try boys and girls 12–17 years old inclusive for offences against the Young Offenders Act.

The jurisdiction of all criminal courts in Alberta is enacted in the provisions of the Criminal Code. The system of procedure in civil and criminal cases conforms as nearly as possible to the English system. In 2001, 276,860 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 70 homicides.

Education. Schools of all grades are included under the term of public school (including those in the separate school system, which are publicly supported). The same board of trustees controls the schools from kindergarten to university entrance. In 2001–02 there were approximately 547,830 pupils enrolled in grades 1–12, including private schools and special education programmes. The University of Alberta (in Edmonton), founded in 1907, had, in 2001–02, 32,248 students; the University of Calgary had 26,654 students; Athabasca University had 24,136 students; the University of Lethbridge had 6,217 students. Alberta has 30 post-secondary institutions including four universities and two technical colleges.

CULTURE

Alberta has several annual festivals. Heritage Days in Edmonton (Aug.) is a celebration of multiculturalism. There are various music festivals around Alberta (rock, folk, country, jazz) throughout the summer. The Fringe Festival in Edmonton (Aug.) is ten days of performance art and theatre shows. The Calgary Stampede (July) is a rodeo, agricultural exhibits, parade and carnival. Klondike Days (July) is a celebration of gold rush heritage including a carnival and parade in Edmonton.

Tourism. Alberta attracted more than 5,067,000 visitors from outside the province in 2000. It is known for its mountains, museums, parks and festivals. Total tourism receipts in 2000 were $4·9bn. CDN.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

British Columbia, formerly known as New Caledonia, was first administered by the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1849 Vancouver Island was given crown colony status and in 1853 the Queen Charlotte Islands became a dependency. The discovery of gold on the Fraser river and the following influx of population resulted in the creation in 1858 of the mainland crown colony of British Columbia, to which the Strikine Territory (established 1862) was later added. In 1866 the two colonies were united.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

British Columbia has an area of 944,735 sq. km of which land area is 926,492 sq. km. The capital is Victoria. The province is bordered westerly by the Pacific Ocean and Alaska Panhandle, northerly by the Yukon and Northwest Territories, easterly by the Province of Alberta and southerly by the USA along the 49th parallel. A chain of islands, the largest of which are Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands, affords protection to the mainland coast.

The population at the 2001 census was 3,907,738; 2002 estimate, 4·1m.

The principal metropolitan areas and cities and their population census for 2001 are as follows: Metropolitan Vancouver, 1,986,965; Metropolitan Victoria, 325,754; Abbotsford (amalgamated with Matsqui), 115,463; Kelowna, 96,298; Kamloops, 77,281; Prince George, 72,406; Nanaimo, 73,000; Chilliwack, 62,927; Vernon, 33,494; Mission, 31,272; Penticton, 30,985; Campbell River, 29,465; North Cowichan, 26,148; Cranbrook, 18,476; Port Alberni, 17,743.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 41,667 (a rate of 10·3 per 1,000 population), and deaths 30,418 (rate of 7·5 per 1,000 population). There were 21,749 marriages and 9,827 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

The climate is cool temperate, but mountain influences affect temperatures and rainfall considerably. Driest months occur in summer. Vancouver, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 64°F (17·8°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,458 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The British North America Act of 1867 provided for eventual admission into Canadian Confederation, and on 20 July 1871 British Columbia became the sixth province of the Dominion.

British Columbia has a unicameral legislature of 79 elected members. Government policy is determined by the Executive Council responsible to the Legislature. The Lieut.-Governor is appointed by the Governor-General of Canada, usually for a term of five years, and is the head of the executive government of the province.

The Legislative Assembly is elected for a maximum term of five years. There are 79 electoral districts. Every Canadian citizen 18 years and over, having resided a minimum of six months in the province, duly registered, is entitled to vote. The province is represented in the Federal Parliament by 33 members in the House of Commons, and six Senators.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the Legislative Assembly elections of 16 May 2001 the Liberal Party won 58% of the vote and 77 of the 79 available seats. The other two seats went to the New Democratic Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Iona Campagnolo, PC, OM, OBC (sworn in 25 Sept. 2001).

The Liberal Executive Council comprised in Jan. 2003:

Premier, President of the Executive Council: Gordon Campbell.

Deputy Premier and Minister for Education: Christy Clark. Attorney General and Minister Responsible for Treaty Negotiations: Geoff Plant. Solicitor General and

Office of the Premier: http://www.gov.bc.ca/prem/

ECONOMY

GDP per person in 2001 was $30,252 CDN.

Budget. Current provincial revenue and expenditure in $1m. CDN for fiscal years ending 31 March:

	1998–99	1999–2000[1]	2000–01[1]	2001–02	2002–03[2]
Revenue	20,306	21,385	21,500	23,125	22,266
Expenditure	20,771	22,593	22,300	25,255	25,366

[1]Estimate. [2]Forecast.

The main sources of current revenue are income taxes, sales taxes, contributions from the federal government, licences and fees, and natural resource taxes and royalties.

The main items of expenditure in 2002–03 (forecast) were as follows: health, $10,390m. CDN; education, $6,871m. CDN; social services, $3,090m. CDN; protection of persons and property, $1,200m. CDN; natural resources and economic development, $1,065m. CDN; transportation, $734m. CDN; general government, $379m. CDN.

Banking and Finance. At Oct. 1997 Canadian chartered banks maintained 925 branches and had total assets of $146·3bn. CDN in British Columbia. In 1997 credit unions at 96 locations had total assets of $20·4bn. CDN. Several foreign banks have Canadian head offices in Vancouver and several others have branches.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Generation in 2001 totalled 57,870 GWh (48,338 GWh from hydro-electric sources), of which 6,408 GWh were delivered outside the province. Available within the province were 61,616 GWh (with imports of 10,154 GWh).

Oil and Gas. In 2001 natural gas production, from the northeastern part of the province, was valued at $5·18bn. CDN.

Water. Canada accounts for a quarter of the world's fresh water supply, a third of which is located in British Columbia. An extensive hydro-electric generation system has been developed in the province.

Minerals. Coal, copper, gold, zinc, silver and molybdenum are the most important minerals produced but natural gas amounts to approximately half of the value of mineral and fuel extraction. The value of mineral and petroleum products production in 2001 was estimated at $9·6bn. CDN. Coal production (from the northeastern and southeastern regions) was valued at $1·1bn. CDN. Copper was the most valuable metal with production totalling $679m. CDN in 2001; gold production amounted to $322m. CDN.

Agriculture. Only 3% of the total land area is arable or potentially arable. Farm holdings (20,290 in 2001) cover 2·6m. ha. with an average size of 127 ha. Farm cash receipts in 2001 were estimated at $2·3bn. CDN, led by floriculture and nursery products valued at $410m. CDN, dairy products valued at $364m. CDN and vegetables valued at $362m. CDN.

Forestry. Around 49·9m. ha are considered productive forest land of which 48·0m. ha are provincial crown lands managed by the Ministry of Forests. Approximately 96% of the forested land is coniferous. The total timber harvest in 2001 was 72m. cu. metres. Output of forest-based products, 2001: lumber, 30·15m. cu. metres; plywood, 1·57m. cu. metres; pulp, 4·70m. tonnes; newsprint, paper and paperboard, 2·88m. tonnes.

Fisheries. In 2001 the total landed value of the catch was $643m. CDN; wholesale value $1bn. CDN. Salmon (wild and farmed) generated 45% of the wholesale value of seafood products, followed by shellfish, groundfish and herring. The seafood sector supported 11,200 jobs in 2001.

INDUSTRY

The value of shipments from all manufacturing industries reached $34bn. CDN in 2001 and accounted for around 10·5% of the province's GDP.

Labour. In 2001 the labour force averaged 2,103,000 persons (47% female) with 1,942,000 employed and 161,000 unemployed (7·7%). Of the employed workforce 1·55m. were in service industries and 392,000 in goods production. There were 309,000 employed in trade, 204,000 in healthcare and social assistance, 196,000 in manufacturing, 171,000 in accommodation and food industries, 116,000 in finance and related business, 115,000 in construction, 107,000 in transportation and warehousing, 89,000 in public administration, 26,000 in forestry, 26,000 in agriculture, 12,000 in mining and 5,000 in fishing and trapping.

Trade Unions. In 2001, 34% of the province's paid workers were unionized. The largest unions are: Canadian Union of Public Employees (63,999 members in early 2003); B.C. Government and Service Employees' Union and affiliates (approximately 60,000); and B.C. Teachers' Federation (43,876 in 1997).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2001 totalled $31,304m. CDN in value, while imports amounted to $31,657m. CDN. The USA is the largest market for products exported through British Columbia customs ports ($22,092m. CDN in 2001), followed by Japan ($3,882m. CDN) and South Korea ($753m. CDN).

The leading exports in 2001 were: wood products, $10,327m. CDN; paper and allied products, $5,421m. CDN; food, $4,149m. CDN; fabricated metal products, $1,577m. CDN; machinery, $1,467m. CDN.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 42,440 km of provincial highway, of which 23,710 km were paved. In 2001, 1,765,000 passenger cars and 581,000 commercial vehicles were registered.

Rail. The province is served by two transcontinental railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railway. Passenger service is provided by VIA Rail, a Crown Corporation, and the publicly owned British Columbia Railway. In 1995 the American company Amtrak began operating a service between Seattle and Vancouver after a 14-year hiatus. British Columbia is also served by the freight trains of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, the Northern Alberta Railways Company and the Burlington Northern and Southern Railways Inc. The combined route-mileage of mainline track operated by the CPR, CNR and BCR totals 6,800 km. The system also includes CPR and CNR wagon ferry connections to Vancouver Island, between Prince Rupert and Alaska, and interchanges with American railways at southern border points. A metro line was opened in Vancouver in 1986 (29 km). A commuter rail service linking Vancouver and the Fraser Valley was established in 1995 (69 km).

Civil Aviation. International airports are located at Vancouver and Victoria. Total passenger arrivals and departures on scheduled services made by 33 foreign and domestic airlines were 15·5m. in 2001 at Vancouver and 1·1m. in 1997 at Victoria. Daily interprovincial and intraprovincial flights serve all main population centres. Small public and private airstrips are located throughout the province.

Shipping. The major ports are Vancouver (the largest dry cargo port on the North American Pacific coast), Prince Rupert and ports on the Fraser River. Other deepsea ports include Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Campbell River, Powell River, Kitimat, Stewart and Squamish. Total cargo shipped through the port of Vancouver during 2001 was 72·9m. tonnes. 1,060,000 cruise passengers visited Vancouver in 2001.

British Columbia Ferries—one of the largest ferry systems in the world— connect Vancouver Island with the mainland and also provide service to other coastal points; in 2000–01, 21·4m. passengers and 7·9m. vehicles were carried. Service by other ferry systems is also provided between Vancouver Island and the USA. The Alaska State Ferries connect Prince Rupert with centres in Alaska.

Telecommunications. The British Columbia Telephone Company had (1997) approximately 2·5m. customers. In 2000 there were 800,000 cellular phone subscribers in the province.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial system is composed of the Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court, County Courts, and various Provincial Courts, including Magistrates' Courts and Small Claims Courts. The federal courts include the Supreme Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Canada.

In 1998, 486,804 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 90 homicides.

Education. Education, free up to Grade XII level, is financed jointly from municipal and provincial government revenues. Attendance is compulsory from the age of five to 16. There were approximately 632,024 pupils enrolled in 1,779 public schools from kindergarten to Grade 12 in Sept. 2001.

The universities had a full-time enrolment of approximately 73,527 for 1998–99. Non-vocational enrolment at leading institutions: the University of British Columbia, 35,382 (2000–01); Simon Fraser University, 21,684 (autumn 2002); University of Victoria, 18,036 (Nov. 2002); University of Northern British Columbia, 3,582 (autumn 2001); Royal Roads University, 2,300 (2001–02). The regional colleges in 1996 were: Camosun College, Victoria; Capilano College, North Vancouver; Cariboo College, Kamloops; College of New Caledonia, Prince George; Douglas College, New Westminister; East Kootenay Community College, Cranbrook; Fraser Valley College, Chilliwack/Abbotsford; Kwantlen College, Surrey; Malaspina College, Nanaimo; North Island College, Comox; Northern Lights College, Dawson Creek/Fort St John; Northwest Community College, Terrace/Prince Rupert; Okanagan College, Kelowna with branches at Salmon Arm and Vernon; Selkirk College, Castlegar; Vancouver Community College, Vancouver; Langara College, Vancouver.

There are also the British Columbia Institute of Technology, Burnaby; Emily Carr College of Art and Design, Vancouver; Open Learning Institute, Richmond. A televised distance education and special programmes through KNOW, the Knowledge Network of the West, is provided.

Health. The government operates a hospital insurance scheme giving universal coverage after a qualifying period of three months' residence in the province. The province has come under a national medicare scheme which is partially subsidized by the provincial government and partially by the federal government. In March 2001 there were approximately 8,500 acute care and 500 rehabilitation hospital beds. The provincial government spent $9·8bn. CDN on health programmes during 2001–02. 40% of the government's total expenditure was for health care.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 2001 there were ten television broadcasting stations in operation, with 84% of households subscribing to cable television. In July 1997 there were 130 radio stations originating in British Columbia.

Tourism. British Columbia's greatest attractions are Vancouver, and the provincial parks and ecological reserves that make up the Protected Areas System. The entire Tatshenshini-Alsek region, almost 1m. ha in northwestern B.C., has been protected as a Class A provincial park and nominated as a World Heritage Site. In 2002 there were 13,302 campsites and 3,000 km of hiking trails. In 2001, 22·36m. tourists spent $9·2bn. CDN in the province.

MANITOBA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Manitoba was known as the Red River Settlement before it entered the dominion in 1870. During the 18th century its only inhabitants were fur-trappers, but a more settled colonization began in the 19th century. The area was administered by the Hudson's Bay Company until 1869 when it was purchased by the new dominion. In 1870 it was given provincial status. It was enlarged in 1881 and again in 1912 by the addition of part of the Northwest Territories.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 250,114 sq. miles (647,797 sq. km), of which 213,728 sq. miles are land and 36,386 sq. miles water. From north to south it is 1,225 km, and at the widest point it is 793 km.

Population estimate, 1 July 2002, was 1,150,848. The 2001 census showed the following figures for areas of population of over 10,000 people: Winnipeg, the province's capital and largest city, 671,274; City of Brandon, 39,716; City of Thompson, 13,256; City of Portage la Prairie, 12,978; Rural Municipality of Springfield, 12,602; Rural Municipality of Hanover, 10,789; Rural Municipality of St Andrews, 10,695.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2001–02 numbered 14,170 (a rate of 12·3 per 1,000 population) and deaths 10,304 (rate of 8·9 per 1,000 population). There were 6,410 marriages and 2,457 divorces in 2000.

CLIMATE

The climate is cold continental, with very severe winters but pleasantly warm summers. Rainfall amounts are greatest in the months May to Sept. Winnipeg, Jan. –3°F (–19·3°C), July 67°F (19·6°C). Annual rainfall 21" (539 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is administered by a Lieut.-Governor assisted by an Executive Council (Cabinet), which is appointed from and responsible to a Legislative Assembly of 57 members elected for five years. Women were enfranchised in 1916. The Electoral Division Act, 1955, created 57 single-member constituencies and abolished the transferable vote. There are 26 rural electoral divisions, and 31 urban electoral divisions. The province is represented by six members in the Senate and 14 in the House of Commons of Canada.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections to the Legislative Assembly held on 21 Sept. 1999 the New Democratic Party won 32 out of 57 seats (44·8% of the vote), the Progressive Conservative Party 24 seats (40·7%) and the Liberal Party 1 seat (13·3%). The Progressive Conservative Party had held office for the previous 11 years.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Peter M. Liba, CM, OM (appointed 1999).

The members of the New Democratic Party Ministry in Feb. 2003 were:

Premier, President of the Executive Council, Minister of Federal-Provincial Relations: Gary A. Doer.

Minister of Conservation: Steve Ashton. Labour and Immigration: Becky Barrett. Health: Dave Chomiak. Deputy Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs: Jean

ECONOMY

Real GDP for Manitoba in 2001 was $33·16bn. CDN, or $28,835 CDN per person.

Performance. Manitoba's economy grew 1·6% in real terms in 2001, down from 3% in 2000.

Banking and Finance. Provincial revenue and expenditure (current account, excluding capital expenditures, debt/pension repayment and transfers from/to the Fiscal Stabilization Fund) for fiscal years ending 31 March (in $1m. CDN):

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02[1]	2002–03[2]
Revenue	6,337	6,752	6,900	6,941
Expenditure	6,436	6,615	6,779	6,928

[1]Forecast. [2]Budgeted figure.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In the year ending 31 March 2002 the province's two electrical utilities, which had normal winter generating capacity at system peak of 5,175,000 kW, produced 32,633m. kWh of electricity. Most of this was produced by the provincially-owned Manitoba Hydro, with 1,106m. kWh produced by City of Winnipeg owned Winnipeg Hydro. In 2001–02 power purchases from elsewhere in Canada and the USA totalled 968m. kWh. Manitoba provided 20,529m. kWh to its domestic customers. Manitoba Hydro revenues from extra-provincial power sales increased $108m. CDN in the 2001–02 fiscal year to $588m. CDN. Energy sold outside Manitoba was 11,800m. kWh. Of the total extra-provincial revenue, $495m. CDN was derived from the US market and $93m. CDN came from sales to other Canadian provinces.

Oil and Gas. The value of oil production in 2001 was $135m. CDN, down 18% from 2000.

Minerals. Principal minerals mined are zinc, nickel, copper, gold and small quantities of silver. The value of mineral production declined 15% in 2001 to $1bn. CDN. Zinc accounted for 13% of the value of mineral production in 2001, down only slightly from 2000. In 2001 zinc prices dropped 21% but the volume of production increased by 17%.

Agriculture. Rich farmland is the main primary resource, although the area in farms is only about 14% of the total land area. In 2001 better prices and growth in livestock farm production volumes combined to boost total farm cash receipts by 17% to a new record level of $3·7bn. CDN. Market receipts rose 15·8%, receipts from livestock increased 16·4% and receipts from crops rose 14·9%. Various forms of income assistance to producers including crop insurance, income stabilization and adjustment programmes increased 32% in 2001 to $376m. CDN. The Manitoba Bureau of Statistics estimates that total accrued net income of farm operators increased 41·7% in 2001. Net cash income increased 46·4% to $917m. CDN.

Forestry. About 53% of the province is classified as forest zone, which includes 142,696 sq. km of productive forest land. In 2001 there were 211 primary roundwood producers with 3,317 direct employees. Primary wood producers were responsible for $1·1bn. CDN of shipments, of which $593·4m. CDN was the value of exports.

Fisheries. From about 57,000 sq. km of rivers and lakes, the value of fisheries production to fishers was about $32·2m. CDN in 2001–02 representing about 14,800 tonnes of fish. Whitefish, sauger, pickerel and pike are the principal varieties of fish caught.

INDUSTRY

Manitoba's diverse manufacturing sector is the province's largest industry, accounting for approximately 13% of total GDP, about 64% of total foreign exports and about 69% of exports to the US. The value of manufacturing shipments grew 1·1% in 2001 to $11·5bn. CDN.

Labour. Employment in Manitoba increased 0·6% or 3,500 to a total of 557,000 jobs in 2001. Part-time employment increased 2·5% while full-time employment increased 0·2%. Labour force growth outstripped the increase in employment, pushing unemployment rates up slightly by 0·1% to 5%, the second lowest rate among Canadian provinces. The labour force participation rate reached a record high of 68·1%, the second highest among Canadian provinces.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Products grown and manufactured in Manitoba find ready markets in other parts of Canada, in the USA, particularly the upper Midwest region, and in other countries.

Imports and Exports. Value of exports in 2001 totalled $9·36bn. CDN, up 7·4% from $8·71bn. CDN in 2000. Exports to the USA, which accounted for 80% of total merchandise exports, increased by 7·3% while non-US exports rose 7·9%. After the USA, the largest volume of exports went to Japan, Mexico, China, Belgium and Hong Kong respectively. In 2001 all major commodity industries posted merchandise export gains. Agriculture products, which equalled 19·8% of provincial exports, increased 15·4%, while other primary commodities, which accounted for 7·6% of exports, grew by 10·8%. Manufacturing exports, which comprised almost two-thirds of foreign commodity exports, rose 4·2%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Highways and provincial roads total 18,500 km, with 2,800 bridges and other structures. As of July 2002 there were 489,574 passenger vehicles (including taxis), 117,541 trucks, 51,625 farm trucks, 25,727 off-road vehicles and 8,834 motorcycles registered in the province.

Rail. The province has about 5,650 km of commercial track, not including industrial track, yards and sidings. Most of the track belongs to the country's two national railways. Canadian Pacific owns about 1,950 km and Canadian National about 2,400 km. The Hudson Bay Railway, operated by Denver-based Omnitrax, has about 1,300 km of track. Fort Worth-based Burlington Northern's railcars are moved in Manitoba on CN and CP tracks and trains.

Civil Aviation. There are 56 domestic commercial aviation operators flying from bases in Manitoba. Four are designated private; 47 air taxi companies are licensed to carry fewer than 10 passengers; and five commuter operations are licensed to carry up to 19 passengers. Fourteen national airlines are licensed to carry more than 19 passengers. Nine foreign airlines land in the province (cargo and passenger). In addition, 38 aerial services are licensed (largely for agricultural chemical spraying).

Telecommunications. In 2001 Manitoba Telecom Services provided 685,314 access lines to its network. It also had 206,447 cellular subscribers and 97,089 Internet access customers.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2001, 130,700 Criminal Code offences were reported in Manitoba (a ratio of 11,365 per 100,000 people), including 34 homicides (a ratio of 2·96 per 100,000 people).

Education. Education is controlled through locally elected school divisions. There were 206,653 students enrolled in the province's public, independent (private) and home schools in the 2001–02 school year. Student teacher ratios (including all instructors but excluding school-based administrators) averaged one teacher for every 18·5 students.

Manitoba has four universities with a total full- and part-time undergraduate and graduate enrolment for the 2002–03 academic year of 38,000. They are the University of Manitoba, founded in 1877; the University of Winnipeg; Brandon University; and the Collège universitaire de Saint Boniface.

Community colleges in Brandon, The Pas and Winnipeg offer 2-year diploma courses in a number of fields, as well as specialized training in many trades. They also give a large number and variety of shorter courses, both at their campuses and in many communities throughout the province. Provincial government expenditure on education and training for the 2002–03 fiscal year is budgeted at $1·52bn. CDN.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 2001 total tourism expenditure in Manitoba increased by 7·8% to $1,287m. CDN, including $775·6m. CDN (and 5,609,639 person visits) from elsewhere in Manitoba; $253m. CDN (868,385 visits) from the remainder of Canada; $183·5m. CDN (773,412 visits) from the USA; and $75·2m. CDN (95,200 visits) from overseas.

Festivals. Folklorama is a celebration of Canadian culture that takes place in over 40 multicultural pavilions each July. The Festival du Voyageur takes place in St Boniface each Feb. and is western Canada's biggest winter festival. Canada's National Ukrainian Festival takes place over a long weekend each Aug., and in mid-July there is the four-day Manitoba Stampede and Exhibition, one of Canada's largest rodeos.

Theatre and Opera. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is Canada's oldest ballet company.

Museums and Galleries. The Manitoba Museum has seven galleries showing the inter-relationship between man and the environment.

NEW BRUNSWICK

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Visited by Jacques Cartier in 1534, New Brunswick was first explored by Samuel de Champlain in 1604. With Nova Scotia, it originally formed one French colony called Acadia. It was ceded by the French in the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713 and became a permanent British possession in 1759. It was first settled by British colonists in 1764 but was separated from Nova Scotia, and became a province in June 1784 as a result of the great influx of United Empire Loyalists. Responsible government came into being in 1848 and consisted of an executive council, a legislative council (later abolished) and a House of Assembly. In 1867 New Brunswick entered the Confederation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 28,150 sq. miles (72,908 sq. km), of which 27,587 sq. miles (71,450 sq. km) is land area. The population at the 2001 census was 729,498. Based on the 2001 census, 30% were of 'Canadian' origin, 18% of New Brunswick's total population were of British Isles only ancestry and 16% had French only ancestry. Other significant ethnic groups were German, Dutch, Scottish and Irish. In 2001 there were 15,940 North American Indian, Métis or Inuit people in New Brunswick. Census 2001 population of urban centres: Saint John, 122,678; Moncton, 117,727; Fredericton (capital), 81,346; Bathurst, 23,935; Edmundston, 22,173; Campbellton, 16,265. The official languages are English and French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2002 numbered 7,179 (a rate of 9·8 per 1,000 population), and deaths 6,427 (rate of 8·8 per 1,000 population). There were 4,003 marriages and 1,482 divorces in 2000.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, with rain in all seasons but temperatures modified by the influence of the Gulf Stream. Annual average total precipitation in Fredericton: 1,131 mm. Warmest month, July (average high) 25·6°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the Queen's representative in New Brunswick, and a Legislative Assembly of 55 members, each of whom is individually elected to represent the voters in one constituency or riding. The political party with the largest number of elected representatives, after a Provincial election, forms the government. A simultaneous translation system is used in the Assembly. Any Canadian subject of full age and six months' residence is entitled to vote.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last provincial election was held on 7 June 1999. As of Dec. 2002 the Legislative Assembly consisted of 47 Progressive Conservatives, seven Liberals and one from the New Democratic Party. The province has ten appointed members in the Canadian Senate and elects ten members in the House of Commons.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Dr Marilyn Trenholme Counsell (appointed in April 1997).

The members of the Cabinet were as follows in Jan. 2003:

ECONOMY

GDP per capita in 2001 was $27,090 CDN. Personal income was $18,138m. CDN; personal income per capita was $23,960 CDN; personal disposable income was $14,327 CDN. The Consumer Price Index in 2002 was 118·6 (100 in 1992); and retail sales in 2001 were $7,070m. CDN.

Budget. The ordinary budget (in $1m. CDN) is shown as follows (financial years ended 31 March):

	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Gross revenue	4,474·1	4,486·4	4,366·6	4,707·2	4,707·2
Gross expenditure	4,439·2	4,650·7	4,297·6	4,488·0	4,725·2

Funded debt and capital loans outstanding (exclusive of Treasury Bills) as of 31 March 1998 was $6,685·1m. CDN. Sinking funds held by the province at 31 March 1999, $2,693·2m. CDN. The ordinary budget excludes capital spending.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Hydro-electric, thermal and nuclear generating stations of NB Power had an installed capacity of 3,769 MW at 31 March 2002, consisting of 15 generating stations. The Mactaquac hydro-electric development near Fredericton has a name plate capacity of 672 MW. The largest thermal generating station, Coleson Cove, near Saint John, has 998 MW of installed capacity. Atlantic Canada's first nuclear generating station, a 635 MW plant on a promontory in the Bay of Fundy, near Saint John, went into operation in 1983. New Brunswick is electrically interconnected with utilities in neighbouring provinces of Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, as well as the New England States of the USA. The sale of out-of-province power accounted for 27·2% of revenue in 2001–02. Total revenue amounted to $1,319m. CDN.

Oil and Gas. In 2001 major construction projects were the natural gas pipeline and the oil refinery expansion. Construction continues on the natural gas pipeline.

Minerals. In 2001 approximately 18 different metals, minerals and commodities were produced. These included lead, zinc, copper, cadmium, bismuth, gold, silver, antimony, potash, salt, lime, stone, gas, coal, sand and gravel, peat and marl. The total value of minerals produced in 2001 reached $789·2m. CDN. The top four contributors to mineral production are zinc, silver, lead and peat accounting for 73·5% of total value in 2001. In 2000 New Brunswick ranked first in Canada for the production of zinc, bismuth and lead, and second for silver and fifth for copper. Not all of the province's minerals have been explored sufficiently and research continues.

Agriculture. The total area under crops is estimated at 135,008 ha. Farms numbered 3,034 and averaged 149 ha each (census 2001). Potatoes accounted for 25·3% of total farm cash receipts in 2001. Mixed farming is common throughout the province. Dairy farming is centred around the larger urban areas, and is located mainly along the Saint John River Valley and in the southeastern sections of the province. Income from dairy products provides 16·6% of farm cash receipts. New Brunswick is self-sufficient in fluid milk and supplies a processing industry. For particulars of livestock, see CANADA: Agriculture. Farm cash receipts in 2001 were $411·7m. CDN.

Forestry. New Brunswick contains some 6m. ha of productive forest lands. The value of manufacturing shipments for the wood-related industries in 2001 was just over $3·7bn. CDN, representing 33% of total shipments in the province. The paper and allied industry group is the largest component of the industry, contributing 58·4% of forestry output. In 2001 nearly 16,000 people were employed in all aspects of the forest industry, including harvesting, processing and transportation. Practically all forest products are exported from the province's numerous ports and harbours, near which many of the mills are located, or sent by road or rail to the USA.

Fisheries. Commercial fishing is one of the most important primary industries of the province, employing 7,123 in 1999. Nearly 50 commercial species of fish and shellfish are landed, including scallop, shrimp, crab, herring and cod. Landings in 2000 (121,576 tonnes) amounted to $177m. CDN. In 2001 molluscs and crustaceans ranked first with a value of $153m. CDN, 87·6% of the total landed value; pelagic fish second, 10·7%; and groundfish third, 1·3%. Exports in 2001 totalled $655·8m. CDN, and went mainly to the USA and Japan.

INDUSTRY

New Brunswick's location, with deepwater harbours open throughout the year and container facilities at Saint John, makes it ideal for exporting. Some of the main industries include food and beverages, paper and allied industries, and timber products. Nearly 20% of the industrial labour force work in Saint John.

Labour. New Brunswick's labour force increased by 2·4% in 2002 to 385,700 while employment increased to 345,000. Goods producing industries employed 79,700 and the service-producing industries employed 253,700. In 2002 the participation rate rose to 63·5% and the unemployment rate was 10·4%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. The main exports of New Brunswick include lumber, woodpulp, newsprint, refined petroleum products and electricity. In 2001 the major trading partners of the province were the USA with 88·9% of total exports, followed by Japan with 2·1% and the UK with 1% of total exports. Exports reached $8,295·8m. CDN while imports totalled $5,626m. CDN in 2001.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 21,380 km of roads in the Provincial Highway system, of which 8,320 km consists of arterial, collector and local roads that provide access to most areas. The main highway system, including approximately 516 km of the Trans-Canada Highway, links the province with the principal roads in Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, as well as the Interstate Highway System in the eastern seaboard states of the USA. A new four-lane access highway between Fredericton and Moncton was completed in 2001. At 31 March 2001 total road motor vehicle registrations numbered 545,668 of which 372,680 were passenger automobiles, 155,195 were truck and truck tractors, 13,406 motorcycles and mopeds, and 4,387 other vehicles.

Rail. Brunswick is served by the Canadian National Railways, Springfield Terminal Railway, Van Buren Bridge Railway Company, New Brunswick Southern Railway, New Brunswick East Coast Railway, Le Chemin de fer de la Matapédia et du Golfe and VIA Rail. The Salem-Hillsborough rail and The Acadian Railway Company are popular with tourists.

Civil Aviation. There are three major airports at Fredericton, Moncton and Saint John. There are also a number of small regional airports.

Shipping. New Brunswick has five ports which provide a leading role in international trade. The Port of Saint John handles approximately 20m. tonnes of cargo each year including forest products, steel, potash and petroleum. In 2001, 52 cruise ships visited Saint John. The Port of Belledune is a deep-water port and open all year round. Other ports are Dalhousie, Bayside/St Andrews and Miramichi.

Telecommunications. In 1996 the New Brunswick Telephone Co. Ltd had 542,887 access lines in service.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2001, 52,900 Criminal Code offences were reported, including eight homicides.

Education. Public education is free and non-sectarian.

There were, in 2001–02, 122,792 students (including kindergarten) and 7,481 full-time equivalent/professional educational staff in the province's 349 schools. There are 14 school districts.

There are four universities. The University of New Brunswick at Fredericton (founded 13 Dec. 1785 by the Loyalists, elevated to university status in 1823, and reorganized as the University of New Brunswick in 1859) had 6,839 full-time students at the Fredericton campus and 2,292 full-time students at the Saint John campus (2002–03); the Université de Moncton at Moncton, 4,793 full-time students; St Thomas University at Fredericton, 2,750 full-time students; Mount Allison University at Sackville had 2,250 full-time students.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The province is served by 37 radio stations and a number of television stations, the majority of which broadcast exclusively in English; the remainder broadcast in French (some radio stations are bilingual).

Press. In 2002 New Brunswick had four daily newspapers (one in French), and 17 weekly newspapers, five in French and two bilingual.

Tourism. New Brunswick has a number of historic buildings as well as libraries, museums and other cultural sites. Tourism is one of the leading contributors to the economy. In 2002 tourism revenues reached $985m. CDN. Popular attractions include Magnetic Hill (Moncton), the Reversing Falls (Saint John) and the Hopewell Rocks Formation. There are two national parks (Fundy and Kouchibouguac) as well as a number of provincial parks and two historic settlements, Kings Landing (west of Fredericton) and an Acadian settlement.

Festivals. Festivals include: the Lobster Festival in Shediac, Fredericton Jazz and Blues Festival, Festival by the Sea in Saint John, the Irish Festival held in Miramichi and Le Festival Acadien de Caraquet.

Libraries. Fredericton's libraries include The Harriet Irving Library (located on the university campus) and Legislative Library (established 1841). There are also a number of regional libraries.

Theatre and Opera. Theatre New Brunswick is based at the Playhouse in Fredericton, and Symphony New Brunswick and Imperial Theatre are located in Saint John.

Museums and Galleries. The Beaverbrook Art Gallery and the Provincial Archives (both located in Fredericton) are two of the most notable galleries and museums. The New Brunswick Museum (one of the oldest) and Loyalist House are located in Saint John.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological finds at L'Anse-au-Meadow in northern Newfoundland show that the Vikings established a colony here in about AD 1000. This site is the only known Viking colony in North America. Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot on 24 June 1497, and was soon frequented in the summer months by the Portuguese, Spanish and French for its fisheries. It was formally occupied in Aug. 1583 by Sir Humphrey Gilbert on behalf of the English Crown but various attempts to colonize the island remained unsuccessful. Although British sovereignty was recognized in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, disputes over fishing rights with the French were not finally settled till 1904. By the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, France renounced her exclusive fishing rights along part of the coast, granted under the Treaty of Utrecht, but retained sovereignty of the offshore islands of St Pierre and Miquelon. Self-governing from 1855, the colony remained outside of the Canadian confederation in 1867 and continued to govern itself until 1934, when a commission of government appointed by the British Crown assumed responsibility for governing the colony and Labrador. This body controlled the country until union with Canada in 1949.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 405,212 sq. km (156,452 sq. miles), of which freshwater, 31,340 sq. km (12,100 sq. miles). In March 1927 the Privy Council decided the boundary between Canada and Newfoundland in Labrador. This area, now part of the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador, is 294,330 sq. km (113,641 sq. miles) of land area.

Newfoundland island's coastline is punctuated with numerous bays, fjords and inlets, providing many good deep water harbours. The interior is a plateau of moderate elevation. The highest peak of Long Range reaches 815 metres. Approximately one-third of the area is covered by water. Grand Lake, the largest body of water, has an area of about 530 sq. km. The principal rivers flow towards the northeast. Good agricultural land is generally found in the valleys of the Terra Nova River, the Gander River, the Exploits River and the Humber River, which are also heavily timbered. The Strait of Belle Isle separates the island from Labrador to the north. Bordering on the Canadian province of Quebec, Labrador is a vast, pristine wilderness and extremely sparsely populated (approximately 10 sq. km per person). Labrador's Lake Melville is 2,934 sq. km and its highest peak, Mount Caubvick, is 5,577 ft.

The population at the 2001 census was 512,930. The population is declining at a faster rate than any other Canadian province, with a drop of 7·0% between the censuses of 1996 and 2001.

The capital of the province is the City of St. John's (2001 population, 172,918 metropolitan area). The other cities are Mt Pearl (24,964 in 2001) and Corner Brook (20,103); important towns are Conception Bay South (19,772), Grand Falls-Windsor (13,340), Gander (9,651), Paradise (9,598), Happy Valley-Goose Bay (7,969), Labrador City (7,744), Stephenville (7,101), Marystown (5,908), Portugal Cove-St

Philip's (5,866), Bay Roberts (5,237), Clarenville (5,104), Channel-Port aux Basques (4,637).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2001–02 numbered 4,689 (a rate of 8·8 per 1,000 population), and deaths 4,420 (rate of 8·3 per 1,000 population). There were 3,025 marriages and 936 divorces in 2000.

CLIMATE

The cool temperate climate is marked by heavy precipitation, distributed evenly over the year, a cool summer and frequent fogs in spring. St. John's, Jan. –4°C, July 15·8°C. Annual rainfall 1,240 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Until 1832 Newfoundland was ruled by the Governor under instructions of the Colonial Office. In that year a Legislature was brought into existence, but the Governor and his Executive Council were not responsible to it. Under the constitution of 1855, which lasted until its suspension in 1934, the government was administered by the Governor appointed by the Crown with an Executive Council responsible to the House of Assembly of 27 elected members, and a Legislative Council of 24 members nominated for life by the Governor in Council. Women were enfranchised in 1925. At the Imperial Conference of 1917 Newfoundland was constituted as a Dominion.

In 1933 the financial situation had become so critical that the government of Newfoundland asked the government of the UK to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate conditions. On the strength of their recommendations, the parliamentary form of government was suspended and Government by Commission was inaugurated on 16 Feb. 1934.

A National Convention, elected in 1946, made recommendations to H. M. government in Great Britain in 1948 as to the possible forms of future government to be submitted to the people at a national referendum. Two referenda were held. In the first referendum (June 1948) the three forms of government submitted to the people were: commission of government for five years; confederation with Canada; and responsible government as it existed in 1933. No one form of government received a clear majority of the votes polled, and commission of government, receiving the fewest votes, was eliminated. In the second referendum (July 1948) confederation with Canada received 78,408 and responsible government 71,464 votes.

In the Canadian Senate on 18 Feb. 1949 Royal Assent was given to the terms of union of Newfoundland and Labrador with Canada, and on 23 March 1949, in the House of Lords, London, Royal assent was given to an amendment to the British North America Act, made necessary by the inclusion of Newfoundland and Labrador as the tenth Province of Canada.

Under the terms of union of Newfoundland and Labrador with Canada, which was signed at Ottawa on 11 Dec. 1948, the constitution of the Legislature of Newfoundland and Labrador as it existed immediately prior to 16 Feb. 1934 shall, subject to the terms of the British North America Acts, 1867 to 1946, continue as the constitution of the Legislature of the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador until altered under the authority of the said Acts.

The House of Assembly (Amendment) Act, 1979, established 52 electoral districts and 52 members of the Legislature. The province is represented by six members in the Senate and by seven members in the House of Commons of Canada. The franchise was in 1965 extended to all male and female residents who have attained the age of 19 years and are otherwise qualified as electors.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 9 Feb. 1999. In Jan. 2003 there were 27 Liberals, 19 Progressive Conservatives and 2 New Democrats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Edward M. Roberts (assumed office 1 Nov. 2002).

In Feb. 2003 the Liberal Cabinet was composed as follows:

Premier: Roger Grimes.

ECONOMY

GDP growth for 2002 was expected to be 7·5%.

Budget. Government budget in $1,000 CDN in fiscal years ending 31 March:

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03[1]
Gross Revenue	3,595,106	3,800,799	3,840,165
Gross Expenditure	3,475,062	3,684,975	3,826,879

[1]Estimate.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Newfoundland and Labrador is currently served by two physically independent electrical systems with a total of 7,401 MW of operational electrical generating capacity. The island of Newfoundland is served by an isolated system of approximately 1,890 MW of electrical capacity, of which about 64% is hydro-electric. Of the total provincial generating capacity, 5,511 MW are located in Labrador, with the majority from the Churchill Falls hydro-electric facility rated at 5,428 MW. In 2001 total provincial electricity generation equalled 40·9bn. kWh, of which about 95% was from hydro-electric sources. Of this total, 29·7bn. kWh (or 73%), from the Churchill Falls hydro-electric facility, was exported and sold to Hydro-Québec. During 2001 total electrical energy load was 11·2bn. kWh (including system losses), with about 71% of this demand located on the island portion of the province and 29% in Labrador. The province is currently reviewing options for the development of a 2,000 MW hydroelectric generating facility at the Gull Island site located on the Lower Churchill River in Labrador.

Oil and Gas. Since 1965, 140 wells have been drilled on the Continental Margin of the Province. Only the Hibernia discovery had commercial capability with production starting in the early 1990s. In 2001 oil production from Hibernia reached 54·3m. bbls. 2002 production was expected to increase to around 60m. bbls. The Terra Nova development produced oil in Jan. 2002 and is permitted to produce almost 55m. bbls. annually.

Minerals. The mineral resources are vast but only partially documented. Large deposits of iron ore, with an ore reserve of over 5,000m. tonnes at Labrador City, Wabush City and in the Knob Lake area, are supplying approximately half of Canada's production. Other large deposits of iron ore are known to exist in the Julienne Lake area. There are a variety of other minerals being produced in more limited amounts. The Central Mineral Belt, which extends from the Smallwood Reservoir to the Atlantic coast near Makkovik, holds uranium, copper, beryllium and molybdenite potential. Staking activity has increased since 2000 because of exploration for nickel and platinum-palladium in Labrador and gold in central Newfoundland.

The percentage share of mineral shipment value in 2001 stood at 92·6% for iron ore; 2·2%, gold; 5·2%, structural metals. The value of mineral shipments in 2001 totalled $819m. CDN, a drop of 16% owing to reduced demand in key markets.

Agriculture. The value of farm production in 2001 was $81·3m. CDN, an increase of 11·9% on 2000.

Forestry. The forestry economy in the province is mainly dependent on the operation of three newsprint mills—Corner Brook Pulp and Paper and Abitibi-Consolidated (which operates two mills). In 2002 the estimated value of newsprint exported totalled $541m. CDN, a decrease of 20% over 2001. Lumber mills and saw-log operations produced 144m. flat bd ft in 2001–02.

Fisheries. Closure of the northern cod and other groundfish fisheries has resulted in changes to the structure of the fishing industry. New resource opportunities, secondary seafood production and aquaculture are the main focus today with over 100 commercial or developing aquaculture operations generating $20m. CDN in exports in 2001. The Newfoundland and Labrador fishery registered a production value of $883m. CDN. The total catch in 2001 decreased by 4% to 257,000 tonnes valued at $496m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

The total value of manufacturing shipments in 2001 was $2·2bn. CDN. This consisted largely of fish products, refined petroleum and newsprint.

Labour. In 2002 those in employment numbered 213,900 with 12,400 workers employed in manufacturing. The unemployment rate was 16·9% in 2002 (16·1% in 2001).

Trade Unions. In 2001 union membership was 40% of the employed workforce, the highest in any Canadian province. The Newfoundland and Labrador Federation of Labour (NLFL) has 50,000 members; the Newfoundland and Labrador Association of Public and Private Employees (NAPE) has 19,000.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 8,938 km of roads, of which 6,990 were paved. In 2001 there were 360,375 motor vehicles registered, including 226,292 passenger cars.

Rail. In 1997 the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway operated both freight and passenger services on its 588 km main line from Sept-Iles, Quebec, to Shefferville, Quebec and its 58 km spur line from Ross Bay Junction to Labrador City, Newfoundland. In 1996 freight totalled 20·8m. tonnes (iron ore, 20·0m. tonnes).

Civil Aviation. The province is linked to the rest of Canada by regular air services provided by Air Canada, Quebecair and a number of smaller air carriers.

Shipping. At Jan. 2003 there were 1,799 ships on register in Newfoundland. Marine Atlantic, a federal crown corporation, provides a freight and passenger service all year round from Channel-Port aux Basques to North Sydney, Nova Scotia; and seasonal ferries connect Argentia with North Sydney, and Lewisporte with Goose Bay, Labrador.

Telecommunications. There were 459 full service post office outlets in March 1996. Telephone access lines numbered 262,856 in 1993 (193,987 private). There were 3,384 public pay phones.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2001, 33,079 Criminal Code offences were reported, including one homicide.

Education. In 2001–02 total enrolment for elementary and secondary education was 86,898; full time teachers numbered 6,264; total number of schools was 326. The Memorial University, offering courses in arts, science, engineering, education, nursing and medicine, had 14,000 full-time students in 1999–2000.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 2001, 427,700 non-resident tourists (408,500 in 1999) spent approximately $289m. CDN in the province. In 2001 the 100th anniversary of Marconi's transatlantic transmission from St John's was celebrated.

NOVA SCOTIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Nova Scotia was visited by John and Sebastian Cabot in 1497–98. In 1605 a number of French colonists settled at Port Royal. The old name of the colony, Acadia, was changed in 1621 to Nova Scotia. The French were granted possession of the colony by the Treaty of St-Germain-en-Laye (1632). In 1654 Oliver Cromwell sent a force to occupy the settlement. Charles II, by the Treaty of Breda (1667), restored Nova Scotia to the French. It was finally ceded to the British by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. In the Treaty of Paris (1763) France resigned all claims and in 1820 Cape Breton Island united with Nova Scotia. Representative government was granted as early as 1758 and a fully responsible legislative assembly was established in 1848. In 1867 the province entered the dominion of Canada.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 21,345 sq. miles (55,284 sq. km), of which 20,594 sq. miles are land area and 751 sq. miles water area. The population at the 2001 census was 908,007.

Population of the principal cities (2001 census): Halifax, 119,292; Dartmouth, 65,741. Principal towns (2001 estimates): Bedford, 16,603; Truro, 12,264; New Glasgow, 10,060; Amherst, 9,718; Bridgewater, 7,778; Yarmouth, 7,565; Kentville, 5,536.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2001–02 numbered 8,918 (a rate of 9·4 per 1,000 population), and deaths 8,104 (rate of 8·6 per 1,000 population). There were 5,035 marriages in 2001 and 1,949 divorces in 2000.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, with rainfall occurring evenly over the year. The Gulf Stream moderates the temperatures in winter so that ports remain ice-free. Halifax, Jan. 23·7°F (–4·6°C), July 63·5°F (17·5°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,371 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the British North America Act of 1867 the legislature of Nova Scotia may exclusively make laws in relation to local matters, including direct taxation within the province, education and the administration of justice. The legislature of Nova Scotia consists of a Lieut.-Governor, appointed and paid by the federal government, and holding office for five years, and a House of Assembly of 52 members, chosen by popular vote at least every five years. The province is represented in the Canadian Senate by ten members, and in the House of Commons by 11.

The franchise and eligibility to the legislature are granted to every person, male or female, if of age (18 years), a British subject or Canadian citizen, and a resident in the province for six months before the date of the writ of election in the county or electoral district of which the polling district forms part, and if not by law otherwise disqualified.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the provincial elections of 27 July 1999 the Progressive Conservatives won 30 seats (57·7% of the vote), the New Democratic Party 11 seats (21·2%) and the Liberals 11 (21·2%). Turn-out was 68·8%. As of Oct. 2002 the standings were: 31 Progressive Conservatives, 11 New Democratic Party and 10 Liberals.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Myra Freeman, ONS.

The members of the Progressive Conservative Ministry in Feb. 2003 were:

Premier, President of the Executive Council and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs: John F. Hamm.

Deputy Premier, Deputy President of the Executive Council, Minister of Environment and Labour and Government House Leader: Ronald Russell. Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries and of the Public Service Commission: Gordon Balser. Justice and Attorney General: Jamie Muir. Transportation and Public Works, Responsible for Aboriginal Affairs: Michael Baker, QC. Tourism and Culture, Minister of the Office of Health Promotion: Rodney MacDonald. Energy: Ernest Page. Minister of Service Nova Scotia and Municipal Relations: Peter Christie. Finance and Responsible for Acadian Affairs: Neil LeBlanc. Education: Angus MacIsaac. Health, Chair of the Senior Citizens' Secretariat: Jane Purves. Community Services: David Morse. Economic Development: Cecil Clarke. Natural Resources: Timothy Olive.

[1]Actual. [2]Forecast. [3]Estimate.

Performance. GDP (market prices) was $25,203m. CDN in 2001, an increase of just over 4% on 2000. GDP per person in 2001 was $26,726 CDN.

Banking and Finance. Revenue is derived from provincial sources, payments from the federal government under the equalization agreements and the Canada Health and Social Transfer (CHST). Recoveries consist generally of amounts received under various federal cost-shared programmes. Main sources of provincial revenues include income and sales taxes.

In the fourth quarter of 2001 total deposits with chartered banks totalled $7,688m. CDN.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was officially adopted in 1983, but measurement in the imperial system is still widespread.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 2001 production was 11,824,531 kWh, of which 94% came from thermal sources and the rest from hydro-electric, wind and tidal sources.

Oil and Gas. Significant finds of offshore natural gas are currently under development. Gas is flowing to markets in Canada and the USA (the pipeline was completed in 1999). Total marketable gas receipts for the first quarter of 2002 was 1·3bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Principal minerals in 2001 were: coal, 1·1m. tonnes, valued at $53·6m. CDN; gypsum, 6·7m. tonnes, valued at $76·0m. CDN; stone, 8·4m. tonnes, valued at $51·9m. CDN. Total value of mineral production in 2001 was $1·4bn. CDN.

Agriculture. Dairying, poultry and egg production, livestock and fruit growing are the most important branches. Farm cash receipts for 2001 were $418·4m. CDN. Cash receipts from sale of dairy products were $95·9m. CDN, with total milk and cream sales of 176,052,000 litres. The production of poultry meat in 2001 was 36,066 tonnes, of which 32,302 tonnes were chicken and 3,764 tonnes were turkey. Egg production in 2001 was 17·8m. dozen.

The main fruit crops in 2001 were apples, 35,385 tonnes; blueberries, 13,032 tonnes; strawberries, 1,449 tonnes.

Forestry. The estimated forest area of Nova Scotia is 15,830 sq. miles (40,990 sq. km), of which about 28% is owned by the province. The principal trees are spruce, balsam fir, hemlock, pine, larch, birch, oak, maple, poplar and ash. 6,182,686 cu. metres of roundforest products were produced in 2001.

Fisheries. The fisheries of the province in 2001 had a landed value of $753m. CDN of sea fish; including scallop fishery, $111·9m. CDN; and lobster fishery, $362m. CDN. In 1999 there were 8,700 employees in the fish-processing industry; the value of shipment of goods was $755m. CDN. In 2000 there were 14,005 fishermen and 4,984 vessels.

INDUSTRY

The number of manufacturing establishments was 634 in 1999; the number of employees was 37,617; wages and salaries, $1,279m. CDN. The value of shipments in 1999 was $7,915m. CDN, and the leading industries were food, paper production, and plastic and rubber products.

Labour. In 2001 the labour force was 468,900 (221,600 females), of whom 423,200 (201,700) were employed.

Trade Unions. Total union membership in 2001 was 107,800. In 1997 there were 78 unions comprised of 653 individual locals. The largest union membership was in the service sector, followed by public administration and defence.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total of imports and exports to and from Nova Scotia (in $1m. CDN):

	1998	1999	2000	2001
Imports	5,099	4,524	5,429	5,502
Exports	3,440	3,985	4,710	4,710

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 26,000 km of highways, of which 13,600 km were paved. The Trans Canada and 100 series highways are limited access, all-weather, rapid transit routes. The province's first toll road opened in Dec. 1997. Acadian Lines provides a bus link to most major communities in the province and there are also a number of regional and local bus services. In the fiscal year 2000–01 total road vehicle registrations numbered 544,407 and over 632,027 persons had road motor vehicle operators licences.

Rail. The province has a 700 km network of mainline track operated predominantly by Canadian National Railways. The Cape Breton and Central Nova Scotia Railway operates between Truro and Cape Breton Island. The Windsor and Hantsport Railway operates in the Annapolis Valley region. VIA Rail operates the Ocean for six days a week, a transcontinental service between Halifax and Montreal.

Civil Aviation. There is direct air service to all major Canadian points, and international scheduled services to Boston, New York, Bermuda, London, Glasgow and Amsterdam. There are winter charter services to Florida and the Caribbean. Halifax International Airport is the largest airport, and there are also major airports at Yarmouth and Sydney.

Shipping. Ferry services connect Nova Scotia to the provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick as well as to the USA. The deep-water, ice-free Port of Halifax handles about 14m. tonnes of cargo annually. Direct container service is provided to the USA, Europe, Asia, Australia/New Zealand and the Caribbean. There are numerous smaller ports.

Telecommunications. In 1996 there were 565,874 access lines (372,794 residential and 193,080 business). There were 59·8 access lines per 100 population and 98·3% of households had telephones.

Postal Services. The postal service is provided by the Federal Crown Corporation Canada Post.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court (Trial Division and Appeal Division) is the superior court of Nova Scotia and has original and appellate jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters unless they have been specifically assigned to another court by Statute. An appeal from the Supreme Court, Appeal Division, is to the Supreme Court of Canada. The other courts in the Province are the Provincial Court, which hears criminal matters only, the Small Claims Court, which has limited monetary jurisdiction, Probate Court, County Court, which has jurisdiction in criminal matters as well as original jurisdiction over actions not exceeding $50,000 CDN, and Family Court. Young offenders are tried in the Family Court or the Provincial Court.

For the year ending 31 March 2001 there were 1,624 admissions to provincial sentenced custody. In 2001, 71,990 Criminal Code offences were reported, including nine homicides.

Religion. The population is predominantly Christian. In 1991, 37·2% were Roman Catholic, 17·2% were United Church, 14·4% Anglicans, 11·1% Baptist and 3·5% Presbyterian.

Education. Public education in Nova Scotia is free, compulsory and undenominational through elementary and high school. Attendance is compulsory to the age of 16. There were 511 elementary-secondary public schools, with 9,444 full-time teachers and 149,111 pupils, in 2000–01, plus the Nova Scotia Youth Centres for young offenders in Shelburne and in Waterville. The province has ten degree-granting institutions. The Nova Scotia Agricultural College is located at Truro. The Technical University of Nova Scotia, which grants degrees in engineering and architecture, amalgamated with Dalhousie University and is now known as DalTech. Through the Nova Scotia Community College, the Department of Education administers 13 college campuses, including two vocational training centres, two institutes of technology, a nautical institute, plus the College de l'Acadie, the French component of the Nova Scotia Community College. There are also seven teaching hospitals.

The Nova Scotia government offers financial support and organizational assistance to local school boards for provision of weekend and evening courses in academic and vocational subjects, and citizenship for new Canadians.

Health. A provincial retail sales tax of 8% provides funds for free hospital in-patient care up to ward level and free medically required services of physicians. Health service programmes in the province are administered by the Department of Health and operated in conjunction with Maritime Medical Care Inc. Prescription service is available to those over 65 years for a minimum fee. The Queen Elizabeth II Hospital in Halifax is the overall referral hospital for the province and, in many instances, for the Atlantic region. The Izaak Walton Killam Hospital provides similar regional specialization for children.

Welfare. General and specialized welfare services in the province are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Community Services. The provincial government funds all of the costs. The Employment Support and Income Assistance Act provides financial assistance to individuals or families where the cause of need is likely to be of a prolonged nature. Qualifying groups include the aged, disabled, unemployable, foster parents and disabled parents.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Nova Scotia has 26 radio stations and nine television stations. In 1996 there were 85 operating cable television systems with 243,683 subscribers.

Press. Nova Scotia has approximately 50 newspapers, including eight dailies. Daily newspapers with the largest circulations are The Chronicle Herald and Mail-Star of Halifax, The Daily News of Dartmouth, and The Cape Breton Post of Sydney.

Tourism. Tourism revenues were $1·2bn. CDN in 2001. Total number of visitors in 2001 was 2,143,700.

Festivals. Main festivals include the International Buskers Festival and the Atlantic Jazz Festival in Halifax, the Apple Blossom Festival in the Annapolis Valley and the Celtic Colours Festival in Cape Breton.

Libraries. The Halifax Regional Municipality is serviced by the Halifax Regional Library system. There is also a comprehensive university library system which connects the many university and community college libraries in the province.

Museums and Galleries. Nova Scotia has a large number of museums and galleries, including the Nova Scotia Museum and the Nova Scotia Art Gallery in Halifax, and the Fisheries Museum in Lunenburg.

ONTARIO

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The French explorer Samuel de Champlain explored the Ottawa River from 1613. The area was governed by the French, first under a joint stock company and then as a royal province, from 1627 and was ceded to Great Britain in 1763. A constitutional act of 1791 created there the province of Upper Canada, largely to accommodate loyalists of English descent who had immigrated after the United States war of independence. Upper Canada entered the Confederation as Ontario in 1867.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 415,596 sq. miles (1,076,395 sq. km), of which some 354,340 sq. miles (917,741 sq. km) are land area and some 61,256 sq. miles (158,654 sq. km) are lakes and fresh water rivers. The province extends 1,050 miles (1,690 km) from east to west and 1,075 miles (1,730 km) from north to south. It is bounded in the north by the Hudson and James Bays, in the east by Quebec, in the west by Manitoba, and in the south by the USA, the Great Lakes and the St Lawrence Seaway.

The census population in 2001 was 11,410,046. Population of the principal cities (2001 census):

Toronto[1]	2,481,494	Markham	208,615	Richmond Hill	132,030
Ottawa	774,072	Windsor	208,402	St Catharines	129,170
Mississauga	612,925	Kitchener	190,399	East York[1]	115,185
North York[1]	608,288	Thunder Bay	190,016	Cambridge	110,372
Scarborough[1]	593,297	Vaughan	182,022	Gloucester	110,264
Hamilton	490,286	Burlington	150,836	Guelph	106,170

Gross revenue	52,488	55,786	62,931	64,682	66,544
Gross expenditure	56,454	57,788	61,909	61,101	63,336

[1]Estimate.

Gross revenue and expenditure figures reflect accrual and consolidation accounting as recommended by the Public Sector Accounting and Auditing Board of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. Transactions on behalf of Ontario Hydro are excluded.

Performance. In 2000 real GDP grew at a rate of 5·3% (5·7% in 1999).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Ontario Hydro recorded for the calendar year 1999 an installed generating capacity of 31,000 MW. Primary energy made available (1998), 139bn. kWh. In 1999 there were 69 hydro-electric, six fossil fuel and five nuclear stations operating. The industry has since been deregulated and Ontario Power Generation now has the province's 80 generating stations. In 1999 Ontario Hydro served 108 direct industrial customers, almost 1m. retail customers (homes, farms and small businesses) and 255 municipal utilities, who in turn serve over 3m. customers.

Oil and Gas. Ontario is Canada's leading petroleum refining region. The province's five refineries have an annual capacity of 170m. bbls. (27m. cu metres).

Minerals. The total value of mineral production in 1998 was $5,126,995,000 CDN. In 1999 the most valuable commodities (production in $1m. CDN) were: nickel, 1,139·9; gold, 1,016·4; cement, 511·2; copper, 485·8; sand and gravel, 408·3; stone, 385·7. Total direct employment in the mining industry was 10,667 (9,609, metals; 1,061 non-metals) in 1999.

Agriculture. In 2001, 59,728 census farms operated on 5,466,256 ha, with total farm receipts of $8·49bn. CDN.

Forestry. The forested area totals 69·1m. ha, approximately 65% of Ontario's total area. Composition of Ontario forests: conifer, 56%; mixed, 26%; deciduous, 18%. The total growing stock (62% conifer, 38% hardwood) equals 5·3bn. cu. metres with an annual harvest level of 23m. cu. metres.

INDUSTRY

Ontario is Canada's most industrialized province, with GDP in 2000 at $429,530m. CDN, or 41·8% of the Canadian total. Manufacturing accounts for 20·1% of Ontario's GDP.

Leading manufacturing industries include: motor vehicles and parts; office and industrial electrical equipment; food processing; chemicals; and steel.

In 1998 Ontario was responsible for about 54% ($171,870m. CDN) of Canada's merchandise exports; motor vehicles and parts accounted for about 45%.

Labour. In 2000 the labour force was 6,288,000, of whom 5,872,000 were employed. The major employers were: manufacturing, 1,098·7; trade, 874·3 (wholesale, 209·1; retail, 665·3); health care and social assistance, 544·4; professional, scientific and technical services, 423·5; finance and insurance, 385·3. The unemployment rate in 2000 was 5·7%. In 1999 total labour income was $185,099m. CDN.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Ontario's exports rose by 11·2% in 1998 following a rise of 10·6% in 1997. Imports rose by 10·3% in 1998 following a rise of 17·8% in 1997. In 2000 exports totalled $314,752m. and imports totalled $267,352m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Almost 40% of the population of North America is within one day's drive of Ontario. There were, in 1998, 159,456 km of roads (municipal, 143,000; provincial MTO, 16,456). Motor licences (on the road) numbered (1999) 8,961,741, of which 5,521,803 were passenger cars, 1,189,414 commercial vehicles, 27,938 buses, 1,616,152 trailers, 103,469 motorcycles and 361,292 snow vehicles.

Rail. In 1999 there were 14 provincial short lines plus the provincially-owned Ontario Northland Railway and 12 federal railways. The Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways operate in Ontario. Total track miles, approximately 12,500 km. There is a metro and tramway network in Toronto.

Civil Aviation. Toronto's Lester B. Pearson International Airport is Canada's busiest, serving approximately 29m. passengers annually.

Shipping. The Great Lakes/St. Lawrence Seaway, a 3,747 km system of locks, canal and natural water connecting Ontario to the Atlantic Ocean, has 95,000 sq. miles of navigable waters and serves the water-borne cargo needs of 4 Canadian provinces and 17 American States.

Telecommunications. The telephone service in 1998 was provided by 30 independent systems and Bell Canada.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2000 there were 6,421 criminal code offences per 100,000 population, compared to a national average of 7,655 per 100,000 population.

Education. There is a provincial system of publicly financed elementary and secondary schools as well as private schools. In 1997–98 publicly financed elementary and secondary schools had a total enrolment of 2,103,586 pupils. In 2001–02, of the $64,270m. CDN total expenditure, 18·5% was on education.

There are 18 universities (Brock, Carleton, Dominicain, Guelph, Lakehead, Laurentian, McMaster, Nipissing, Ottawa, Queen's, Ryerson, Toronto, Trent, Waterloo, Western Ontario, Wilfred Laurier, Windsor and York) and 1 institute of equivalent status (Ontario College of Art and Design) with full-time enrolment for 1998–99 of 229,241. All receive operating grants from the Ontario government. There are also 25 publicly financed Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology (CAAT), with a full-time enrolment of 136,170 in 1998–99.

Operating expense (including capital expense) by the Ontario government on education for 1997–98 was $9,470m. CDN.

Health. Ontario Health Insurance Plan healthcare services are available to eligible Ontario residents at no cost. The Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP) is funded, in part, by an Employer Health Tax.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first recorded European visit was by Jacques Cartier in 1534, who named it Isle St-Jean. In 1719 it was settled by the French, but was taken from them by the English in 1758, annexed to Nova Scotia in 1763, and constituted a separate colony in 1769. Named Prince Edward Island in honour of Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, in 1799, it joined the Canadian Confederation on 1 July 1873.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The province lies in the Gulf of St Lawrence, and is separated from the mainland of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by Northumberland Strait. The area of the island is 2,185 sq. miles (5,660 sq. km). The population at the 2001 census was 135,294. Population of the principal cities (2001): Charlottetown (capital), 32,245; Summerside, 14,654.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 1,473 (a rate of 10·7 per 1,000 population), and deaths 1,255 (rate of 9·1 per 1,000 population). There were 866 marriages and 279 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

The cool temperate climate is affected in winter by the freezing of the St. Lawrence, which reduces winter temperatures. Charlottetown, Jan. –3°C to –11°C, July 14°C to 23°C. Annual rainfall 853·5 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is administered by a Lieut.-Governor-in-Council (Cabinet) and a Legislative Assembly of 27 members who are elected for up to five years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections on 17 April 2000 the Progressive Conservatives won 26 of the available 27 seats and the Liberals took the other seat.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: J. Léonce Bernard, OPEI (sworn in 28 May 2001).

The Executive Council was composed as follows in Feb. 2003:

Premier, President of the Executive Council and Minister Responsible for Intergovernmental Affairs: Patrick G. Binns.

Provincial Treasurer: Patricia Mella. Minister for Development and Technology: Michael Currie. Agriculture and Forestry: P. Mitchell Murphy. Education and Environment: Chester Gillan. Health and Social Services: Jamie Ballem. Fisheries, Aquaculture: Greg Deighan. Attorney General and Tourism: Jeff Lantz. Transportation and Public Works: Gail Shea. Community and Cultural Affairs: Elmer MacFadyen.

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. Revenue and expenditure (in $1,000 CDN) for five financial years ending 31 March:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Revenue	738,855	812,461	802,579	801,143	804,387
Expenditure	810,199	821,422	797,937	818,747	821,156

Per capita personal income was $18,713 CDN in 1999.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Prince Edward Island's electricity consumption in 1998 reached a provincial record of 948,890 MWh, an increase of 2·7% over the preceding year. All but 1% was accessed from other provinces, via an underwater cable which spans the Northumberland Strait.

Oil and Gas. In 1999 Prince Edward Island had more than 400,000 ha under permit for oil and natural gas exploration.

Agriculture. Total area of farmland occupies approximately half of the total land area of 566,177 ha. Farm cash receipts in 1996 were $294m. CDN, with cash receipts from potatoes accounting for about 50% of the total. Cash receipts from dairy products, cattle and hogs followed in importance. For particulars of livestock, see CANADA: Agriculture.

Forestry. Total forested area is 280,000 ha. Of this 87% is owned by 12,000 woodlot owners. Most of the harvest takes place on private woodlots. The forest cover is 23% softwood, 29% hardwood and 48% mixed wood. In 1998 harvesting and processing had a delivered value of around $29m. CDN plus $7·5m. CDN in value added processing by the sawmill industry. Secondary processing contributed another $10m. CDN or so in 1998.

Fisheries. The total catch of 130m. lb in 1998 had a landed value of $122m. CDN. Lobsters accounted for $81m. CDN, around two-thirds of the total value; other shellfish, $30m. CDN; pelagic and estuarial, $9·2m. CDN; groundfish, $0·8m. CDN; seaplants, $1·1m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

Value of manufacturing shipments for all industries in 1998 was $885·6m. CDN. In 1997 provincial GDP in constant prices for manufacturing was $273·5m. CDN; construction, $132·0m. CDN. In 1996 the total value of retail trade was $1,003·0m. CDN.

Labour. The average weekly wage (industrial aggregate) fell from $491·04 CDN in 1997 to $475·13 CDN in 1998. The labour force averaged 71,000 in 1997, while employment averaged 60,100 in 1995.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1999 there were 3,500 km of paved highway and 1,900 km of unpaved road as well as 1,200 bridge structures. The Confederation Bridge, a 12·9 km two-lane bridge that joins Borden-Carleton with Cape Jourimain in New Brunswick, was opened in June 1997. A bus service operates twice daily to the mainland.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 Air Canada provided daily services between Charlottetown and Boston, Fredericton, Halifax and Toronto. Canadian Airlines International operated daily services to Boston and Halifax, and there were also services to Moncton, Montreal and St John.

Shipping. Modern car ferries link the Island to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Service is provided year-round to New Brunswick on schedules which vary from 14 to 20 return crossings daily, with ice-breaking ferries maintaining the service during the winter months. Ferry service is operated to Nova Scotia from late April to mid-Dec. on schedules ranging from nine to 19 return crossings daily. A third ferry service, to the Magdalen Islands (Quebec), operates from 1 April to 31 Jan. There is also a substantial water movement of certain commodities, primarily through the ports of Summerside and Charlottetown, with additional capacity provided at the Souris and Georgetown ports.

Telecommunications. In 1999 there were 88,577 telephone lines in service.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1998, 8,561 Criminal Code offences were reported, including no homicides.

Education. Under the regional school boards there were in 1998 a total of 65 public schools, 1,427 teaching positions and 24,365 students. There is one undergraduate university (2,401 full-time and 7,477 part-time students), a veterinary college (197 students), and a Master of Science programme (25 students), all in Charlottetown. Holland College provides training for employment in business, applied arts and technology, with approximately 2,300 full-time students in post-secondary and vocational career programmes. The college offers extensive academic and career preparation programmes for adults.

Estimated government expenditure on education, 2000–01, $183·4m. CDN.

CULTURE

Tourism. The value of the tourist industry was estimated at $245·9m. CDN in 1997, with 371,500 tourist parties.

QUEBEC—QUÉBEC

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Quebec was known as New France from 1534 to 1763; as the province of Quebec from 1763 to 1790; as Lower Canada from 1791 to 1846; as Canada East from 1846 to 1867, and when, by the union of the four original provinces, the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada was formed, it again became known as the province of Quebec (Québec).

The Quebec Act, passed by the British Parliament in 1774, guaranteed to the people of the newly conquered French territory in North America security in their religion and language, their customs and tenures, under their own civil laws.

In a referendum on 20 May 1980, 59·5% voted against 'separatism'. At a further referendum on 30 Oct. 1995, 50·6% of votes cast were against Quebec becoming 'sovereign in a new economic and political partnership' with Canada. The electorate was 5m.; turn-out was 93%.

On 20 Aug. 1998 Canada's supreme court ruled that Quebec was prohibited by both the constitution and international law from seceding unilaterally from the rest of the country, but that a clear majority in a referendum would impose a duty on the Canadian government to negotiate. Both sides claimed victory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Quebec (as amended by the Labrador Boundary Award) is 1,542,056 sq. km (595,388 sq. miles), of which 1,365,128 sq. km is land area (including the Territory of Ungava, annexed in 1912 under the Quebec Boundaries Extension Act). The population at the 2001 census was 7,237,479.

Principal cities (2001 census populations): Montreal, 1,039,534; Laval, 343,005; Quebec (capital), 169,076; Longueuil, 128,016; Gatineau 103,207; Montreal North,

82,408 (1999 estimate); Saint-Laurent, 77,391; Sherbrooke, 75,916; Saint-Hubert, 75,912; LaSalle, 73,983; Beauport, 72,813; Sainte-Foy, 72,547; Charlesbourg, 70,310; Saint-Léonard 69,604; Hull, 66,246; Brossard, 65,026; Verdun, 60,564; Chicoutimi, 60,008; Jonquière, 54,842

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 73,536 (a rate of 10·0 per 1,000 population), and deaths 52,527 (rate of 7·1 per 1,000 population). There were 23,746 marriages and 16,916 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

Cool temperate in the south, but conditions are more extreme towards the north. Winters are severe and snowfall considerable, but summer temperatures are quite warm. Quebec, Jan. –12·5°C, July 19·1°C. Annual rainfall 1,123 mm. Montreal, Jan. –10·7°C, July 20·2°C. Annual rainfall 936 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a Legislative Assembly consisting of 125 members, elected in 125 electoral districts for four years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 30 Nov. 1998 the Parti Québécois won 75 seats with 42·7% of votes cast, the Liberal Party 48 with 43·7%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Lise Thibault (took office on 30 Jan. 1997).

Members of the Cabinet in March 2003:

Premier and President of Executive Council: Bernard Landry (b. 1937).

Deputy Premier and Minister of State for the Economy and Finance: Pauline Marois. Minister of State for International Relations: Louise Beaudoin. Municipal Affairs and Greater Montréal, the Environment and Water, and Government House Leader: André Boisclair. Administration and the Public Service: Joseph Facal. Social Solidarity and Child and Family Welfare: Linda Goupil. Health and Social Services: François Legault. Culture and Communications: Diane Lemieux. Human Resources and Labour: Jean Rochon. Education and Employment: Sylvain Simard. Population, Regions and Nature Affairs: Rémy Trudel.

In addition to the above, the Cabinet also includes 'Ministers of' and 'Ministers responsible for' (both of secondary rank), and 'Ministers for' (full ministers who assist senior ministers).

The total net debt at 31 March 2000 was $88,886m. CDN.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Water power is one of the most important natural resources of Quebec. Its turbine installation represents about 40% of the aggregate of Canada. At the end of 1997 the installed generating capacity was 34,972 MW. Production, 1997, was 166,255 MWh.

Water. There are 4,500 rivers and 500,000 lakes in Quebec, which possesses 3% of the world's freshwater resources.

Minerals. For 1999 the value of mineral production (metal only) was $2,224m. CDN. Chief minerals: iron ore (confidential); copper, $314·0m. CDN; gold, $495·5m. CDN; zinc, $294·7m. CDN.

Non-metallic minerals produced include: asbestos ($160·8m. CDN), titanium-dioxide (confidential), industrial lime, dolomite and brucite, quartz and pyrite. Among the building materials produced were: sand and gravel, $834·0m. CDN; cement, $246·6m. CDN; stone, $218·4m. CDN; lime (confidential).

Agriculture. In 1995 the agricultural area was 3,445,000 ha. The yield of the principal crops was (1998 in 1,000 tonnes):

Crops	Yield	Crops	Yield
Tame hay	4,300	Barley	425
Corn for grain	2,690	Soya	390
Fodder corn	1,520	Oats for grain	197
Potatoes	475	Mixed grains	111

About 38,000 farms were operating in 1995. Cash receipts, 1998, $4,882m. CDN (dairy products, 30·8%; livestock, 21·9%; crops, 24·6%; poultry and eggs, 10·7%). In 1996, 33,906 census farms reported total gross farm receipts of $2,500 CDN or more.

Forestry. Forests cover an area of 757,900 sq. km. 518,164 sq. km are classified as productive forests, of which 448,929 sq. km are provincial forest land and 66,198 sq. km are privately owned. Quebec leads the Canadian provinces in pulp and paper production, having nearly half of the Canadian estimated total.

In 1999 production of lumber was: softwood and hardwood, 17,897,000 cu. metres; pulp and paper, 10,092,000 tonnes.

Fisheries. The principal fish are cod, herring, red fish, lobster and salmon. Total catch of sea fish, 1999, 55,257 tonnes, valued at $134m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

In 1999 there were 10,176 industrial establishments in the province; employees, 500,906; salaries and wages, $17,769m. CDN; cost of materials, $63,702m. CDN; value of shipments, $113,079m. CDN. Among the leading industries are petroleum refining, pulp and paper mills, smelting and refining, dairy products, slaughtering and meat processing, motor vehicle manufacturing, women's clothing, sawmills and planing mills, iron and steel mills, commercial printing.

Labour. In 1999 there were 3,357,400 persons (1,507,500 female) in employment.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 29,140 km of roads and 4,496,376 registered motor vehicles.

Rail. There were (1998) 6,621 km of railway. There is a metro system in Montreal (64 km).

Civil Aviation. There are two international airports, Dorval (Montreal) and Mirabel (Laurentides).

Telecommunications. In 1997, 3,028,318 households (98·9%) had telephones.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1998, 467,530 Criminal Code offences were reported. In 1997 there were 110 homicides.

Education. Education is compulsory for children aged 6–16. Pre-school education and elementary and secondary training are free in some 2,527 public schools. In July 1998 the number of school boards was reduced to 72. These were organized along linguistic lines, 60 French, nine English and three special school boards that served native students in the Cote-Nord and Nord-du-Quebec regions. Just under 10% of the student population attends private schools: in 1999–2000, 272 establishments were authorized to provide pre-school, elementary and secondary education. After six years of elementary and five years of secondary school education, students enter Cegeps, a post-secondary educational institution. In 1999–2000 college, pre-university and technical training for young and adult students was provided by 48 Cegeps, 11 government schools and 77 private establishments.

In 1999–2000 in pre-kindergartens there were 15,174 pupils; in kindergartens, 89,223; in primary schools, 573,102; in secondary schools, 674,964; in colleges (post-secondary, non-university), 219,144; and in classes for children with special needs, 135,838. In 1998–99 the school boards had a total of 92,746 teachers (57,456 full-time and 32,290 part-time).

Expenditure of the Departments of Education for 1999–2000, $9,521·1m. CDN net. This included $1,511·2m. CDN for universities, $5,450·1m. CDN for public primary and secondary schools, $272·1m. CDN for private primary and secondary schools and $1,255·6m. CDN for colleges.

In 1999–2000 the province had nine universities: six French-language universities: Laval (Quebec, founded 1852), Montreal University (opened 1876 as a branch of Laval, independent 1920), Sherbrooke University (founded 1954), University of Quebec (founded 1968) and two others; and three English-language universities, McGill (Montreal, founded 1821), Bishop (Lennoxville, founded 1845) and the Concordia University (Montreal, granted a charter 1975). In 1999 there were 137,183 full-time university students and 94,691 part-time.

Health. Quebec's socio-health network consisted of 478 public and private establishments in 2001, of which 348 were public.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1998 there were 50 television and 171 radio stations.

Press. In 2000 there were 11 French- and three English-language daily newspapers.

SASKATCHEWAN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Saskatchewan derives its name from its major river system, which the Cree Indians called 'Kis-is-ska-tche-wan', meaning 'swift flowing'. It officially became a province when it joined the Confederation on 1 Sept. 1905.

In 1670 King Charles II granted to Prince Rupert and his friends a charter covering exclusive trading rights in 'all the land drained by streams finding their outlet in the Hudson Bay'. This included what is now Saskatchewan. The trading company was first known as The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England; later as the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1869 the Northwest Territories was formed, and this included Saskatchewan. In 1882 the District of Saskatchewan was formed. By 1885 the North-West Mounted Police had been inaugurated, with headquarters in Regina (now the capital), and the Canadian Pacific Railway's transcontinental line had been completed, bringing a stream of immigrants to southern Saskatchewan. The Hudson's Bay Company surrendered its claim to territory in return for cash and land around the existing trading posts.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Saskatchewan is bounded in the west by Alberta, in the east by Manitoba, in the north by the Northwest Territories and in the south by the USA. The area of the province is 251,365 sq. miles (651,036 sq. km), of which 228,444 sq. miles is land area and 22,921 sq. miles is water. The population at the 2001 census was 978,933; it was estimated at 1,011,808 in July 2002. Population of cities, 2001 census: Regina (capital), 178,225; Saskatoon, 196,811; Prince Albert, 34,291; Moose Jaw, 32,131; Yorkton, 15,105; Swift Current, 14,821; North Battleford, 13,692; Estevan, 10,242; Weyburn, 9,534; Lloydminster, 7,840; Melfort, 5,559; Humboldt, 5,161.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 12,632 (a rate of 12·3 per 1,000 population), and deaths 9,320 (rate of 9·1 per 1,000 population). There were 5,730 marriages and 2,246 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

A cold continental climate, with severe winters and warm summers. Rainfall amounts are greatest from May to Aug. Regina, Jan. 0°F (–17·8°C), July 65°F (18·3°C). Annual rainfall 15" (373 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor, an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly, elected for five years. Women were given the franchise in 1916 and are also eligible for election to the legislature.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections on 16 Sept. 1999 the New Democrat Party won 29 of 58 seats (39·6% of the vote); Saskatchewan Party, 25 (38·7%); the Liberal Party, 3 (20·2%); and one seat was subject to recount. State of parties in Feb. 2003: New Democratic Party, 28; Saskatchewan Party, 24; ind., 3; vacant, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Dr Lynda M. Haverstock, SOM (took office 21 Feb. 2000).

The New Democratic Party ministry in Feb. 2003 comprised as follows:

Premier, President of the Executive Council: Lorne Calvert.

ECONOMY

GDP per capita in 2001 was $32,653 CDN.

Budget. Budget and net assets (years ending 31 March) in $1,000 CDN:

	1998–99	1999–200	2000–01	2001–02
Budgetary revenue	5,339,100	6,629,490	6,382,400	6,041,700
Budgetary expenditure	5,233,413	6,785,466	5,967,986	6,302,624

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Agriculture used to dominate the history and economics of Saskatchewan, but the ‘prairie province’ is now a rapidly developing mining and manufacturing area. It is a major supplier of oil, has the world’s largest deposits of potash and the net value of its non-agricultural production accounted for (2001 estimate) 84·6% of the provincial economy.

Electricity. The Saskatchewan Power Corporation generated 16,899m. kWh in 2001.

Minerals. In 2001 mineral sales were valued at $7,507m. CDN, including (in $1m. CDN): petroleum, 3,706·4; potash, 1,601·0; natural gas, 1,285·2; coal and others, 871·5; sodium sulphate, 22·0; salt, 21·1. Other major minerals included copper, zinc, potassium sulphate, ammonium sulphate, bentonite, coal, uranium, gold and base metals.

Agriculture. Saskatchewan normally produces about two-thirds of Canada's wheat. Wheat production in 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes) was 10,188 (13,533 in 2000) from 16·1m. acres; oats, 1,033 from 2·1m. acres; barley, 3,697 from 4·8m. acres; canola, 2,109 from 4·8m. acres; flax, 483 from 1·2m. acres. Livestock (1 July 2002): cattle and calves, 2·9m.; swine, 1·2m.; sheep and lambs, 155,000. Poultry in 2001: chickens, 20·2m.; turkeys, 793,000. Cash income from the sale of farm products in 2001 was $6,550m. CDN. At the June 2001 census there were 50,598 farms in the province, each being a holding of one acre or more with sales of $250 CDN or more during the previous year.

The South Saskatchewan River irrigation project, the main feature of which is the Gardiner Dam, was completed in 1967. It will ultimately provide for an area of 0·2m. to 0·5m. acres of irrigated cultivation in Central Saskatchewan. As of 2001, 240,178 acres were intensively irrigated. Total irrigated land in the province, 334,386 acres.

Forestry. Half of Saskatchewan's area is forested, but only 115,000 sq. km are of commercial value at present. Forest products valued at $356m. CDN were produced in 2001–02.

Fur Production. In 2000–01 wild fur production was estimated at $1,910,908 CDN. Ranch-raised fur production amounted to $31,226 CDN in 2000 and $11,426 CDN in 2001.

Fisheries. The lakeside value of the 2001–02 commercial fish catch of 3·3m. kg was $5·3m. CDN.

INDUSTRY

In 1999 there were 698 manufacturing establishments, employing 19,307 persons. In 2001 manufacturing contributed $2,003·4m. CDN and construction $1,297·1m. CDN to total GDP at basic prices of $23,886·2m. CDN.

Labour. In 2002 the labour force was 511,100 (232,000 females), of whom 482,000 (220,500) were employed.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 26,219 km of provincial highways and 196,869 km of municipal roads (including prairie trails). Motor vehicles registered totalled 713,000 (2001). Bus services are provided by two major lines.

Rail. In 2001 there were approximately 9,908 km of railway track.

Civil Aviation. There were two major airports and 147 airports and landing strips in 2000.

Telecommunications. There were 626,421 telephone network access services to the Saskatchewan Telecommunications system in 2001.

Postal Services. In 2001 there were 477 post offices (excluding sub-post offices).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 2001, 136,699 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 27 homicides.

Education. The Saskatchewan education system in 2001–02 consisted of 99 school divisions and 5 comprehensive school boards, of which 1 is Protestant and 19 are Roman Catholic Separate School Divisions, serving 118,985 elementary pupils, 59,278 high-school students and 2,755 students enrolled in special classes. In addition, the Saskatchewan Institute of Applied Science and Technology (SIAST) had 11,307 full-time and 29,096 part-time and extension course registration students in 2001–02. There are also eight regional colleges with an enrolment of approximately 30,126 students in 2001–02.

The University of Saskatchewan was established at Saskatoon in 1907. In 2001–02 it had 15,368 full-time students, 4.101 part-time students and 961 full-time academic staff. The University of Regina, established in 1974, had 8,975 full-time and 3,205 part-time students and 388 full-time academic staff in 2001–02.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 2001 there were 50 TV and re-broadcasting stations, and 30 AM and FM radio stations.

Tourism. An estimated 1·5m. out-of-province tourists spent $449m. CDN in 2001.

THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Territory was developed by the Hudson's Bay Company and the North West Company (of Montreal) from the 17th century. The Canadian government bought out the Hudson's Bay Company in 1869 and the Territory was annexed to Canada in 1870. The Arctic Islands lying north of the Canadian mainland were annexed to Canada in 1880.

A plebiscite held in March 1992 approved the division of the Northwest Territories into two separate territories. (For the new territory of Nunavut see CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT, below, and NUNAVUT on page 414).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area of the Territories was 3,426,320 sq. km, but since the formation of Nunavut is now 1,346,106 km. Of its five former administrative regions—Fort Smith, Inuvik, Kitikmeot, Keewatin and Baffin—only Fort Smith and Inuvik remain in the Northwest Territories. The population at the 1991 census was 57,649, 37% of whom were Inuit (Eskimo), 16% Dene (Indian) and 7% Metis. The formation of Nunavut in 1999 out of the Northwest Territories resulted in a large decline in the population. The population at the 2001 census was 37,360. The capital is Yellowknife, population (2001); 16,541. Other main centres (with population in 2001): Hay River (3,510), Inuvik (2,894), Fort Smith (2,185), Rae-Edzo (1,552). Iqaluit and Rankin Inlet, formerly in the Northwest Territories, are now in Nunavut.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 758 (a rate of 18·2 per 1,000 population), and deaths 160 (rate of 3·8 per 1,000 population). There were 142 marriages and 93 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

Conditions range from cold continental to polar, with long hard winters and short cool summers. Precipitation is low. Yellowknife, Jan. mean high –24·7°C, low –33°C; July mean high 20·7°C, low 11·8°C. Annual rainfall 26·7 cm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Northwest Territories comprises all that portion of Canada lying north of the 60th parallel of N. lat. except those portions within Nunavut, the Yukon Territory and the provinces of Quebec and Newfoundland.

The Northwest Territories is governed by a Premier, with a cabinet (the Executive Council) of eight members including the Speaker, and a Legislative Assembly, who choose the premier and ministers by consensus. There are no political parties. The Assembly is composed of 19 members elected for a four-year term of office. A Commissioner of the Northwest Territories acts as a Lieut.-Governor and is the federal government's senior representative in the Territorial government. The seat of government was transferred from Ottawa to Yellowknife when it was named Territorial Capital on 18 Jan. 1967. On 10 Nov. 1997 the governments of Canada and the Northwest Territories signed an agreement so that the territorial government could assume full responsibility to manage its elections.

Legislative powers are exercised by the Executive Council on such matters as taxation within the Territories in order to raise revenue, maintenance of justice, licences, solemnization of marriages, education, public health, property, civil rights and generally all matters of a local nature.

The Territorial government has assumed most of the responsibility for the administration of the Northwest Territories but political control of Crown lands and non-renewable resources still rests with the Federal government. On 6 Sept. 1988 the Federal and Territorial governments signed an agreement for the transfer of management responsibilities for oil and gas resources, located on- and off-shore, in the Northwest Territories to the Territorial government. In a Territory-wide plebiscite in April 1982, a majority of residents voted in favour of dividing the Northwest Territories into two jurisdictions, east and west. In a plebiscite held in March 1992 residents voted in favour of an east-west boundary line. Constitutions for an eastern and western government have been under discussion since 1992. A referendum was held in Nov. 1992 among the Inuit on the formation of a third territory, Nunavut ('Our Land'), in the eastern Arctic, and comprising the administrative regions of Kitikmeot, Keewatin and Baffin. The electorate was 9,648; turn-out was 80%. 69% of votes cast were in favour. An agreement was signed on 25 May 1993 by the federal Prime Minister beginning the process of establishing this territory. Nunavut became Canada's 3rd territory on 1 April 1999.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 6 Dec. 1999, 19 non-partisan members (MLAs) were returned to the Legislative Assembly. Elections are due to take place in Nov. 2003.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Glenna F. Hansen, b. 1956 (took office 31 March 2000).

Members of the Executive Council of Ministers in Feb. 2003:

Premier, Chairman of the Executive Council, Minister Responsible for Intergovernmental Affairs and for the Status of Women: Stephen Kakfwi.

Deputy Premier and Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, Intergovernmental Forum, Resources, Wildlife and Economic Development: Jim Antoine. Finance, Transportation, Energy and Hydro Secretariats, and Government House Leader: Joseph Handley. Education, Culture and Employment: Jake Ootes. Public Works and Services, and Municipal and Community Affairs: Vince Steen. Justice, Youth, NWT Housing Corporation, and NWT Public Utilities Board: Roger Allen. Health and Social Services, Responsible for Persons with Disabilities and Senior Citizens: J. Michael Miltenberger.

Speaker: Tony Whitford.

Government of the Northwest Territories Website: http://www.gov.nt.ca/

ECONOMY

GDP per person in 1997 was $43,000 CDN, the highest of any Canadian province or territory.

Budget. The 2000–01 budget anticipates operating expenditures of $763·6m. CDN and total revenues of $751·3m. CDN.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas. Oil production was 1,535,000 cu. metres in 2000, down from 1,640,000 cu. metres in 1999. Natural gas production in 2000 was 541m. cu. metres, up from 110m. cu. metres in 1999.

Minerals. Mineral production in 2000: gold, 4,372 kg (valued at $58,148,000 CDN); silver, 1 tonne ($248,000 CDN); diamonds, 2,558 carats ($638,161,000 CDN); sand and gravel, 539,000 tonnes ($4,805,000 CDN); stone, 184,000 tonnes ($2,848,000 CDN). Total mineral production in 2000 was valued at $1·14bn. CDN.

Forestry. Forest land area in the Northwest Territories consists of 61·4m. ha, about 18% of the total land area. The principal trees are white and black spruce, jack-pine, tamarack, balsam poplar, aspen and birch. In 1996, 202,000 cu. metres of timber were produced.

Trapping and Game. Wildlife harvesting is the largest economic activity undertaken by aboriginal residents in the Northwest Territories. The value of the subsistence food harvest is estimated at $28m. CDN annually in terms of imports replaced. Fur-trapping (the most valuable pelts being white fox, wolverine, beaver, mink, lynx, and red fox) was once a major industry, but has been hit by anti-fur campaigns. In 1999–2000, 37,124 pelts worth $842,049 CDN were sold.

Fisheries. Fish marketed through the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation in 1996–97 totalled 1,742,700 kg at a value of $1,725,000 CDN, principally whitefish, northern pike and trout.

INDUSTRY

Co-operatives. There are 37 active co-operatives, including two housing co-operatives and two central organizations to service local co-operatives, in the Northwest Territories. They are active in handicrafts, furs, fisheries, retail stores, hotels, cable TV, post offices, petroleum delivery and print shops. Total revenue in 2000 was about $97m. CDN.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The Mackenzie Route connects Grimshaw, Alberta, with Hay River, Pine Point, Fort Smith, Fort Providence, Rae-Edzo and Yellowknife. The Mackenzie Highway extension to Fort Simpson and a road between Pine Point and Fort Resolution have both been opened.

Highway service to Inuvik in the Mackenzie Delta was opened in spring 1980, extending north from Dawson, Yukon as the Dempster Highway. The Liard Highway connecting the communities of the Liard River valley to British Columbia opened in 1984.

In 2000 there were 27,703 vehicle registrations, including 21,630 passenger cars and 1,881 trucks and 2,841 trailers.

Rail. There is one small railway system in the north which runs from Hay River, on the south shore of Great Slave Lake, 435 miles south to Grimshaw, Alberta, where it connects with the Canadian National Railways, but it is not in use.

Civil Aviation. In 2000 there were 132,775 take-offs and landings in the Northwest Territories.

Shipping. A direct inland-water transportation route for about 1,700 miles is provided by the Mackenzie River and its tributaries, the Athabasca and Slave rivers. Subsidiary routes on Lake Athabasca, Great Slave Lake and Great Bear Lake total more than 800 miles. Communities in the eastern Arctic are resupplied by ship each summer via the Atlantic and Arctic Oceans or Hudson Bay.

Telecommunications. Telephone service is provided to nearly all communities in the Northwest Territories. Those few communities without service have high frequency or very high frequency radios for emergency use.

Postal Services. There is a postal service in all communities.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. The Education System in the Northwest Territories is comprised of eight regional bodies (boards) that have responsibilities for the K-12 education programme. Three of these jurisdictions are located in Yellowknife; a public school authority, a catholic school authority and a Commission scolaire francophone that oversees a school operating in Yellowknife, and one in Hay River.

For the 2000–01 school year there were 49 public plus two (small) private schools operating in the NWT. Within this system there were 667 teachers, including Aboriginal Language Specialists, for 9,855 students. 98% of students have access to high school programmes in their home communities. There is a full range of courses available in the school system, including academic, French immersion, Aboriginal language, cultural programmes, technical and occupational programmes.

A range of post secondary programmes are available through the Northwest Territories' Aurora College. The majority of these programmes are offered at the three main campus locations: Inuvik, Yellowknife and Fort Smith.

Health. In 2000 there were nine separate regional boards. An independent review of the Northwest Territories' health and social services system in June 2001 recommended the reduction of the number of regional health boards from nine to four. Each board would take on a greater degree of power and accountability, three of which would act as regional service authorities. Expenditure on health totalled $159·4m. CDN in 1999–2000.

Welfare. Welfare services are provided by professional social workers. Facilities included (1993) for children: seven group homes and two residential treatment centres.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 2000 CBC operated radio stations at Yellowknife and Inuvik. There is an English language CBC-owned television station at Yellowknife. There are also two other television broadcasting stations based in Yellowknife.

NUNAVUT

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Inuit communities started entering and moving around what is now the Canadian Arctic between 4500 BC and AD 1000 . By the 19th century these communities were under the jurisdiction of the Northwest Territories. In 1963 the Canadian government first introduced legislation to divide the territory, a proposal that failed at the order paper stage. In 1973 the Comprehensive Land Claims Policy was established which sought to define the rights and benefits of the Aboriginal population in a land claim settlement agreement. The Northwest Territories Legislative Assembly voted in favour of dividing the territory in 1980, and in a public referendum of 1982, 56% of votes cast were also for the division. In 1992 the proposed boundary was ratified in a public vote and the Inuit population approved their land claim settlement. A year later, the Nunavut Act (creating the territory) and the Nunavut Land Claim Agreement Act were passed by parliament. Iqaluit was selected as the capital in 1995.

On 15 Feb. 1999 Nunavut held elections for its Legislative Assembly and on 1 April 1999 the territory was officially designated and the government inaugurated.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area of the region is 2,093,190 sq. km or about 21% of Canada's total mass, making Nunavut Canada's largest territory. It contains seven of Canada's 12 largest islands and two thirds of the country's coastline. The territory is divided into three regions: Qikiqtaaluk (Baffin), Kivalliq (Keewatin) and Kitikmeot. The total population at the 1996 census was 24,720 (12,910 males, 11,810 females) or 97 persons per 10,000 sq. km; at the 2001 census the population was 26,745. 85% of the population are Inuit. The population is divided up into 28 communities of which the largest is in the capital Iqaluit, numbering 4,500.

The native Inuit language is Inuktitut.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 1999–2000 numbered 779 (a rate of 28·5 per 1,000 population), and deaths 141 (rate of 5·2 per 1,000 population). Nunavut's birth rate is the highest in Canada and is more than twice the national average of 10·9 per 1,000 births. Life expectancy, 1996: males, 67 years; females, 72. 56% of the population are under 25 years of age.

CLIMATE

Conditions range from cold continental to polar, with long hard winters and short cool summers. In Iqaluit there can be as little as four hours sunshine per day in winter and up to 21 hours per day at the summer solstice. Iqaluit, Jan. mean high –22°C; July mean high, 15°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Government is by a Legislative Assembly of 19 elected members, who then choose a leader and ministers by consensus. There are no political parties. The government is being established in evolutionary stages, a process which began in 1993 and is scheduled for completion in 2009. It is intended that government be highly decentralized, consisting of ten departments spread over 11 different communities.

Inuktitut will be the working language of government but government agencies will also offer services in English and French. Although the Inuits will be the dominant force in public government, non-Inuit citizens have the same voting rights.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The first Legislative Assembly elections were held on 15 Feb. 1999 and the government was inaugurated on 1 April. Turn-out was 99%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Peter T. Irniq (took office in 2000).

In Feb. 2003 the cabinet was as follows:

Premier and Minister of Executive and Intergovernmental Affairs and of Justice and Responsible for Aboriginal Affairs: Paul Okalik (b. 1964).

Deputy Premier, Minister of Finance and Government House Leader: Kelvin Ng. Minister of Education and Human Resources: Peter Kilabuk. Health and Social Services and Energy: Ed Picco. Community Government and Transportation: Manitok Thompson. Sustainable Development, and Culture, Language, Elders and Youth: Olayuk Akesuk. Public Works and Services: Peter Kattuk. Minister without Portfolio: Jack Anawak.

Government of Nunavut Website: http://www.gov.nu.ca

ECONOMY

While the cost of living in Nunavut is around 160 to 200% that of southern Canadians, the average household income is $31,471 CDN compared to $45,251 CDN for Canada as a whole. With unemployment running high, transport costs expensive and education limited, Nunavut has many challenges to face in its quest for self-sufficiency.

Overview. Nunavut is looking to capitalize on its wealth of natural resources and also develop its existing industries such as tourism, and arts and crafts.

Currency. The Canadian dollar is the standard currency.

Banking and Finance. Few banks have branches in the province. Iqaluit has two automated cash machines and stores are increasingly installing debit card facilities.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water. Nunavut's major rivers are on the mainland.

Minerals. There are two lead and zinc mines operating in the High Arctic region. There are also known deposits of copper, gold, silver and diamonds.

Hunting and Trapping. Most communities still rely on traditional foodstuffs such as caribou and seal. The Canadian government now provides meat inspections so that caribou and musk ox meat can be sold across the country.

Fisheries. Fishing is still very important in Inuit life. The principal catches are shrimp, scallop and arctic char.

INDUSTRY

The main industries are mining, tourism, fishing, hunting and trapping, arts and crafts production.

Labour. Unemployment was running at 20·7% in 1999.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There is one 21-km government-maintained road between Arctic Bay and Nanisivik. There are a few paved roads in Iqaluit and Rankin Inlet, but most are unpaved. Some communities have local roads and tracks but Kivalliq has no direct land connections with southern Canada.

Civil Aviation. There are air connections between communities and a daily air connection between Iqaluit and Montreal/Ottawa.

Shipping. There is an annual summer sea-lift by ship and barge for transport of construction materials, dry goods, non-perishable food, trucks and cars, etc.

Telecommunications. There are telephone services in all communities except for Bathurst Inlet and Umingmaktok. Because of the wide distances between communities, there is a very high rate of Internet use in Nunavut. However, line speeds are slow and there is a problem with satellite bounce.

Postal Services. There is no door-to-door delivery service, so correspondence has to be retrieved from post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A territorial court has been put in place. Policing is by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP).

Education. Approximately one third of Nunavut's population aged over 15 have less than Grade 9 schooling. Training and development is seen as central to securing a firm economic foundation for the province. The Canadian government has pledged $40m. CDN for recruiting and training Inuit employees into Nunavut public service.

Courses in computer science, business management and public administration may be undertaken at Arctic College. In 1997–98 there were 39 schools with 7,770 students.

Health. There is one hospital in Iqaluit. 26 health centres provide nursing care for communities. For more specialized treatment, patients of Qikiqtaaluk may be flown to Montreal, patients in Kivalliq to Churchill or Winnipeg and patients in Kitikmeot to Yellowknife's Stanton Regional Hospital.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) North transmits television to Iqaluit and other communities. The Inuit Broadcasting Corporation (IBC) transmits in Inuktitut and Television Northern Canada (TVNC) is devoted to programming by and for northerners and native citizens. There are 5½ hours of Inuktitut television programming per week. Cable satellite television is also widely available.

CBC is the only local radio station accessible in all Nunavut communities.

Tourism. Auyuittuq National Park is one of the principal tourist attractions, along with the opportunity of seeing Inuit life first-hand. Under the terms of the land claim settlement, three more national parks are planned. It is also hoped that the publicity surrounding the new territory will encourage visitors.

YUKON TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory owes its fame to the discovery of gold in the Klondike at the end of the 19th century. Formerly part of the Northwest Territories, the Yukon was joined to the Dominion as a separate territory on 13 June 1898.

Yukon First Nations People lived a semi-nomadic subsistence lifestyle in the region long before it was established as a territory. The earliest evidence of human activity was found in caves containing stone tools and animal bones estimated to be 20,000 years old. The Athapaskan cultural linguistic tradition to which most Yukon First Nations belong is more than 1,000 years old. The territory's name comes from the native 'Yu-kun-ah' for the great river that drains most of this area.

The Yukon was created as a district of the North West Territories in 1895. The Klondike Gold Rush in the late 1890s saw the invasion of thousands of stampeders pouring into the gold fields of the Canadian northwest. Population at the peak of the rush reached 40,000. This event spurred the federal government to set up basic administrative structures in the Yukon. The territory was given the status of a separate geographical and political entity with an appointed legislative council in 1898.

In 1953 the capital was moved south from Dawson City to Whitehorse, where most of the economic activity was centred.

The federal government granted the Yukon responsible government in 1979.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory consists of one city, three towns, four villages, two hamlets, 13 unincorporated communities and 8 rural communities. It is situated in the northwestern region of Canada and comprises 482,443 sq. km of which 8,052 sq. km is fresh water.

The population at the 2001 census was 28,674.

Principal centres in 2001 were Whitehorse, the capital, 19,058; Dawson City, 1,251; Watson Lake, 912; Haines Junction, 531; Faro, 313.

The Yukon represents 4·8% of Canada's total land area.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births in 2000 numbered 378 (a rate of 12·3 per 1,000 population), and deaths 153 (rate of 5·0 per 1,000 population). There were 161 marriages and 117 divorces in 1998.

CLIMATE

Temperatures in the Yukon are usually more extreme than those experienced in the southern provinces of Canada. A cold climate in winter with moderate temperatures in summer provide a considerable annual range of temperature and moderate rainfall.

Whitehorse, Jan. –18·7°C (–2·0°F), July 14°C (57·2°F). Annual precipitation 268·8 mm. Dawson City, Jan. –30·7°C (–23·3°F), July 15·6°C (60·1°F). Annual precipitation 182·7 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Yukon was constituted a separate territory on 13 June 1898.

The Yukon Legislative Assembly consists of 17 elected members and functions in much the same way as a provincial legislature. The seat of government is at Whitehorse. It consists of an executive council with parliamentary powers similar to those of a provincial cabinet. A federally appointed commissioner acts on the recommendations made by the legislative assembly, and serves in a similar capacity to Lieut.-Governor in the provinces.

The Yukon government consists of 12 departments, as well as a Women's Directorate and four Crown corporations. Government departments and agencies are responsible for a similar range of activities as found in Canadian provinces, including education, economic development, tourism, renewable resources, justice, community and transportation services and finance.

The administration of certain programmes, mostly in the natural resources field, remains under federal control. The Yukon government is, however, involved in negotiations with the federal government on the transfer of further responsibilities to its jurisdiction.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections held on 4 Nov. 2002 the Yukon Party took 12 of the available 18 seats; the New Democratic Party 5; and the Liberals 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Jack Cable; b. 1934 (took office on 1 Oct. 2000).

In March 2003 the Yukon Party Ministry comprised:

Premier, Minister responsible for Executive Council Office, including Devolution, Land Claims, Women's Directorate and Youth Directorate, and Minister of Finance: Dennis Fentie.

Minister of Health and Social Services: Peter Jenkins. Education: John Edzerza. Justice and Business, Tourism and Culture: Elaine Taylor. Energy, Mines and Resources: Archie Lang. Infrastructure and Community Services: Glenn Hart. Environment: Jim Kenyon.

Government of Yukon Website: http://www.gov.yk.ca/

ECONOMY

The key sectors of the economy are government, tourism, finance, insurance and real estate.

Budget. The Territorial government's revenue and expenditure (in $1,000 CDN) for years ended 31 March was:

	1999–2000	2000–01[1]	2002–03[2]
Revenue	482,759	509,276	513,934
Expenditure	499,714	541,593	535,530

[1]Forecast. [2]Estimate.

Performance. GDP at market prices in 2000 was $1,124m. CDN. Mining, oil and gas production was estimated at $72·8m. CDN in 1998 and revenue from agriculture, forestry, hunting and fishing was estimated at $4m. CDN. In the manufacturing sector, shipments were valued at $2·3m. CDN in 2000. GDP per person in 2000 was $36,258 CDN.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. The Yukon is recognized as a critical habitat for many species of rare and endangered flowers, big game animals, birds of prey and migratory birds. There are 278 species of birds and 38 species of fish. The vegetation is classified as sub-arctic and alpine.

Three national parks (total area 36,572 sq. km), five territorial parks (7,861 sq. km), two ecological reserves (181 sq. km), eight wildlife management areas (10,651 sq. km) and one wildlife sanctuary (6,450 sq. km) have been established to protect fragile and significant areas for the future.

Electricity. The Yukon currently depends on imported refined petroleum products for about 16% of the energy it uses. At the same time, 94·6% (2000 figure) of the territory's electrical supply comes from four utility-owned hydro-electrical facilities. There are also several microhydro facilities and studies indicate a number of sites that could support new developments.

Hydro-generated power is supplemented with diesel power plants which are located in most communities. Current capacity is 130·2 MW combined hydrodiesel-generated power. Total generation for 2000 was 268 GWh. There are over 100 known occurrences of coal in the Yukon and potential local markets include power generation and industrial heating.

Fuel wood represents approximately $4m. CDN to $5m. CDN in direct employment and petroleum substitution in the Yukon annually.

A number of Yukon homes and businesses use solar energy for heating water and to supply electricity in remote locations. Wind energy is an option being explored by both private interests and the crown-owned utility. A number of sites have been identified with wind regimes on the verge of commercial viability.

Oil and Gas. In 1997 the Yukon Oil and Gas Act was passed, replacing the federal legislation. This Act provides for the transfer of responsibility for oil and gas resources to Yukon jurisdiction. Five unexplored oil and gas basins with rich potential exist. Modest exploration has been conducted in three basins. Current net production is about 1·7m. cu. metres of natural gas per day.

Minerals. Gold and silver are the chief minerals. There are also deposits of lead, zinc, copper, tungsten and iron ore. Gold deposits, both hard rock and placer, are being mined. In addition, several important occurrences of asbestos, barite and coal have been discovered.

Estimates for 2000 mineral production: gold, $51·6m. CDN; and silver, $0·3m. CDN. Total: $51·9m. CDN.

Agriculture. Many areas have suitable soils and climate for the production of forages, cereal grains and vegetables, domestic livestock and game farming. The territory also has arctic char fish farms. The greenhouse industry is the Yukon's largest horticulture sector.

In 1996 there were 160 farms operating full- and part-time. The total area of farms was 9,890 ha of which 2,248 ha are in field crop.

Farm receipts in 1996 were estimated at $3·5m. CDN. Total farm capital, 1996, was $45m. CDN.

Forestry. The forests, covering 275,000 sq. km of the territory, are part of the great Boreal forest region of Canada, which covers 57% of the Yukon. Vast areas are covered by coniferous stands in the southern region of Yukon, with white spruce and lodgepole pine forming on wet sites, and in northern aspects. Deciduous species form pure stands or occur mixed with conifers throughout forest areas. Yukon forestry products include posts and beams for the construction industry, roof trusses, niche products and timber.

Production from forestry was 145·0m. cu. metres in 1999–2000.

Game and Furs. The country abounds with big game, such as moose, goat, caribou, mountain sheep and bear (grizzly and black). The fur-trapping industry is considered vital to rural and remote residents and especially First Nations people wishing to maintain a traditional lifestyle. Preliminary fur production in 2000 (mostly marten, muskrat, beaver, lynx and wolverine) was valued at $296,896 CDN.

Fisheries. Commercial fishing concentrates on chinook salmon, chum salmon, lake trout and whitefish.

INDUSTRY

The key sectors of the economy are tourism and government.

Labour. The 2000 labour force was 15,242, of whom 13,475 were employed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2000 exports made up 35·2% of Yukon goods and services produced. In 2000 exports were valued at $396m. CDN.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The Alaska Highway and branch highway systems connect Yukon's main communities with Alaska, the Northwest Territories, southern Canada and the United States. The year round highway system is built and maintained to accommodate loads up to 77,000 kg. The 735-km Dempster Highway north of Dawson City connects with Inuvik, on the Arctic coast; this highway, the first public road to be built to the Arctic Ocean, was opened in Aug. 1979. The South Klondike Highway links the tidewater port of Skagway, Alaska with the Yukon. It was opened in May 1979, providing a new access to the Pacific Ocean. In 2000 there were 4,712·5 km of roads maintained by the Yukon Territorial government: 3,178·1 km, Alaska Highway; 1,534·4 km is secondary. The major roads, including the Alaska Highway, have received a new surface treatment which resembles pavement, and the rest are all-weather gravel, of which 700 km are accessible during the summer months only. Vehicles registered in 2000 totalled 23,915 (excluding buses, motorcycles and trailers), including 21,149 passenger vehicles.

Rail. The 176-km White Pass and Yukon Railway connected Whitehorse with year-round ocean shipping at Skagway, Alaska, but was closed in 1982. A modified passenger service was restarted in 1988 to take cruise ship tourists from Skagway to Carcross, Yukon, over the White Pass summit.

Civil Aviation. Whitehorse has an international airport with direct daily flights from Vancouver, Alaska and the Northwest Territories. In the summer there are regular scheduled flights from Europe. There are ten airports throughout the territory, with many smaller airstrips and aerodromes in remote areas. Commercial airlines offering charter services are located throughout the territory.

Shipping. The majority of goods are shipped into the territory by truck over the Alaska and Stewart-Cassiar Highways. Some goods are shipped through the ports of Skagway and Haines, Alaska, and then trucked to Whitehorse for distribution throughout the territory. Skagway, 160 km south of Whitehorse, is a commercial shipping outlet for goods destined for Asia and the west coast of North America. The majority of goods are transported by road within the territory, while a modest amount is shipped by air.

Telecommunications. All telephone and telecommunications, including Internet access in most communities, are provided by Northwestel, a subsidiary of Bell Canada Enterprises. Microwave stations, satellite ground stations and radio-telephone facilities provide most of the telephone transmission services to the communities.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. The Yukon Department of Education operates (with the assistance of elected school boards) the territory's 28 schools, both public and private, from kindergarten to grade 12. In 2001 there were 5,579 pupils. There are also one French First Language school and one Roman Catholic school. The total enrolment figure for 1999–2000 was 5,332. The Whitehorse campus is the administrative and programme centre for 13 other campuses located throughout the territory. In 1999–2000 a total of 664 full-time and 4,668 part-time students enrolled in programmes and courses. The Yukon government provides financial assistance to students for post-secondary education whether they study at Yukon College or outside the territory.

Health. In 2000 there were two hospitals with 61 staffed beds, four nursing stations, nine health treatment centres, 55 resident doctors and 15 dentists. The territorial government operates a medical travel programme to send patients to nearby provinces for specialized treatment not available in the territory.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are three radio stations in Whitehorse and 15 low-power relay radio transmitters operated by CBC, and six operated by the Yukon government. CHON-FM, operated by Northern Native Broadcasting, is broadcast to virtually all Yukon communities by satellite. Dawson City has its own community-run radio station, CFYT-FM. There are also 27 basic and 36 extended pay-cable TV channels in Whitehorse, and private cable operations in some communities. Live CBC national television and TVNC is provided by satellite and relayed to all communities.

Press. In 2000 there were one daily and one semi-weekly newspaper in Whitehorse, and a semi-weekly (summer only) and a monthly newspaper in Dawson City. Other communities with local newspapers include Stewart Crossing, Haines Junction and Faro. There is also a monthly newspaper for francophones. In total, the territory publishes 10 newspapers which range in publication from daily to annual.

Tourism. In 1999 there were about 280,500 visitors, generating revenues of $160m. CDN. Primary tourist activities are related to highway travel, wilderness adventure and historical and cultural interests. Major markets for Yukon tourism include North America, German-speaking European nations and the United Kingdom. Emerging markets include Japan, Taiwan, New Zealand and Australia. Enhanced airport infrastructure has stimulated direct flights from Europe and increased flights by national charter companies.

Tourism is the largest private sector employer. In 1999, 66% of employed Yukon people were working for businesses that reported some level of tourism revenue. 20% of businesses generate more than 33% of gross revenues from tourism.

Festivals. Yukon festivals include the Yukon Sourdough Rendezvous in Feb. (outdoor winter activities) and the Yukon International Storytelling Festival in May.

CAPE VERDE

República de Cabo Verde

Capital: Praia
Population estimate, 2000: 434,000
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 4,863
HDI/world rank: 0·715/100

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

During centuries of Portuguese rule the islands were gradually peopled with Portuguese, slaves from Africa, and people of mixed African-European descent who became the majority. While retaining some African culture, the Cape Verdians spoke Portuguese or the Portuguese-derived Crioulo (Creole) language and became Catholics. In 1956 nationalists from Cape Verde and Portuguese Guinea formed the Partido Africano da Independência da Guiné e Cabo Verde (PAIGC). In the 1960s the PAIGC waged a successful guerrilla war. On 5 July 1975 Cape Verde became independent, ruled by the PAIGC, which was already the ruling party in ex-Portuguese Guinea-Bissau. But resentment at Cape Verdians' privileged position in Guinea-Bissau led to the end of the ties between the two countries' ruling parties. Although the PAIGC retained its name in Guinea-Bissau, in Jan. 1981 it was renamed the Partido Africano da Independência do Cabo Verde (PAICV) in Cape Verde. The Constitution of 1981 made the PAICV the sole legal party but in Sept. 1990 the National Assembly abolished its monopoly and free elections were permitted.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cape Verde is situated in the Atlantic Ocean 620 km off west Africa and consists of ten islands (Boa Vista, Brava, Fogo, Maio, Sal, Santa Luzia, Santo Antão, São Nicolau, São Tiago and São Vicente) and five islets. The islands are divided into two groups, named Barlavento (windward) and Sotavento (leeward). The total area is 4,033 sq. km (1,557 sq. miles). The population was 341,491 at the census of 1990. The 2000 census population (provisional) was 434,812, giving a density of 107·8 per sq. km. In 1999, 60·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 522,000.

About 600,000 Cape Verdeans live abroad.

Areas and populations of the islands:

Island	Area (sq. km)	Population Census 1980	Population Census 1990
Santo Antão	779	43,321	43,845
São Vicente[1]	227	41,594	51,277
São Nicolau	388	13,572	13,665
Sal	216	5,826	7,715
Boa Vista	620	3,372	3,452
Barlavento	2,230	107,685	119,954
Maio	269	4,098	4,969
São Tiago	991	145,957	175,691
Fogo	476	30,978	33,902
Brava	67	6,985	6,975
Sotavento	1,803	188,018	221,537

[1]Including Santa Luzia island, which is uninhabited.

The main towns are Praia, the capital, on São Tiago (76,000, 1999 estimate) and Mindelo on São Vicente (47,109, 1990 census). Ethnic groups: Mixed, 71%; Black, 28%; White, 1%. The official language is Portuguese; a creole (Crioulo) is in ordinary use.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 births, 15,460; 1996 deaths, 2,786. 1998 birth rate, 37·1 per 1,000 population; 1996 death rate, 7·0. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·3%. Annual emigration varies between 2,000 and 10,000. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 66·0 years for men and 71·8 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 54 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 3·5 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is arid, with a cool dry season from Dec. to June and warm dry conditions for the rest of the year. Rainfall is sparse, rarely exceeding 5" (127 mm) in the northern islands or 12" (304 mm) in the southern ones. There are periodic severe droughts. Praia, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 10" (250 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was adopted in Sept. 1992.

A constitutional referendum was held on 28 Dec. 1994; turn-out was 45%. 82·06% of votes cast favoured a reform extending the powers of the presidency and strengthening the autonomy of local authorities. The President is elected for five-year terms by universal suffrage.

The National Assembly is elected for five-year terms.

National Anthem. 'Sol, suor, o verde e mar' ('Sun, sweat, the green and the sea'); words and tune by A. Lopes Cabral.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the National Assembly of 72 members were held on 14 Jan. 2001. Turn-out was 57·8%. Three parties stood. The PAICV won 40 seats with 49·9% of votes cast, the Movement for Democracy (MPD) won 30 seats with 40·8%, and the Democratic Alliance for Change won 2 with 6·2%.

In the presidential elections which took place on 11 Feb. 2001 Pedro Pires won 46·5% of the vote and Carlos Veiga 45·9%, with 2 other candidates winning less than 4% each, qualifying the two former prime ministers for a run-off. Turn-out was 50%. After the 25 Feb. 2001 run-off, Pires was confirmed as the victor with 75,828 votes (49·43%) against Veiga's 75,811 (49·42%), a difference of just 17 votes. Turn-out was 59%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Pedro Pires; b. 1934 (PAICV; sworn in 22 March 2001).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: José Maria Neves; b. 1959 (PAICV; sworn in 1 Feb. 2001).

Minister for Foreign Affairs, Co-operation and Communities: Fátima Veiga. Health: Basílio Mosso Ramos. Defence and Parliamentary Affairs: Armindo Cipriano Maurício. Education: Víctor Borges. Environment, Agriculture and Fisheries: Maria Madalena Brito Neves. Justice and Internal Administration: Maria Cristina Lopes Almeida Fontes Lima. Culture and Sport: Jorge Homero Tolentino Araújo. Infrastructure and Transport: Manuel Inocêncio Sousa. Finance and Economic Planning: Carlos Augusto Duarte Burgo. Labour and Solidarity: Júlio Correira. Presidency of the Council of Ministers: Arnaldo Andrade Ramos. Economy and Growth: Avelino Bonifácio Fernandes Lopes.

Government Website (Portuguese only): http://www.governo.cv/

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription. Defence expenditure totalled US$7m. in 2000 (US$17 per capita), representing 2·7% of GDP.

Army. The Army is composed of two battalions and had a strength of 1,000 in 1999.

Navy. There is a coast guard of 50 (1999).

Air Force. The Air Force had under 100 personnel and no combat aircraft in 1999.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cape Verde is a member of the UN, the African Union, African Development Bank, ECOWAS, IOM, the International Organization of the Francophonie and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 68·7% of GDP in 1998, industry 19·1% and agriculture 12·2%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Cape Verde escudo (CVE) of 100 centavos. Foreign exchange reserves were US$63m. in June 2002 and total money supply was 20,893m. escudos. There was inflation in 2001 of 3·7%. In 2000 there had been deflation of 2·4%.

Budget. The budget for 1996 envisaged revenue of 21,110m. escudos and expenditure of 21,020m. escudos.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 6·8% in 2000 and 2·9% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$0·6bn.

Banking and Finance. The Banco de Cabo Verde is the central bank (Governor, Amaro Alexandre da Luz) and bank of issue, and was also previously a commercial bank. Its latter functions have been taken over by the Banco Comercial do Atlântico, mainly financed by public funds. The Caixa Econômica de Cabo Verde (CECV) has been upgraded into a commercial and development bank. Two foreign banks have also been established there.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Cape Verde's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity is 17,000 kW. Production was 40m. kWh in 1998. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 103 kWh.

Minerals. Salt is obtained on the islands of Sal, Boa Vista and Maio. Volcanic rock (pozzolana) is mined for export. There are also deposits of kaolin, clay, gypsum and basalt.

Agriculture. Some 10–15% of the land area is suitable for farming. In 1998, 39,000 ha were arable and 2,000 ha permanent crops, mainly confined to inland valleys. 3,000 ha were irrigated in 1998. The chief crops (production, 2000, in 1,000 tonnes) are: sugarcane, 13; maize, 11; bananas, 6; cabbages, 6; coconuts, 6; mangoes, 5; sweet potatoes, 4; tomatoes, 4.

Livestock (2000): 640,000 pigs, 110,000 goats, 22,000 cattle, 14,000 asses.

Forestry. In 1995 the woodland area was 47,000 ha, or 31% of the total land area (16,000 ha and 11·7% in 1990). Cape Verde is one of only two developing countries to have increased its area under forests between 1990 and 1995, the other being India.

Fisheries. In 1993 there were 64 large and 1,400 small fishing vessels. In 1999 the total catch was 10,371 tonnes (mainly tuna), exclusively from marine waters. About 200 tonnes of lobsters are caught annually.

INDUSTRY

The main industries are the manufacture of paint, beer, soft drinks, rum, flour, cigarettes, canned tuna and shoes.

Labour. In 1996 the workforce was 157,000 (62% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$327m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports (f.o.b.) for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998
Imports	195·3	233·6	207·5	215·1	218·3
Exports	14·2	16·6	23·9	43·2	32·7

Main exports in 1997: road vehicles (43%), refined petroleum (29%), footwear (7%) and fish and shellfish (4%). Main export markets, 1997: Portugal, 45%; Guinea-Bissau, 6%; Netherlands, 3%. Main import suppliers: Portugal, 40%; USA, 10%; France, 9%; Netherlands, 6%. Approximately 90% of food is imported.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 1,100 km of roads (858 km paved) and there were 3,280 private cars and 820 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. Amilcar Cabral International Airport, at Espargos on Sal, is a major refuelling point on flights to Africa and Latin America. A new airport, Francisco Mendes Airport, has been built at Praia, and was scheduled to open in April 2003. Transportes Aéreos de Cabo Verde (TACV), the national carrier, provided services to most of the other islands in 1998, and internationally to Amsterdam, Basle, Bissau, Bologna, Lisbon, Munich, Paris and Vienna. In 2000 Amilcar Cabral International Airport handled 489,000 passengers (254,000 on international flights) and 3,500 tonnes of freight. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Cape Verde-based carriers flew 5·5m. km, carrying 252,000 passengers (114,000 on international flights).

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

République Centrafricaine

Capital: Bangui
Population estimate, 2000: 3·72m..
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,172
HDI/world rank: 0·375/165

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Central African Republic became independent on 13 Aug. 1960, after having been one of the four territories of French Equatorial Africa. A Constitution of 1976 provided for the country to be a parliamentary democracy to be known as the Central African Empire. President Bokassa became Emperor Bokassa I. He was overthrown in 1979. In 1981 General André Kolingba took power, initiating a gradual return to constitutional rule.

On 5 June 1996, following an army mutiny, President Patassé accepted an agreement brokered by France which led to the formation of a government of national unity. But mutineers demanded the replacement of President Patassé and killed two French soldiers. France chaired a mediation committee of various neighbouring French-speaking states, and an agreement to end the mutiny was signed in 1997 and a peacekeeping force of neighbouring states, MISAB, was set up. Conflicts between the mutineers and MISAB continued until a ceasefire was concluded on 2 July 1997. There was an attempted coup on 28 May 2001, allegedly led by Gen. André Kolingba, who had been the country's military ruler from 1981 to 1993. However, it failed following several days of fighting in and around the capital, Bangui. Fighting erupted once more in Oct. 2002 after another coup attempt. In March 2003 a further coup saw Gen. François Bozizé, a former army chief, seize power.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The republic is bounded in the north by Chad, east by Sudan, south by the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Republic of the Congo, and west by Cameroon. The area covers 622,436 sq. km (240,324 sq. miles). The population at the 1988 census was 2,568,426; estimate, 1996, 3,274,000, giving a density of 5 per sq. km. In 1999, 59·2% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·43m.

The areas, populations and capitals of the prefectures are as follows:

Prefecture	Sq. km	1988 census	Capital
Bamingui-Bangoran	58,200	28,643	Ndele
Bangui[1]	67	451,690	Bangui

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the Constitution adopted by a referendum on 21 Nov. 1986, the sole legal political party was the Rassemblement Démocratique Centrafricaine. In Aug. 1992 the Constitution was revised to permit multi-party democracy. Further constitutional reforms followed a referendum in Dec. 1994, including the establishment of a Constitutional Court. The President is elected by popular vote for not more than two terms of six years, and appoints and leads a Council of Ministers. There is a 109-member National Assembly. Following the coup of March 2003 Gen. François Bozizé suspended the constitution and dissolved parliament.

National Anthem. 'La Renaissance' ('Rebirth'); words by B. Boganda, tune by H. Pepper.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections held on 19 Sept. 1999 there were ten presidential candidates. Incumbent president Ange-Félix Patassé gained 51·6% of votes cast in the first round making a second round of voting unnecessary. Former president Andre Kolingba, standing as a candidate for the Central African Democratic Rally, came second with 19·3%.

In National Assembly elections on 22 Nov. and 13 Dec. 1998 the Central African People's Liberation Movement (MLPC) gained 47 seats, the Central African Democratic Rally (RDC) 20, the Movement for Democracy and Development (MDD) 8, Patriotic Front for Progress 7, Social Democratic Party 6, Alliance for Democracy and Progress 5, National Unity Party 3, the Liberal Democratic Party 2, FODEM 2, ind. 7. 2 other parties gained 1 seat each.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Former army chief Gen. François Bozizé seized power on 15 March 2003 in a coup and the following day declared himself president, saying that he had dissolved the National Assembly and government. He subsequently named Abel Goumba prime minister. A transitional government was formed comprising representatives of civil society and all political parties. Gen. Bozizé has said that a transition period will last between one and three years, after which elections would be held to decide on a new government.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France proclaimed a protectorate over Chad in 1900 and in July 1908 the territory was incorporated into French Equatorial Africa. It became a separate colony in 1920, and in 1946 one of the four constituent territories of French Equatorial Africa. It achieved full independence on 11 Aug. 1960. Conflicts between the government and secessionist groups, particularly in the Muslim north and centre, began in 1965 and developed into civil war. In 1982 forces led by Hissène Habré gained control of the country. In June 1983 Libyan-backed forces re-occupied some territory but a ceasefire took effect in Sept. 1987. Rebel forces of the Popular Salvation Movement led by Idriss Déby entered Chad from Sudan in Nov. 1990. On 4 Dec. 1990 Déby declared himself President. In Feb. 2000 Hissène Habré was charged with torture and barbarity in Senegal, where he had lived since being toppled in 1990, and placed under house arrest.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chad is bounded in the west by Cameroon, Nigeria and Niger, north by Libya, east by Sudan and south by the Central African Republic. In Feb. 1994 the International Court of Justice ruled that the Aozou Strip along the Libyan border, occupied by Libya since 1973, was part of Chad. Area, 1,284,000 sq. km. At the 1993 census the population was 6,279,931 (5,929,192 settled, of whom 1,327,570 were urban and 359,069 nomadic). 1996 population estimate, 6,977,000; density, 5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 10·69m.

In 1999, 76·5% of the population were rural. The capital is N'Djaména with 998,000 inhabitants (1999 estimate), other large towns being (1993 census figures) Moundou (282,103), Sarh (193,753), Bongor (196,713), Abéché (187,936) and Doba (185,461).

The areas, populations and chief towns of the 14 prefectures were:

Prefecture	Area sq. km	Population (1993 census)	Capital
Batha	88,800	288,458	Ati
Biltine	46,850	184,807	Biltine
Borkou-Ennedi-Tibesti	600,350	73,185	Faya (Largeau)

Salamat	63,000	184,403	Amtiman
Tandjilé	18,045	453,854	Laï

The official languages are French and Arabic, but more than 100 different languages and dialects are spoken. The largest ethnic group is the Sara of southern Chad (27·7% of the total population), followed by the Sudanic Arabs (11·5%).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 308,000; deaths, 121,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 44·2; deaths, 17·4. Annual rate of growth, 1990–99, 2·9%. Expectation of life in 1999 was 44·2 years among males and 46·7 among females. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 118. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with adequate rainfall in the south, though Nov. to April are virtually rainless months. Further north, desert conditions prevail. N'Djaména, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 30" (744 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After overthrowing the regime of Hissène Habré, Idriss Déby proclaimed himself President and was sworn in on 4 March 1991.

A law of Oct. 1991 permits the formation of political parties provided they are not based on regionalism, tribalism or intolerance. There were 59 parties in 1996.

At a referendum on 31 March 1997 a new Constitution was approved by 63·5% of votes cast. It defines Chad as a unitary state. The head of state is the President, elected by universal suffrage.

The National Assembly has 125 members, elected for a four-year term in 25 single-member constituencies and 34 multi-member constituencies.

National Anthem. 'Peuple tchadien, debout et à l'ouvrage' ('People of Chad, arise and to the task'); words by L. Gidrol, tune by P. Villard.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 20 May 2001. Turn-out was 80·9%. Incumbent Idriss Déby won re-election, with 67·4% of the vote, against 13·9% for Ngarlejy Yorongar, 6·5% for Saleh Kabzabo and 5·1% for Wadal Abdelkader Kamougue.

In parliamentary elections held on 21 April 2002 the Patriotic Salvation Movement of President Idriss Déby won 102 seats, the Rally for Democracy and Progress 12, the Federation Action for the Republic 11, the National Rally for Development and Progress 5, the National Union for Democracy and Renewal 5 and the Union for Renewal and Democracy 3. Turn-out was 52·8%.

DEFENCE

There are eight military regions. Conscription is for three years. Defence expenditure totalled US$47m. in 2000 (US$6 per capita), representing 2·8% of GDP.

Army. In 1999 the strength was 25,000. In addition there was a paramilitary Gendarmerie of 4,500, and a Republican Guard of 5,000.

Air Force. Personnel (1999) about 350 including four combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Chad is a member of the UN, WTO, the African Union, African Development Bank, Lake Chad Basin Commission, OIC, the International Organization of the Francophonie, and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 39·8% of GDP in 1998, industry 14·3% and services 45·9%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XAF) with a parity of 655·957 francs CFA to one euro. Inflation in 2001 was 12·4%, up from 3·7% in 2000. Foreign exchange reserves were US$154m. in April 2002 and total money supply was 161,104m. francs CFA. Gold reserves were 11,000 troy oz in June 2002.

Budget. Revenues in 1998 were an estimated US$198m. and expenditure US$218m.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 1·0% in 2000 but then 8·5% in 2001, thanks mainly to the acceleration of the construction of an oil pipeline from Chad to Cameroon. The pipeline will allow Chad to export its oil riches to the world market. In 2001 total GDP was US$1·6bn.

Banking and Finance. The Banque des Etats de l'Afrique Centrale (Governor, Jean-Félix Mamalepot) is the bank of issue, and the principal commercial banks are the Banque de Développement du Tchad, the Banque Tchadienne de Crédit et de Dépôts and the Banque Commerciale du Chari.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 40,000 kW in 1991. Production in 1998 amounted to 100m. kWh. Consumption per capita was 13 kWh—the lowest in the world—in 1997.

Oil and Gas. The oilfield in Kanem préfecture has been linked by pipeline to a new refinery at N'Djaména but production has remained minimal. There is a larger oilfield in the Doba Basin. In June 2000 the World Bank approved funding for a 1,000-km US$4bn. pipeline to run from 300 new oil wells in Chad through Cameroon to the Atlantic Ocean. With construction well under way, oil revenues are expected to reach US$80m. by 2004 when the first oil from the Doba oilfield is scheduled to flow through the pipeline.

Minerals. Salt (about 4,000 tonnes per annum) is mined around Lake Chad, and there are deposits of uranium, gold, iron ore and bauxite. There are small-scale workings for gold and iron.

Agriculture. Some 80% of the workforce is involved in subsistence agriculture and fisheries. In 1998, 3·50m. ha were arable and 0·03m. ha permanent crops. Cotton growing (in the south) and animal husbandry (in the central zone) are the most important branches. Production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sorghum, 567; groundnuts, 372; millet, 321; sugarcane, 315; cassava, 255; seed cotton, 235; yams, 230; rice, 131; cottonseed, 125; cotton lint, 90; maize, 87.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 5,595,000; goats, 5,050,000; sheep, 2,500,000; camels, 715,000; chickens, 5m.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 11·02m. ha, or 8·8% of the total land area (11·5m. ha and 9·1% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 1·97m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catches, from Lake Chad and the Chari and Logone rivers, were approximately 84,000 tonnes in 1999.

INDUSTRY

Output, 1996: cotton fibre, 61,670 tonnes; edible oil, 12·55m. litres; sugar (1998), 31,100 tonnes; beer, 1·17m. litres; cigarettes, 35m. packets; soap, 2,958 tonnes; bicycles, 3,444.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 3,145,000 (56% males). In 1994 approximately 70% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$1,116m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2000 totalled US$233m. (US$242m. in 1999); imports in 2000 totalled US$450m. (US$474m. in 1999).

The main export markets are Portugal, Germany, Costa Rica and the USA. In 1995 the main import suppliers were France, Cameroon, Nigeria and the USA. Cotton exports in 1994, 28,857m. francs CFA; cattle, 15,401 francs CFA. Apart from cotton and cattle, other important exports are textiles and fish. The principal imports are machinery and transportation equipment, industrial goods, petroleum products and foodstuffs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 33,400 km of roads, of which 0·82% were surfaced. Approximately 10,560 passenger cars were in use in 1996, plus 14,550 trucks and vans, and 3,640 motorcycles and mopeds.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at N'Djaména, from which there were direct flights in 1998 to Abidjan, Abu Dhabi, Addis Ababa, Bamako, Bangui, Bissau, Brazzaville, Douala, El Fasher, Garoua, Jeddah, Khartoum, Lomé, Niamey, Paris and Yaoundé. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Chad-based carriers flew 2·9m. km, carrying 84,000 passengers (all on international flights). In 2000 N'Djaména handled 17,000 passengers and 2,300 tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications. In 1999 telephone main lines numbered 9,700 (1·3 per 1,000 persons). Only the Democratic Republic of the Congo had a lower penetration rate. There were 10,000 PCs in use in 1999 (1·3 per 1,000 persons). Internet users numbered 1,000 in July 2000 and there were 185 fax machines in use in Dec. 1997.

Postal Services. In 1994 there were 34 post offices, or one for every 200,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are criminal courts and magistrates courts in N'Djaména, Moundou, Sarh and Abéché, with a Court of Appeal situated in N'Djaména.

The population in penal institutions in 1996 was 2,521 (40 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The northern and central parts of the country are predominantly Muslim. In 1999 there were estimated to be 4,070,000 Muslims, 1,540,000 Roman Catholics and 1,090,000 Protestants. Some 560,000 people follow traditional beliefs.

Education. In 1996–97 there were 680,909 pupils in primary schools with 10,151 teachers and there were 99,789 pupils in secondary schools with 2,792 teachers. In 1994–95 there were 2,108 pupils in technical schools and 2,000 at the university, with 120 academic staff. Adult literacy rate was 41·0% in 1999 (male, 50·1%; female, 32·3%).

Health. In 1994 there were 3,962 hospital beds, 217 doctors, 878 nurses, 130 midwives and 10 pharmacists.

Chad has made significant progress in the reduction of undernourishment in the past 20 years. Between 1980 and 1997 the proportion of undernourished people declined from 70% of the population to 38%.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-controlled Radiodiffusion Nationale Tchadienne broadcasts a national and three regional services in French, Arabic and Sara. There were estimated to be 1·7m. radio sets in 1997. Television is being developed (colour by SECAM V) by the state-controlled Télé-Tchad, and there were 10,000 TV receivers in 1997.

Press. In 1996 there was one daily newspaper with a circulation of 2,000, giving a rate of one per 2,500 inhabitants.

Tourism. There were 11,000 foreign tourists in 1998, bringing revenue of US$10m.

GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 9,417
HDI/world rank: 0·831/38

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Magellan sighted what is now Chile in 1520. Subsequently Spaniards colonized the land in the 1530s and 1540s, defeating the Incas in the north and subjugating the Araucanian Indians in the South. In 1810 the Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Spanish crown. However, there were seven years of fighting before Chile was recognized as an independent republic. A constitution was adopted in 1883, and the country enjoyed stable government. In 1925 the constitution was amended to strengthen the executive at the expense of the legislature. In 1970 Dr Salvador Allende Gossens was elected president as the Marxist leader of a left-wing coalition. This government was overthrown in 1973 by a military junta headed by Gen. Augusto Pinochet Ugarte. President Allende died in the course of the coup and tens of thousands of his supporters were murdered. A new constitution came into force on 11 March 1981 providing for a return to democracy. Gen. Pinochet continued as head of state until 1989 and army commander until March 1998 when he claimed his constitutional right to become a senator for life (and hence immune from prosecution). While clearing the way for much-needed economic reforms, the Pinochet regime was responsible for wholesale human rights abuses, a legacy which had its consequences in 1999 when Pinochet, in Britain for medical treatment, was held on human rights charges instigated by Spain. On 2 March 2000 he returned to Chile after the British government ruled he was too ill to be extradited to Spain to face torture charges.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chile is bounded in the north by Peru, east by Bolivia and Argentina, and south and west by the Pacific Ocean. The area is 756,096 sq. km (291,928 sq. miles) excluding the claimed Antarctic territory. Many islands to the west and south belong to Chile: the Islas Juan Fernández (147 sq. km with 488 inhabitants in 1992) lie about 600 km west of Valparaíso, and the volcanic Isla de Pascua (Easter Island or Rapa Nui, 164 sq. km with 2,764 inhabitants in 1992), lies about 3,000 km west-northwest of Valparaíso. Small uninhabited dependencies include Sala y Goméz (400 km east of Easter Is.), San Félix and San Ambrosio (1,000 km northwest of Valparaíso, and 20 km apart) and Islas Diego Ramírez (100 km southwest of Cape Horn).

In 1940 Chile declared, and in each subsequent year has reaffirmed, its ownership of the sector of the Antarctic lying between 53° and 90° W. long., and asserted that the British claim to the sector between the meridians 20° and 80° W. long. overlapped the Chilean by 27°. Seven Chilean bases exist in Antarctica. A law of 1955 put the governor of Magallanes in charge of the 'Chilean Antarctic Territory' which has an area of 1,250,000 sq. km and a population (1992) of 1,945.

The population at the census of 1992 was 13,348,401 (6,795,147 females). Estimate, 2002, 15,773,504 (86·2% urban in 2002; 7,869,161 females in 2002); density, 21 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 17·01m.

Other large towns (June 2002 populations) are: Puente Alto (458,906), Viña del Mar (350,221), Talcahuano (288,666), San Bernardo (262,623), Arica (189,743), Chillán (176,863), Coquimbo (141,796), Osorno (135,204) and Calama (135,526). 69·7% of the population is mixed or mestizo, 20% are of European descent and 10·3% declared themselves to be indigenous Amerindians of the Araucanian, Fuegian and Chango groups. Language and culture remain of European origin, with 998,385 Araucanian-speaking (mainly Mapuche) Indians the only sizeable minority.

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000 births, 248,893; deaths, 78,814; marriages, 66,607. Rates, 2000 (per 1,000 population): birth, 17·2; death, 5·2. Divorce is illegal, as is abortion. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·25%. Infant mortality, 2000 (per 1,000 live births), 8·9. In 2000 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for males and 20–24 for females. Expectation of life at birth (1999): males 72·5 years, females 78·5 years. Chile has the highest life expectancy in South America. Fertility rate, 2000, 2·1 children per woman.

CLIMATE

With its enormous range of latitude and the influence of the Andean Cordillera, the climate of Chile is very complex, ranging from extreme aridity in the north, through a Mediterranean climate in Central Chile, where winters are wet and summers dry, to a cool temperate zone in the south, with rain at all seasons. In the extreme south, conditions are very wet and stormy. Santiago, Jan. 67°F (19·5°C), July 46°F (8°C). Annual rainfall 15" (375 mm). Antofagasta, Jan. 69°F (20·6°C), July 57°F (14°C). Annual rainfall 0·5" (12·7 mm). Valparaíso, Jan. 64°F (17·8°C), July 53°F (11·7°C). Annual rainfall 20" (505 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was approved by 67·5% of the voters on 11 Sept. 1980 and came into force on 11 March 1981. It provided for a return to democracy after a minimum period of eight years. Gen. Pinochet would remain in office during this period after which the government would nominate a single candidate for President. At a plebiscite on 5 Oct. 1988 President Pinochet was rejected as a presidential candidate by 54·6% of votes cast.

The President is directly elected for a non-renewable six-year term. Parliament consists of a 120-member Chamber of Deputies and a Senate of 48 members.

Santiago is the administrative capital of Chile, but since 11 March 1990 Valparaíso has been the legislative capital.

National Anthem. 'Dulce patria, recibe los votos' ('Sweet Fatherland, receive the vows'); words by E. Lillo, tune by Ramón Carnicer.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential run-off held on 16 Jan. 2000 leftist Ricardo Lagos (Party for Democracy/PPD) polled 51·3%, defeating the conservative Joaquín Lavin (Independent Democratic Union/UDI). Four other candidates had participated in the first round of voting on 12 Dec. 1999.

In elections to the Chamber of Deputies on 16 Dec. 2001 the Independent Democratic Union (UDI) won 35 seats, the Christian Democratic Party (PDC) 24, National Renewal 22, Party for Democracy 21, the Socialist Party (PS) 11 and the Social Democratic Radical Party 6. Member parties of the Concertation of Parties for Democracy/CPD (PDC, PPD, PS and PRSD) won 62 of the 120 seats (with 47·9% of votes cast) against 57 seats (44·3%) for the Alliance for Chile/APC (UDI, RN). After partial elections to the Senate on the same day the composition in the Senate was: PDC, 12; UDI, 11; RN, 7; PS, 5; PPD, 3; appointed members, 10.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the CPD government comprised:

President: Ricardo Lagos; b. 1938 (PPD; sworn in 11 March 2000).

Minister of Agriculture: Jaime Campos Quiroga. Defence: Michelle Bachelet Jeria. Economy and Energy: Jorge Rodríguez Grossi. Education: Sergio Bitar Chacra. Finance: Nicolás Eyzaguire Guzmán. Foreign Affairs: María Soledad Alvear Valenzuela. Health: Pedro García Aspillaga. Housing and National Assets: Jaime Ravinet de la Fuente. Interior: José Miguel Insulza Salinas. Justice: Luis Bates Hidalgo. Mining: Alfonso Dulanto Rencoret. Labour and Social Security: Ricardo Solari Saaverdra. Planning and Co-operation: Andrés Palma Irarrazabal. Public Works, Transportation and Telecommunications: Javier Etcheberry Celhay. National Women's Service: Cecilia Pérez Díaz. General Secretary of the Government: Francisco Vidal Salinas. General Secretary of the Presidency: Francisco Huenchumilla Jaramillo.

DEFENCE

Military service is for one year in the Army and two in the Navy and Air Force. Plans for weapons' modernization amounting to nearly US$2bn., which would benefit both the army and the air force, were announced in April 1998.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$2,891m. (US$190 per capita), representing 3·4% of GDP. In 1985 defence spending had accounted for 10·6% of GDP.

Army. A modernization plan of 1995 provided for the transformation of the seven Army divisions into three garrisons—North, Centre-South and Austral—independent and adapted to the terrains in which they operate. Strength (1999): 51,000 (27,000 conscripts) with 50,000 reserves. There is a 29,500-strong paramilitary force of Carabineros.

Navy. The principal ships of the Navy are three ex-British destroyers, four diesel submarines and three frigates. There is a Naval Air Service numbering 600 personnel with no combat aircraft.

Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 29,000 (2,100 conscripts) including 2,700 marines and 1,300 Coast Guard. There are HQ's at Valaparaíso, Talacahuano, Puerto Montt, Punta Arenas, Puerto Williams and Iquique.

Air Force. Strength (1999) was 13,000 personnel (1,500 conscripts). There are 90 combat aircraft made up largely of Mirage jets.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Chile is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, LAIA, APEC, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty, and has a free trade agreement with Mercosur.

ECONOMY

Agriculture and fisheries accounted for 5·6% of GDP in 1998, mining 8·4%, industry 27·1% and services 58·9%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Chile ranked 17th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·5 out of 10 in the annual index, making it Latin America's least corrupt nation.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Chilean peso (CLP) of 100 centavos. The peso was revalued 3·5% against the US dollar in Nov. 1994. In Sept. 1999 the managed exchange-rate system was abandoned and the peso allowed to float. Inflation was 2·8% in 2002. In June 2002 gold reserves were 12,000 troy oz (1·22m.

troy oz in Jan. 2000); foreign exchange reserves were US$14,612m. Total money supply in June 2002 was 3,722·29bn. pesos.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year.

Central government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. pesos):

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Revenue	7,525·4	7,907·0	7,910·1	9,114·5	9,795·6
Expenditure	6,902·2	7,775·2	8,412·4	9,058·1	9,908·2

VAT is 16–18%.

Performance. Real GDP growth averaged 7·7% between 1991 and 1997, leading to Chile being labelled the 'tiger of South America'. In 1998 GDP growth was 3·2%. In 1999 the economy contracted by 1·0%, but there was then growth of 4·4% in 2000 and 2·8% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$63·5bn.

Banking and Finance. Banking is regulated by legislation of 1995. There is a Central Bank and a State Bank. The Central Bank was made independent of government control in March 1990. The President is Carlos Massad Abud. There were 13 domestic and 23 foreign banks in 20016. In Dec. 2001 deposits in domestic banks totalled 17,440,672m. pesos; in foreign banks, 6,062,888m. pesos, and in other finance companies, 184,226m. pesos.

There are stock exchanges in Santiago and Valparaíso.

Weights and Measures. The metric system has been legally established since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Chile's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 4·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 10·4m. kW in 2000. Production of electricity was 41·3bn. kWh in 2000, of which just over 46% was hydro-electric. Consumption per capita in 2000 was 2,406 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production of crude oil, 2000, was 270,000 tonnes. Gas production, 2000, was 106 petajoules.

Minerals. The wealth of the country consists chiefly in its minerals. Chile is the world's largest copper producer; copper is the most important source of foreign exchange and government revenues. Production, 2000, 4,617,885 tonnes. Coal is low-grade and difficult to mine, and mining is made possible by state subsidies. Production, 2000, 503,350 tonnes.

Output of other minerals, 2000 (in tonnes): iron, 8,728,927; limestone, 5,395,215; iron pellets, 4,502,456; manganese, 41,716; lignite (1997), 36,000; zinc (1995), 34,457; molybdenum, 33,639; salt, 5,082,911; gold, 39,407 kg; silver, 1,239 tonnes. Lithium, nitrate, iodine and sodium sulphate are also produced.

Agriculture. In 1998, 1·98m. ha of land was arable and 0·32m. ha permanent crops. 1·8m. ha were irrigated in 1998. Some 54,000 tractors were in use in 1998.

Principal crops were as follows:

Crop	Area harvested, 1,000 ha 2000	Production, 1,000 tonnes 2000	Crop	Area harvested, 1,000 ha 2000	Production, 1,000 tonnes 2000
Sugarbeets	46	2,882	Oats	89	344
Wheat	407	1,746	Onions	6	282
Tomatoes	22	1,267	Rice	28	143
Potatoes	63	1,210	Pumpkins	5	100
Maize	82	778	Carrots	4	97

Fruit production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): apples, 1,135; grapes, 935; peaches and nectarines, 250; pears, 230; plums, 205; lemons and limes, 120; oranges, 92. 660,000 tonnes of wine were produced in 2000.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 3,900,000; sheep, 3,800,000; pigs, 1,900,000; goats, 760,000; horses, 400,000; poultry, 42m. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 265; beef and veal, 226; poultry meat, 378; milk, 1,990; eggs, 95.

Since 1985 agricultural trade has been consistently in surplus. Wine exports rose from US$52m. in 1990 to US$593m. in 2001.

Forestry. In 1997, 20·7% of the total land area was under forests. There were 13·4m. ha of natural forest and woodland (larch, araucaria, lenga, coihue, oak are important species) and 2·1m. ha of planted forest. Deforestation between 1990 and 1995 had resulted in an average loss of 29,000 ha each year. Timber production in 2001 was 25·7m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Chile has 4,200 km of coastline and exclusive fishing rights to 1·6m. sq. km. There are 220 species of edible fish. In 1990 the fishing fleet comprised 250 vessels over 100 GRT, totalling 111,140 GRT. The catch in 2001 was 4,150,966 tonnes and came entirely from sea fishing. Exports of fishery commodities in 2000 were valued at US$1·78bn., against imports of US$47·96m. Fish farms produced 99,300 tonnes of salmon in 2001.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Chile, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Compañía de Petróleos de Chile SA (COPEC), 3trn. pesos; Compañía de Telecomunicaciones de Chile SA (Telefónica CTC Chile), 2trn. pesos; and Endesa Chile (Empresa Nacional de Electricida SA), 2trn. pesos.

Output of major products in 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 2,832·7; cellulose, 1,373·4; fishmeal, 503·4; sugar, 476·3; iron or steel plates, 403·1; newsprint, 225·4; paper and cardboard, 112·6; beer, 337·4m. litres; motor vehicles, 21,574 items (1995); motor tyres, 3·25m. units.

Labour. In 2001 there were 5,326,370 people in employment (1,738,120 women). In Dec. 2001, 1,497,620 persons were employed in social or personal services, 1,011,360 in trade, 756,830 in manufacturing, 704,390 in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, 413,380 in building and 427,080 in transport and communications. In 2001 there was a monthly minimum wage of 105,500 pesos. In Jan. 2001, 9·1% of the workforce was unemployed, up from 6·1% in 1997 although down from a peak of 11·4% in Aug. 1999.

Trade Unions. Trade unions were established in the mid-1880s.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Sept. 1991 Chile and Mexico signed the free trade Treaty of Santiago envisaging annual tariff reductions of 10% from Jan. 1992. On 1 Oct. 1996 Chile joined the Mercosur free trade zone, but continues to act unilaterally in trade with third countries.

Foreign debt was US$38,032m. in 2001.

Imports and Exports. Trade in US$1m.:

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Imports	19,663·4	18,780·5	15,147·8	18,089·9	17,180·8
Exports	16,654·1	15,076·3	16,255·7	18,425·8	17,658·7

In 2001 the principal exports were (in US$1m.): manufactures, 8,304·9; minerals, 7,510·2 (of which copper, 6,673·4, equivalent to 37·8% of all exports); agricultural products, 1,710·8. Major export markets (in US$1m.), 2001: USA, 3,451·4; Japan, 2,140·2; UK, 1,231·4; China, 1,069·6; Brazil, 834·6; Mexico, 828·1; Italy, 800·8. Major import suppliers (in US$1m.), 2001: Argentina, 3,063·8; USA, 2,888·7; Brazil, 1,498·6; China, 1,052·9; Germany, 699·2.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 79,605 km of roads, but only 20·2% were hard-surfaced. There were 2,132 km of motorways and 16,056 km of main roads. In 2001 there were 1,172,572 private cars, 747,311 trucks and vans, 160,586 buses and coaches and 41,271 motorcycles and mopeds.

Rail. The total length of state railway (EFE) lines was (2001) 4,024 km, including 1,051 km electrified, of broad- and metre-gauge. EFE is now mainly a passenger carrier, and carried 16·1m. passengers in 2001. Freight operations are in the hands of the semi-private companies Ferronor, which carried 5·9m. tonnes in 2001, and Pacifico, which carried 5·5m. tonnes in 2001. The Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Railway (973 km, metre-gauge) links the port of Antofagasta with Bolivia and Argentina, and carried 3·5m. tonnes in 2001. Passenger-km travelled in 2001 came to 1,105m. and freight tonne-km to 925m.

There is a metro in Santiago (40·4 km).

Civil Aviation. There are 389 airports, with an international airport at Santiago (Comodoro Arturo Merino Benítez). The largest airline is Línea Aérea Nacional Chile (Lan-Chile), which in 2001 flew 70·3m. km and carried 5,046,600 passengers, followed by Línea Aérea de Colore (Ladeco), which in 1998 flew 15·1m. km and carried 1,148,100 passengers. In 2000 Santiago handled 5,778,000 passengers (3,187,000 on international flights) and 292,800 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The mercantile marine in 2001 totalled 647,820 GRT, including oil tankers 160,179 GRT. The five major ports, Valparaíso, San Antonio, Antofagasta, Arica and Iquique, are state-owned; there are 11 smaller private ports. Valparaíso, the largest port, handled 4,469,302 tonnes of freight in 2001.

Telecommunications. In 2001 there were 3,505,000 telephone main lines, equivalent to 227·6 for every 1,000 persons, and there were 1·5m. PCs in use (97·4 for every 1,000 persons). There were approximately 1·8m. Internet users in Feb. 2001. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 4·2m. in 2001 and there were 40,000 fax machines in 1997.

Postal Services. In 2002 there were 752 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are a High Court of Justice in the capital, 17 courts of appeal distributed over the republic, courts of first instance in the departmental capitals and second-class judges in the sub-delegations.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2002 was 36,214 (232 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty for ordinary crimes was abolished in 2001.

Religion. In 1997 Chile had an estimated 11·37m. Roman Catholics. In Jan. 2002 there were 3 cardinal archbishops, 5 archbishops, 25 bishops and 2 vicars apostolic. 13·2% of the population defined themselves as evangelical. There were 478,000 Latter-day Saints in 1998 and 130,000 Jews in 1991.

Education. In 2001 there were 287,196 pupils at pre-primary schools; 146,918 teachers (imparting primary and/or secondary education) for 2·36m. primary school pupils; and 850,713 pupils at secondary level. Adult literacy rate in 2000 was 95·8% (male, 95·9%; female, 95·6%).

In 2001 there were 479,487 students in higher education. There were 60 universities with 339,200 students, 51 professional institutes with 86,392 students and 111 technical education centres with 53,895 students.

In 1998 total expenditure on education came to 3·5% of GNP and represented 15·3% of total government expenditure.

Health. There were 846 hospitals and 19,000 doctors in 2002, and 1,012 dentists in the national health service and 3,677 university nurses in 2000.

Welfare. The Pension Fund Administration was founded in 1981. Employees are required to save 13% of their pay. In May 2002 it had 6,477,244 members and assets of 24,016,805m. pesos. In 1995 about 25% of adults had private health insurance.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 2002 there were 1,341 radio broadcasting stations (including repeaters), 1,173 FM and 168 AM. In Sept. 1999 there were five television channels operating in UHF frequencies on the national territory. 18 other channels were operating on VHF through 400 frequencies. Both data included four university channels (3 VHF and 1 UHF frequency). In Dec. 2002 the Televisión Nacional de Chile covered the whole of the country through 170 transmitters. In 1997 there were 5·18m. radio and 3·15m. TV sets.

Press. In 2002 there were 76 national daily newspapers; in 1996 Chile's newspapers had a combined circulation of 1·4m.

Tourism. There were 1,723,107 foreign visitors in 2001. Tourist receipts were US$788m. in 2001.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

An embryonic Chinese state emerged in the fertile Huang He (Yellow River) basin before 4000 BC. Chinese culture reached the Chang Jiang (Yangtze) basin by 2500 BC and within 500 years the far south was also within the Chinese orbit. About 1500 BC writing developed using recognizable Chinese characters. Around 1000 BC under the Zhou dynasty, a centralized administration developed. In about 500 BC a court official, Kongfuzi (Confucius), outlined his vision of society. Confucianism, which introduced a system of civil service recruitment through examination, remained the principal Chinese belief system until the mid-20th century.

In 221 BC the ruler of the Warring State of Qin became the first emperor of China. He built an empire extending from the South China Sea to the edge of Central Asia, where work was begun on the Great Wall of China. The Qin dynasty standardized laws, money and administration throughout the empire but it was short-lived. By 206 BC the state had divided into three.

Reunification came gradually under the Han dynasty (202 BC–AD 200), then the Jin (265–316) and Sui (589–612) dynasties, interspersed by a period of inter-state war and anarchy. Reunification was achieved by the Tang dynasty, whose rule brought new prosperity to China from 618–917. Eventually the Tang empire too collapsed as separatism grew.

In 1126 nomads from Manchuria invaded the north, defeating the Song dynasty (960–1127) north of the Chang Jiang. The northern invaders were overthrown by the Mongols, led by Genghis Khan (c. 1162–1227), who went on to claim the rest of China. In 1280 their ruler Kublai Khan (1251–94), who had founded the Yuan dynasty in 1271, swept into southern China. The Mongol Yuan dynasty adopted Chinese ways but was overthrown by a nationalist uprising in 1368 which established the Ming dynasty.

The Ming empire collapsed in a peasants' revolt in 1644. Within months the peasants' leader was swept aside by the invasion of the Manchus, whose Qing dynasty ruled China until 1911.

Preoccupied with threats from the north, China neglected its southern coastal frontier where European traders were attempting to open up the country. The Portuguese, who landed on the Chinese coast in 1516, were followed by the Dutch in 1622 and the English in 1637. In the two Opium Wars (1838–42; 1856–58), Britain forced China to allow the import of opium from India into China, while Britain, France, Germany and other European states gained concessions in 'treaty ports' that virtually came under foreign rule. In 1860 British and French forces invaded Beijing and burnt the imperial palace. Defeat in the Sino-Japanese War (1894–95) resulted in the loss of Taiwan and Korea.

The xenophobic Boxer Rebellion, led by members of a secret society called the Fists of Righteous Harmony, broke out in 1900. The Guangxu emperor (1875–1908) attempted modernization in the Hundred Days Reform, but was taken captive by the conservative dowager empress who harnessed the Boxer Rebellion to her own ends. The rebellion was put down by European troops in 1901. China was then divided into zones of influence between the major European states and Japan.

The turning point came in 1911 when a revolution led by the Kuomintang (Guomintang or Nationalist movement) of Sun Yet-sen (Sun Zhong Shan; 1866–1925) overthrew the emperor. In 1916 Sun founded a republic in southern China on Soviet lines. After Sun's death the nationalist movement was taken over by his ally Chiang Kai-shek (Jiang Jie Shi; 1887–1976). In April 1927 he tried to suppress the Chinese Communist Party in a bloody campaign in which thousands of Communists were slaughtered. The remains of the party fled to the far western province of Jiangxi, beyond the reach of the Nationalists. In 1928 Chiang's army entered Beijing. With the greater part of the country reunited under Chiang's rule, he formed a government in Nanjing, which became the capital of China.

In 1934 the Communists were forced to retreat from Jiangxi province. Led by Mao Zedong (Mao Tse-tung; 1893–1976) they trekked for more than a year on the 5,600-mile Long March. Harried during their journey, they were besieged by the Nationalists when they eventually took refuge in Shaanxi province.

Against this backdrop of civil unrest, the Japanese invaded Manchuria in 1931, and by 1937 they had seized Beijing and most of coastal China. At the end of the World War II, the Soviet sponsored Communist Party marched into Manchuria beginning a civil war. On 1 Oct. 1949 Mao declared the People's Republic of China in Beijing. Chiang fled with the remains of his Nationalist forces to the island of Taiwan, where he established a rival Chinese administration. It was not until 1978 that the USA recognized the People's Republic of China.

In 1950 China invaded Tibet. China posted 'volunteers' to fight alongside Communist North Korea during the Korean War (1950–53). There were clashes on the Soviet border in the 1950s and the Indian border in the 1960s. A Soviet-style five-year plan was put into action in 1953, but the two Communist powers fell out over their different interpretations of Marxist orthodoxy. Chinese research into atomic weapons culminated in the testing of the first Chinese atomic bomb in 1964.

Mao introduced the collectivization of farms in 1955. In 1956 he encouraged intellectual debate letting a 'hundred flowers bloom'. However, the new freedoms led to the questioning of the role of the party. Strict controls were reimposed and free-thinkers were sent to work in the countryside to be 're-educated'. In May 1958 Mao launched another ill-fated policy, the Great Leap Forward. To promote rapid industrialization and socialism, the collectives were reorganized into larger units. Neither the resources nor trained labour were available for this huge task. As relations with the Soviet Union cooled, a rapprochement with the United States was achieved in the early 1970s.

By the mid-1960s, Mao became the centre of a personality cult. Mao's 'Thoughts' were published in the 'Little Red Book'. In 1964 Mao set the Cultural Revolution in motion. Anyone who lacked enthusiasm for Mao Zedong Thought was denounced. After Mao's death in 1976, the Gang of Four, led by Mao's widow Chang Ch'ing, attempted to seize power. After these hard-liners were denounced and arrested, China came under the control of Deng Xiaoping, who emphasized economic reform. The country was opened to Western investment. Special Economic Zones and 'open cities' were designated and private enterprise gradually returned.

Greatly improved standards of living and a thriving economy increased expectations for civil liberties. The demand for political change climaxed in demonstrations by workers and students in April 1989, following the funeral of Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang. In Beijing the demonstrators were evicted from Tiananmen Square by the military who opened fire, killing more than 1,500. Hard-liners took control of the government, and martial law was imposed from May 1989 to Jan. 1990. Since then a more liberal regime has focused on economic development. Hong Kong was returned to China from British rule in 1997 and Macao from Portuguese rule in 1999. The late 1990s saw a cautious extension of civil liberties.

For the background to the handover of Hong Kong in 1997, see p. 459.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

China is bounded in the north by Russia and Mongolia; east by North Korea, the Yellow Sea and the East China Sea, with Hong Kong and Macao as enclaves on the southeast coast; south by Vietnam, Laos, Myanmar, India, Bhutan and Nepal; west by India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Tajikistan, Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan. The total area (including Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao) is estimated at 9,574,000 sq. km (3,696,500 sq. miles). A law of Feb. 1992 claimed the Spratly, Paracel and Diaoyutasi Islands. An agreement of 7 Sept. 1993 at prime ministerial level settled Sino-Indian border disputes which had first emerged in the war of 1962.

At the 1990 census the population was 1,130,510,638 (548,690,231 females). Population estimate, 1998: 1,248·10m. (611·81m. female); density, 143 per sq. km.

In 1999, 68·4% of the population were rural. The most recent census took place in Oct.–Nov. 2000, involving 6m. census officials.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1,366·2m.

China is set to lose its status as the world's most populous country to India by 2040, and according to UN projections its population will begin to decline between 2035 and 2040.

1979 regulations restricting married couples to a single child, a policy enforced by compulsory abortions and economic sanctions, have been widely ignored, and it was admitted in 1988 that the population target of 1,200m. by 2000 would have to be revised to 1,270m. Since 1988 peasant couples have been permitted a second child after four years if the first born is a girl, a measure to combat infanticide. In 1999 China started to implement a more widespread gradual relaxation of the one-child policy.

43·2m. persons of Chinese origin lived abroad in 1993.

A number of widely divergent varieties of Chinese are spoken. The official 'Modern Standard Chinese' is based on the dialect of North China. Mandarin in one form or another is spoken by 800m. people in China, or around 63% of the population. The Wu language and its dialects has some 90m. native speakers and Cantonese 70m. The ideographic writing system of 'characters' is uniform throughout the country, and has undergone systematic simplification. In 1958 a phonetic alphabet (Pinyin) was devised to transcribe the characters, and in 1979 this was officially adopted for use in all texts in the Roman alphabet. The previous transcription scheme (Wade) is still used in Taiwan and Hong Kong.

China is administratively divided into 22 provinces, five autonomous regions (originally entirely or largely inhabited by ethnic minorities, though in some regions now outnumbered by Han immigrants) and four government-controlled municipalities. These are in turn divided into 335 prefectures, 666 cities (of which 218 are at prefecture level and 445 at county level), 2,142 counties and 717 urban districts.

Yantai (1995 population of 1·32m.) is currently the fastest-growing city in the world, with a population increase of 253·4% projected for the period 1995–2015, by when it is expected to have 4·66m. inhabitants.

Beijing: Located in the northeast of China, Beijing (Peking) is the capital of China and its second largest city. China's traditional cultural heartland, it has also been at the centre of the country's political life for over 800 years. Since Chairman Mao proclaimed it capital of the People's Republic in 1949 the city has grown massively both in area and population. Beijing was the launch pad for Mao's Cultural Revolution when much of its rich heritage was destroyed. Today, though, it is the showpiece of 21st century China.

Shanghai: Situated on the Huangpu River on the coast of the East China Sea, Shanghai is China's biggest city and one of the world's largest seaports. Before the Communist Party came to power in 1947 the city was notorious for its corruption and huge social inequalities. Today, however, Shanghai is a central part of the country's drive for modernization. With huge financial backing it has become the major industrial and commercial centre in China.

The autonomous regions and provinces (see table above) have non-Han components in their populations, ranging from 97·2% (in 1994) in Tibet to 9·9% in Zhejiang. Total minority population, 1994, 72,818,100. 55 ethnic minorities are identified. At the 1990 census the largest were: Zhuang, 15,555,820; Manchu, 9,846,776; Hui, 8,612,001; Miao, 7,383,622; Uighur, 7,207,024; Yi, 6,578,524; Tujia, 5,725,049; Mongolian, 4,802,407; Tibetan, 4,593,072.

Tibet

After the 1959 revolt was suppressed, the Preparatory Committee for the Autonomous Region of Tibet (set up in 1955) took over the functions of local government, led by its Vice-Chairman, the Banqen Lama, in the absence of its Chairman, the Dalai Lama, who had fled to India in 1959. In Dec. 1964 both the Dalai and Banqen Lamas were removed from their posts and on 9 Sept. 1965 Tibet became an Autonomous Region. 301 delegates were elected to the first People's Congress, of whom 226 were Tibetans. The Chief of Government is Gyaincain Norbu. The senior spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama, is in exile. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1989. The Banqen Lama died in Jan. 1989. The borders were opened for trade with neighbouring countries in 1980. In July 1988 Tibetan was reinstated as a 'major official language', competence in which is required of all administrative officials. Monasteries and shrines have been renovated and reopened. There were some 15,000 monks and nuns in 1987. In 1984 a Buddhist seminary in Lhasa opened with 200 students. A further softening of Beijing's attitude towards Tibet was shown during President Bill Clinton's visit to China in June 1998. Jiang Zemin, China's president, said he was prepared to meet the Dalai Lama provided he acknowledged Chinese sovereignty over Tibet and Taiwan. In Sept. 2002 direct contact between the exiled government and China was re-established after a nine-year gap.

In 1996 the population was 2·49m. In 1994 there were 2·22m. Tibetans living in Tibet out of a total population of 2·36m. Birth rate (per 1,000), 1996, 24·7; death rate, 8·5; growth rate, 16·2. Population of the capital, Lhasa, in 1992 was 124,000. Expectation of life was 65 years in 1990. 2m. Tibetans live outside Tibet, in China, and in India and Nepal.

Chinese efforts to modernize Tibet include irrigation, road-building and the establishment of light industry. In 1991 there were 328 township and 123 village enterprises employing 21,168 persons; 12,000 persons worked in heavy industry, 16,000 in state-owned enterprises. 1990 output included 136,300 metres of woollen fabrics, 1,000 tonnes of salt, 1,900 tonnes of vegetable oil, 208,200 cu. metres of timber and 132,300 tonnes of cement. In 2000 plans were announced to build a railway of some 900 km to link Lhasa with the town of Golmud, which already has a link with the city of Xining. It would be the highest railway in the world. The Chinese government approved the plan on 8 Feb. 2001 with the aim of completing the link by 2008.

Electricity production in 1990 was 330m. kWh, of which 323m. kWh were hydro-electric.

In 1996 there were 953,000 rural labourers, including 886,000 in farming, forestry and fisheries. The total sown area was 220,100 ha, including 52,500 ha sown to wheat, 18,300 ha to rapeseed, 18,300 ha to oil-bearing crops and 14,500 ha to soya beans. Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 1996: wheat, 261; soya beans, 41; oil-bearing crops, 35; rapeseed, 35. There were 5·10m. cattle, 1·21m. draught animals, 0·36m. horses, 0·22m. pigs, 11·10m. sheep and 5·83m. goats in 1996.

In 1991 there were 21,842 km of roads, of which 6,240 km were paved. There are airports at Lhasa and Bangda providing external links. 30,000 tourists visited Tibet in 1986.

In 1988 there were 2,437 primary schools, 67 secondary schools, 14 technical schools and 3 higher education institutes. The total number of primary school pupils in 1990–91 was 101,000. A university was established in 1985.

In 1990 there were some 9,000 medical personnel and 1,006 medical institutions, with a total of about 5,000 beds.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1998, 20,010,000 (more than the total population of Australia); deaths, 8,110,000. 1998 birth rate (per 1,000 population), 16·03; death rate, 6·50. The birth rate in 1998 declined for the 12th successive year. There were 9,339,615 marriages and 1,132,215 divorces in 1996. In April 2001 parliament passed revisions to the marriage law prohibiting bigamy and cohabitation outside marriage. The suicide rate in China in 1994 was 14·3 per 100,000 population among men but 17·9 per 100,000 among women. China is the only major country in which the suicide rate is higher among females—over half the world's women suicides occur in China. In 1996 the most popular age for marrying was 25–29 for both men and women. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 68·3 years for men and 72·5 years for women. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·0%. Infant mortality, 1999, 33 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1999, 1·8 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Most of China has a temperate climate but, with such a large country, extending far inland and embracing a wide range of latitude as well as containing large areas at high altitude, many parts experience extremes of climate, especially in winter. Most rain falls during the summer, from May to Sept., though amounts decrease inland. Beijing (Peking), Jan. 24°F (–4·4°C), July 79°F (26°C). Annual rainfall 24·9" (623 mm). Chongqing, Jan. 45°F (7·2°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 43·7" (1,092 mm). Shanghai, Jan. 39°F (3·9°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 45·4" (1,135 mm). Tianjin, Jan. 24°F (–4·4°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 21·5" (533·4 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 21 Sept. 1949 the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference met in Beijing, convened by the Chinese Communist Party. The Conference adopted a 'Common Programme' of 60 articles and the 'Organic Law of the Central People's Government' (31 articles). Both became the basis of the Constitution adopted on 20 Sept. 1954 by the 1st National People's Congress, the supreme legislative body. The Consultative Conference continued to exist after 1954 as an advisory body. Its 10th session was convened in March 2003.

New Constitutions were adopted in 1975, 1978, 1982 and 1993, the latter embodying the principles of a 'Socialist market economy'. The constitution was amended in 1999 to endorse formally the concept of private ownership.

The National People's Congress can amend the Constitution and nominally elects and has power to remove from office the highest officers of state. The Congress elects a Standing Committee (which supervises the State Council) and the President and Vice-President for a five-year term. Congress has 2,979 deputies and is elected for a five-year term, and meets once a year for two or three weeks. When not in session, its business is carried on by its Standing Committee.

The State Council is the supreme executive organ and comprises the Prime Minister, Deputy Prime Ministers and State Councillors.

National Anthem. 'March of the Volunteers'; words by Tien Han, tune by Nieh Erh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The 10th National People's Congress was elected in March 2003.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President and Chairman of Central Military Commission: Hu Jintao; b. 1942 (Chinese Communist Party; elected 15 March 2003).

Deputy President: Zeng Qinghong.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Wen Jiabao; b. 1942 (Chinese Communist Party; elected 16 March 2003).

Deputy Prime Ministers: Huang Ju, Wu Yi (also Minister of Health), Zeng Peiyan, Hui Liangyu.

Minister of Agriculture: Du Qinglin. Civil Administration: Li Xueju. Construction: Wang Guangtao. Commerce: Lu Fuyuan. Culture: Sun Jiazheng. Education: Zhouji. Finance: Jin Renqing. Foreign Affairs: Li Zhaoxing. Information Industry: Wang Xudong. Justice: Zhang Fusen. Labour and Social Security: Zheng Silin. National Land Resources: Tian Fengshan. National Defence: Cao Gangchuan. National Security: Xu Yongyue. Personnel: Zhang Bolin. Public Security: Zhou Yongkang. Railways: Liu Zhijun. Science and Technology: Xu Guanhua. Supervision: Li Zhilun. Transportation: Zhang Chunxian. Water Resources: Wang Shucheng.

Ministers heading State Commissions: Family Planning, Zhang Weiqing. Nationalities Affairs, Li Dezhu. Development and Reform, Ma Kai. Science, Technology and Industry for National Defence, Zhang Yunchuan.

De facto power is in the hands of the Communist Party of China, which had 66m. members in 2002. There are eight other parties, all members of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference.

The members of the Standing Committee of the Politburo in Nov. 2002 were Hu Jintao (General Secretary), Wen Jiabao, Luo Gan, Wu Bangguo, Zeng Qinghong, Huang Ju, Jia Qinglin, Li Changchun, Wu Guanzheng.

DEFENCE

The Chinese president is chairman of the State and Party's Military Commissions. China is divided into seven military regions. The military commander also commands the air, naval and civilian militia forces assigned to each region.

Conscription is compulsory but for organizational reasons selective: only some 10% of potential recruits are called up. Service is for two years. A military academy to train senior officers in modern warfare was established in 1985.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$46,049m. (US$36 per capita) and represented 4·0% of GDP, down from 7·9% of GDP in 1985. In the period 1997–2001 China spent US$7·1bn. on defence imports, making it the world's second largest buyer of arms, after Taiwan. In 2001 China's expenditure was the highest of any country, at US$3,100m.

Nuclear Weapons. Having carried out its first test in 1964, there have been 45 tests in all at Lop Nur, in Xinjiang (the last in 1996). The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 402 warheads in Jan. 2002 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. China has been helping Pakistan with its nuclear efforts. Despite China's official position, Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, alleges that the Chinese government is secretly pursuing chemical and biological weapons programmes.

Army. The Army (PLA: 'People's Liberation Army') is divided into main and local forces. Main forces, administered by the seven military regions in which they are stationed, but commanded by the Ministry of Defence, are available for operation anywhere and are better equipped. Local forces concentrate on the defence of their own regions. There are 21 Integrated Group Armies comprising 44 infantry divisions, 9 armoured divisions, 12 armoured brigades, 1 mechanized infantry, 22 motorized infantry brigades, 6 artillery divisions, 15 artillery brigades, 1 anti-tank brigade, 8 surface-to-air missile brigades, 13 anti-aircraft artillery brigades and 3 army aviation regiments. Total strength in 2002 was 1·60m. including some 800,000 conscripts. Reserve forces are undergoing major reorganization on a provincial basis but are estimated to number some 500–600,000.

There is a paramilitary People's Armed Police force estimated at 1·5m. under PLA command.

Navy. The naval arm of the PLA comprises 1 nuclear-powered ballistic missile armed submarine, 5 nuclear-propelled fleet submarines, 1 diesel-powered cruise missile submarine and some 61 patrol submarines. Surface combatant forces include 21 missile-armed destroyers, 42 frigates and some 93 missile craft.

There is a land-based naval air force of about 472 combat aircraft, primarily for defensive and anti-submarine service. The force includes H-5 torpedo bombers, Q-5 fighter/ground attack aircraft J-6 (MiG-19) and J-7 (MiG-21) fighters.

The naval arm is split into a North Sea Fleet, an East Sea Fleet and a South Sea Fleet.

In 2002 naval personnel were estimated at 250,000, including 26,000 in the naval air force and 40,000 conscripts.

Air Force. There are 5 air corps and 32 air divisions. Up to four squadrons make up an air regiment and three air regiments form an air division. The Air Force has an estimated 1,900 combat aircraft.

Equipment includes J-7 (MiG-21) interceptors and fighter-bombers, H-5 (Il-28) jetbombers, H-6 Chinese-built copies of Tu-16 strategic bombers, Q-5 fighter-bombers (evolved from the MiG-19) and Su-27 fighters supplied by Russia. About 100 of a locally-developed fighter designated J-8 (known in the West as 'Finback') are in service.

Total strength (2002) was 420,000 (160,000 conscripts), including 220,000 in air defence organization. The Air Force headquarters are in Beijing.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The People's Republic of China is a member of UN (and its Security Council), WTO, BIS, the Asian Development Bank, APEC, Mekong Group and the Antarctic Treaty. China joined the WTO in Dec. 2001.

China is heavily dependent on foreign aid. In 2000 it received US$1·7bn., more than any other country.

ECONOMY

In 1998 industry accounted for 48·7% of GDP, services 32·9% and agriculture 18·4%.

It has been estimated that corruption cost China US$150bn. in the 1990s, or between 13% and 16% of the country's GDP.

Overview. A tenth five-year plan covers 2001–2005; there is also a 15-year strategic plan 'Long-Term Target for 2010'. The five-year plan has as its guiding principles economic restructuring, making technological progress the driving force for economic growth, improving living standards, and co-ordinating economic development and social development.

A Communist Party statement of Nov. 1993 declared that public ownership should remain the mainstay of the economy, but alongside a modern enterprise system suited to the demands of a market economy in which government control is separated from management. Private enterprise, which did not exist until the late 1970s, now accounts for over 30% of national output.

Ongoing reforms aim to complete the transition from a closed, agriculture-based command economy to an open, manufacturing- and service-based market economy. Growth has been led on the supply side by increased industrial output which until 1978 was dominated by state-owned enterprises. Since then, much of the increase in manufacturing has been produced by collective enterprises, e.g., by private entrepreneurs working with foreign investors. However, the state sector contains the most capital-intensive industries. Government revenue is strong thanks to high industrial profits and improvements in tax administrations. This has enabled the government to increase social security spending and to cope with public investment, interest costs and civil service wage bills. Monetary developments have been steady and WTO membership is expected to have a positive effect on investment.

Currency. The currency is called Renminbi (i.e., People's Currency). The unit of currency is the yuan (CNY) which is divided into ten jiao, the jiao being divided into ten fen. The yuan was floated to reflect market forces on 1 Jan. 1994 while remaining state-controlled, and the official rate of exchange was abolished. It became convertible for current transactions from 1 Dec. 1996. Total money supply in June 2002 was 6,565·77bn. yuan and gold reserves were 16·08m. troy oz. Foreign exchange reserves were US$242,763m. in June 2002 (US$73,579m. in 1995). Only Japan, with US$428,850m., had more. Inflation, which had been 24·1% in 1994, was 0·4% in 2000 and 0·7% in 2001.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. yuan):

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	297·75	330·56	372·98	432·27	496·68	590·05
Expenditure	440·01	482·21	540·65	601·72	730·85	890·88

Of the total revenue in 1996, local government revenue accounted for 374,692m. yuan, and local government expenditure 578,628m. yuan. Total debt incurred, 1996, 196,728m. yuan, of which 119,510m. yuan were foreign debts. The current account surplus was running at US$29,718m. in 1997.

Sources of revenue, 1996 (in 1m. yuan): taxes, 690,982; industrial and commercial taxes, 527,004. Expenditure: economic construction, 285,578 (1995); culture and education, 175,672 (1995); national defence, 63,672 (1995); government administration, 99,654 (1995); agriculture, 51,007; pensions and social welfare, 12,803; debt payments, 131,191.

Performance. GDP totalled US$1,159bn. in 2001. GDP growth was 7·1% in 1999 (the slowest rate for a decade), but then 8·0% in 2000. In 2001 there was 7·3% growth. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was 11%—the second highest in the world after Equatorial Guinea.

Banking and Finance. The People's Bank of China is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Zhou Xiaochuan). There are a number of other banks, the largest of which are Agricultural Bank of China, Industrial and Commercial Bank of China, China Construction Bank, Bank of China, Bank of Communications and Agricultural Development Bank of China. Legislation of 1995 permitted the establishment of commercial banks; credit co-operatives may be transformed into banks, mainly to provide credit to small businesses. Insurance is handled by the People's Insurance Company. There were (1994) 350,813 credit co-operatives. The Bank of China is responsible for foreign banking operations.

Savings bank deposits were 2,151,880m. yuan in 1994.

611,566m. yuan was loaned from State Banks in 1996. It is estimated that up to 20% of outstanding loans are bad debts (about US$145bn. at the end of 1996).

There are stock exchanges in the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone and in Shanghai. The Shanghai B Index (for foreign investors) was the best performing stock exchange in the world in 2000, gaining 136% in the course of the year. A securities trading system linking six cities (Securities Automated Quotations System) was inaugurated in 1990 for trading in government bonds.

In 2001 China received a record $47bn. worth of foreign direct investment.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use alongside traditional units of measurement.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. China's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 accounted for 12·9% of the world total (the second highest after the USA), and according to the World Bank Atlas were equivalent to 2·5 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked China 129th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 38·5%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1997, 254m. kW. In 1998 electricity output was 1,160,000 MWh. Consumption per capita was 746 kWh in 1998. Sources of energy in 1996 as percentage of total energy production: coal, 74·8%; crude oil, 17·1%; hydro-electric power, 6·2%; natural gas, 1·9%. In 2001 there were three nuclear reactors in use, with two more set to be opened in 2002. Generating electricity is not centralized; local units range between 30 and 60 MW of output. In Dec. 2002 China formally broke up its state power monopoly, creating instead five generating and two transmission firms.

Oil and Gas. There are on-shore fields at Daqing, Shengli, Dagang and Karamai, and ten provinces south of the Yangtze River have been opened for exploration in co-operation with foreign companies. Crude oil production was 161m. tonnes in 1999. Proven reserves in 1999 were 24bn. bbls.

Natural gas is available from fields near Canton and Shanghai, and in Sichuan province. Production was 24·3bn. cu. metres in 1999 with proven reserves of 1,370bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Most provinces contain coal, and there are 70 major production centres, of which the largest are in Hebei, Shanxi, Shandong, Jilin and Anhui. Recoverable coal reserves were estimated at 118bn. tonnes in 1997. Coal production was 1,409m. tonnes in 1997.

Iron ore reserves were 47,560m. tonnes in 1996. Deposits are abundant in the anthracite field of Shanxi, in Hebei and in Shandong, and are found in conjunction with coal and worked in the northeast. Production in 1998 was 210m. tonnes, making China the world's leading iron ore producer.

Tin ore is plentiful in Yunnan, where the tin-mining industry has long existed. Tin production was 54,076 tonnes in 1994.

China is a major producer of wolfram (tungsten ore). Mining of wolfram is carried on in Hunan, Guangdong and Yunnan.

Salt production was 30·8m. tonnes in 1998; gold production was 162 tonnes in 2000. Output of other minerals (in 1,000 tonnes) in 1998: bauxite, 8,500; aluminium, 2,100; zinc (1997), 1,400; lead (1997), 650; copper, 476; diamonds, 1,130,000 carats. Other minerals produced: nickel, barite, bismuth, graphite, gypsum, mercury, molybdenum, silver. Reserves (in tonnes) of phosphate ore, 15,766m.; sylvite, 458m.; salt, 402,400m.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounted for approximately 19% of GDP in 1997, compared to over 50% in 1949 at the time of the birth of the People's Republic of China and over 30% in 1980. In 2000 areas harvested for major crops were (in 1m.

ha): rice, 30·50; wheat, 26·65; maize, 22·54; soybeans, 9·03; rapeseed, 7·80; sweet potatoes, 6·21. Intensive agriculture and horticulture have been practised for millennia. Present-day policy aims to avert the traditional threats from floods and droughts by soil conservancy, afforestation, irrigation and drainage projects, and to increase the 'high stable yields' areas by introducing fertilizers, pesticides and improved crops. In spite of this, 18·1m. ha of land were flooded in 1996 and 20·1m. ha were covered by drought. 52·58m. ha were irrigated in 1998. In Aug. 1998 more than 21m. ha, notably in the Yangtze valley, were under water as China experienced its worst flooding in recent times.

'Township and village enterprises' in agriculture comprise enterprises previously run by the communes of the Maoist era, co-operatives run by rural labourers and individual firms of a certain size. There were 24·95m. such enterprises in 1994, employing 120·18m. persons. There were 2,157 state farms in 1994 with 5·18m. employees. In 1996 there were 234·38m. rural households. The rural workforce was 452·88m., of whom 322·6m. were employed in agriculture, fishing or land management. Net per capita annual peasant income, 1996: 1,926 yuan. Around 44% of the total workforce is engaged in agriculture, down from 68% in 1980. The percentage of the total population living in rural areas remains around 70%, however, as it was in 1980.

In 1992 there were 25,023 agricultural technical stations. There were 704,066 tractors in 1998.

Agricultural production of main crops (in 1m. tonnes), 2000: rice, 190·17; sweet potatoes, 121·02; maize, 105·23; wheat, 99·37; sugarcane, 70·20; potatoes, 62·04; watermelons, 38·38; cabbages, 20·21; tomatoes, 19·31; cucumbers and gherkins, 17·18; soybeans, 15·40; groundnuts, 15·07; seed cotton, 13·05; onions, 12·18; aubergines, 11·91; rapeseeds, 11·35; cottonseed, 8·70; pears, 8·62; chillies and green peppers, 8·14; sugarbeets, 7·70; tangerines and mandarins, 7·61; garlic, 6·47. Tea production in 2000 was just 721,000 tonnes. China is the world's leading producer of a number of agricultural crops, including rice, sweet potatoes, wheat, potatoes, watermelons, groundnuts and honey (256,000 tonnes). The gross value of agricultural output in 1996 was 2,342,866m. yuan. Agricultural production during the period 1990–97 grew on average by 4·4% every year. Only Vietnam among Asian countries achieved higher annual agricultural growth over the same period.

Livestock, 2000: pigs, 437,551,000; goats, 148,401,000; sheep, 131,095,000; cattle, 104,582,000; buffaloes, 22,599,000; horses, 8,916,000; chickens, 3·62bn.; ducks, 612m. China has more sheep, goats, pigs, horses and chickens than any other country. China also has more than two-thirds of the world's ducks. Meat production in 2000 was 64·44m. tonnes; milk, 7·84m. tonnes; eggs, 19·24m. tonnes; honey, 256,000 tonnes. China is the world's leading producer of meat and eggs.

Powell, S. G., Agricultural Reform in China: from Communes to Commodity Economy, 1978–1990. Manchester Univ. Press, 1992

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 133·32m. ha, or 14·3% of the total land area (133·76m. ha in 1990). Total roundwood production in 1999 was 582·66m. cu. metres, making China the world's largest timber producer (18% of the world total in 1999). It is the world's leading importer of roundwood, accounting for 21% of world timber imports in 1999. It is also the leading producer of wood fuel.

Fisheries. Total catch, 1999: 17,240,032 tonnes, of which 14,954,668 tonnes were from marine waters. China's annual catch is the largest in the world, and currently accounts for approximately 20% of the world total. In 1989 the annual catch had been just 5·3m. tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Industry accounts for approximately 49% of GDP, up from 21% in 1949 when the People's Republic of China came into existence. Cottage industries persist into the 21st century. Modern industrial development began with the manufacture of cotton textiles, and the establishment of silk filatures, steel plants, flour mills and match factories. In 1996 there were 7,986,500 industrial enterprises. 113,800 were state-owned, 1,591,800 were collectives and 6,210,700 were individually owned. A law of 1988 ended direct state control of firms and provided for the possibility of bankruptcy.

Output of major products, 1997 (in tonnes): cement, 492·6m. (nearly a third of the world total); crude steel (1999), 123·7m.; rolled steel, 94·9m.; distillate fuel oil (1997), 49·2m.; residual fuel oil (1997), 23·1m.; chemical fertilizers, 29·11m.; paper and paperboard (1998), 31·6m.; sulphuric acid, 19·46m.; sugar (1998), 8·9m.; cotton yarn, 5·31m.; aluminium, 2·2m.; silk (1996), 94,900; woollen fabrics (1996), 459·5m. metres; bicycles, 30m. units; motorcycles (and scooters), 10·3m. units; TV sets, 26·43m. units; radios (1996), 56·50m. units; watches, 295m. units; clocks, 81·8m. units; cameras, 46·87m. units; washing machines, 12,571,000 units; refrigerators, 9·86m. units; motor vehicles, 1·62m. units; locomotives (1996), 1,050 units; beer, 18,889·4m. litres. China is the world's leading steel producer.

The gross value of industrial output in 1996 was 9,959,500m. yuan.

Labour. The employed population at the 1990 census was 647·2m. (291·1m. female). By 1997 it was estimated to have risen to 696·0m., of whom 71% were in rural areas and 29% in urban areas. In 1997 there were 330·1m. people working in agriculture, 96·1m. in manufacturing, 47·1m. in commerce, 44·8m. in construction and 18·0m. in community and social services. In 1996, 109·4m. worked in state-owned enterprises, 29·5m. in urban collectives and 50·2m. were self-employed. In 1994 there were 446·54m. working as individual rural labourers or in rural collectives and there were 15·57m. individual urban labourers.

By 2001 China had more than 2m. private companies employing 22m. people. It was not until the late 1970s that the private sector even came into existence in China.

At the 1990 census there was a floating population of 21m. internal migrants who tour the country seeking seasonal employment. There were 5·53m. urban unemployed in 1996 (3% of the urban population). Almost one-third of unemployed people had not worked for a year. Only a quarter of the unemployed in 1996 were registered at employment services and only 1·7% received unemployment relief payments. In April 1998 the official unemployment rate was 5%, but Prime Minister Zhu Rongji admitted that 10% of the workforce were unemployed.

The average non-agricultural annual wage in 1996 was 6,210 yuan: 4,302 yuan, urban collectives; 6,280 yuan, state-owned enterprises; 8,261 yuan, other enterprises. There is a 6-day 48-hour working week. Minimum working age was fixed at 16 in 1991. There were 120,000 labour disputes in 1999, up from 8,000 in 1989.

Trade Unions. The All-China Federation of Trade Unions, founded in 1925, is headed by Wang Zhaoguo. In 2003 there were 103m. members. It consists of 31 federations of trade unions. Its National Congress convenes every five years.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$149,800m. in 2000 (the fourth highest in the world). Actual foreign investment totalled US$33,800m. in 1994. Direct foreign investment (in US$1m.) in 1995 by major countries of origin: Taiwan, 11,600; USA, 10,900; Japan, 10,500; Singapore, 3,900; South Korea, 2,300; UK, 2,200.

There are six Special Economic Zones at Shanghai and in the provinces of Guangdong and Fujian, in which concessions are made to foreign businessmen. The Pudong New Area in Shanghai is designated a special development area. Since 1979 joint ventures with foreign firms have been permitted. A law of April 1991 reduced taxation on joint ventures to 33%. There is no maximum limit on the foreign share of the holdings; the minimum limit is 25%.

In May 2000 the US granted normal trade relations to China, a progression after a number of years when China was accorded 'most favoured nation' status. China subsequently joined the World Trade Organization on 11 Dec. 2001.

Imports and Exports. Trade in US$1m.:

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The total road length was 1,526,389 km in 1996. Of these, 24,474 km were motorways and 156,154 were main roads. In 1996 there were 6,127,000 trucks and 3,894,000 passenger vehicles. 2·89m. vehicles were privately owned. The use of bicycles is very widespread and there are also 9,760,000 motorcycles and mopeds. In 1996, 9,838m. tonnes of freight and 11,221m. persons were transported by road.

There were 253,537 traffic accidents in 1994, with 66,362 fatalities.

Rail. In 1996 there were 56,700 km of railway including 10,100 km electrified. Gauge is standard except for some 600 mm track in Yunnan. Passenger-km travelled in 1997 came to 354·8bn. and freight tonne-km to 1,309·7bn.

Civil Aviation. There are major international airports at Beijing, Shanghai (Hongqiao and Pu Dong airports) and Guangzhou (Baiyun). Altogether there were 142 civil airports in 1996, 106 of which can accommodate Boeing 737s or larger aircraft. The national and major airlines are state-owned, except Shanghai Airlines (75% municipality-owned, 25% private) and Shenzhen Airlines (private). The leading Chinese airlines operating scheduled services in 1999 were China Southern Airlines (13,266,700 passengers), China Eastern Airlines (8,253,100), Air China (6,521,200), China Southwest Airlines (4,507,600), China Northern Airlines (4,034,000), China Yunnan Airlines (3,018,500), China Northwest Airlines (2,882,500) and Xinjiang Airlines (1,361,400). Other Chinese airlines include Changan Airlines, China National Aviation, Fujian Airlines, Hainan Airlines, Shandong Airlines, Shanghai Airlines, Shanxi Airlines, Shenzhen Airlines, Sichuan Airlines and Xiamen Airlines.

In 1999 the busiest airport was Beijing, with 21,691,000 passengers (16,073,000 on domestic flights), followed by Guangzhou (Baiyun), with 12,791,000 passengers (11,527,000 on domestic flights) and Shanghai (Hongqiao), with 12,139,000 passengers (7,481,000 on domestic flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant fleet consisted of 3,214 vessels (523 oil tankers) totalling 16·5m. GRT (tankers, 2·03m. GRT).

Cargo handled by the major ports in 1996 (in tonnes): Shanghai, 164m.; Qinhuangdao, 83m.; Ningbo, 76m.; Guangzhou (Canton), 75m.; Dalian, 64m.; Tianjin, 62m.; Qingdao, 60m. In 1993, 125·08m. tonnes of freight were carried. Shanghai handled 6·33m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2001, making it the world's fifth busiest container port in terms of number of containers handled. Construction began in 2002 on the 14·31bn. yuan Yangshan deep-water port that should make Shanghai the world's third busiest port. On completion in 2020 it is estimated that it will have a capacity of 13m. TEUs.

In Jan. 2001 the first legal direct shipping links between the Chinese mainland and Taiwanese islands in more than 50 years were inaugurated.

Inland waterways totalled 110,593 km in 1994. 1,070·91m. tonnes of freight and 261·65m. passengers were carried.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 144,829,000 telephone main lines (111·8 per 1,000 persons) and 20·6m. PCs were in use (15·9 per 1,000 inhabitants). In Nov. 2002 there were 200m. mobile phone subscribers, making China the biggest market for mobile phones in the world. There were 45·8m. Internet users in July 2002. At the beginning of 1998 there had only been around 500,000 users. By 2007 Chinese is expected to have overtaken English as the most-used language on the Internet. There were 2m. fax machines in 1997.

Postal Services. There were 72,496 post offices in 1996. The use of Pinyin transcription of place names has been requested for mail to addresses in China (e.g., 'Beijing' not 'Peking').

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Six new codes of law (including criminal and electoral) came into force in 1980, to regularize the legal unorthodoxy of previous years. There is no provision for habeas corpus. The death penalty has been extended from treason and murder to include rape, embezzlement, smuggling, fraud, theft, drug-dealing, bribery and robbery with violence. There were 2,468 reported executions in 2001—more than in any other country. 'People's courts' are divided into some 30 higher, 200 intermediate and 2,000 basic-level courts, and headed by the Supreme People's Court. The latter tries cases, hears appeals and supervises the people's courts. People's courts are composed of a president, vice-presidents, judges and 'people's assessors' who are the equivalent of jurors. 'People's conciliation committees' are charged with settling minor disputes. There are also special military courts. Procuratorial powers and functions are exercised by the Supreme People's Procuracy and local procuracies.

The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 1,410,000 (115 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The government accords legality to five religions only: Buddhism, Islam, Protestantism, Roman Catholicism and Taoism. Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism have long been practised. Confucianism has no ecclesiastical organization and appears rather as a philosophy of ethics and government. Taoism—of Chinese origin—copied Buddhist ceremonial soon after the arrival of Buddhism two millennia ago. Buddhism in return adopted many Taoist beliefs and practices. A more tolerant attitude towards religion had emerged by 1979, and the government's Bureau of Religious Affairs was reactivated.

Ceremonies of reverence to ancestors have been observed by the whole population regardless of philosophical or religious beliefs.

A new quasi-religious movement, Falun Gong, was founded in 1992, but has since been banned by the authorities. The movement claims it has some 100m. adherents, although the Chinese government has maintained the real number is closer to 2m.

Muslims are found in every province of China, being most numerous in the Ningxia-Hui Autonomous Region, Yunnan, Shaanxi, Gansu, Hebei, Honan, Shandong, Sichuan, Xinjiang and Shanxi. They totalled 18m. in 1997.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. In 1992 there were about 3·5m. Catholics who are members of the Patriotic Catholic Association, which declared its independence from Rome in 1958. Protestants are members of the All-China Conference of Protestant Churches. In 1997 there were an estimated 73,000,000 Christians in total.

In 1997 there were also estimated to be 247,000,000 Chinese folk-religionists, 147,000,000 atheists, 104,000,000 Buddhists, 1,000,000 advocates of traditional beliefs and 637,000,000 non-religious persons.

Legislation of 1994 prohibits foreign nationals from setting up religious organizations.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 83·5% (male, 91·2%; female, 75·5%). In 1994, 98·4% of school-age children attended school. In 1993 maximum school fees were 10 yuan a term, to which other charges might be added. In 1996 there were 187,324 kindergartens with 26·66m. children and 889,000 teachers. An educational reform of 1985 planned to phase in compulsory 9-year education consisting of 6 years of primary schooling and 3 years of secondary schooling, to replace a previous 5-year system. In 1997 there were 628,840 primary schools with 5,794,000 teachers and 139·95m. pupils; and 78,642 secondary schools with 3,587,000 teachers and 60·18m. pupils. In 1996 there were 10,049 vocational schools with 308,000 teachers and 4·73m. students. There were 1,032 institutes of higher education, including universities, with 403,000 teachers and 3·02m. students. One-third of all higher education students study engineering.

There is an Academy of Sciences with provincial branches. An Academy of Social Sciences was established in 1977.

In 1995–96 in the private sector there were 3 general universities and 9 specialized universities (aeronautics and astronautics; agricultural engineering; agriculture; chemical technology; foreign studies; labour; medicine; traditional Chinese medicine; polytechnic). In the public sector there were 60 general universities, 2 for ethnic minorities and the following specialized universities: agriculture, 12; agriculture and land reclamation, 1; land reclamation, 1; architecture, 2; architecture and technology, 1; chemical technology, 1; coal and chemical technology, 1; electronic science and technology, 1; engineering, 1; fisheries, 1; foreign languages, 1; forestry, 1; hydraulic and electrical engineering, 1; international business and economics, 1; international studies, 1; iron and steel technology, 1; maritime studies, 1; medicine, 11; traditional Chinese medicine, 2; mining and technology, 1; petroleum, 1; pharmacology, 1; political science and law, 1; polytechnic, 8; radio and television, 1; science and technology, 5; surveying and mapping, 1; teaching, 4; technology, 6; textiles, 1.

In 1996 there were also 893 teacher training schools. In 1994, 19,000 students were studying abroad. Fees were introduced for university students in 1996–97.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 155,611m. yuan (2·3% of GNP), around 11·9% of total government expenditure.

Health. Medical treatment is free only for certain groups of employees, but where costs are incurred they are partly borne by the patient's employing organization. In 1996 there were 1·94m. doctors, of whom 0·35m. practised Chinese medicine, and 1·16m. nurses. About 10% of doctors are in private practice.

In 1996 there were 67,964 hospitals (with 2·87m. beds), 528 sanatoria (with 109,000 beds) and 103,472 clinics. There were 24 beds per 10,000 population in 1996.

Approximately 1m. Chinese were HIV-infected in 2002. Some suggestions indicate that there may be as many as 10m. HIV-positive people by 2010.

In 1996 some 62% of males smoked, but fewer than 4% of females. The rate among males has been gradually rising over the past 15 years whilst that among females has gradually gone down.

In 1997 approximately 164m. people, representing 13% of the population, were undernourished. In 1979, 22% of the population had been undernourished.

Welfare. In 1996 there were 42,821 social welfare institutions with 769,348 inmates. Numbers (in 1,000) of beneficiaries of relief funds: persons in poor rural households, 30,790; in poor urban households, 2,610; persons in rural households entitled to 'the 5 guarantees' (food, clothing, medical care, housing, education for children or funeral expenses), 2,675; retired, laid-off or disabled workers, 535. The major relief funds (in 1,000 yuan) in 1996 were: families of deceased or disabled servicemen, 5,187,970; poor households, 712,270; orphaned, disabled, old and young persons, 1,856,680; welfare institutions, 1,551,000.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1994 there were 1,107 radio and 766 TV stations. The Central People's Broadcasting Station provides two central programmes, regional services, special services, a Taiwan service and external services. China Central Television (colour by PAL) transmits three programmes from Beijing, a programme from Shanghai, and an English-language programme. There are 29 regional programmes transmitted from 361 local stations. By 1995 about 600 cable TV systems had been licensed. There were 50m. cable TV subscribers in 1997. In 1996 there were 240·1m. radio receivers (only the USA has more), and in 1999, 450m. TV receivers (the greatest number in any country in the world). In 1980 there had been just 9m., representing an increase of 441m. between 1980 and 1999, or more TV sets than were in use in the USA (the country with the second highest number of sets) in 1999. In urban areas 96%, and in rural areas 48·5%, of households possessed a TV set in 1994. The use of satellite receiving dishes was prohibited in 1993.

Cinema. There were 4,639 cinemas in 1995. 148 feature films were made in 1994.

Press. In 1994 there were 1,635 newspapers with a combined circulation of 125,200m. and 7,325 periodicals with 2,210m. The Party newspaper is Renmin Ribao (People's Daily), which had a daily circulation of 3m. in 1994. 110,283 book titles were published in 1996. There were 2,596 public libraries in 1993.

Tourism. 27,047,000 tourists visited in 1999. The World Tourism Organization predicts that China will overtake France as the world's most visited destination by 2020 and become the world's 4th most important source of tourists to other countries. Income from tourists in 1999 was US$14,098m.

Festivals. The lunar New Year, also known as the 'Spring Festival', is a time of great excitement for the Chinese people. The festivities get under way 22 days prior to the New Year date and continue for 15 days afterwards. Dates of the lunar New Year: Year of the Monkey, 22 Jan. 2004; Year of the Rooster, 9 Feb. 2005. Lantern Festival, or Yuanxiao Jie, is an important, traditional Chinese festival, which is on the 15th of the first month of the Chinese New Year. Guanyin's Birthday is on the 19th day of the second month of the Chinese lunar calendar. Guanyin is the Chinese goddess of mercy. Tomb Sweeping Day, as the name implies, is a day for visiting and cleaning the ancestral tomb and usually falls on 5 April. Dragon Boat Festival is called Duan Wu Jie in Chinese. The festival is celebrated on the 5th of the 5th month of the Chinese lunar calendar. The Moon Festival is on the 15th of the 8th lunar month. It is sometimes called Mid-Autumn Festival. The Moon Festival is an occasion for family reunion.

Libraries. In 1995 there were 2,600 public libraries with a combined 328,500,000 volumes and 5,400,000 registered users.

HONG KONG

Xianggang

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Hong Kong island and the southern tip of the Kowloon peninsula were leased to Britain for 99 years in 1898. Talks began in Sept. 1982 between Britain and China over the future of Hong Kong after the lease expiry in 1997. On 19 Dec. 1984 the two countries signed a Joint Declaration by which Hong Kong became, with effect from 1 July 1997, a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China enjoying a high degree of autonomy, and vested with executive, legislative and independent judicial power, including that of final adjudication. The existing social and economic systems were to remain unchanged for another 50 years. This 'one country, two systems' principle, embodied in the Basic Law, became the constitution for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Hong Kong ('Xianggang' in Mandarin Pinyin) island is situated off the southern coast of the Chinese mainland 32 km east of the mouth of the Pearl River. The area of the island is 79·99 sq. km. It is separated from the mainland by a fine natural harbour. On the opposite side is the peninsula of Kowloon (46·27 sq. km). Total area of the Territory is 1,091 sq. km, a large part of it being steep and unproductive hillside. Country parks and special areas cover over 40% of the land area. Since 1945 the government has reclaimed over 5,400 ha from the sea, principally from the seafronts of Hong Kong and Kowloon, facing the harbour. The 'New Territories' are on the mainland, north of Kowloon.

Based on the results of the 2001 population census Hong Kong's resident population in March 2001 was 6,708,389 and the population density 6,237 per sq. km. 59·7% of the population was born in Hong Kong, 33·7% in other parts of China and 6·6% in the rest of the world.

In 2001, 100% of the population lived in urban areas. Some 10,600 persons emigrated in 2001. The British Nationality Scheme enables persons to acquire citizenship without leaving Hong Kong. There were 53,655 legal entrants (one-way permit holders) from the mainland of China in 2001. The population is projected to increase to 8·7m. by 2031.

The official languages are Chinese and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual population growth rate, 2001, 0·9%. Vital statistics, 2001: known births, 48,200; known deaths, 33,400; registered marriages, 32,800. Rates (per 1,000): birth, 7·2; death, 5·0; marriage, 4·8; infant mortality, 2001, 2·6 per 1,000 live births (one of the lowest rates in the world). Expectation of life at birth, 2001: males, 78·4 years; females, 84·6. The median age for marrying in 2001 was 31·3 years for males and 28·1 for females. Total fertility rate, 2001, 0·9 child per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is sub-tropical, tending towards temperate for nearly half the year, the winter being cool and dry and the summer hot and humid, May to Sept. being the wettest months. Normal temperatures are Jan. 60°F (15·8°C), July 84°F (28·8°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,214·3 mm).

THE BRITISH ADMINISTRATION

Hong Kong used to be administered by the Hong Kong government. The Governor was the head of government and presided over the Executive Council, which advised the Governor on all important matters. The last British Governor was Chris Patten. In Oct. 1996 the Executive Council consisted of three ex officio members and ten appointed members, of whom one was an official member. The chief functions of the Legislative Council were to enact laws, control public expenditure and put questions to the administration on matters of public interest. The Legislative Council elected in Sept. 1995 was, for the first time, constituted solely by election. It comprised 60 members, of whom 20 were elected from geographical constituencies, 30 from functional constituencies encompassing all eligible persons in a workforce of 2·9m., and ten from an election committee formed by members of 18 district boards. A president was elected from and by the members.

At the elections on 17 Sept. 1995 turn-out for the geographical seats was 35·79%, and for the functional seats (21 of which were contested), 40·42%. The Democratic Party and its allies gained 29 seats, the Liberal Party 10 and the pro-Beijing Democratic Alliance 6. The remaining seats went to independents.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In Dec. 1995 the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress set up a Preparatory Committee of 150 members (including 94 from Hong Kong) to oversee the retrocession of Hong Kong to China on 1 July 1997. In Nov. 1996 the Preparatory Committee nominated a 400-member Selection Committee to select the Chief Executive of Hong Kong and a provisional legislature to replace the Legislative Council. The Selection Committee was composed of Hong Kong residents, with 60 seats reserved for delegates to the National People's Congress and appointees of the People's Political Consultative Conference. On 11 Dec. 1996 Tung Chee Hwa was elected Chief Executive by 80% of the Selection Committee's votes.

On 21 Dec. 1996 the Selection Committee selected a provisional legislature which began its activities in Jan. 1997 while the Legislative Council was still functioning. In Jan. 1997 the provisional legislature started its work by enacting legislation which would be applicable to the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region and compatible with the Basic Law.

Constitutionally Hong Kong is a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China. The Basic Law enables Hong Kong to retain a high degree of autonomy. It provides that the legislative, judicial and administrative systems which were previously in operation are to remain in place. The Special Administrative Region Government is also empowered to decide on Hong Kong's monetary and economic policies independent of China.

In July 1997 the first-past-the-post system of returning members from geographical constituencies to the Legislative Council was replaced by proportional representation.

In July 2002 a new accountability or 'ministerial' system was introduced, under which the Chief Executive nominates for appointment 14 policy secretaries, who report directly to the Chief Executive. The Chief Executive is aided by the Executive Council, consisting of the three senior Secretaries of Department (the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Secretary for Justice) and eleven other secretaries plus five non-officials.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the Legislative Council election held on 10 Sept. 2000 turn-out was just 43%, a drop of nearly 10% on the 1998 vote. 24 of the 60 seats were directly elected, the other 36 being returned by committees and professional associations. The Democratic Party gained 12 seats, the pro-Beijing Democratic Alliance for the Betterment of Hong Kong 11, Liberals 8, Progressives 4, Frontier 3, New Century 2 and others 20. The Democrats saw their share of the vote in the directly-elected seats fall, from 42·6% of votes cast in 1998 to 34·7% of votes cast in 2000, while the Democratic Alliance for the Betterment of Hong Kong saw their share rise, from 25·2% of votes cast in 1998 to 29·7% of votes cast in 2000.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 84% of GDP in 1997 and industry 15%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Hong Kong ranked 14th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries and regions with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8·2 out of 10 in the annual index.

Income tax is a flat 15% and only 25% of the population pay any tax at all. 6% of the population pays 80% of the total income tax bill. Hong Kong represents 20% of China's total worth.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Hong Kong dollar (HKD) of 100 cents. Banknotes are issued by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Standard Chartered Bank, and, from May 1994, the Bank of China. Total money supply was HK$216,760m. in May 2002. In June 2002 gold reserves were 67,000 troy oz and in Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves US$112,335m. (US$55,398m. in 1995). Inflation was negative in 1999, at –5·4%.

Budget. The total government revenue and expenditure for financial years ending 31 March were as follows (in HK$1m.):

	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Revenue[1]	281,226	216,115	232,995	225,060	175,559
Expenditure[2]	194,241	218,811	214,533	224,791	238,585

[1]Including the change in the net worth of investments up to 31 Oct. 1998.
[2]Excluding Capital Investment Fund.

Public expenditure in 2002 (based on revised estimates 2001–02) was divided as follows (HK$1bn.): education, 52·6; support, 35·7; health, 34·0; housing, 33·2; social welfare, 30·7; security, 28·1; infrastructure, 24·7; economic, 14·1; environment and food, 11·3; community and external affairs, 8·5.

The final reserve balance as at 31 March 2002 was HK$372·5bn.

Performance. Total GDP was US$163,995m. in 2001. Following real GDP growth of 5·1% in 1997, the economy contracted in 1998 by 5·0%, representing Hong Kong's most severe recession since the 1970s. There was then growth of 3·4% in 1999 and 10·2% in 2000, including 14·1% in the first quarter of 2000. GDP growth was only 0·6% in 2001. The third quarter of 2002 saw growth of 3·3% after contracting at the end of 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Hong Kong Monetary Authority acts as a central bank. The Chief Executive is Joseph Yam. As at Dec. 1995 there were 185 banks licensed under the Banking Ordinance, of which 31 were locally incorporated, 63 restricted licence banks and 154 representative offices of foreign banks. Licensed bank deposits were HK$2,601,971m. in June 1997; restricted licence bank deposits were HK$62,033m. There were 132 deposit-taking companies registered under the Banking Ordinance with total deposits of HK$18,419m. as at Nov. 1995.

In March 2000 the stock exchange, the futures exchange and the clearing settlement merged into Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing (HKEx). The summer of 1997 saw record highs on the Hang Seng index (16,365 in July 1997 compared with 10,681 in July 1996). In July 1997 the average daily turnover was HK$19,500m.

Weights and Measures. Metric, British Imperial, Chinese and US units are all in current use in Hong Kong. However, government departments have now effectively adopted metric units; all new legislation uses metric terminology and existing legislation is being progressively metricated. Metrication is also proceeding in the private sector.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Hong Kong's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 5·4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 11m. kW in 1997. Production in 1998 was 31·41bn. kWh. Consumption in 1998 was 34·85bn. kWh.

Water. Reservoirs are needed to store the summer rainfall in order to meet supply requirements. There are 17 impounding reservoirs with a total capacity of 586m. cu. metres. Raw water is also purchased from the Guangdong Province of China (729m. cu. metres in 2001). Consumption in 2001 was 940m. cu. metres.

Agriculture. The local agricultural industry is directed towards the production of high quality fresh food through intensive land use and modern farming techniques. Out of the territory's total land area of 1,097 sq. km, only 27 sq. km is currently farmed. In 1999 local production accounted for 11·7% of fresh vegetables, 18·2% of live poultry and 22·2% of live pigs consumed. Pig production increased by about 17% compared with the previous year. Crop production continued to fall as vegetable prices fell and land was redeveloped for other uses. The common crops cultivated are leafy vegetables, high value cut flowers and ornamental plants. In 1999, 48,000 tonnes of vegetables were produced. Poultry production was 12,650 tonnes. There were 415,400 pigs in 1999.

Forestry. Timber production in 1995 was 200,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1999 the capture and mariculture fisheries supplied about 36% of seafood consumed in Hong Kong and pond fish farm produced about 10% of the freshwater fish consumed. The capture fishing industry employs some 5,170 fishing vessels and some 12,900 local fishermen. In 1999 the industry produced an estimated 127,800 tonnes of fisheries produce. Some 75,000 tonnes were supplied for local consumption and the remainder landed or exported outside Hong Kong. On the other hand, there are 26 fish culture zones occupying a total sea area of 209 ha with some 1,450 licensed operators. The estimated production in 1999 was 1,250 tonnes, or 7% of local consumption of live marine fish. The inland fish ponds, covering a total of 1,094 ha, produced 4,500 of freshwater fish in 1999. The first phase of the artificial reefs programme was successfully completed in 1999 with more than 110 species of fish recorded on the reefs.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Hong Kong, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: China Mobile Hong Kong Ltd (HK$439bn.), formerly China Telecom; Hutchison Whampoa (HK$288bn.), a diversified industrial conglomerate; and Cheung Kong Holdings (HK$160bn.), an investment holding company.

An economic policy based on free enterprise and free trade, a skilled workforce, an efficient commercial infrastructure, the modern and efficient sea-port (including container shipping terminals) and airport facilities, a geographical position relative to markets in North America and traditional trading links with the UK all contribute to Hong Kong's success as a modern industrial territory. Links with China have been growing increasingly strong in recent years and will remain so.

In Sept. 2001 there were 19,801 manufacturing establishments employing 209,329 persons. Other establishment statistics by product type (and persons engaged) were: printing, publishing and allied industries, 4,778 (42,963); textiles and clothing, 3,696 (58,821); plastics, 973 (5,938); electronics, 748 (20,939); watches and clocks, 347 (2,945); shipbuilding, 325 (3,173); electrical appliances, 49 (390).

Labour. In 2001 the size of the labour force (synonymous with the economically active population) was 3,427,100 (1,461,900 females). The persons engaged in Sept. 2001 included 1,027,000 people in wholesale, retail and import/export trades, restaurants and hotels, 437,000 in finance, insurance, real estate and business services, 209,000 in manufacturing, 177,000 in the civil service and 77,000 in construction sites (manual workers only).

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for July–Sept. 2002 was 7·4%, compared to the equivalent rate for July–Sept. 1997 of 2·1%.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Imports and Exports. Industry is mainly export-oriented. In 2001 the total value of imports (c.i.f.) was HK$1,586·2bn. and total exports (f.o.b.) HK$1,481·0bn. In 2001, 36·9% of total exports went to the mainland of China, 22·3% to the USA, 5·9% to Japan, 3·7% to the United Kingdom and 3·5% to Germany. The main suppliers of imports were the mainland of China (43·5%), Japan (11·3%), Taiwan (6·9%), USA (6·7%) and Singapore (4·6%).

In 2001 domestic exports included (in HK$1m.): clothing and accessories, 72,240; electrical machinery and parts, 20,322; textiles and fabrics, 8,193; parts and accessories suitable for use solely with office machines and automatic data processing machines, 4,705. The chief import items were consumer goods (537,967), raw materials and semi-manufactures (511,367), capital goods (428,147) and foodstuffs (60,353).

Visible trade normally carries an adverse balance which is offset by a favourable balance of invisible trade, in particular transactions in connection with air transportation, shipping, tourism and banking services.

Hong Kong has a free exchange market. Foreign merchants may remit profits or repatriate capital. Import and export controls are kept to the minimum, consistent with strategic requirements.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 1,865 km of roads, more than 900 km of which were in the New Territories. There are eight major road tunnels, including two under Victoria Harbour. In 1998 there were 501,000 licensed motor vehicles, including 318,000 private cars, 115,000 goods vehicles and 23,000 motorcycles. There were 14,014 road accidents in 1998, 221 fatal. A total of 14·8m. tonnes of cargo were transported by road in 1996.

Rail. The railway network covers around 143 km. The electrified Kowloon-Canton Railway runs for 34 km from the terminus at Hung Hom in Kowloon to the border point at Lo Wu. It carried 255m. passengers in 1998. In 1996, 939,000 tonnes of cargo were transported by rail. A light rail system (32 km and 57 stops) is operated by the Kowloon-Canton Railway Corporation in Tuen Mun, Yuen Long and Tin Shui Wai; it carried 105m. passengers in 1998.

The electric tramway on the northern shore of Hong Kong Island commenced operating in 1904 and has a total track length of 16 km. The Peak Tram, a funicular railway connecting the Peak district with the lower levels in Victoria, has a track length of 1,365 metres and a capacity of 120 passengers per trip.

A metro, the Mass Transit Railway system, comprises 74 km with 43 stations and carried 2·3m. passengers per weekday in 1998.

The Airport Express Line (35 km) opened in 1998 and carried a total of 3·9m. passengers in that year.

In 1996 a total of 3·9m. passenger journeys were made on public transport (including local railways, buses, etc.).

Civil Aviation. The new Chek Lap Kok airport, built on reclaimed land off Lantau Island to the west of Hong Kong, opened on 6 July 1998, replacing Hong Kong International Airport (Kai Tak), which was situated on the north shore of Kowloon Bay. More than 70 airlines now operate scheduled services to and from Hong Kong. Cathay Pacific Airways, one of the three Hong Kong-based airlines, operates more than 530 passenger and cargo services weekly to Europe (including 18 passenger and 10 cargo services per week to the UK), the Far and Middle East, South Africa, Australasia and North America. Cathay Pacific flew 197·6m. km in1999 and carried 12,321,256 passengers in 2002. Hong Kong Dragon Airlines provides scheduled services to 19 cities in Mainland China and nine other destinations in Asia plus 14 cargo services per week to seven destinations (including six weekly services to the UK). AHK Air Hong Kong Ltd., an all-cargo operator, provides seven weekly scheduled services to and from Hong Kong with Incheon, Tokyo and Osaka as destinations. In 2002 (provisional figures), 206,640 aircraft arrived and departed and 33m. passengers and 2·48m. tonnes of freight were carried on aircraft. Hong Kong International Airport handled more international freight in 2001 than any other airport.

Hong Kong–Taipei and vice-versa is the most flown airline route in the world, with 5·43m. passengers flying between the two cities in 2001.

Shipping. The port of Hong Kong handled 17·8m. 20-ft equivalent units in 2001, making it the world's busiest container port. The Kwai Chung Container Port has 18 berths with 5,754 metres of quay backed by 217 ha of cargo handling area. Merchant shipping in 2001 totalled 13,726,000 GRT, including oil tankers 1,593,000 GRT. In 2001, 37,350 ocean-going vessels, 116,190 river cargo vessels and 61,200 river passenger vessels called at Hong Kong. In 2001, 178m. tonnes of freight were handled. In 2001 vessels totalling 340,027,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 340,163,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. In Dec. 2001 there were 4,940,525 telephones (731 per 1,000 population), of which 1,764,623 were for business use and 2,161,151 were residential lines. There were also 411,099 fax lines.

The local fixed telecommunications network services (FTNS) market in Hong Kong was liberalized in 1995. Apart from the incumbent FTNS operator at that time, three new local FTNS operators were licensed. In July 1999 the Government invited the industry to apply for licences to operate local wireless fixed networks. On 18 Jan. 2000 the Government announced that five licences for the local fixed wireless FTNS services would be provided. This would further increase the choice of consumers in the local fixed market.

In Dec. 2000 there were six mobile phone operators providing 11 networks in Hong Kong. There were only 687,600 mobile phone subscribers in 1995, since when the sector has expanded substantially. By Dec. 2001 there were approximately 5·70m. mobile phone subscribers (84% of Hong Kong's population). In addition there were 29 radio paging operators in Nov. 2000 serving 333,990 users. The Internet market has also seen considerable growth. In April 2002 there were 4·35m. Internet users, up from 1·85m. in June 2000.

The external telecommunications services market has been fully liberalized since 1 Jan.1999, and the external telecommunications facilities market was also liberalized starting from 1 Jan. 2000.

In 2000 there were 2·4m. PCs in use (350·6 per 1,000 persons).

Postal Services. In Dec. 2002 there were 131 post offices. In 2001 Hongkong Post handled 1,360m. letters and 923,000 parcels.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Hong Kong Act of 1985 provided for Hong Kong ordinances to replace English laws in specified fields.

The courts of justice comprise the Court of Final Appeal (inaugurated 1 July 1997) which hears appeals on civil and criminal matters from the High Court; the High Court (consisting of the Court of Appeal and the Court of First Instance); the Lands Tribunal which determines on statutory claims for compensation over land and certain landlord and tenant matters; the District Court (which includes the Family Court); the Magistracies (including the Juvenile Court); the Coroner's Court; the Labour Tribunal, which provides a quick and inexpensive method of settling disputes between employers and employees; the Small Claims Tribunal deals with monetary claims involving amounts not exceeding HK$50,000; and the Obscene Articles Tribunal.

While the High Court has unlimited jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters, the District Court has limited jurisdiction. The maximum term of imprisonment it may impose is seven years. Magistracies exercise criminal jurisdiction over a wide range of offences, and the powers of punishment are generally restricted to a maximum of two years' imprisonment or a fine of HK$100,000.

After being in abeyance for 25 years, the death penalty was abolished in 1992.

71,962 crimes were reported in 1998, of which 14,682 were violent crimes. 40,422 people were arrested in 1998, of whom 9,207 were for violent crimes. The prison population was 11,637 in 1997 (190 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1997 there were 4,790,000 Buddhists and Taoists, 280,000 Protestants, 270,000 Roman Catholics and 1,150,000 people of other beliefs.

Education. Adult literacy was 93·5% in 1999 (96·4% among males and 89·7% among females). Universal basic education is available to all children aged from 6 to 15 years. In around three-quarters of the ordinary secondary day schools teaching has been in Cantonese since 1998–99, with about a quarter of ordinary secondary day schools still using English. In 1998 there were 175,073 pupils in 744 kindergartens (all private), 476,802 full-time students in 832 ordinary primary day schools (some 10·7% in private schools) and 455,872 in 37 government, 352 aided and 82 private ordinary secondary day schools.

There were 15,204 full-time and 32,543 part-time students enrolled in the seven Technical Institutes in the academic year 1998–99, and 5,220 full-time and 9,454 part-time students enrolled in the two Technical Colleges. The Hong Kong Technical Institutes and the Hong Kong Technical Colleges were renamed the Hong Kong Institute of Vocational Education in 1999.

The University of Hong Kong (founded 1911) had 10,687 full-time and 2,985 part-time students in the academic year of 1998–99, the Chinese University of Hong Kong (founded 1963), 10,271 full-time and 2,224 part-time students, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (founded 1991), 6,446 full-time and 710 part-time students, the Hong Kong Polytechnic University (founded 1972 as the Hong Kong Polytechnic), 11,646 full-time and 6,778 part-time students, the City University of Hong Kong (founded 1984 as the City Polytechnic of Hong Kong), 11,123 full-time and 5,241 part-time students, the Hong Kong Baptist University (founded 1956 as the Hong Kong Baptist College), 4,185 full-time and 517 part-time students, the Lingnan University (founded 1967 as the Lingnan College), 2,133 full-time and three part-time students, and the Hong Kong Institute of Education (founded 1997), 3,037 full-time and 5,954 part-time students.

Estimated total government expenditure on education in 1999–2000 was HK$55·2bn., 19% of total public expenditure.

Health. The Department of Health (DH) is the Government's health adviser and regulatory authority. The Hospital Authority (HA) is an independent body responsible for the management of all public hospitals. In 2002 there were 9,021 doctors on the local list, equivalent to 1·5 doctors per 1,000 population. In 2001 there were 1,900 dentists, 42,000 nurses and 136 midwives. In 2002 the total number of hospital beds was 35,100, including 29,432 beds in 41 public hospitals under the HA and 2,928 beds in 12 private hospitals. The bed-population ratio was 5·2 beds per thousand population.

The Chinese Medicine Ordinance was passed by the Legislative Council in July 1999 to establish a statutory framework to control the practice, use, manufacture and trading of Chinese medicine.

Recurrent spending on health amounts to US$4·15bn. (HK$324bn.), an increase of 4% in real terms over the latest estimated spending for 2001–02.

Welfare. Social welfare programmes include social security, family services, child care, services for the elderly, medical social services, youth and community work, probation, and corrections and rehabilitation. 181 non-governmental organizations are subsidized by public funds.

The government gives non-contributory cash assistance to needy families, unemployed able-bodied adults, the severely disabled and the elderly. Caseload as at 31 Dec. 2002 totalled 266,571. Victims of natural disasters, crimes of violence and traffic accidents are financially assisted. Estimated total government expenditure on social welfare for 2002–03 is HK$32·1bn.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the Broadcasting Authority, a statutory body comprising three government officers and nine non-official members.

There is a public broadcasting station, Radio Television Hong Kong (colour by PAL), which broadcasts 7 channels (3 Chinese, 1 English, 1 bilingual and 1 Putonhua service, and 1 for the relay of the BBC World Service), 6 of which provide a 24-hour service. Hong Kong Commercial Broadcasting Co. Ltd and Metro Broadcast Co. Ltd transmit commercial sound programmes on six channels. Television Broadcasts Ltd and Asia Television Ltd transmit domestic free television programme services in English and Chinese on four channels. Hong Kong Cable Television Ltd offers over 30 TV channels on a subscription basis. The PCCW VOD Ltd launched the world’s first commercial scale video-on-demand programme service in March 1998. Four new domestic pay television service licences have been granted respectively to Hong Kong Network TV Ltd, Galaxy Satellite Broadcasting Ltd, Yes Television (Hong Kong) Ltd and Pacific Digital Media (HK) Corp. Ltd. These new services are expected to bring in over 100 television channels. There are four non-domestic television programme services in Hong Kong. Hutchvision Hong Kong broadcasts by satellite to the entire Asian region on 30 TV channels. Galaxy Satellite Broadcasting Ltd offers by satellite two channels covering Asia, Australia, Middle East, South Africa and part of Europe. The 3rd and 4th non-domestic television programme service licensees are APT Satellite Glory Ltd and Starbucks (HK) Ltd.

In 1997 there were 1·84m. TV receivers and 4·45m. radio receivers.

Cinema. In 2000 there were 63 cinemas (with 178 screens); some 151 local films and 299 foreign films were screened, generating box office receipts of HK$383m. and HK$532m. respectively. In 1995 gross box office receipts came to HK$1,368m. 150 full-length films were made in 2000.

Press. In 1999 there were 45 newspapers including 22 Chinese-language dailies, three English dailies, six other Chinese and eight other English papers, one bilingual paper and five other language papers. The newspapers with the highest circulation figures are all Chinese-language papers—The Sun, Apple Daily and Oriental Daily. In 1999 there were 722 periodicals of which 452 were Chinese, 152 English, 106 bilingual and 12 in other languages. Circulation of dailies in 1996 was 5m. At 800 newspapers per 1,000 inhabitants, Hong Kong has one of the highest rates of circulation in the world. A number of news agency bulletins are registered as newspapers.

Tourism. There were 11,328,000 visitor arrivals in 1999. Receipts totalled US$7·21bn.

Libraries. In 1995 there were two public libraries and in 1990 there were 17 higher education libraries. These libraries held 8,336,000 volumes for 2,119,383 registered users.

MACAO

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Macao was visited by Portuguese traders from 1513 and became a Portuguese colony in 1557. Initially sovereignty remained vested in China, with the Portuguese paying an annual rent. In 1848–49 the Portuguese declared Macao a free port and established jurisdiction over the territory. On 6 Jan. 1987 Portugal agreed to return Macao to China on 20 Dec. 1999 under a plan in which it would become a special administrative zone of China, with considerable autonomy.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory, which lies at the mouth of the Pearl River, comprises a peninsula (7·84 sq. km) connected by a narrow isthmus to the People's Republic of China, on which is built the city of Santa Nome de Deus de Macao, and the islands of Taipa (5·79 sq. km), linked to Macao by a 2-km bridge, and Colôane (7·82 sq. km) linked to Taipa by a 2-km causeway. The total area of Macao is 21·45 sq. km. Land is being reclaimed from the sea. The population (1991 census) was 339,464 (174,858 females). Population on 31 Dec. 1999, 437,500 (206,600 females), a growth rate of 1·6%; density (1997), 19,387 people per sq. km. An estimated 98·8% of the population lived in urban areas in 1995. The official languages are Chinese and Portuguese, with the majority speaking the Cantonese dialect. The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 481,000.

In Dec. 1999, 24,290 foreigners were legally registered for residency in Macao. There were 4,984 legal immigrants from the People's Republic of China.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: births, 4,148 (9·5 per 1,000 population); marriages, 1,367 (3·1); deaths, 1,374 (3·1); divorces, 283 (0·6). Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 3·6%. Life expectancy at birth (1994–97) 76·79 years.

CLIMATE

Sub-tropical tending towards temperate. The number of rainy days is more than a third of the year. Average annual rainfall varies from 39–79" (1,000–2,000 mm). It is very humid from May to Sept.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Macao's constitution is the 'Basic Law', promulgated by China's National People's Congress on 31 March 1993 and in effect since 20 Dec. 1999. It is a Special Administrative Region (SAR) of the People's Republic of China, and is directly under the Central People's Government while enjoying a high degree of autonomy.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections held on 23 Sept. 2001 pro-Beijing candidates and pro-business candidates each won four seats, with the pro-democracy New Democratic Macau Association winning two. Turn-out was 52%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Chief Executive: Hau-wah (Edmund) Ho; b. 1955 (appointed 20 Dec. 1999).

ECONOMY

Gambling is of major importance to the economy of Macao. Casino takings account for a quarter of total GDP and provide billions of dollars in taxes. 5% of the workforce is directly employed by the casinos.

Currency. The unit of currency is the pataca (MOP) of 100 avos which is tied to the Hong Kong dollar at parity. Inflation was 8·6% in 1995 and an estimated 6·5% in 1996. Foreign exchange reserves were US$3,670m. in June 2002. Total money supply was 6,468m. patacas in May 2002.

Budget. Provisional figures for 1999 were: revenue, 9,859·0m. patacas; expenditure, 9,552·6m. patacas.

Performance. Real GDP growth was an estimated –7·1% in 1998 and –5·2% in 1999.

Banking and Finance. There are two note-issuing banks in Macao—the Macao branch of the Bank of China and the Macao branch of the Banco Nacional Ultramarino. The Monetary Authority of Macao functions as a central bank (Director, Teng Ling Seng). Commercial business is handled (1999) by 22 banks, 11 of which are local and 11 foreign. Total deposits, 1999 (including non-resident deposits), 98,267·9m. patacas.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Macao's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·8 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 351·6 MW in 1999; production, 1·43bn. kWh; net import, 194·4m. kWh.

Oil and Gas. 306,836,000 litres of fuel oil were imported in 1999.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was approximately 1,500 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Although the economy is based on gambling and tourism there is a light industrial base of textiles and toy-making. In 1998 the number of manufacturing establishments was 1,381 (textiles and clothing, 575; metal products, 171; foods, 160; furniture, 109).

TAIWAN[1]

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Taiwan, christened Ilha Formosa (beautiful island) by the Portuguese, was ceded to Japan by China by the Treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895. After the Second World War the island was surrendered to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek who made it the headquarters for his crumbling Nationalist Government. Until 1970 the US fully supported Taiwan's claims to represent all of China. Only in 1971 did the government of the People's Republic of China manage to replace that of Chiang Kai-shek at the UN. In Jan. 1979 the UN established formal diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China, breaking off all formal ties with Taiwan. Taiwan itself has continued to reject all attempts at reunification, and although there have been frequent threats from mainland China to precipitate direct action (including military manoeuvres off the Taiwanese coast) the prospect of confrontation with the USA supports the status quo.

In July 1999 President Lee Teng-hui repudiated Taiwan's 50-year-old One China policy—the pretence of a common goal of unification—arguing that Taiwan and China should maintain equal 'state to state' relations. This was a rejection of Beijing's view that Taiwan is no more than a renegade Chinese province which must be reunited with the mainland, by force if necessary. In the Presidential election of 18 March 2000 Chen Shui-bian, leader of the Democratic Progressive Party, was elected, together with Annette Lu Hsiu-bien as his Vice-President. Both support independence although Chen Shui-bian has made friendly gestures towards China and has distanced himself from colleagues who want an immediate declaration of independence.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Taiwan lies between the East and South China Seas about 100 miles from the coast of Fujian. The territories currently under the control of the Republic of China include Taiwan, Penghu (the Pescadores), Kinmen (Quemoy), and the Matsu Islands, as well as the archipelagos in the South China Sea. Off the Pacific coast of Taiwan are Green Island and Orchid Island. To the northeast of Taiwan are the Tiaoyutai Islets. The total area of Taiwan Island, the Penghu Archipelago and the Kinmen area (including the fortified offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu) is 13,973 sq. miles (36,188 sq. km). Population (2001), 22,405,568. The ethnic composition is 84% native Taiwanese (including 15% of Hakka), 14% of Mainland Chinese, and 2% aborigine of Malayo-Polynesian origin. There are also 420,892 aboriginals of Malay origin. Population density: 619 per sq. km.

Taiwan's administrative units comprise (with 2001 populations): two special municipalities: Taipei, the capital (2·69m.) and Kaohsiung (1·48m.); five cities outside the county structure: Chiayi (265,109), Hsinchu (361,958), Keelung (390,966), Taichung (983,694), Tainan (740,846); 16 counties (hsien): Changhwa (1,313,994), Chiayi (563,365), Hsinchu (446,300), Hualien (353,139), Ilan (465,799), Kaohsiung (1,236,958), Miaoli (560,640), Nantou (541,818), Penghu (92,268), Pingtung (909,364), Taichung (1,502,274), Tainan (1,109,397), Taipei (3,610,252), Taitung (244,612), Taoyuan (1,792,962), Yunlin (743,562).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2001 the birth rate was 11·65 per 1,000 population; death rate, 5·71 per 1,000; rate of growth, 0·56% per annum. Life expectancy: males, 72·87 years; females, 78·79 years. Infant mortality, 6·62 per 1,000 live births.

[1]See note on transcription of names in CHINA: Territory and Population.

CLIMATE

The climate is subtropical in the north and tropical in the south. The typhoon season extends from July to Sept. The average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July in Taipei are 59·5°F (15·3°C) and 83·3°F (28·5°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 84·99" (2,158·8 mm). Kaohsiung's average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July are 65·66°F (18·9°C) and 83·3°F (28·5°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 69·65" (1,769·2 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ROC Constitution is based on the Principles of Nationalism, Democracy and Social Wellbeing formulated by Dr Sun Yat-sen, the founding father of the Republic of China. The ROC government is divided into three main levels: central, provincial/municipal and county/city each of which has well-defined powers.

The central government consists of the Office of the President, the National Assembly, which is specially elected only for constitutional amendment, and five governing branches called 'yuan', namely the Executive Yuan, the Legislative Yuan, the Judicial Yuan, the Examination Yuan and the Control Yuan. The additional Article 4 of the Constitution stipulates that, beginning with the fourth Legislative Yuan (1999), the Legislative Yuan shall have 225 members.

At the provincial level, the provincial governments exercise administrative responsibility. Since the ROC government administers only Taiwan Province and two counties in Fukien Province, only two provincial governments are currently operational—the Taiwan Provincial Government and the Fukien Provincial Government. Taipei and Kaohsiung are special municipalities which are under the direct jurisdiction of the central government. At the local level, under the Taiwan Provincial Government are five city governments: Keelung, Hsinchu, Taichung, Chiayi and Tainan; and 16 county governments with the governments of their subordinate cities. The Fukien Provincial Government oversees the regional affairs of Kinmen County and Lienchiang County. From 5 May to 23 July 1997 the Additional Articles of the Constitution of the Republic of China underwent yet another amendment. The roles of the provincial government and the Control Yuan have taken on drastic changes. Under the newest revision:

- The provincial government is to be streamlined and the popular elections of the governor and members of the provincial council are suspended.
- A resolution on the impeachment of the President or Vice President is no longer to be instituted by the Control Yuan but rather by the Legislative Yuan.
- The Legislative Yuan has the power to pass a no-confidence vote against the premier of the Executive Yuan, while the president of the Republic has the power to dissolve the Legislative Yuan.
- The premier of the Executive Yuan is to be directly appointed by the president of the Republic. Hence the consent of the Legislative Yuan is no longer needed.
- Educational, scientific and cultural budgets, especially the compulsory education budget, will be given priority, but no longer restricted by Article 164 of the Constitution to remain at least 15% of the total national budget.

National Anthem. 'San Min Chu I'; words by Dr Sun Yat-sen, tune by Cheng Mao-yun.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections took place on 18 March 2000. Chen Shui-bian (Democratic Progressive Party) emerged victorious with 39·3% of the vote, against independent James Soong (36·8%), Nationalist Lien Chan (23·1%) and two other opponents. Turn-out was 82·7%. Chen Shui-bian's victory ended more than 50 years of uninterrupted Nationalist (Kuomintang) rule.

Elections to the Legislative Yuan were held on 1 Dec. 2001. The Democratic Progressive Party won 87 seats with 36·6% of votes cast; the Nationalist Party, 68 seats (31·3%); the People First Party, 46 seats (20·3%); the Taiwan Solidarity Union, 13 seats (8·5%); and non-partisans and others, 11 seats (3·4%).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Chen Shui-bian; b. 1951 (Democratic Progressive Party; sworn in 20 May 2000).

Vice President: Hsiu-lien Annette Lu.

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

Prime Minister and President of the Executive Yuan: Yu Shyi-kun; b. 1948 (Democratic Progressive Party; sworn in 1 Feb. 2002). There are eight ministries under the Executive Yuan: Interior; Foreign Affairs; National Defence; Finance; Education; Justice; Economic Affairs; Transport and Communications.

Vice-President of the Executive Yuan and Chairman of the Council for Economic Planning and Development: Lin Hsin-i. President, Control Yuan: Frederick Chien. President, Examination Yuan: Yao Chia-wen. President, Judicial Yuan: Yueh-sheng Weng. President, Legislative Yuan: Jin-ping Wang. Secretary General, Executive Yuan: Liu Shyh-fang. Minister of Foreign Affairs: Eugene Chien. Defence: Tang Yian-min. Interior: Yu Cheng-hsien. Finance: Lin Chuan. Education: Huang Jong-tsun. Economic Affairs: Lin Yi-fu. Justice: Chen Ding-nan. Transport and Communications: Lin Ling-san. Ministers without Portfolio: Tsay Ching-yen; Hu Sheng-cheng; Chen Chi-nan; Huang Hwei-chen; Lin Sheng-feng; Kuo Yao-chi (also Chairwoman of the Public Construction Commission); Yeh Jiunn-rong.

In addition to the Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission and the Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission, a number of commissions and subordinate organizations have been formed with the resolution of the Executive Yuan Council and the Legislature to meet new demands and handle new affairs. Examples include the Environmental Protection Administration, which was set up in 1987 as public awareness of pollution control rose; the Mainland Affairs Council, which was established in 1990 to handle the thawing of relations between Taiwan and the Chinese mainland; and the Fair Trade Commission, which was established in 1992 to promote a fair trade system. Since 1995 even more commissions have been set up to provide a wider scope of services: the Public Construction Commission was set up in July 1995, the Council of Aboriginal Affairs in Dec. 1996, and the National Council on Physical Fitness and Sports in July 1997.

These commissions and councils are headed by:

Aboriginal Affairs Council: Chen Chien-nien. Agricultural Council: Lee Ching-lung. Atomic Energy Council: Ouyang Min-shen. Council for Hakka Affairs: Yeh Chu-lan. Coast Guard Administration: Wang Chun. Cultural Affairs: Chen Yu-chiou. Environmental Protection Administration: Hau Lung-bin. Fair Trade Commission: Hwang Tzong-leh. Health Department: Twu Shiing-jer. Labour Affairs Council: Chen Chu. Mainland Affairs Council: Tsai Ing-wen. Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission: Hsu Chih-hsiung. National Council on Physical Fitness and Sports: Lin Te-fu. National Palace Museum: Tu Cheng-sheng. National Science Council: Wei Che-ho. National Youth Commission: Lin Fang-mei. Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission: Chang Fu-mei. Research, Development and Evaluation Commission: Lin Chia-cheng. Vocational Assistance for Retired Veterans Affairs Commission: Yang Teh-chih.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for two years. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$17,248m. (US$785 per capita), representing 5·6% of GDP. Between 1997 and 2001 Taiwan spent US$11·4bn. on defence imports, making it the world's largest buyer of arms, although expenditure in 2000 and 2001 was greatly reduced.

Army. The Army was estimated to number about 190,000 in 2000, including military police. Army reserves numbered 2·7m. In addition the Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Interior and the Ministry of Defence each command paramilitary forces totalling 25,000 personnel in all. The Army consists of Army Corps, Defence Commands, Airborne Cavalry Brigades, Armoured Brigades, Motorized Rifle Brigades, Infantry Brigades, Special Warfare Brigades and Missile Command.

Navy. Active personnel in the Navy in 2000 totalled 50,000. There are 425,000 naval reservists. The operational and land-based forces consist of four submarines, 16 destroyers and 21 frigates. There is a naval air wing operating 31 combat aircraft and 21 armed helicopters.

Air Force. Units in the operational system are equipped with aircraft that include locally developed IDF, F-16, Mirage 2000-5 and F-5E fighter-interceptors. There were 50,000 Air Force personnel in 2000 and 334,000 reservists.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

By a treaty of 2 Dec. 1954 the USA pledged to defend Taiwan, but this treaty lapsed one year after the USA established diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China on 1 Jan. 1979. In April 1979 the Taiwan Relations Act was passed by the US Congress to maintain commercial, cultural and other relations between USA and Taiwan through the American Institute in Taiwan and its Taiwan counterpart, the Coordination Council for North American Affairs in the USA, which were accorded quasi-diplomatic status in 1980. The People's Republic took over the China seat in the UN from Taiwan on 25 Oct. 1971. In May 1991 Taiwan ended its formal state of war with the People's Republic. Taiwan became a member of the World Trade Organization on 1 Jan. 2002.

In Nov. 2000 Taiwan had formal diplomatic ties with 29 countries and maintained substantive relations with over 100 countries and territories around the globe.

ECONOMY

Overview. The government launched a Global Logistics Development Plan in 2000 in order to strengthen the technology base of Taiwan's industries. This plan exploits Taiwan's advantage in high-tech manufacturing to develop e-commerce and a complete range of supply-chain services, with the goal of making Taiwan a major international procurement and logistics base.

From 2002 to 2007, the government will implement the new national development plan, Challenge 2008, which will pave the way for Taiwan's emergence as a Green Silicon Island in the 21st century.

Currency. The unit of currency is the New Taiwan dollar (TWD) of 100 cents. Gold reserves were 13·55m. oz in Oct. 2000. There was deflation in both 1999 and 2000, of 1·4% and 1·6% respectively. Foreign exchange reserves were US$109,056m. in Oct. 2000.

Budget. As a result of the constitutional amendment to abolish the provincial government from the fiscal year 2000 the central government budget has been enlarged to include the former provincial government. The central government's general budget for the fiscal year 2002 (beginning on 1 Jan.) was NT$1,518,724m. Expenditure planned: 18·1% on education, science and culture; 17·6% on economic development; 17·5% on social security; 15% on defence.

Performance. Taiwan sustained rapid economic growth at an annual rate of 9·2% from 1960 up to 1990. The rate slipped to 6·4% in the 1990s and 5·9% in 2000; Taiwan suffered from the Asian financial crisis, though less than its neighbours. Consumer prices showed increasing stability, rising at an average annual rate of 6·3% from 1960 to 1989, 2·9% in the 1990s and 1·3% in 2000. In 2001 global economic sluggishness and the events of 11 Sept. in the USA severely affected Taiwan's economy, which contracted by 2·2%. Per capita GNP stood at US$12,876, while consumer prices remained almost unchanged.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of China (reactivated in 1961) regulates the money supply, manages foreign exchange and issues currency. The Governor is Perng Fai-nan. The Bank of Taiwan is the largest commercial bank and the fiscal agent of the government. There are two stock exchanges in Taipei.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Output of electricity in 2001 was 188·5m. MWh; total installed capacity was 35,568 MW, of which 77·1% is held by the Taiwan Power Company. There were six units in three nuclear power stations in 2002. Consumption per capita stood at 4,257 litres of oil equivalent in 2001.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production in 2001 was 40·6m. litres; natural gas, 849m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Coal production ceased by 2001 because of competitive imports and increasing local production costs.

Agriculture. In 2001 the cultivated area was 848,743 ha, of which 438,974 ha were paddy fields. Rice production totalled 1,396,274 tonnes. Livestock production was valued at more than NT$101,205m., accounting for 28·67% of Taiwan's total agricultural production value.

Forestry. Forest area, 2001: 2,101,719 ha. Forest reserves: trees, 357,492,423 cu. metres; bamboo, 1,109m. poles. Timber production, 26,401 cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 2001 Taiwan's fishing fleet totalled 27,018 vessels (12,942 were powered craft); the catch was approximately 1·32m. tonnes. NT$89,813m. worth of fish was produced. Of this, 52% came from far-sea fishing, 26% from inland aquaculture, 14% from offshore fishing and 5% from coastal fishing. More than 40% of the catch was exported, with the biggest items being big eye tuna and albacore (long-finned tuna).

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT500), the largest companies in Taiwan by market capitalization on 28 March 2002 were Taiwan Semicon. Mnfg (US$46,445·2m.) and United Micro Electronics (US$19,987·9m.).

Output (in tonnes) in 1999: steel bars, 1·4m.; sugar, 0·28m.; cement, 18·2m.; pulp, 0·30m.; cotton fabrics, 1,061m. sq. metres; portable computers, 9·95m. units; desktop computers 3·01m. units. Taiwan is the 3rd largest information technology producer after the USA and Japan. The IT sector has replaced traditional industries as the engine for growth.

Labour. In Sept. 2002 the total labour force was 9·97m., of whom 9·44m. were employed. Of the employed population, 55·09% worked in the service sector (including 22·70% in trade and 16·11% in accommodation and eating and drinking establishments); 37·28% in industry (including 27·05% in manufacturing and 7·64% in construction); and 7·63% in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. The unemployment rate was 5·32%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Restrictions on the repatriation of investment earnings by foreign nationals were removed in 1994.

Imports and Exports. Total trade, in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001

Exports	115,942	122,081	110,582	121,591	148,321	122,866

In 2001 the main export markets were the USA (22·5%), Hong Kong (21·9%), Japan (10·4%) and Germany (3·6%). The main import suppliers were Japan (24·1%), the USA (17·0%), South Korea (6·3%) and Germany (4·0%).

Principal exports, in US$1bn.: machinery and electrical equipment, 66·85; textiles, 12·63; basic metals and articles, 11·33; plastic and rubber products, 7·99; vehicles and transport equipment, 4·44; toys, games and sports equipment, 1·79; footwear, headwear and umbrellas, 0·79. By 2001 high-tech products were responsible for more than 54% of exports.

Principal imports, in US$1bn.: machinery and electrical equipment, 47·55; minerals, 12·76; chemicals, 10·23; basic metals and articles, 7·78; precision instruments, clocks and watches, and musical instruments, 6·21; vehicles and transport equipment, 4·24; textile products, 2·36.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 36,698 km of roads. 17·5m. motor vehicles were registered including 4·8m. passenger cars, 24,053 buses, 830,673 trucks and 12m. motorcycles. 1,091m. passengers and 301m. tonnes of freight were transported (including urban buses). There were 64,264 road accidents, resulting in 3,344 fatalities.

Rail. In 2001 freight traffic amounted to 16·9m. tonnes and passenger traffic to 165m. Total route length was 2,363 km.

Civil Aviation. There are currently two international airports: Chiang Kai-shek International at Taoyuan near Taipei, and Kaohsiung International in the south. In addition there are 14 domestic airports: Taipei, Hualien, Taitung, Taichung, Tainan, Chiayi, Pingtung, Makung, Chimei, Orchid Island, Green Island, Wangan, Kinmen and Matsu (Peikan). A second passenger terminal at Chiang Kai-shek International Airport opened in July 2000 as part of a US$800m. expansion project, which included aircraft bays, airport connection roads, a rapid transit link with Taipei, car parks and the expansion of air freight facilities, begun in 1989. The planned facilities are designed to allow the airport to handle an additional 14m. passengers annually by the year 2010.

In June 2002, 38 airlines including code-share airlines provided flights to destinations in Taiwan, of which 32 foreign and six Taiwanese carriers—China Airlines (CAL), EVA Airways, Far Eastern Air Transport Corp., Mandarin Airlines (MDA; CAL's subsidiary), Trans Asia Airways (TNA) and UNI Airways—operated international services. In 2001, 44·1m. passengers and 1·3m. tonnes of freight were flown.

Taipei–Hong Kong and vice-versa is the most flown airline route in the world, with 5·43m. passengers flying between the two cities in 2001.

Shipping. Maritime transportation is vital to the trade-oriented economy of Taiwan. At the end of 2001 Taiwan's shipping fleet totalled 249 national-flagged ships (over 100 GRT), amounting to 4·7m. GRT and 7·4m. DWT. There are six international ports: Kaohsiung, Keelung, Hualien, Taichung, Anping and Suao. The first two are container centres, Kaohsiung handling 7·54m. 20-ft equivalent units in 2001, making it the world's fourth busiest container port in terms of number of containers handled. Suao port is an auxiliary port to Keelung. In Jan. 2001 the first legal direct shipping links between Taiwanese islands and the Chinese mainland in more than 50 years were inaugurated.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 12,642,200 main telephone lines (567·5 per 1,000 inhabitants) and PCs numbered 4·96m. (222·8 per 1,000 inhabitants). Taiwan's biggest telecommunications firm, the state-owned Chunghwa Telecom, lost its fixed-line monopoly in Aug. 2001. There were approximately 11·6m. Internet users in July 2001 and some 13m. mobile phone subscribers in March 2001, more than half of the total population. In 1997 there were 2,496,090 radio pager subscribers.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Judicial Yuan is the supreme judicial organ of state. Comprising 15 grand justices, from 2003 these are nominated and, with the consent of the Legislative Yuan, appointed by the President of the Republic. The grand justices hold meetings to interpret the Constitution and unify the interpretation of laws and orders. There are three levels of judiciary: district courts and their branches deal with civil and criminal cases in the first instance; high courts and their branches deal with appeals against judgments of district courts; the Supreme Court reviews judgments by the lower courts. There is also the Supreme Administrative Court, high administrative courts and a Commission on the Disciplinary Sanctions of Public Functionaries. Criminal cases relating to rebellion, treason and offences against friendly relations with foreign states are handled by high courts as the courts of first instance.

The death penalty is still in force. There were 4 executions in 2002 (as of 30 Sept.). The population in penal institutions on 30 Sept. 2002 was approximately 39,000 (135 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. According to the registered statistics of Municipality, County and City Government there were 827,135 Taoists in 2001 (and 7,714 temples), 382,437 Protestants (and 2,387 churches), 216,495 Buddhists (and 1,966 temples) and 182,814 Catholics (and 728 churches).

Education. Since 1968 there has been compulsory education for six to 15 year olds with free tuition. The illiteracy rate dropped to 4·21% in 2001 and is still falling. In 2001 there were 2,611 elementary schools with 103,501 teachers and 1,925,491 pupils; 1,181 secondary schools with 98,609 teachers and 1,684,499 students; 154 schools of higher education, including 57 universities, 78 colleges and 19 junior colleges, with 44,769 teachers and 1,189,225 students. Almost one-quarter of the total population attend an educational institution.

Health. In 2001 there was one physician serving every 733 persons, one doctor of Chinese medicine per 5,631 persons and one dentist per 2,505 persons. Some 114,179 beds were provided by the 92 public and 501 private hospitals, averaging nearly 57 beds per 10,000 persons. In addition to the 492 public and 17,136 private clinics, there were 369 health stations and 503 health rooms serving residents in the sparsely populated areas. Acute infectious diseases were no longer the number one killer. Malignant neoplasms, cerebrovascular diseases, heart diseases and accidents and adverse effects were the first four leading causes of death.

Welfare. A universal health insurance scheme came into force in March 1995 as an extension to 13 social insurance plans which cover only 59% of Taiwan's population. Premium shares among the government, employer and insured are varied according to the insured statuses. By the end of 2001 about 21·65m. people or 96% of the population were covered by the National Health Insurance programme.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. At Oct. 2002 there were 174 radio stations, 1 public and 4 commercial TV services and 65 cable systems. June 1997 saw the inauguration of a fourth over-the-air television station—The Kaohsiung-based Formosa Television—which is affiliated with the Democratic Progressive Party and telecasts on VHF low-band. A Public Television Law was promulgated on 18 June 1997. In 2000 there were 9·5m. TV receivers (colour by NTSC).

Cinema. In 2001 cinemas numbered 186; 17 full-length films were made.

Press. There were 267 domestic news agencies, 454 newspapers and 7,236 periodicals in 2001.

Tourism. In 2002, 2,617,137 tourists visited Taiwan and 7,189,334 Taiwanese made visits abroad.

Libraries. There is a national library in Taipei (established in 1986).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1564 the Spanish Crown appointed a President of New Granada, which included the territories of Colombia, Panama and Venezuela. In 1718 a viceroyalty of New Granada was created. This viceroyalty gained its independence from Spain in 1819, and together with the present territories of Panama, Venezuela and Ecuador was officially constituted as the state of 'Greater Colombia'. This new state lasted only until 1830 when it split up into Venezuela, Ecuador and the republic of New Granada, later renamed Estados Unidos de Colombia. The constitution of 5 Aug. 1886, forming the Republic of Colombia, abolished the sovereignty of the states, converting them into departments with governors appointed by the President of the Republic. The department of Panama, however, became an independent country in 1903. Conservatives and Liberals fought a civil war from 1948 to 1957 (La Violencia) during which some 300,000 people were killed. Subsequently, powerful drugs lords have made violence endemic. Two Marxist guerrilla forces are active, the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces (FARC), and the smaller National Liberation Army (ELN). They are opposed by a well-armed paramilitary organization which emerged after the setting up of rural self-defence groups. Killings and other abuses by paramilitary squads, guerrillas and the military in 1996 made it the most infamous year in the nation's history for human rights violations. On average, ten Colombians were killed every day for political or ideological reasons, while one person disappeared every two days.

There were hopes of a fresh start in 1998 when Andrés Pastrana was elected president. Offers to talk peace were taken up by the rebels and by their paramilitary enemies. But political differences are wide, with FARC demanding sweeping agrarian reform and a redistribution of wealth. FARC controls around 40% of the country including areas which produce the bulk of illegal drugs. Approximately 80% of the cocaine and 60% of the heroin sold in the USA originates in Colombia. In Feb. 2002, following the kidnapping of a prominent senator, President Pastrana broke off three years of peace talks. In May 2002 Álvaro Uribe Vélez became president, but within days of his inauguration, amidst mounting violence, he called a state of emergency.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Colombia is bounded in the north by the Caribbean Sea, northwest by Panama, west by the Pacific Ocean, southwest by Ecuador and Peru, northeast by Venezuela and southeast by Brazil. The estimated area is 1,141,815 sq. km (440,855 sq. miles). Population census (1993), 33,109,840; density, 29·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 49·16m.

In 1999, 73·5% lived in urban areas. Bogotá, the capital (estimate 1999): 6,276,000.

Bogotá: Situated in the centre of Columbia, Bogotá was established by the Spanish conquistador, Gonzalo Jiménez de Quesada, who took the land from the Chibcha Indians in 1538. After achieving independence from the Spanish in 1810, Bogotá was made the nation's capital in 1821. Today Bogotá is an important producer of chemicals and pharmaceutical goods as well as being Colombia's commercial centre with a stock exchange and large financial community.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 988,000; deaths, 191,000. 1997 birth rate (per 1,000 population) 26·4; death rate, 5·1. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·9%. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 67·8 years for men and 74·6 years for women. Infant mortality, 1999, 28·1 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate includes equatorial and tropical conditions, according to situation and altitude. In tropical areas, the wettest months are March to May and Oct. to Nov. Bogotá, Jan. 58°F (14·4°C), July 57°F (13·9°C). Annual rainfall 42" (1,052 mm). Barranquilla, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 32" (799 mm). Cali, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 37" (915 mm). Medellín, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 72°F (22·2°C). Annual rainfall 64" (1,606 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Simultaneously with the presidential elections of May 1990, a referendum was held in which 7m. votes were cast for the establishment of a special assembly to draft a new constitution. Elections were held on 9 Dec. 1990 for this 74-member 'Constitutional Assembly' which operated from Feb. to July 1991. The electorate was 14·2m.; turn-out was 3·7m. The Liberals gained 24 seats, M19 (a former guerrilla organization), 19. The Assembly produced a new constitution which came into force on 5 July 1991. It stresses the state's obligation to protect human rights, and establishes constitutional rights to healthcare, social security and leisure. Indians are allotted two Senate seats. Congress may dismiss ministers, and representatives may be recalled by their electors.

The President is elected by direct vote for a term of four years, and is not eligible for re-election until four years afterwards. A vice-presidency was instituted in July 1991.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two houses, the Senate, of 102 members, and the House of Representatives, of 165 members, both elected for four years by proportional representation. Congress meets annually at Bogotá on 20 July.

National Anthem. 'O! Gloria inmarcesible' ('Oh unfading Glory!'); words by R. Núñez, tune by O. Síndici.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 26 May 2002, in which Álvaro Uribe Vélez (independent) won with 53·1% of votes cast, against 31·8% for his nearest rival, Horacio Serpa Uribe (Liberal Party). Turn-out was 46·8%.

Congressional elections were held on 10 March 2002. Unlike the 1998 elections, which were marred by vote-buying, fraud, kidnapping and violence, the balloting process was largely peaceful. This was in spite of warnings of violence from FARC and their apparent involvement in the kidnapping of a presidential candidate and the assassination of an opposition-member senator in the weeks prior to the ballot. In the elections to the Senate candidates from the two largest parties, the Colombian Conservative Party and the Liberal Party, were routed by independents. The Liberal Party won 28 seats, down from 56, the Colombian Conservative Party won 13, down from 17, with independent candidates accounting for the remainder. In elections to the House of Representatives the Liberal Party won 54 seats, the Colombian Conservative Party 21, the Coalition Party 17, the Radical Change Party 7 and the Liberal Opening Party 5, with the remaining seats going to smaller parties.

DEFENCE

Selective conscription at 18 years varies from one to two years of service. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$1,955m. (US$46 per capita), representing 2·4% of GDP. In 1985 expenditure had been US$628m.

Army. Personnel (1999) 121,000 (conscripts, 63,800), including a Presidential Guard division and Mobile Counter Guerilla Forces; reserves number 54,700. The national police numbered (1999) 87,000.

Navy. The Navy has 2 diesel powered submarines, 2 midget submarines and 4 small frigates. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 15,000. There are also two brigades of marines numbering 8,500. An air arm operates light reconnaissance aircraft.

The Navy's main ocean base is Cartagena with Pacific bases at Buenaventura and Malaga. There are in addition numerous river bases.

Air Force. The Air Force has been independent of the Army and Navy since 1943, when its reorganization began with US assistance. It has 72 combat aircraft, including two fighter-bomber squadrons (one with Mirage 5s and one with Kfirs) and 72 armed helicopters. There are several dozen light transports, confiscated from drug smugglers, in use. Total strength (1999) 8,000 personnel (3,900 conscripts).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Colombia is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, the Andean Group, ALADI/LAIA, ACS, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty.

It was announced in Aug. 2000 that Colombia would receive US$1·3bn. in anti drug-trafficking aid (mostly of a military nature) from the USA as part of 'Plan

Colombia', a series of projects intended to serve as a foundation for stability and peace of which the focal point is the fight against drugs.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 13·5% of GDP, industry 25·1% and services 61·4%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Colombian peso (COP) of 100 centavos. Inflation was 8·0% in 2001, the lowest rate in more than 30 years. In June 2002 gold reserves were 327,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves were US$10,188m. Total money supply was 17,289bn. pesos in June 2002.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. pesos):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	9,524	12,048	15,283	16,592	18,760
Expenditure	11,290	15,363	19,584	23,492	28,536

Performance. In 1999 Colombia experienced its worst recession since the 1930s, with GDP shrinking by 4·2%. In 2000 there was a recovery, with growth at 2·7%, and in 2001 the economy grew by 1·4%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$83·4bn.

Banking and Finance. In 1923 the Bank of the Republic (Governor, Miguel Montoya Urrutia) was inaugurated as a semi-official central bank, with the exclusive privilege of issuing banknotes. Its note issues must be covered by a reserve in gold of foreign exchange of 25% of their value. Interest rates of 40% plus are imposed.

There are 24 commercial banks, of which 18 are private or mixed, and six official. There is also an Agricultural, Industrial and Mining Credit Institute, a Central Mortgage Bank and a Social Savings Bank. Bank deposits totalled 1,446,686 pesos in May 1991.

There are stock exchanges in Bogotá, Medellín and Cali.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was introduced in 1857, but Spanish weights and measures are generally used, e.g., botella (750 grammes), galón (5 botellas), vara (70 cm), arroba (25 lb, of 500 grammes; 4 arrobas = 1 quintal).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. In 1998 Colombia's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 1·7 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. Capacity of electric power (1997) was 15m. kW. In 1998 production was 45·02bn. kWh and consumption per capita 866 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production (1998): crude oil, 275·5m. bbls.; fuel oil, 18·76m. bbls.; diesel oil, 23·2m. bbls.; gasoline 38·35m. bbls.; kerosene, 1·02m. bbls.; propane gas, 7·5m. bbls. Natural gas production in 1999 totalled 5·2bn. cu. metres. In 1999 there were proven oil reserves of 2·6bn. bbls and proven gas reserves of 200bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Production (1998): gold, 598,035 troy oz; silver, 167,730 troy oz; platinum, 14,016 troy oz. Other important minerals include: copper, lead, steel, mercury, manganese and emeralds (of which Colombia accounts for about half of world production).

Salt production (1998): 159,621 tonnes. Coal production (1997): 32·6m. tonnes; iron ore (1996): 605,716 tonnes.

Agriculture. There is a wide range of climate and, consequently, crops. In 1998 there were 1·98m. ha of arable land and 2·03m. ha of permanent crops.

Production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 37,000; potatoes, 2,705; plantains, 2,689; rice, 2,100; cassava, 1,956; bananas, 1,570; maize, 1,010; coffee, 630. Colombia is the third largest coffee producer in the world after Brazil and Vietnam. Coca was cultivated in 2000 on approximately 135,000 ha, up from 40,000 ha in 1992. Coca leaf production in 2000 totalled 88,000 tonnes, making Colombia the world's largest producer of coca leaves, the raw material for cocaine.

Livestock (2000): 26,000,000 cattle; 2,800,000 pigs; 2,200,000 sheep; 2,450,000 horses; 100m. chickens. Meat production, 2000: beef and veal, 754,000 tonnes; poultry meat, 520,000 tonnes; pork, bacon and ham, 152,000 tonnes.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 52·98m. ha, or 51% of the total land area (down from 52·3% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 17·85m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catch (1999), 117,949 tonnes, of which about 76% was from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Production (1998): steel ingots, 264,466 tonnes; cement, 8,463,995 tonnes; motor cars, 49,807; industrial vehicles, 14,162; sugar, 2,125,575 tonnes; beer (1997), 1,829m. litres.

Labour. The economically active workforce (1998 estimate) was 7,828,397, of which 6,586,668 were employed and 1,241,729 unemployed; the rate of unemployment was estimated to be 15·8%. In 1999 the rate was 18%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign companies are liable for basic income tax of 30% and surtax of 7·5%. Since 1993 tax on profit remittance has started at 12%, reducing (except for oil companies) to 7% after three years. Foreign debt was US$34,081m. in 2000.

The Group of Three (G-3) free trade pact with Mexico and Venezuela came into effect on 1 Jan. 1995.

Imports and Exports. In US$1m.:

Imports f.o.b.	13,930	10,255	11,077

Main export markets, 1999: USA (50·3%), Venezuela (7·9%), Germany (4·2%), Peru (3·1%), Ecuador (2·8%). Main import suppliers: USA (37·4%), Venezuela (8·2%), Japan (4·9%), Germany (4·7%). Main exports in 1999 were (in US$1m.): crude oil (3,334·4), chemicals and related products (1,163·7), coal (835·2), bananas (559·5), cut flowers (550·4) and clothing (426·6).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads was estimated to be 115,564 km in 1997, of which 12% were paved. Of the 2,300-mile Simón Bolívar highway, which runs from Caracas in Venezuela to Guayaquil in Ecuador, the Colombian portion is complete. Motor vehicles in 1996 numbered 1,434,000, of which 762,000 were passenger cars and 672,000 vans and trucks.

Rail. The National Railways (2,532 km of route, 914 mm gauge) went into liquidation in 1990 prior to takeover of services and obligations by three new public companies in 1992. Freight tonne-km performed in 1998 came to 658m. Total rail track, 3,386 km.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Barranquilla, Bogotá (Eldorado), Cali, Cartagena, Medellín and San Andrés. The national carriers are Avianca and ACES. In 1998 Avianca flew 48·5m. km and carried 3,924,100 passengers; ACES flew 20·1m. km and carried 2,078,500 passengers in 1997. The busiest airport is Bogotá, which in 2000 handled 7,154,312 passengers (5,234,807 on domestic flights) and 372,957 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Vessels entering Colombian ports in 1995 unloaded 13,806,000 tonnes of imports and loaded 26,284,000 tonnes of exports. In 1997 vessels totalling 40,863,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 39,562,000 NRT cleared. The merchant marine totalled 112,000 GRT in 1998, including oil tankers 6,000 GRT.

The Magdalena River is subject to drought, and navigation is always impeded during the dry season, but it is an important artery of passenger and goods traffic. The river is navigable for 900 miles; steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 7,185,600 telephone main lines in use (169·2 for every 1,000 inhabitants) and 1·5m. PCs (35·4 for every 1,000 persons). The number of Internet users was 878,000 in Dec. 2000. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 3,133,700 in 1999 and there were 173,000 fax machines in 1997.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,655 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The July 1991 constitution introduced the offices of public prosecutor and public defence. There is no extradition of Colombians for trial in other countries. The Supreme Court, at Bogotá, of 20 members, is divided into three chambers—civil cassation (six), criminal cassation (eight), labour cassation (six). Each of the 61 judicial districts has a superior court with various sub-dependent tribunals of lower juridical grade.

In 2002 there were 32,000 murders (a rate of around 76 per 100,000 persons). Colombia's murder rate is the highest in the world. In 2001 the reported number of kidnappings numbered 3,041, down on the 2000 total but up from around 1,000 in 1993. Colombia accounts for two-thirds of reported kidnappings worldwide.

The police force numbered 73,176 in 1989. Colombia abolished the death penalty in 1997. The population in penal institutions in 1998 was 43,000 (115 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The religion is Roman Catholic (33·27m. adherents in 1997), with the Cardinal Archbishop of Bogotá as Primate of Colombia and nine other archbishoprics. There are also 44 bishops, 8 apostolic vicars, 5 apostolic prefects and 2 prelates. In 1990 there were 1,546 parishes and 4,020 priests. In Feb. 2001 there were three Cardinals. Other forms of religion are permitted so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals or the law'. In 1997 there were 2·93m. followers of other religions.

Education. Primary education is free but not compulsory. Schools are both state and privately controlled. In 1997 there were 22,994 pre-primary schools with 43,356 teachers for 835,409 pupils; 51,411 primary schools with 181,521 teachers for 4,561,198 pupils; and 10,869 secondary schools for 3,162,583 pupils with 165,818 teachers. In 1995 there were 235 higher education establishments with 562,716 students.

In 1995–96 in the public sector there were 20 universities, one open university, three technological universities, and universities of education, educational technology and industry. There were also 2 colleges of public administration, 1 school of police studies, 1 institute of fine art, 1 polytechnic and 1 conservatory. In the private sector there were 25 universities, 4 Roman Catholic universities, 1 college of education and 1 school of administration. There were 8 public, and 44 private, other institutions of higher education. In 1994–95 there were 208,394 university students.

Adult literacy in 1999 was 91·5% (91·5% among both males and females).

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 4·4% of GNP and represented 19·0% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1997 there were 1,165 hospitals with 47,236 beds. Medical personnel was as follows: doctors, 40,355; dentists, 22,121; nurses, 13,558; auxiliaries, 38,723.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are five radio companies overseen by the Dirección General de Radiocomunicaciones. Instituto Nacional de Radio y Televisión transmits on three networks (colour by NTSC) and rents air time to 26 commercial companies. In 1997 there were 21m. radio and 4·6m. TV sets. There are 33 television broadcast stations.

Press. There were 37 daily newspapers in 1996, with daily circulation totalling 1·8m.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 841,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$939m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The three islands forming the present state became French protectorates at the end of the 19th century and were proclaimed colonies in 1912. With neighbouring Mayotte they were administratively attached to Madagascar from 1914 until 1947 when the four islands became a French Overseas Territory, achieving internal self-government in Dec. 1961. In referendums held on each island on 22 Dec. 1974, the three western islands voted overwhelmingly for independence, while Mayotte voted to remain French. There have been more than 20 coups or attempted takeovers since independence, with recent years being marked by political disruption. In 1997 the islands of Anjouan and Mohéli attempted to secede from the federation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Comoros consist of three islands in the Indian Ocean between the African mainland and Madagascar with a total area of 1,862 sq. km (719 sq. miles). The population at the 1991 census was 446,817; estimate, 1996, 569,200; density, 306 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 925,000.

In 1999, 67·3% of the population were rural.

	Area (sq. km)	Population (1995 estimate)	Chief town
Njazídja (Grande Comore)	1,148	250,500	Moroni
Nzwani (Anjouan)	424	211,900	Mutsamudu
Mwali (Mohéli)	290	27,600	Fomboni

Estimated population of the chief towns: Moroni, 44,000 (1999); Mutsamudu, 20,000 (1991); Domoni, 8,000 (1990); Fomboni, 5,600 (1990).

The indigenous population are a mixture of Malagasy, African, Malay and Arab peoples; the vast majority speak Comorian, an Arabized dialect of Swahili, but a small proportion speak Makua (a Bantu language) or one of the official languages, French and Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 26,100; deaths, 5,900. Birth rate per 1,000 population, 1996, 45·8; death, 10·3. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·58%. Infant mortality, 64 per 1,000 live births (1999). Expectation of life in 1999 was 58·0 years among men and 60·8 among females. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

There is a tropical climate, affected by Indian monsoon winds from the north, which gives a wet season from Nov. to April. Moroni, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall, 113" (2,825 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

At a referendum on 23 Dec. 2001, 77% of voters approved a new constitution that keeps the three islands as one country while granting each one greater autonomy.

The President of the Union is Head of State.

National Anthem. ‘Udzima wa ya Masiwa’ (‘The union of the islands’); words by S. H. Abderamane, tune by K. Abdallah and S. H. Abderamane.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 14 April 2002. Turn-out was 39·1%. The elections were marred by violence and were boycotted by two of the three candidates and by most of the voters of Anjouan. On 22 April the results, which indicated 75% of votes cast for Col. Azaly Assoumani, were cancelled, although on 8 May a newly-appointed electoral commission confirmed Assoumani as president-elect.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President of the Union: Col. Azaly Assoumani; b. 1959 (sworn in 26 May 2002).

President of Anjouan: Mohamed Bacar. President of Grande Comore: Mze Soule El Bak. President of Mohéli: Mohamed Fazul.

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

Vice President of the Union and Minister of Finance: Caambi El Yachourtu. Vice President of the Union and Minister of Justice, Information, Religious Affairs, Human Rights and Parliamentary Relations: Rachidi Ben Massoundi. Minister of Foreign Affairs and Environment: Soeuf Mohamed Elamine. Social Affairs, Decentralization, Post, Telecommunications and Transport: Solihi Ali Mohamed.

DEFENCE

Army. The Army was reorganized after the failed coup of Sept. 1995.

Navy. One landing craft with ramps was purchased in 1981. Two small patrol boats were supplied by Japan in 1982. Personnel in 1996 numbered about 200.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Comoros is a member of the UN, the League of Arab States, African Development Bank, COMESA, OIC and the International Organization of the Francophonie, and an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 38·7% of GDP in 1998, industry 12·8% and services 48·5%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Comorian franc (KMF) of 100 centimes. It is pegged to the euro at 491·96775 Comorian francs to the euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$76m. in June 2002 and total money supply was 24,586m. Comorian francs. There was inflation of 5·0% in 2001.

Budget. Revenues were an estimated US$48m. and expenditure an estimated US$53m. in 1997.

Performance. Real GDP growth was negative in 2000, at –1·1%, but in 2001 the economy grew by 1·9%. In 2001 total GDP was US$0·2bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank is the bank of issue. The chief commercial banks are the Banque Internationale des Comores and the Banque de Développement des Comores.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 0·1 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. In 1991 installed capacity was 16,000 kW. Production was 15m. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita was 27 kWh in 1997.

Agriculture. 80% of the economically active population depends upon agriculture, which (including fishing, hunting and forestry) contributed 39% to GDP in 1997. There were 78,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 40,000 ha of permanent crops. The chief product was formerly sugarcane, but now vanilla, copra, maize and other food crops, cloves and essential oils (citronella, ylang-ylang, lemon grass) are the most important products. Production (2000 in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 75; bananas, 59; cassava, 53; rice, 17; copra, 9; taro, 9; sweet potatoes, 6.

Livestock (2000): goats, 140,000; cattle, 52,000; sheep, 20,000; asses, 5,000.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forest was 9,000 ha, or 4% of the total land area (12,000 ha and 5·4% in 1990). The forested area has been severely reduced because of the shortage of cultivable land and ylang-ylang production.

Fisheries. Fishing is on an individual basis, without modern equipment. The catch was estimated to be 12,200 tonnes in 1999.

INDUSTRY

Branches include perfume distillation, textiles, furniture, jewellery, soft drinks and the processing of vanilla and copra.

Labour. The workforce in 1996 was 286,000 (58% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$232m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 1998 imports amounted to US$47·8m. (US$62·6m. in 1995); exports to US$4m. (US$11·4m.).

Main export markets, 1998: France, 60%; USA, 17%; Germany, 12%. Main import suppliers: France, 38%; Pakistan, 12%; Saudi Arabia, 9%. The main exports are vanilla (US$6·2m. in 1995), cloves, ylang-ylang, essences, cocoa, copra and coffee. Principal imports are rice (US$14·1m. in 1995), petroleum products (US$7·7m. in 1995), cement, meat, vehicles, and iron and steel.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were estimated to be 900 km of classified roads (440 km highways and main roads, 230 km secondary and 230 km other roads). The number of cars in use has increased dramatically in recent years, from 2,910 in 1992 to 9,100 in 1996.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Moroni (International Prince Said Ibrahim). In 2000 it handled 103,000 passengers (79,000 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 1,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 7,000 telephone main lines in 2000 (10·0 per 1,000 persons) and 3,000 PCs in use (4·3 per 1,000 persons). In 1995 there were 100 fax machines. Internet users numbered 1,500 in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1993 there were 36 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. French and Muslim law is in a new consolidated code. The Supreme Court comprises seven members, two each appointed by the President and the Federal Assembly, and one by each island's Legislative Council. The death penalty is authorized for murder. The last execution was in 1996.

Religion. Islam is the official religion: 86% of the population are Sunni Muslims; 14% are Roman Catholics. Following the coup of April 1999 the federal government discouraged the practice of religions other than Islam, with Christians especially facing restrictions on worship.

Education. After two pre-primary years at Koran school, which 50% of children attend, there are six years of primary schooling for seven- to 13-year-olds followed by a four-year secondary stage attended by 25% of children. Some 5% of 17- to 20-year-olds conclude schooling at lycées. In 1995–96 there were 327 primary schools with 78,527 pupils. 17,637 pupils attended secondary schools in 1993–94. There were 348 students in higher education in 1995–96.

The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 59·2% (66·3% among males and 52·1% among females).

Health. In 1993 there were 77 doctors; in 1990, 6 dentists, 6 pharmacists, 86 midwives and 155 nursing personnel. In 1980 there were 17 hospitals and clinics with 763 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-controlled Radio Comoro broadcasts in French and Comorian. In 1997 there were 90,000 radio and 1,000 television receivers.

Press. There was one weekly newspaper in 1997.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 24,000 foreign tourists (around a third from France), bringing revenue of US$17m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

King Leopold II of the Belgians took the lead in exploring and exploiting the Congo Basin. In 1908 the country was annexed to Belgium as the Belgian Congo. In 1961, a year after the country gained independence, the radical nationalist former Prime Minister Patrice Lumumba was assassinated. Only in 2002 did Belgium admit to participating in his murder. Mobutu Sésé Séko, a puppet of Western interests, came to power in a coup in 1965. At first he was seen as a strongman who could hold together a huge, unstable country comprising hundreds of tribes and language groups. He changed the country's name to Zaïre in 1971. In the 1970s he was feted by the USA which used Zaïre as a springboard for operations into neighbouring Angola where western-backed Unita rebels were locked in civil war with a Cuban and Soviet backed government. Because Mobutu was useful in the fight against Communism the brutality and repressiveness of his regime was ignored.

After armed insurrection by Tutsi rebels in the province of Kivu, the government alleged pro-Tutsi intervention by the armies of Burundi and Rwanda and on 25 Oct. 1996 declared a state of emergency. By Dec. the secessionist forces of Laurent-Désiré Kabila, the Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo-Zaïre (ADFL), had begun to drive the regular Zaïrean army out of Kivu and an attempt was made to establish a rebel administration, called 'Democratic Congo'. In the face of continuing rebel military successes and the disaffection of the army, the Government accepted a UN resolution demanding the immediate cessation of hostilities. The Security Council asked the rebels also to make a public declaration of their acceptance. However, the latter continued in their victorious advance westwards, capturing Kisangani on 15 March 1997, then Kasai and Shaba, giving Kabila control of eastern Zaïre, and crucially the country's mineral wealth. After a futile attempt to deploy Serbian mercenaries, Mobutu succumbed to pressure—particularly from the USA and South Africa—and agreed to meet Kabila. Little happened but the meeting had all the trappings of a symbolic surrender. Mobutu fled without warning or conditions on the night of 15–16 May 1997. He died of cancer four months later. Described as one of the most destructive tyrants of the African independence era, it is said that his personal fortune, if ever recovered, could wipe out his country's national debt.

On coming to power Kabila changed the name of the country to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Hopes for democratic and economic renewal were soon disappointed. The Kabila regime relied too closely on its military backup, mainly Rwandans and eastern Congolese from the Tutsi minority. Those supporters seemed more interested in eliminating tribal enemies in eastern border areas than in establishing democracy. As a result, Rwanda and Uganda switched support to rebel forces. When Zimbabwe and Angola sent in troops to help President Kabila, full-scale civil war threatened. A ceasefire was negotiated at a Franco-African summit in Nov. 1998 but the military build-up continued into the new year and violence intensified.

A ceasefire agreement was signed by leaders from more than a dozen African countries in July 1999 to bring the civil war between the government of President Kabila and rebel forces to an end. Rival factions of the Rally for Congolese Democracy, the main rebel group opposed to the president, also signed the accord, but not until Sept. The threat remained of an early return to outright civil war.

'On the third anniversary of Kabila's assumption of power, a dispatch from the Panafrican News Agency reviewed the Democratic Republic of the Congo's condition:– Basic infrastructure is in total decay. Major sections of trunk "A" roads ... are not usable. Proposals for the rehabilitation of other facilities, such as hospitals, industries, manufacturing, and other structures, have also been stalled. On the social front, dirt and environmental decay have spewed all sorts of diseases. Smallpox, diarrhoea, sleeping sickness, among others, have come back in force while AIDS, malaria and poliomyelitis continue to devastate a population already weakened by under-nourishment... More than 60 per cent of the country's working population is not at work...' (The New Yorker, 25 Sept. 2000).

On 16 Jan. 2001 President Kabila was assassinated, allegedly by one of his own bodyguards. Kabila was succeeded by his son Joseph.

Prospects for peace improved dramatically in Feb. 2001 when the UN Security Council approved a plan for the disengagement of the warring factions that would allow the eventual deployment of 3,000 UN-supported peacekeepers. In early 2002 talks between the government and rebels on how to end the conflict ended without a satisfactory agreement embracing all factions. However, talks were resumed and in July 2002 the presidents of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and neighbouring Rwanda signed a peace deal that was expected to be the first stage towards ending the war which has claimed more than 3m. lives. In Oct. 2002 Rwanda completed the withdrawal of its forces. The Democratic Republic of the Congo and Uganda also signed a peace agreement. The conflict, which was described as Africa's first continental war, drew in Zimbabwe, Angola and Namibia (and, for a time, Sudan and Chad) on the side of the government, which controls the west of the country, while Rwanda and Uganda backed different rival factions. The Rally for Congolese Democracy, which controls areas in the east, was backed by Rwanda, while Uganda supported the Movement for the Liberation of Congo, based in the north and northeast of the country. Burundi also had troops in the country, allied to the Rwandans, although they stayed close to the border with Burundi. In addition to the vast numbers of deaths in the conflict, large numbers of people were displaced and sought asylum in Tanzania and Zambia. Since the end of the war relative peace and economic stability have returned to the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is bounded in the north by the Central African Republic, northeast by Sudan, east by Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and Lake Tanganyika, south by Zambia, southwest by Angola and northwest by the Republic of the Congo. There is a 37-km stretch of coastline which gives access to the Atlantic Ocean, with the Angolan exclave of Cabinda to the immediate north, and Angola itself to the south. Area, 2,344,885 sq. km (905,365 sq. miles). At the 1988 census the population was 34·7m. Estimate (1997) 47,440,000 (70% rural, 1999); density, 20 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 71·27m.

More than 200,000 refugees who escaped the fighting between Hutus and Tutsis in Rwanda and Burundi in 1994 are still in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (out of 1m. who came originally), and there are also 100,000 Angolan and 100,000 Sudanese refugees in the country.

Area, populations (1994 estimate) and chief towns of the regions in 1994:

Region	Area (sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)	Chief town	Population
Bandundu	295,658	4,907	Bandundu	. . .

[1]1999 figure. [2]Combined population of Maniema, Nord-Kivu and Sud-Kivu, 7,687,000.

Other large cities (with estimated 1994 population): Kolwezi (417,810), Likasi (299,118), Kikwit (182,142), Tshikapa (180,860).

The population is Bantu, with minorities of Sudanese (in the north), Nilotes (northeast), Pygmies and Hamites (in the east). French is the official language, but of more than 200 languages spoken, four are recognized as national languages: Kiswahili, Tshiluba, Kikongo and Lingala. Lingala has become the lingua franca after French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 2,263,000; deaths, 788,000. Rates (1997 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 47·7; death, 16·6. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·4%. Infant mortality in 1999 was 128 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life in 1999 was 49·7 years for men and 52·3 for females. Fertility rate, 1999, 6·3 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is varied, the central region having an equatorial climate, with year-long high temperatures and rain at all seasons. Elsewhere, depending on position north or south of the Equator, there are well-marked wet and dry seasons. The mountains of the east and south have a temperate mountain climate, with the highest summits having considerable snowfall. Kinshasa, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,125 mm). Kananga, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 74°F (23·3°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,584 mm). Kisangani, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 68" (1,704 mm). Lubumbashi, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 61°F (16·1°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,237 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Gen. Laurent-Désiré Kabila seized power on 17 May 1997 after the military defeat of Marshal Mobutu Sésé Séko and his government, and until his death in 2001 was both chief of state and head of government. Although parties other than the ADFL have been dissolved, a constitutional referendum was due to be held in Dec. 1998, and presidential and parliamentary elections in April 1999. However, these did not take place as scheduled.

National Anthem. ‘Debout Congolais’ (‘Stand up, Congolese’); words and tune by J. Lutumba and S. Boka.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The Democratic Republic of the Congo’s first elections since independence in 1960 are set to take place in 2005.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President and Minister of Defence: Joseph Kabila; b. 1971 (in office since 17 Jan. 2001).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Minister of Agriculture: Salomon Banamuhere. Communications and Press: Kkiaya bin Karubi. Culture and Arts: Matuka Kavokisa. Defence: Irung Awan. Economy: André-Philippe Futa. Education: Kutumisan Kyota. Energy: Georges Buse Falay. Finance (acting): Léonard Luhongwe. Foreign Affairs and International Co-operation: Léonard She Okitundu. Health: Mashako Mamba. Human Rights: Ntumba Luaba. Industry and Commerce: Ngalula Wafwana. Interior: Théophile Mbemba. Justice and Guardian of the Seals: Me Masudi Ngele. Labour and Social Security: Marie Ange Lukiana Mufwankol. Lands: Yuma Moota. Mining and Petroleum: Nkulu Kikuku. Post, Telephone and Telecommunications: Mutombo Kyamakosa. Public Administration: Benjamin Mukulungu. Public Works: Kimbembe Mazunga. Social Affairs: Jeanne Ebamba Moboto. Transport: Pauni Kamanzi. Youth and Sports: Timothée Moleka Nzulama.

DEFENCE

Following the overthrow of the Mobutu regime in May 1997, the former Zaïrean armed forces were in disarray. The insurgent Congo Liberation Army has between 20,000 and 40,000 fighters, equipped with small arms and some SA-7 SAMs. Much of this equipment is believed to be non-operational.

Defence expenditure totalled US$392m. in 2000 (US$8 per capita), representing 8·4% of GDP.

Army. The total strength of the Army was estimated at 55,000 (1999). There is an additional paramilitary National Police Force of unknown size.

Navy. Naval strength is estimated at 900. The main coastal base is at Banana.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Following an invasion in Aug. 1998, in June 1999 the Democratic Republic of the Congo instituted proceedings against Burundi, Uganda and Rwanda before the International Court of Justice for 'acts of armed aggression committed in flagrant breach of the United Nations Charter and of the Organization of African Unity'.

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is a member of the UN, WTO, the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, IOM, International Organization of the Francophonie and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 57·9% of GDP in 1997 (the second highest percentage in the world), services 25·2% and industry 16·9%.

Following the end of the civil war in 2002, several donor countries and institutions agreed to a development aid package worth US$2·5bn.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Congo franc which replaced the former zaïre in July 1998. The value of the new currency fell by two-thirds in the six months following its launch. Foreign exchange reserves were US$83m. in Dec. 1996. Gold reserves were 54,000 troy oz in 1997. Inflation, which reached 23,760% in 1994, had declined to 358% by 2001. In May 2001 the franc was floated in an effort to overcome the economic chaos caused by three years of state control and inter-regional war.

Budget. Total revenue was 604m. francs and total expenditure was 1,086m. francs in 1998. International economic aid has been made dependent on a coherent plan to revive the economy and progress on democracy and human rights.

Performance. GDP growth was –4·3% in 1999, –6·2% in 2000 and –4·4% in 2001. However, following the end of the five-year long war the economy was estimated to have grown by 3% in 2002. In Feb. 1998 GDP was reported to be 65% lower than it was in 1960, when the country gained independence. Total GDP in 1998 was US$7·0bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank, the Banque Centrale du Congo (Governor, Jean-Claude Masangu), achieved independence in May 2002. The largest bank is the Banque Commerciale Congolaise, in which the Société Générale of Belgium has a 25% stake through its subsidiary, Belgolaise. Other banks include Citibank and Stanbic. A 40% state-owned investment bank, Société Financière de Développement (Sofide) lends mainly to agriculture and manufacturing.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Production (1998), 5·74bn. kWh. A dam at Inga, on the River Congo near Matadi, has a potential capacity of 39,600 MW. Installed capacity was 3m. kW in 1998. Consumption per capita was 110 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. Offshore oil production began in Nov. 1975; estimated crude production (1996) was 11m. bbls. There is an oil refinery at Kinlao-Muanda.

Minerals. Production in 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes): copper, 23 (down from 450,000 tonnes in 1989); zinc, 19; cobalt, 5; gold (1997), 394 kg; diamonds (2000), 16·5m. carats. Only Australia, Botswana and Russia produce more diamonds. Coal, tin and silver are also found. The most important mining area is in the region of Shaba (formerly Katanga).

Agriculture. There were, in 1998, 6·7m. ha of arable land and 1·18m. ha of permanent crops. The main agricultural crops (2000 production in 1,000 tonnes) are: cassava, 15,959; plantains, 1,800; sugarcane, 1,669; maize, 1,184; rice, 383; groundnuts, 382; sweet potatoes, 370; bananas, 312; yams, 255; papayas, 213; mangoes, 206; pineapples, 196; oranges, 185; palm oil, 157; dry beans, 122; palm kernels, 63; taro, 62.

Livestock (2000): goats, 4,131,000; pigs, 1,049,000; sheep, 925,000; cattle, 882,000; poultry, 22m.

Forestry. Equatorial rainforests covered 1,092,000 sq. km in 1995, or 48·2% of the land area, down from 1,129,000 sq. km and 49·8% in 1990. The reduction of 37,000 sq. km in the area under forests between 1990 and 1995 was the biggest in any African country over the same period, and was only exceeded worldwide in Brazil and Indonesia. Timber production in 1999 was 50·75m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The catch for 2000 was 208,448 tonnes, almost entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

The main manufactures are foodstuffs, beverages, tobacco, textiles, rubber, leather, wood products, cement and building materials, metallurgy and metal extraction, metal items, transport vehicles, electrical equipment and bicycles. Main products, 1995, in 1,000 tonnes included: iron and steel, 965; cement, 140 (1997); sugar, 51 (1998); soap, 47; tyres, 50,000 units; printed fabrics, 15·73m. sq. metres; shoes, 1·6m. pairs; beer, 178m. litres.

Labour. In 1996 the workforce was 19·62m. (56% males). Agriculture employs around 65% of the total economically active population.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

With Burundi and Rwanda, the Democratic Republic of the Congo forms part of the Economic Community of the Great Lakes. External debt was US$11,645m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2001 were US$868·2m. (US$823·5m. in 2000); imports were US$703·9m. (US$697·1m. in 2000). Main commodities for export are diamonds, copper, coffee, cobalt and crude oil; and for import: consumer goods, foodstuffs, mining and other machinery, transport equipment and fuels. Principal export markets are Belgium, USA, France, Germany, Italy, UK, Japan and South Africa. Principal import suppliers are Belgium, South Africa, USA, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and China.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were approximately 33,130 km of motorways and main roads, 40,500 km of secondary roads and 83,400 km of other roads. There were an estimated 787,000 passenger cars in use in 1996 (16·9 per 1,000 inhabitants) plus 538,000 trucks and vans.

Rail. There was 5,138 km of track on three gauges in 1995, of which 858 km was electrified. However, the length of track in use was severely reduced by the civil strife in late 1996 and the early part of 1997.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Kinshasa (Ndjili). Other major airports are at Lubumbashi (Luano), Bukavu, Goma and Kisangani. The national carrier is Congo Airlines. In 1996 Kinshasa handled 344,000 passengers (192,000 on domestic flights) and 96,300 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The River Congo and its tributaries are navigable to 300-tonne vessels for about 14,500 km. Regular traffic has been established between Kinshasa and Kisangani as well as Ilebo, on the Lualaba (i.e., the river above Kisangani), on some tributaries and on the lakes. The Democratic Republic of the Congo has only 37 km of sea coast. In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 13,000 GRT. Matadi, Kinshasa and Kalemie are the main seaports; in 1993 Matadi handled 0·6m. tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications. There is a ground satellite communications station outside Kinshasa. Telephone main lines numbered 20,000 in 2000, or 0·4 per 1,000 inhabitants—the lowest penetration rate of any country in the world. In 1995 there were 5,000 fax machines; and in 1998, 10,000 mobile phone subscribers. In May 1999 there were 1,500 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 304 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court at Kinshasa, 11 courts of appeal, 36 courts of first instance and 24 ‘peace tribunals’. The death penalty is in force.

Religion. In 1996 there were 21·9m. Roman Catholics, 13·1m. Protestants, 7·74m. Kimbanguistes (African Christians) and 0·63m. Muslims. Animist beliefs persist.

Education. In 1994–95 there were 14,885 primary schools with 121,054 teachers for 5·4m. pupils, and 1·5m. pupils in secondary schools. In 1994–95 there were 93,266 students at university level. In higher education there were three universities (Kinshasa, Kisangani and Lubumbashi) in 1994–95, 14 teacher training colleges and 18 technical institutes in the public sector; and 13 university institutes, four teacher training colleges and 49 technical institutes in the private sector. Adult literacy rate was 60·3% in 1999 (male, 72·4%; female, 48·7%).

Health. In 1990 there were 2,469 doctors, 41 dentists and 27,601 nurses. In 1995 government expenditure on health totalled 25,000m. zaïres.

The Democratic Republic of the Congo has been one of the least successful countries in the battle against undernourishment in the past decade. The proportion of the population classified as undernourished increased from 35% in 1990–92 to 64% by 1997–99.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is provided by government-controlled radio and television stations (colour by SECAM V). There is also an educational radio station. In 1997 there were 18m. radio and 6·48m. TV receivers.

Press. In 1996 there were nine daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 124,000.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 32,000 foreign tourists, spending US$2m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

First occupied by France in 1882, the Congo became a territory of French Equatorial Africa from 1910–58, and then a member state of the French Community. Between 1940 and 1944, thanks to Equatorial Africa's allegiance to General de Gaulle, he named Brazzaville the capital of the Empire and Liberated France. Independence was granted in 1960. A Marxist-Leninist state was introduced in 1970. Free elections were restored in 1992 but violence erupted when in June 1997 President Lissouba tried to disarm opposition militia ahead of a fresh election. There followed four months of civil war with fighting concentrated on Brazzaville which became a ghost town. In Oct. Gen. Sassou-Nguesso proclaimed victory, having relied upon military support from Angola. President Lissouba went into hiding in Burkina Faso. A peace agreement signed in Nov. 1999 between President Sassou-Nguesso and the Cocoye and Ninja militias brought a period of relative stability.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Republic of the Congo is bounded by Cameroon and the Central African Republic in the north, the Democratic Republic of the Congo to the east and south, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean to the southwest and Gabon to the west, and covers 341,821 sq. km. At the census of 1984 the population was 1,909,248.

Estimated population in 1997, 2,769,000; density, 8·1 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·08m.

In 1999, 61·7% of the population were urban. Estimated population of major cities in 1995: Brazzaville, the capital, 937,579 (1,187,000 in 1999); Pointe-Noire, 576,206; Loubomo (Dolisie), 83,605; N'Kayi, 42,465; Mossendjo, 16,405; Ouesso, 16,171.

Area, estimated population and county towns of the regions in 1992 were:

Region	Sq. km	Population	County town
Bouenza	12,266	219,822	Madingou
Capital District	100	937,579	Brazzaville
Cuvette	74,850	151,839	Owando
Kouilou	13,694	665,502	Pointe-Noire
Lékoumou	20,950	74,420	Sibiti
Likouala	66,044	70,675	Impfondo
Niari	25,940	220,087	Loubomo (Dolisie)
Plateaux	38,400	119,722	Djambala
Pool	33,955	182,671	Kinkala
Sangha	55,800	52,132	Ouesso

Main ethnic groups are: Kongo (48%), Sangha (20%), Teke (17%) and M'Bochi (12%).

French is the official language. Kongo languages are widely spoken. Monokutuba and Lingala serve as lingua francas.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 100,000; deaths, 45,000. Rates, 1997 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 38·8; deaths, 17·3. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 81. Expectation of life in 1999 was 49·0 years for males and 53·3 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·9%. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, with moderate rainfall and a small range of temperature. There is a long dry season from May to Oct. in the southwest plateaux, but the Congo Basin in the northeast is more humid, with rainfall approaching 100" (2,500 mm). Brazzaville, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,473 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was approved in a referendum held in Jan. 2002. Under the new constitution the president's term of office is increased from five to seven years. The constitution abolished the position of prime minister, and provides for a new two-chamber assembly consisting of a house of representatives and a senate. The president may also appoint and dismiss ministers. 84·3% of voters were in favour of the draft constitution and 11·3% against. Turn-out was 78%, despite calls from opposition parties for a boycott. The new constitution came into force in Aug. 2002.

National Anthem. 'La Congolaise'; words and tune by Jean Royer and others.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 10 March 2002. Incumbent Denis Sassou-Nguesso won with 89·4% of votes cast, against 2·7% for Joseph Kignoumbi Kia Mboungou. The turn-out was 74·7%. The election represented the first time that Sassou-Nguesso was elected to the presidency, having seized power in 1979 and again in 1997.

Parliamentary elections were held on 26 May and 22 June 2002. President Denis Sassou-Nguesso's Congolese Labour Party won 52 out of 137 seats; his allies, 31; the Pan-African Union for Social Development, 4; and the Union for Democracy and Republic, 6.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Denis Sassou-Nguesso; b. 1943 (sworn in 25 Oct. 1997 for a second time and re-elected in March 2002, having previously held office 1979–92).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Minister of Transport and Privatization, in Charge of Coordinating Government Action: Isidore Mvouba. Economic Integration and Territorial Development: Pierre Moussa. Foreign Affairs, Co-operation and Francophonie Affairs: Rodolphe Adada. Justice, Guardian of the Seals and Human Rights: Martin Mbémba. Oil: Jean-Baptiste Taty Loutard. Economy, Finance and Budget: Roger Rigobert Andely. Security and Police: Pierre Oba. Equipment and Public Works: Florent Ntsiba. Presidential Affairs, in Charge of State Control: Simon Mfoutou. Agriculture, Livestock, Fisheries and the Promotion of Women: Jeanne Dambedzet. Forestry and the Environment: Henri Djombo. Construction, Urbanism, Housing and Land Reform: Claude Alphonse Nsilou. Territorial Administration and Decentralization: François Ibovi. Labour, Employment and Social Security: André Okombi Salissa. Posts and Telecommunications, in Charge of Technological Development: Jean Dellot. Technical and Vocational Training: Pierre Michel Nguimbi. Higher Education and Scientific Research: Henri Ossebi. Industrial Development, Small and Medium-Sized Businesses, and Handicrafts: Emile Mabondzot. Commerce, Consumer Affairs and Supplies: Adélaïde Moundélé-Ngollo. Social Affairs, Solidarity, Humanitarian Action, Disabled War Veterans and Family Affairs: Emilienne Eaoul. Civil Service and State Reform: Gabriel Entcha Ebia. Mines, Energy and Water Resources: Philippe Mvouo. Health and Population: Dr Alain Moka. Primary Education and Literacy: Rosalie Kama. Culture and Tourism: Jean Claude Gakosso. Communications, in Charge of Relations with Parliament and Government Spokesperson: Alain Akoualat. Sports and Youth Affairs: Marcel Mbani.

DEFENCE

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$72m. (US$24 per capita), representing 2·5% of GDP.

Army. Total personnel (1999) 8,000. There is a Gendarmerie of 2,000. The 'People's Militia', numbering some 3,000, is being absorbed into the Army.

Navy. Personnel in 1999 totalled about 800. The navy is based at Pointe Noire.

Air Force. The Air Force had (1999) about 1,200 personnel and 12 combat aircraft, most of which are in store.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Republic of the Congo is a member of the UN, WTO, the African Union, African Development Bank, IOM, International Organization of the Francophonie and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture produced 11·5% of GDP in 1998, industry 49·9% and services 38·6%.

Overview. An economic and social recovery plan (Paséco) was launched in 1994.

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XAF) with a parity of 655·957 francs CFA to one euro. Total money supply in April 2002 was 238,885m. francs CFA and foreign exchange reserves were US$51m. Gold reserves were 11,000 troy oz in June 2002. In 2001 there was deflation of 0·5%.

Budget. Total revenue in 2000 was 604·52bn. francs CFA (637·40bn. forecast for 2001) and total expenditure was 584·80bn. francs CFA (524·90bn. forecast for 2001).

Performance. Total GDP in 2001 was US$2·8bn. Real GDP growth was 2·9% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (BEAC) is the bank of issue. There are three commercial banks and a development bank, in all of which the government has majority stakes.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 165,000 kW in 1995. Total production in 1998 was 503m. kWh and consumption per capita 83 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Oil was discovered in the mid-1960s when Elf Aquitaine was given exclusive rights to production. Elf still has the lion's share but Agip Congo is also involved in oil exploitation. In 1997 production was averaging 230,000 bbls. a day. Proven reserves in 1999 were 1·5bn. bbls. in 1999, including major off-shore deposits. Oil provides about 90% of government revenue and exports. There is a refinery at Pointe-Noire, the second largest city. Gas reserves are estimated at 91,000m. cu. metres.

Minerals. A government mine produces several metals; gold and diamonds are extracted by individuals. There are reserves of potash (4·5m. tonnes), iron ore (1,000m. tonnes), and also clay, bituminous sand, phosphates, zinc and lead.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 170,000 ha of arable land and 45,000 ha of permanent crops. Production (2000, in thousand tonnes): cassava, 790; sugarcane, 450; plantains, 78; bananas, 52; avocados, 25; groundnuts, 22; sweet potatoes, 22; palm oil, 17; yams, 14.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 77,000; pigs, 46,000; sheep, 116,000; goats, 285,000; poultry, 2m. There were some 700 tractors and 85 thresher-harvesters in use in 1998.

Forestry. In 1995 equatorial forests covered 19·54m. ha (57·2% of the total land area), down from 19·74m. ha in 1990. In 1999, 3·24m. cu. metres of timber were produced, mainly okoumé from the south and sapele from the north. Timber companies are required to replant, and to process at least 60% of their production locally. Before the development of the oil industry, forestry was the mainstay of the economy.

Fisheries. The catch for 2000 was an estimated 49,980, of which approximately half was from inland waters and half from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

There is a growing manufacturing sector, located mainly in the four major towns, producing processed foods, textiles, cement, metal goods and chemicals. Industry produced 37·4% of GDP in 1991, including 7·6% from manufacturing. Production (1997): residual fuel oil, 262,000 tonnes; distillate fuel oil, 95,000 tonnes; petrol, 55,000 tonnes; jet fuel, 17,000 tonnes; cigarettes (1994), 655m. cartons; beer (1994), 50·7m. litres; cement (1995), 100,000 tonnes; veneer sheets (1993), 35,000 cu. metres; cotton textiles (1993), 1·8m. metres; footwear (1990), 300,000 pairs.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 1,105,000 (57% males). More than 50% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture.

Trade Unions. In 1964 the existing unions merged into one national body, the Confédération Syndicale Congolaise. The 40,000-strong Confédération Syndicale des Travailleurs Congolais split off from the latter in 1993.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$4,887m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	500	612	650	1,361	802
Exports	1,119	958	1,167	1,554	1,744

Apart from crude oil, other significant commodities for export are lumber, plywood, sugar, cocoa, coffee and diamonds. Principal imported commodities are intermediate manufactures, capital equipment, construction materials, foodstuffs and petroleum products. Main export markets are the USA (which accounts for some 23% of exports), Belgium/Luxembourg, Taiwan, Netherlands, France and Italy. Main import suppliers are France (accounting for some 31% of imports), Netherlands, Italy and the USA.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 12,800 km of roads, of which 1,240 km were surfaced. Vehicles in use in 1996 numbered 53,000, including approximately 37,240 passenger cars (14 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 124 deaths in road accidents in 1994.

Rail. A railway (510 km, 1,067 mm gauge) connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire via Loubomo and Bilinga, and a 285 km branch links Mont-Belo with Mbinda on the Gabon border. Total length is 795 km. In 1995 railways carried 302m. passenger-km and 267m. tonne-km of freight.

Civil Aviation. The principal airports are at Brazzaville (Maya Maya) and Pointe-Noire. The Republic of the Congo is a member of the multinational Air Afrique, which absorbed the former national carrier Lina-Congo in 1992. In 2000 Brazzaville handled 412,000 passengers (335,000 on domestic flights) and 57,400 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The only seaport is Pointe-Noire, which handled 2·59m. tonnes of freight in 1990. The merchant marine totalled 4,000 GRT in 1998. There are some 5,000 km of navigable rivers, and river transport is an important service for timber and other freight as well as passengers. There are hydrofoil connections from Brazzaville to Kinshasa.

Telecommunications. There were 22,000 telephone main lines in 2000 (7·5 per 1,000 persons). In 1999 there were 3,400 mobile phone subscribers and 10,000 PCs were in use (3·5 per 1,000 persons). There were 500 Internet users in July 2000. In 1995 there were 100 fax machines.

Postal Services. There were 114 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court, Court of Appeal and a criminal court are situated in Brazzaville, with a network of tribunaux de grande instance and tribunaux d'instance in the regions.

Religion. In 1999 there were 1·11m. Roman Catholics and 0·66m. Protestants. Traditional animist beliefs are still practised by nearly 900,000 people.

Education. In 1995–96 there were 1,162 primary schools with 7,060 teachers for 497,305 pupils; 7,173 secondary school teachers for 214,650 pupils; and there were 13,806 students at university level in 1992–93. Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 79·5% (male, 86·6%; female, 73·0%).

Health. In 1990 there were 613 doctors, 35 dentists, 1,624 nurses and 498 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is under the aegis of the government-controlled Radiodiffusion-Télévision Congolaise, which transmits a national and a regional radio programme and a programme in French. There were 341,000 radio and 33,000 TV receivers in 1997.

Press. In 1996 there were six daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 20,000.

Tourism. There were 44,000 foreign tourists in 1998, bringing revenue of US$3m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus in 1502 on his last voyage, Costa Rica (Rich Coast) was part of the Spanish viceroyalty of New Spain from 1540 to 1821. It was part of the Central American Federation until 1838 when it achieved full independence. Coffee was introduced in 1808 and became a mainstay of the economy, helping to create a peasant land-owning class. In 1948 accusations of election fraud led to a six-week civil war, at the conclusion of which José Figueres Ferrer won power at the head of a revolutionary junta. A new constitution was promulgated with, amongst other changes, the abolition of the army. In 1986 Oscar Arias Sánchez was elected president. He promised to prevent Nicaraguan anti-Sandinista (contra) forces using Costa Rica as a base. In 1987 he received the Nobel Peace Prize as recognition of his Central American peace plan, agreed to by the other Central American states. Costa Rica was beset with economic problems in the early 1990s when several politicians, including President Calderón, were accused of profiting from drug trafficking.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Costa Rica is bounded in the north by Nicaragua, east by the Caribbean, southeast by Panama, and south and west by the Pacific. The area is estimated at 51,100 sq. km (19,730 sq. miles). The population at the census of July 2000 was 3,810,179; density, 71·4 per sq. km. In 2000, 58·9% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·53m.

There are seven provinces (with 2000 population): Alajuela (716,286); Cartago (432,395); Guanacaste (264,238); Heredia (354,732); Limón (339,295); Puntarenas (357,483); San José (1,345,750). The largest cities, with estimated 2000 populations, are San José (346,600); Limón (62,000); and Alajuela (53,900).

The population is mainly of Spanish (85%) and mixed (8%) descent. About 3% are Afro-Caribbean (including some 70,000 speakers of an English Creole along the Caribbean coast). There is a residual Amerindian population of about 10,000.

Spanish is the official language.

Performance. Costa Rica, said to be the most stable country in Central America, experienced GDP growth of 8·4% in 1998 and 9·4% in 1999, although then only 2·2% in 2000 and 0·9% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$16·2bn.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Central Bank (founded 1950) which supervises the national monetary system, foreign exchange dealings and banking operations. The bank has a board of seven directors appointed by the government, including ex officio the Minister of Finance and the Planning Office Director. The Governor is Francisco de Paula Gutiérrez Gutiérrez.

There is a stock exchange, which in 2000 was the second most successful market in the world after China's Shanghai B Index, gaining in value by nearly 34% in the course of the year.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legally established, but in country districts the following old Spanish weights and measures may be found: Libra = 1·014 lb avoirdupois; arroba = 25·35 lb avoirdupois; quintal = 101·40 lb avoirdupois, and fanega = 11 Imperial bushels.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Costa Rica's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 1·4 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Costa Rica ninth in the world, with 63·2%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 1,487,000 kW in 1999. Production was 6·20bn. kWh in 1999. Consumption per capita was 1,450 kWh in 1998.

Minerals. Gold output is about 500 kg per year. Salt production was 23,000 tonnes in 1998.

Agriculture. Agriculture is a key sector, with 263,000 people being economically active in 1995. There were 0·23m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·28m. ha of permanent crops. The principal agricultural products are coffee, bananas and sugar. Cattle are also of great importance. Production figures for 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 4,000; bananas, 2,700; rice, 264; melons, 177; coffee, 164; palm oil, 134; oranges, 126; plantains, 90; watermelons, 77; potatoes, 74; pineapples, 43; papayas, 36.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 1·71m.; pigs, 390,000; horses, 115,000; chickens, 17m.

Forestry. The forest area is being depleted, having been 1·45m. ha and 28·5% of the total land area in 1990, but only 1·25m. ha and 24·4% of the land area in 1995. Timber production in 1999 was 5·40m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catch in 1999 amounted to 25,679 tonnes, mostly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The main manufactured goods are foodstuffs, palm oil, textiles, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, furniture, cement, tyres, canning, clothing, plastic goods, plywood and electrical equipment.

Labour. In July 2000 there were 1,318,625 people in employment. There were 71,935 unemployed persons, or 5·2% of the workforce. The main area of employment is community, social and personal services (337,000 people in 2000), followed by agriculture (269,000 in 2000).

Trade Unions. There are two main trade unions, Rerum Novarum (anti-Communist) and Confederación General de Trabajadores Costarricenses (Communist).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

A free trade agreement was signed with Mexico in March 1994. Some 2,300 products were freed from tariffs, with others to follow over ten years. External debt was US$3,011m. in June 2000.

Imports and Exports. The value of imports and exports in US$1m. was:

	1997	1998	1999
Imports	3,503	4,377	5,962
Exports	2,995	3,614	4,914

Chief exports: manufactured goods and other products, coffee, bananas, sugar, cocoa. Main export markets, 1996: USA, 39·0%; Germany, 7·2%; Italy, 5·2%; Belgium-Luxembourg, 4·4%. Main import suppliers, 1996: USA, 49·9%; Mexico, 6·5%; Venezuela, 6·5%; Guatemala, 3·0%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1999 there were 35,876 km of roads. On the Costa Rica section of the Inter-American Highway it is possible to motor to Panama during the dry season. The Pan-American Highway into Nicaragua is metalled for most of the way and there is now a good highway open almost to Puntarenas. Motor vehicles, 1999, numbered 507,796 (294,100 passenger cars in 1997). There were 324 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Rail. The nationalized railway system (Incofer) was closed in 1994.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at San José (Juan Santamaria). The national carrier is Líneas Aéreas Costarriquenses (LACSA), which in 1999 flew 23·9m. km and carried 922,600 passengers. In 2000 San José handled 2,159,215 passengers (1,994,829 on international flights) and 77,137 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The chief ports are Limón on the Atlantic and Caldera on the Pacific. The merchant marine totalled 6,000 GRT in 1998. In 1996 vessels totalling 4,135,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 2,992,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. There were 1,003,400 telephone main lines in 2000 (249·4 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 600,000 PCs in use (149·1 for every 1,000 persons). The government has 202 telegraph offices and 88 official telephone stations. In 1999 mobile phone subscribers numbered 143,000 and in 1997 there were 8,500 fax machines. Costa Rica had 250,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000, up from 30,000 a year earlier.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court and five appeal courts divided into five chambers—the Court of Cassation, the Higher and Lower Criminal Courts, and the Higher and Lower Civil Courts. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces and local justices throughout the republic. Capital punishment may not be inflicted.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 5,495 (155 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Roman Catholicism is the state religion; it had 2·82m. adherents in 1997. There is entire religious liberty under the constitution. The Archbishop of Costa Rica has four bishops at Alajuela, Limón, San Isidro el General, Tilarán and Puntarenas. Followers of other faiths number about 650,000.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 95·5% (95·4% among males and 95·5% among females). Primary instruction is compulsory and free from six to 15 years; secondary education (since 1949) is also free. Primary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 1999 there were 3,780 public and private primary schools with 25,208 teachers and administrative staff and 536,490 enrolled pupils, and 454 public and private secondary schools with 17,636 teachers and 235,425 pupils. CÔTE D'IVOIRE

République de la Côte d'Ivoire
(Republic of the Ivory Coast)

Capital: Yamoussoukro
Seat of government: Abidjan
Population estimate, 2000: 16·01m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,630
HDI/world rank: 0·428/156

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France obtained rights on the coast in 1842 but did not occupy the territory until 1882. In the early 1870s a French offer to exchange Côte d'Ivoire with the British for the Gambia, which bisected the French colony of Senegal, was refused. Rumours of gold later rekindled French interest and in 1889 Côte d'Ivoire was declared a French protectorate. Governors appointed from France administered the colony using a system of centralized rule that allowed little room for local participation. In 1946 Côte d'Ivoire's first political party, the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire, was created under the leadership of Félix Houphouët-Boigny who eventually adopted a policy of co-operation with the French authorities. By the mid-1950s the country had become the wealthiest in French West Africa and in 1958 Côte d'Ivoire became an autonomous republic within the French Community. Côte d'Ivoire achieved full independence on 7 Aug. 1960, with Félix Houphouët-Boigny as its first president.

On 23 Dec. 1999 President Henri Konan Bédié was ousted in a military coup led by Gen. Robert Guéï, the country's military chief from 1990 to 1995. On 6 Oct. 2000 a state of emergency was declared ahead of a Supreme Court announcement on the candidates allowed to stand for the presidential election on 22 Oct. 2000. After Robert Guéï declared himself the winner in the election, a violent uprising in which over 2,000 people were killed resulted in Gen. Guéï fleeing to Benin. The veteran opposition candidate Laurent Gbagbo was then declared the rightful winner. In Sept. 2002 there was a failed coup attempt by mutinous soldiers that claimed more than 20 lives, including those of both Gen. Guéï and the interior minister. Since then, Côte d'Ivoire has descended further into civil war involving different rebel factions.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Côte d'Ivoire is bounded in the west by Liberia and Guinea, north by Mali and Burkina Faso, east by Ghana, and south by the Gulf of Guinea. It has an area of 320,783 sq. km and a population at the 1988 census of 10,812,782 (54·3% rural in 1999). Estimate (1996) 14·76m.; density, 46·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 19·63m.

Since 1991 the country has been divided into ten regions (North-West, North, North-East, West, Centre-West, Centre-North, Centre, Centre-East, South-West, South) comprising 50 departments. Departments are named after their chief towns.

The areas and populations (1988 census) of the departments:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1960 Constitution was amended in 1971, 1975, 1980, 1985, 1986, 1990 and 1998. The sole legal party was the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire, but opposition parties were legalized in 1990. There is a 225-member National Assembly elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term. The President is also directly elected for a five-year term (renewable). He appoints and leads a Council of Ministers.

In Nov. 1990 the National Assembly voted that its Speaker should become President in the event of the latter's incapacity, and created the post of Prime Minister to be appointed by the President. Following the death of President Houphouët-Boigny on 7 Dec. 1993, the speaker, Henri Konan Bédié, proclaimed himself head of state till the end of the presidential term in Sept. 1995.

Following the coup of Dec. 1999 a referendum was held on 23 July 2000 on the adoption of a new constitution, which set eligibility conditions for presidential candidates (the candidate and both his parents must be Ivorian), reduced the voting age from 21 to 18, and abolished the death penalty. It also offered an amnesty to soldiers who staged the coup and the junta, but committed the junta to hand over power to an elected civilian head of state and parliament within six months of the proclamation of the text. Approximately 87% of votes cast were in favour of the new constitution.

National Anthem. 'L'Abidjanaise'; words by M. Ekra and others, tune by P. M Pango.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 22 Oct. 2000, but were boycotted by the former ruling Democratic Party and the Rally of the Republicans. Laurent Gbagbo (Front Populaire Ivorienne/FPI) obtained 59·4% of votes cast against 32·7% for Robert Guéï, who had seized power in a coup in Dec. 1999. Initially Robert Guéï claimed victory but following a violent uprising accepted defeat (the first time in Africa that a popular rising had succeeded in toppling a military regime). There were three other candidates.

The National Assembly elections were held on 10 Dec. 2000 and 14 Jan. 2001. The Ivorian People's Front (FPI) won 96 seats; the Democratic Party (PDCI) won 94 seats; Rally of the Republicans, 5. There were also two vacant seats.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Croatia was united with Hungary in 1091 and remained under Hungarian administration until the end of the First World War. On 1 Dec. 1918 Croatia became a part of the new Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, which was renamed Yugoslavia in 1929. During the Second World War an independent fascist (Ustaša) state was set up under the aegis of the German occupiers. During the Communist period Croatia became one of the six 'Socialist Republics' constituting the Yugoslav federation led by Marshal Tito. With the collapse of Communism, an independence movement gained momentum.

In a referendum on 19 May 1991, 94·17% of votes cast were in favour of Croatia becoming an independent sovereign state with the option of joining a future Yugoslav confederation as opposed to remaining in the existing Yugoslav federation. The Krajina and other predominantly Serbian areas of Croatia wanted union with Serbia and seized power by force of arms. Croatian forces and Serb insurgents backed by federal forces became embroiled in a conflict throughout 1991 until the arrival of a UN peace-keeping mission at the beginning of 1992 and the establishment of four UN peace-keeping zones ('pink zones'). In early May 1995 Croatian forces re-took Western Slavonia from the Serbs and opened the Zagreb-Belgrade highway. In a 60-hour operation mounted on 4 Aug. 1995 the former self-declared Serb Republic of Krajina was occupied, provoking an exodus of 180,000 Serb refugees. Croats who had left the area in 1991 began to return. On 12 Nov. 1995 the Croatian government and Bosnian Serbs reached an agreement to place Eastern Slavonia, the last Croatian territory still under Bosnian Serb control, under UN administration.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Croatia is bounded in the north by Slovenia and Hungary and in the east by Serbia and Montenegro and Bosnia-Herzegovina. It includes the areas of Dalmatia, Istria and Slavonia which no longer have administrative status. Its area is 56,542 sq. km. Population at the 2001 census was 4,437,460 (4,784,265 in 1991), of whom the predominating ethnic groups were Croats (90%) and Serbs (5%); population density, 78·5 per sq. km. The significant population decrease, popularly called 'the white plague', is seen as a serious social problem.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·65m.

In 1999, 57·3% of the population lived in urban areas. Zagreb, the capital, had a 1999 population of 1,047,000. Other major towns (with 1991 census population): Split (189,388), Rijeka (167,964), Osijek (104,761).

At the beginning of 1991 there were some 0·6m. resident Serbs. A law of Dec. 1991 guaranteed the autonomy of Serbs in areas where they are in a majority after the establishment of a permanent peace.

The official language is Croatian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: births, 43,746; deaths, 50,246; marriages (1999), 23,778; divorces (1998), 3,962. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 69·6 years for males and 77·6 years for females. Fertility rate, 1999, 1·6 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Inland Croatia has a central European type of climate, with cold winters and hot summers, but the Adriatic coastal region experiences a Mediterranean climate with mild, moist winters and hot, brilliantly sunny summers with less than average rainfall. Average annual temperature and rainfall: Dubrovnik, 16·6°C and 1,051 mm. Zadar, 15·6°C and 963 mm. Rijeka, 14·3°C and 1,809 mm. Zagreb, 12·4°C and 1,000 mm. Osijek, 11·3°C and 683 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 21 Dec. 1990. The President is elected for renewable five-year terms. There is a unicameral Parliament (Hrvatski Sabor), consisting of 151 deputies. It has 140 members elected from multi-seat constituencies for a four-year term, 5 seats are reserved for national minorities and 6 members representing Croatians abroad are chosen by proportional representation. The upper house, the Chamber of Counties, was abolished in 2001.

National Anthem. 'Lijepa nasva domovino' ('Beautiful our homeland'); words by A. Mihanović, tune by J. Runjanin.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Following Franjo Tudjman's death, presidential elections took place on 24 Jan. 2000 with a second round on 7 Feb. Mate Granić, the candidate from Tudjman's HDZ party, was heavily defeated in the first round in which there were nine candidates. In the run-off centrist Stipe Mesić won 56·2% of the vote against Social Liberal Dražen Budiša's 43·8%. Turn-out in the first round was approximately 64·0% and in the second round 61·5%.

Elections to the Sabor were held on 3 Jan. 2000. An alliance of the Social Democratic Party/SDP and the Social Liberal Party/HSLS (along with the regionalist Primorian Goranian Union and the Slavonian-Baranian Croatian Party) claimed 71 seats with 38·7% of the vote. The Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ) won 40 seats with 26·7%, the United List (an alliance between the Croatian Peasant Party, the Istrian Democratic Assembly, the Liberal Party and the Croatian People's Party) won 24 with 14·7%, and the Croatian Rights Party/Croatian Christian Democratic Union coalition won 5 with 5·2%. A further five seats went to national minorities and six to representatives of Croatians abroad.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Stipe Mesić; b. 1934 (Croatian People's Party; sworn in 18 Feb. 2000).

Following the election of 3 Jan. 2000 a coalition government was formed between the SDP/HSLS and the United List. The Istrian Democratic Assembly, one of the parties in the United List, left the coalition in June 2001. In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Ivica Račan; b. 1944 (Social Democratic Party; sworn in 27 Jan. 2000).

Banking and Finance. The National Bank of Croatia (Governor, Zeljko Rohatinski) is the bank of issue. In 2001 there were 43 registered banks. The largest banks are Zagrebačka Banka, with assets in 2000 of US$2·8bn., and Privredna Banka Zagreb. There are stock exchanges in Zagreb and Varaždin.

Total foreign direct investments from 1993 to Sept. 2001 amounted to US$5,927·5m., principally from Austria (US$1,739m.), Germany (US$1,199m.) and the USA (US$1,189m).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Croatia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 4·5 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Croatia 12th in the world, with 62·5%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 4m. kW. Output was 9·51bn. kWh in 1998, with consumption per capita 2,463 kWh.

Oil and Gas. In 1996, 12m. bbls. of crude oil were produced. Natural gas output in 1998 totalled 1,570m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Production, 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): coal, 54; salt (1997), 17.

Agriculture. Agriculture and fishing generate approximately 8% of GDP. At the 1993 census 409,647 persons subsisted on agriculture. Agricultural land totals

3·15m. ha (63·4% is cultivated). In 1998, 3,000 ha were irrigated. Production (in 1,000 tonnes, 2000): wheat, 1,080; maize, 800; sugarbeets, 770; potatoes, 500; grapes, 394; wine, 209; barley, 125.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 427,000; sheep, 528,000; pigs, 1,233,000; chickens, 11m. Animal products, 2000: milk, 641,000 tonnes; meat, 125,000 tonnes; eggs, 49,000 tonnes; cheese, 19,000 tonnes.

Forestry. Forests covered 1·96m. ha in 2002, of which 80% are state owned. In 1999, 3·49m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. In 2002 there were 15 fish-processing factories. The 2000 output of fresh-water fish amounted to 4,800 tonnes, and salt-water fish and other sea food to 24,000 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

The largest company in Croatia in Jan. 2003 was Pliva (market capitalization of 9,360·3m. kuna), a pharmaceuticals company.

In 2001 industrial production growth totalled 6% in comparison with 2000. Production, 1998: cement, 2·29m. tonnes; cotton fabrics and blankets, 16·75m. sq. metres; wool fabrics and blankets, 6·55m. sq. metres; beer, 375m. litres; distilled alcoholic beverages, 24·1m. litres.

Labour. In 2001 the estimated number of employees was 1,033,000 and unemployment was 22·3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Croatia has accepted responsibility for 29·5% of the US$4,400m. commercial bank debt of the former Yugoslavia. Total foreign debt was US$12,120m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2001 were valued at US$4,659·3m. Imports for 2001 came to US$9,043·7m.

The main exports are machinery and transport equipment, clothing, food and live animals, mineral fuels and lubricants, and plastics. Principal imports are machinery and transport equipment, mineral fuels and lubricants, chemicals and foodstuffs. In 2001 the main export markets were (in US$1m.): Italy (1,104); Germany (689); Bosnia-Herzegovina (560); Slovenia (426); Austria (268). Main import suppliers (in US$1m.): Germany (1,547); Italy, (1,524); Slovenia (712); Russia (654); Austria (630).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 27,840 km of roads in 1998 (as well as 330 km of motorways), of which 84·4% were paved. In 1998 there were 1m. passenger cars, 5,000 buses and coaches, and 115,000 vans and trucks. 84m. passengers and 5·69m. tonnes of freight were carried by public transport in 1998. There were 646 deaths in road accidents in 1998.

Rail. There are 2,726 km of 1,435 mm gauge rail (1,213 km electrified). In 1998 railways carried 17·10m. passengers and 12·64m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Zagreb (Pleso), Split and Dubrovnik. The national carrier is Croatia Airlines. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Croatian-based carriers flew 9·6m. km, carrying 838,000 passengers (503,000 on international flights). In 2000 Zagreb handled 1,139,000 passengers (784,000 on international flights) and 5,300 tonnes of freight, Split handled 514,000 passengers (353,000 on international flights) and Dubrovnik 387,000 passengers (276,000 on international flights).

Shipping. The main port is Rijeka, which handled 8·9m. tonnes of freight in 2000 (2·6m. dry cargo). There were 168 ocean-going vessels in 1995, totalling 3·29m. DWT. 132 of the vessels (94·09% of tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. In 1998 total GRT was 896,000, including oil tankers 11,000 GRT. Provisional figures for 1998 show that 12·75m. passengers and 15·71m. tonnes of cargo were transported. In 1996 vessels totalling 86,065,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 81,757,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. The repair and expansion of the telecommunications industry has been made a high priority in the development process of the country. In 1999 Deutsche Telekom acquired a 35% stake in Croatian Telecom from the Croatian government. The telephone density (the number of lines per 1,000 population) rose from 17·2% in 1990 to 35% in 1998.

In 2000 there were 2,881,800 telephone main lines in use, equivalent to 360·4 per 1,000 persons, and 361,000 PCs (80·7 per 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 295,000 in 1999, and in 1997 there were 50,200 fax machines. The number of Internet users in Sept. 2001 was 480,000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,190 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1997 was 2,119 (45 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. At the 1991 census the population was 76·5% Roman Catholic, 11·1% Orthodox and 12·4% other (mainly Old Catholics and Muslims).

Education. In 1997–98 there were 980 pre-school institutions with 84,467 children and 6,201 childcare workers; 2,127 primary schools with 420,860 pupils and 25,802 teachers; 605 secondary schools with 199,515 pupils and 17,294 teachers. In 1998–99 there were 94 institutes of higher education with 91,810 students and 6,748 academic staff. In 2002 there were four universities (Zagreb, Osijek, Rijeka and Split). Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 98·2% (male, 99·3%; female, 97·1%).

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 5·3% of GNP.

Health. In 1994 there were 9,138 doctors and 1,798 dentists. There were 84 hospitals with 28,230 beds.

Welfare. The health insurance scheme covered 4,591,341 persons in 1994, of whom 1,354,146 were contributing and 755,644 were pensioners.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is controlled by the state Croatian Radio-Television (colour by PAL). In 1998 there were 108 radio and ten television stations. In 1997 there were 1·5m. radio and 1·22m. television receivers.

Cinema. There were 147 cinemas with a total attendance of 2·74m in 1998. Gross box office receipts in 1995 came to 75m. kuna. In 1998, three feature films made in 1998.

Press. In 1996 there were ten daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 515,000, at a rate of 115 per 1,000 inhabitants. An amendment of March 1996 to the criminal code makes it an offence for the press to defame the government. In 1996 a total of 1,718 book titles were published.

Tourism. The following are UNESCO World Heritage Sites: Diocletian's Palace, Split; the Plitvice Lakes National Park; the Episcopal Complex of Euphrasius' Basilica; the historical core of Trogir; Sibenik's cathedral.

In 2000 there were a total of 6·62m tourists (5·34m foreign tourists, including 920,000 Germans and 886,000 Italians) staying 38·41m. tourist nights. In 2002 there were 160,000 hotel beds and 306,000 beds in private accommodation. The tourist industry is now recovering following the 1991–95 war, although the events in neighbouring Yugoslavia in 1999 resulted in the number of tourists for the year declining to 4·75m. In 2000 tourism accounted for more than 15% of GDP. The industry directly employs about 10% of the population.

Festivals. Croatia has a number of cultural and traditional festivals, including the Zagreb Summer Festival (July–Aug.); the International Folk Dance Festival in Zagreb (July); Dubrovnik Summer Festival (July–Aug.); Split Summer (July–Aug.); Alka Festival (traditional medieval tilting), Sinj (Aug.).

Libraries. In 1995 there were 232 public libraries, one National library and 134 Higher Education libraries. They held a combined 12,683,000 volumes for 1,233,600 registered users.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cuba was a Spanish possession for four hundred years until sovereignty was relinquished in 1898 at the end of the Spanish-American War. Cuba became an independent republic in 1901. In 1933 Fulgencio Batista Zladivar led a successful military revolution. He ruled the country for most of the period up to 1959. A revolutionary movement, led by Dr Fidel Castro from 26 July 1953, was eventually successful and Batista fled the country on 1 Jan. 1959. Under Castro, Cuba's relationship with the USA deteriorated while relations with the USSR became closer. In Jan. 1961 the USA severed diplomatic relations after US business interests in Cuba had been expropriated without compensation. On 17 April an invasion force of émigrés and adventurers, encouraged by the USA, landed in Cuba but was defeated at the Bay of Pigs. At the end of 1961 Castro declared Cuba to be a Communist state. The US Navy imposed a blockade on Cuba from 22 Oct. until 22 Nov. 1962 to force the USSR to withdraw Soviet missile bases. Cuba continued to receive financial aid and technical advice from the USSR until the early 1990s when subsidies were suspended. This led to a 40% drop in GDP between 1989 and 1993. The USA has maintained an economic embargo against the island and relations between Cuba and the USA have remained embittered, although contact between the two countries has been growing in recent years. Starting from Jan. 2002 the Americans brought suspected al-Qaeda and Taliban prisoners from Afghanistan to the military prison at their naval base at Guantánamo Bay.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island of Cuba forms the largest and most westerly of the Greater Antilles group and lies 135 miles south of the tip of Florida, USA. The area is 110,860 sq. km, and comprises the island of Cuba (104,945 sq. km.); the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud, formerly the Isle of Pines; 2,200 sq. km); and some 1,600 small isles ('cays'; 3,715 sq. km). Population, census (1981), 9,723,605; 1998 estimate, 11·1m., giving a density of 100·5 per sq. km. In 1998, 77·1% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 11·51m.

The area, population and density of population of the 14 provinces and the special Municipality of the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud) were as follows (1998):

	Area sq. km	Population		Area sq. km.	Population
Ciudad de La Habana	727	2,192,300	Matanzas	11,669	654,500
Santiago de Cuba	6,343	1,027,900	Las Tunas	6,373	525,000
Holguín	9,105	1,024,900	Guantánamo	6,366	510,800
Villa Clara	8,069	833,400	Sancti Spíritus	6,737	458,800
Granma	8,452	827,600	Ciego de Avila	6,485	403,900
Camagüey	14,134	782,200	Cienfuegos	4,149	392,400
Pinar del Río	10,860	731,300
La Habana	5,671	696,200	Isla de la Juventud	2,199	78,700

The capital city, Havana, had a population in 1999 of 2,242,000. Other major cities (1997 population estimate in 1,000): Santiago de Cuba (435), Camagüey (301), Holguín (254), Santa Clara (209), Guantánamo (205), Bayamo (144), Las Tunas (134), Pinar del Río (133), Cienfuegos (130) and Matanzas (124).

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 150,871; deaths, 79,337; marriages, 57,300; divorces, 39,500; suicides (1996), 2,015. Rates, 1999: birth, 13·5 per 1,000 population; death, 6·4; marriage, 5·1; divorce, 3·5; suicide (1996), 18·3. Infant mortality rate, 1999, 6 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1995–99, 0·4%. Life expectancy in 1998 was 74·3 years for males and 78·2 for females. The fertility rate in 1999 was 1·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Situated in the sub-tropical zone, Cuba has a generally rainy climate, affected by the Gulf Stream and the N.E. Trades, although winters are comparatively dry after the heaviest rains in Sept. and Oct. Hurricanes are liable to occur between June and Nov. Havana, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,224 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Communist Constitution came into force on 24 Feb. 1976. It was amended in July 1992 to permit direct parliamentary elections and in June 2002 to make the country's socialist system 'irrevocable'.

Legislative power is vested in the National Assembly of People's Power, which meets twice a year and consists of 609 deputies elected for a five-year term by universal suffrage. Lists of candidates are drawn up by mass organizations (trade unions, etc.). The National Assembly elects a 31-member Council of State as its permanent organ. The Council of State's President, who is head of state and of government, nominates and leads a Council of Ministers approved by the National Assembly.

National Anthem. 'Al combate corred bayameses' ('Run, Bayamans, to the combat'); words and tune by P. Figueredo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 19 Jan. 2003. All 609 candidates were from the National Assembly of People's Power and received the requisite 50% of votes for election. No other parties are allowed.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Dr Fidel Castro Ruz (b. 1927) became President of the Council of State on 3 Dec. 1976; re-elected for five years on 24 Feb. 1998 and again on 6 March 2003. He is also First Secretary of the Cuban Communist Party, President of the Council of Ministers and C.-in-C. of the National Defence Council.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

First Vice-President of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers, Minister of the Revolutionary Armed Forces: Gen. Raúl Castro Ruz (Fidel Castro's younger brother and his designated successor).

Vice-Presidents of the Council of Ministers: Osmani Cienfuegos Gorriarán, José Ramón Fernández Álvárez, José Luis Rodríguez García (also Minister of Economy and Planning), Adolfo Díaz Suárez, Pedro Miret Prieto. Secretary of the Council of Ministers: Carlos Lage Dávila.

Minister of Agriculture: Alfredo Jordán Morales. Auditing and Control: Lina Olinda Pedraza Rodríguez. Basic Industries: Marcos Portal León. Construction: Fidel Figueroa de la Paz. Culture: Abel Prieto Jiménez. Domestic Trade: Barbara Castillo Cuesta. Education: Luis Gómez Gutiérrez. Finance and Prices: Manuel Millares Rodríguez. Fishing Industry: Alfredo López Valdes. Food Industry: Alejandro Roca Iglesias. Foreign Investment and Economic Co-operation: Marta Lomas Morales. Foreign Relations: Felipe Pérez Roque. Foreign Trade: Raúl de la Nuez. Higher Education: Fernando Vecino Alegret. Information Science and Communications: Ignacio González Planas. Interior: Gen. Abelardo Colomé Ibarra. Justice: Roberto Díaz Sotolongo. Labour and Social Security: Alfredo Morales Cartaya. Light Industry: Jesús Pérez Othón. Public Health: Damodar Peña Pentón. Science, Technology and Environment: Rosa Elena Simeón Negrín. Steelworking Industry: Fernando Acosta Santana. Sugar Industry: Div. Gen. Ulises Rosales del Toro. Tourism: Ibrahim Ferradaz. Transport: Alvaro Perez Morales. Ministers without Portfolio: Wilfredo López Rodríguez; Ricardo Cabrisas Ruiz.

The Congress of the Cuban Communist Party (PCC) elects a Central Committee of 225 members, which in turn appoints a Political Bureau comprising 26 members.

DEFENCE

The National Defence Council is headed by the president of the republic. Conscription is for two years.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$735m. (US$66 per capita), representing 4·5% of GDP. Defence expenditure in 1985 was US$2,366m.

Army. The strength was estimated at 45,000 (including conscripts and Ready Reservists) in 1999. Border Guard and State Security forces total 26,500. The Territorial Militia is estimated at 1m. (reservists), all armed. In addition there is a Youth Labour Army of 65,000 and a Civil Defence Force of 50,000.

Navy. Naval combatants, all ex-Soviet, include one diesel submarine and two frigates. Personnel in 1999 totalled about 5,000 conscripts including about 550 marines. Main bases are at Cienfuegos, Havana and Mariel. The USA still occupies the Guantánamo naval base.

Air Force. The Air Force has been extensively re-equipped with aircraft supplied by USSR and in 1999 had a strength of some 10,000 and about 130 combat aircraft of which only around 25 are thought to be operational. They include MiG-29, MiG-23 and MiG-21 jet fighters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cuba is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, LAIA, ACS, Antarctic Treaty and SELA (Latin American Economic System).

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 6·4% of GDP in 1998, industry 36·9% and services 56·7%.

Overview. After the economic crisis of the early 1990s, growth has picked up through the legalization of the use of the US dollar and the promotion of dollar-based tourism with a parallel dollar economy. Over 50% of the population now have access to dollars, but there remains 50% who have to survive in the more limited pesos economy.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Cuban peso (CUP) of 100 centavos, which is not convertible, although an official exchange rate is announced daily reflecting any changes in the strength of the US dollar. The US dollar has been legal tender since 1993. 9,710m. pesos were in circulation in 1998. Inflation was negative in 1999, at –0·5%.

Budget. The 1998 budget envisaged revenue of 12,502bn. pesos and expenditure of 13,061bn. pesos. Hard-currency earners and the self-employed became liable to a 10–50% income tax in Nov. 1995.

Performance. A combination of poor commodity export prices and a poor sugar harvest slowed down Cuba's economic growth in 1998 to 1·2%, below the government's original target of 2·5–3·5%. In 1999, however, growth was an impressive 6·2%. GDP in 1997 was estimated to be only 80% of that in 1984.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Cuba (Governor, Francisco Soberón Valdés) replaced the National Bank of Cuba as the central bank in June 1997. On 14 Oct. 1960 all banks were nationalized. Changes to the banking structure beginning in 1996 divested the National Bank of its commercial functions, and created new commercial and investment institutions. There were seven commercial banks in March 1999 and nine local non-banking financial institutions. In addition, 17 foreign financial institutions, including 14 foreign banks, had representative offices in 1999; foreign branches are not permitted. All insurance business was nationalized in Jan. 1964. A National Savings Bank was established in 1983.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legally compulsory, but the American and old Spanish systems are much used. The sugar industry uses the Spanish long ton (1·03 tonnes) and short ton (0·92 tonne). Cuba sugar sack = 329·59 lb or 149·49 kg. Land is measured in caballerías (of 13·4 ha or 33 acres).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Cuba's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 2·2 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 4m. kW in 1997. Production was 14·1bn. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita in 1997 was 1,273 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production (1998), 1,678,000 tonnes. Raw gas production (1998), 120m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Iron ore abounds, with deposits estimated at 3,500m. tonnes. Output of copper concentrate (1997) was 1,000 tonnes; refractory chrome (1987), 52,400 tonnes. Other minerals are nickel (1999, 64,407 tonnes), cobalt, silica and barytes. Nickel is Cuba's second largest foreign exchange earner, after tourism. Gold and silver are also worked. Salt output in 1998 was 180,000 tonnes. Sulphuric acid production (1989), 381,500 tonnes.

Agriculture. In 1959 all land over 30 caballerías was nationalized and eventually turned into state farms. In 1998 there were 3·63m. ha of arable land and 0·84m. ha of permanent crops. Under legislation of 1993, state farms were re-organized as 'units of basic co-operative production'. Unit workers select their own managers, and are paid an advance on earnings. 294,700 persons were employed in these units in 1995. In 1963 private holdings were reduced to a maximum of 5 caballerías. In 1994 farmers were permitted to trade on free market principles after state delivery quotas had been met.

The most important product is sugar and its by-products, but in 1998 the harvest suffered a series of weather disasters reducing production to 3·2m. tonnes (3·4m. tonnes in 1995–96), the smallest crop for 50 years. By 2000 production had risen again to 3·6m. tonnes. Production of other important crops in 2000 was (in 1,000 tonnes): oranges, 441; rice, 369; potatoes, 344; plantains, 329; grapefruit and pomelos, 233; cassava, 210; sweet potatoes, 195; maize, 185; bananas, 133; tomatoes, 129.

In 2000 livestock included 4·7m. cattle; 2·8m. pigs; 450,000 horses; 310,000 sheep; 140,000 goats; 15m. chickens.

Forestry. Cuba had 1·84m. ha of forests in 1995, representing 16·8% of the land area (1·96m. ha and 17·8% in 1990). These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar boxes, and mahogany is exported. In 1999, 1·59m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. Fishing is the third most important export industry, after sugar and nickel. The total catch was 67,262 tonnes in 1999, of which 62,638 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The gross value of the manufacturing industry in 1998 was 4,290·7m. pesos. All industrial enterprises had been state-controlled, but in 1995 the economy was officially stated to comprise state property, commercial property based on activity by state enterprises, joint co-operative and private property. 1998 production (in 1,000 tonnes) was: sugar, 3,291·3; cement, 1,713·4; steel, 278·0; complete fertilizers, 156·7; tobacco, 40·0; cotton yarn, 4·5. Also in 1998, petroleum, 1,678·2 tonnes; charcoal, 87m. tonnes; cigars, 160m. units; textiles, 54m. sq. metres. The sugar industry, the backbone of the country's economy for much of its history, is being restructured. Up to half of Cuba's sugar mills are facing closure.

Labour. In 1998 the labour force was 6,621,522, with 3,753,600 in employment. Self-employment was legalized in 1993. Under legislation of Sept. 1994 employees made redundant must be assigned to other jobs or to strategic social or economic tasks; failing this, they are paid 60% of former salary.

Trade Unions. The Workers' Central Union of Cuba groups 23 unions.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt to non-communist countries was US$11,208m. in 1998. Since July 1992 foreign investment has been permitted in selected state enterprises, and Cuban companies have been able to import and export without seeking government permission. Foreign ownership is recognized in joint ventures. A free-trade zone opened at Havana in 1993. In 1994 the productive, real estate and service sectors were opened to foreign investment. Legislation of 1995 opened all sectors of the economy to foreign investment except defence, education and health services. 100% foreign-owned investments and investments in property are now permitted.

The Helms-Burton Law of March 1996 gives US nationals the right to sue foreign companies investing in Cuban estate expropriated by the Cuban government.

Imports and Exports. In 1997 exports fell by 11% while imports grew by 6%. In 1998 exports totalled US$1,616m., and imports US$4,084m. The principal exports are sugar, minerals, tobacco, fish and coffee. Sugar accounts for more than half of Cuba's export revenues, but revenues have been gradually declining are now only a tenth of the 1990 total.

In 1998 the chief export markets (as % of total) were: Russia, 17·6; Canada, 14·0; Netherlands, 13·2; Spain, 6·2. The chief import sources (as % of total) were: Spain, 8·1; Russia, 6·9; Canada, 6·1; France, 4·5.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were some 60,858 km of roads, of which 29,820 km were paved. Vehicles in use in 1997 included 172,500 passenger cars (15·6 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 156,600 trucks and vans. There were 1,309 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1997.

Rail. There were (1994) 4,807 km of public railway (1,435 mm gauge), of which 147 km was electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 1996 came to 2,156m. and freight tonne-km to 871m. In addition, the large sugar estates have 7,773 km of lines in total on 1,435 mm, 914 mm and 760 mm gauges.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Havana (Jose Martí). The state airline Cubana operates all services internally, and in 1998 had international flights from Havana to Barcelona, Berlin, Bogotá, Brussels, Buenos Aires, Cancún, Caracas, Cologne, Copenhagen, Curaçao, Fort de France, Frankfurt, Guayaquil, Istanbul, Kingston, Las Palmas, Lima, Lisbon, London, Madrid, Manchester, Maracaibo, Mendoza, Mexico City, Montego Bay, Montreal, Moscow, Paris, Pointe-à-Pitre, Quito, Rio de Janeiro, Rome, St Maarten, San José (Costa Rica), Santa Cruz, Santiago, Santiago de Compostela, Santo Domingo, São Paulo, Toronto and Vitoria. Cubana flew 26·2m. km in 1999 and carried 1,259,000 passengers (683,000 on international flights). In 2000 Havana Jose Martí International handled 2,425,000 passengers (2,001,200 on international flights) and 20,526 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. There are 11 ports, the largest being Havana, Cienfuegos and Mariel. The merchant marine in 1998 totalled 158,000 GRT, of which 8,000 GRT were oil tankers.

Telecommunications. There were 488,600 telephone main lines in 2000 (43·6 for every 1,000 persons). In 1999 there were 80,000 PCs in use (7·2 for every 1,000 persons) and mobile phone subscribers numbered 5,100; in 1995 there were 400 fax machines. There were 60,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1993 there were 1,545 post offices, or one for every 7,150 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court in Havana and seven regional courts of appeal. The provinces are divided into judicial districts, with courts for civil and criminal actions, and municipal courts for minor offences. The civil code guarantees aliens the same property and personal rights as those enjoyed by nationals.

The 1959 Agrarian Reform Law and the Urban Reform Law passed on 14 Oct. 1960 have placed certain restrictions on both. Revolutionary Summary Tribunals have wide powers.

The death penalty is still in force and was used in April 2003. The population in penal institutions in 1997 was approximately 33,000 (300 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Religious liberty was constitutionally guaranteed in July 1992. 60% of the population were estimated to be Roman Catholics in 1996. In 1994 Cardinal Jaime Ortega (b. 1936) was nominated Primate by the Pope. In 2002 there were 180 Roman Catholic priests, approximately half of them foreign nationals. There is a seminary in Havana which had 61 students in 1996. There is a bishop of the American Episcopal Church in Havana; there are congregations of Methodists in Havana and in the provinces as well as Baptists and other denominations. Cults of African origin still persist.

Education. Education is compulsory (between the ages of 6 and 14), free and universal. In 1996–97 there were 154,520 pre-primary pupils with 6,970 teachers; 9,926 primary schools with 92,820 teachers for 1·09m. pupils; and 712,897 secondary level pupils with 70,628 teachers. There were 122,346 students at university level.

There are four universities, and ten teacher training, two agricultural, four medical and ten other higher educational institutions.

The adult literacy rate was 96·4% in 1998 (96·5% among males and 96·3% among females).

Health. In 1992 there were 46,860 doctors, 8,057 dentists, 73,943 nurses and (1993) 244 hospitals. There were 65 beds per 10,000 population in 1993.

Free medical services are provided by the state polyclinics, though a few doctors still have private practices.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the state-controlled Instituto Cubano de Radio y Televisión. There are five national radio networks, provincial and local stations and an external service, Radio Habana (Spanish, Arabic, Creole, English, Esperanto, French, Guaraní, Portuguese and Quechua). There are two TV channels (colour by NTSC). There were 3·9m. radio receivers and 2·64m. TV sets in 1997.

Press. There were (1998) 17 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1·3m.

Tourism. Tourism is Cuba's largest foreign exchange earner, and for some years was growing by nearly 20% per year. Ironically, with Cuba's sympathy for rebel causes, the country was one of the most seriously affected by the huge drop in visitors following the attacks on New York and Washington of 11 Sept. 2001. There were 1,561,000 foreign tourists in 1999. Total receipts from tourism in 1999 amounted to US$1,714m., more than the total exports of goods.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1193 the island became a Frankish kingdom, in 1489 a Venetian dependency, and in 1751 was conquered by the Turks. In 1914 the island was annexed by Great Britain and on 1 May 1925 it was given the status of a Crown Colony. In the 1930s the Greek Cypriots began to agitate for ENOSIS (Union with Greece). In 1955 they started a guerrilla movement (EOKA) against the British, with Archbishop Makarios, the head of the Greek Orthodox Church in Cyprus, as leader. In 1959 the Greek and Turkish Cypriots agreed on a constitution for an independent Cyprus and Makarios was elected President. On 16 June 1960 Cyprus became an independent state. In Dec. 1963 the Turkish Cypriots withdrew from the government. Fighting between Turkish and Greek Cypriots led to a UN peacekeeping force being sent in. Turkey invaded the island on 20 July 1974, eventually occupying the northern part. 0·2m. Greek Cypriots fled to live as refugees in the south. In 1975 a Turkish Cypriot Federated State was proclaimed. Rauf Denktaş was appointed President. In 1983 the Turkish state unilaterally proclaimed itself the ‘Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus’ (TRNC). In 1991 the UN rejected Rauf Denktaş’ demands for the recognition of sovereignty for the TRNC, including a right to secession. In 1998 a proposal by Rauf Denktaş that the Greek and Turkish communities should join in a federation that recognizes ‘the equal and sovereign status of Cyprus’ Greek and Turkish parts’ was rejected by the Greek and Cypriot governments. Greece is threatening to block progress on Turkey’s application for EU membership until the Cyprus question is resolved. In 2002 Cyprus was nominated as one of ten countries eligible for EU membership in 2004, although the TRNC will only be accepted if UN-brokered talks to reunify the country succeed. Otherwise the south will accede alone. Turkey has warned that it might annexe north Cyprus if the Greek Cypriot south is admitted to the EU. In Nov. 2002 the UN presented a peace plan to the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders for a ‘common’ state with two ‘component’ states, along the lines of Switzerland and its cantons. In March 2003 UN-brokered talks to pave the way for the reunification of Cyprus collapsed. As a result it is likely that only the southern, Greek Cypriot part of the island will join the European Union in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island lies in the Mediterranean, about 60 km off the south coast of Turkey and 90 km off the coast of Syria. Area, 3,572 sq. miles (9,251 sq. km). The Turkish-occupied area is 3,335 sq. km. Population by ethnic group:

Ethnic group	1960 census	1973 census	1992	2000
Greek Cypriot	452,291	498,511	599,200	647,100
Turkish Cypriot	104,942	116,000	94,500	87,800
Others	16,333	17,267	20,000	24,200
Total	573,566	631,778	713,700	759,100

Estimated population, 2000, 759,100; density, 82 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 841,000.

70·1% of the population lived in urban areas in 2000. Principal towns with populations (2000 estimate): Nicosia (the capital), 199,100; Limassol, 159,800; Larnaca, 70,500; Paphos, 40,900.

As a result of the Turkish occupation of the northern part of Cyprus, 0·2m. Greek Cypriots were displaced and forced to find refuge in the south. The urban centres of Famagusta, Kyrenia and Morphou were completely evacuated. See below for details on the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus'. (The 'TRNC' was unilaterally declared as a 'state' in 1983 in the area of the Republic of Cyprus, which has been under Turkish occupation since 1974, when Turkish forces invaded the island. The establishment of the 'TRNC' was declared illegal by UN Security Resolutions 541/83 and 550/84. The 'TRNC' is not recognized by any country in the world except Turkey). Nicosia is a divided city, with the UN-patrolled Green Line passing through it.

Greek and Turkish are official languages. English is widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000 births, 9,557; deaths, 6,059; marriages, 9,775; divorces, 1,337. Rates, 2000 (per 1,000 population): birth, 12·6; death, 8·0; marriage, 12·6; divorce, 1·8. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 75·7 years for males and 80·2 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·5%; infant mortality, 2000, 5·6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2000, 1·8 children per woman. In 2000 the average age of first marriage was 28·9 years for men and 26·1 years for women.

CLIMATE

The climate is Mediterranean, with very hot, dry summers and variable winters. Maximum temperatures may reach 112°F (44·5°C) in July and Aug., but minimum figures may fall to 22°F (–5·5°C) in the mountains in winter, when snow is experienced. Rainfall is generally between 10" and 27" (250 and 675 mm) and occurs mainly in the winter months, but it may reach 48" (1,200 mm) in the Troodos mountains. Nicosia, Jan. 50°F (10·0°C), July 83°F (28·3°C). Annual rainfall 19·6" (500 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1960 Constitution executive power is vested in a President elected for a 5-year term by universal suffrage, and exercised through a Council of Ministers appointed by him or her. The House of Representatives exercises legislative power. It is elected by universal suffrage for five-year terms, and consists of 80 members, of whom 56 are elected by the Greek Cypriot and 24 by the Turkish Cypriot community. Voting is compulsory, and is by preferential vote in a proportional representation system with reallocation of votes at national level. As from Dec. 1963 the Turkish Cypriot members have ceased to attend.

National Anthem. 'Segnoriso apo tin kopsi' ('Always shall I know you'); words by D. Solomos, tune by N. Mantzaros.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 27 May 2001. The Communist Progressive Party of the Working People won 34·7% of the vote and 20 seats, the Democratic Rally won 34·0% and 19 seats, the Democratic Party 14·8% and 9 seats and the Social Democrats Movement 6·5% and 4 seats. Four other parties won a single seat each. The electorate was 467,182 and turn-out 91·8%. For the first time in a parliamentary election those aged 18 to 21 were able to vote.

Presidential elections held on 16 Feb. 2003 were won by Tassos Papadopoulos, with 51·5% of the vote, against 38·8% for incumbent Glafcos Clerides and 6·6% for Alekos Markidis. Turn-out was 95·9%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Tassos Papadopoulos; b. 1934 (Democratic Party; sworn in on 28 Feb. 2003).

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 26 months. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$453m. (US$577 per capita), representing 4·8% of GDP. At the end of 1998 the President cancelled a US$450m. contract with Russia for the deployment of S-300 anti-aircraft missiles on the island and negotiated to place them on Crete instead.

National Guard. Total strength (1998) 10,000 (8,700 conscripts). There is also a paramilitary force of 500 armed police.

There are two British bases (Army and Royal Air Force) and some 3,200 personnel. Greek (1,250) and UN peacekeeping (1,228; UNFICY) forces are also stationed on the island.

There are approximately 35,000 Turkish troops stationed in the occupied area of Cyprus. The Turkish Cypriot army amounts to 5,000 troops, with 26,000 reservists and a paramilitary armed police of approximately 150.

Navy. The Maritime wing of the National Guard operates two vessels. In the Turkish-occupied area of Cyprus the Coast Guard operates five patrol craft.

Air Force. The Air Wing of the National Guard operates a handful of aircraft and helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cyprus is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, Council of Europe, OSCE and IOM. In March 1998 Cyprus entered into accession negotiations with the EU, and is scheduled to become a member on 1 May 2004.

ECONOMY

Currency. The Cyprus pound (CYP) is divided into 100 cents. Inflation was 4·1% in 2000, but only 2·1% in 2001. In June 2002 gold reserves were 465,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves were US$2,539m. In Dec. 2001 total money supply was £C1,081m.

Budget. Revenue in 2000 (1999) was £C1·87bn. (£C1·59bn.) and expenditure £C2·02bn. (£C1·79bn.). Main sources of revenue in 2000 (in £C1m.) were: direct taxes, 558·1; indirect taxes, 653·5; social security contributions, 244·0.

Main divisions of expenditure in 2000 (in £C1m.): wages and salaries, 526·3; social security payments, 304·0; education, 233·7; goods and services, 160·9; health, 127·6; pensions and gratuities, 112·0; commodity subsidies, 79·5.

Development expenditure for 2000 (in £C1m.) included 42·3 for roads, 16·9 for water development, 12·7 for rural development and 11·9 for agriculture, forests and fisheries.

The outstanding domestic debt at 31 Dec. 2000 was £C2,457·7m. and the foreign debt was £C825·6m.

VAT is 15%.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·1% in 2000 and 4·5% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$9·1bn. GDP per capita in 2000 was 83% of the European Union average, the highest percentage of any of the EU candidate countries.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Cyprus, established in 1963, is the bank of issue. It regulates money supply, credit and foreign exchange and supervises the banking system. The Governor is Christodoulos Christodoulou.

In 1997 there were nine commercial banks (three foreign) and three specialized banks (co-operative, development and mortgage). The leading banks are Bank of Cyprus and Cyprus Popular Bank.

At 31 Dec. 1997 total deposits in banks were £C6,483m. Cyprus has a fast-growing offshore sector—in 2000 there were more than 40,000 offshore companies registered on the island.

There is a stock exchange, which opened in 1996 and which in 1999 recorded spectacular gains of around 700%.

Weights and Measures. The metric (SI) system was introduced in 1986 and is now widely applied.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in Cyprus were the equivalent of 7·9 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity is 997,300 kW. Production in 2000 was 3,370m. kWh and consumption 3,011m. kWh.

Water. In 1997, £C16·6m. was spent on water dams, water supplies, hydrological research and geophysical surveys. Existing dams had (1997) a capacity of 299m. cu. metres.

Minerals. The principal minerals extracted in 2000 were (in tonnes): gypsum, 138,000; bentonite, 125,000; umber and other ochres, 12,000; copper, 5,000.

Agriculture. 28% of the government-controlled area is cultivated. There were 93,400 ha of arable land in 2000 and 41,800 ha of permanent crops. About 8·7% (2000) of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture.

Chief agricultural products in 2000 (1,000 tonnes): milk, 193·8; citrus fruit, 127·2; potatoes, 117·0; grapes, 108·0; meat, 100·6; cereals (wheat and barley), 47·6; fresh fruit, 37·3; olives, 21·0; carrots, 1·9; other vegetables, 134·0; eggs, 14·0m. dozen.

Livestock in 2000: cattle, 54,200; sheep, 246,000; goats, 378,600; pigs, 408,400; poultry, 3,660,000.

Forestry. Total forest area in 1995 was 1,400 sq. km (15·2% of the land area). In 2000, 25,000 cu. metres of timber were produced.

Fisheries. The total catch in 2000 amounted to 3,535 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

The most important industries in 2000 were: food, beverages and tobacco, textiles, wearing apparel and leather, chemicals and chemical petroleum, rubber and plastic products, metal products, machinery and equipment, wood and wood products including furniture. Manufacturing industry in 2000 contributed about 11·0% of the GDP.

Labour. Out of 302,700 people in employment in 2000, 54,200 were in wholesale and retail trade, 36,700 in manufacturing and 33,000 in hotels and restaurants. The unemployment rate was 3·9% at the end of 2001, down from 4·9% at the end of 2000.

Trade Unions. About 80% of the workforce is organized and the majority of workers belong either to the Pancyprian Federation of Labour or the Cyprus Workers Confederation.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Trade figures for calendar years were (in £C1,000):

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports[1]	1,899,339	1,904,738	1,970,905	2,401,826

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 the total length of roads in the government-controlled area was 11,141 km. The asphalted roads maintained by the Ministry of Communications and Works (Public Works Department) by the end of 2000 totalled 2,359 km. Construction of new asphalted roads in 2000 totalled 240 km. In 2000 there were 267,589 passenger cars, 2,949 buses and coaches, 114,666 trucks and vans and 43,315 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 98 deaths as a result of road accidents in 2001.

The area controlled by the government of the Republic and that controlled by the 'TRNC' are now served by separate transport systems, and there are no services linking the two areas.

Civil Aviation. Nicosia airport has been closed since the Turkish invasion in 1974. It is situated in the UN controlled buffer zone. There are international airports at Larnaca (the main airport) and Paphos. In 2000, 6,125,211 passengers and 33,477 tonnes of commercial freight went through these airports. Both are set to be expanded with a view to increasing annual capacity by 3m. In 2000 Larnaca handled 4,745,249 passengers (all on international flights) and 32,077 tonnes of freight. In 2000 Paphos handled 1,379,962 passengers (all on international flights) and 1,396 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is Cyprus Airways, which is 69·62% state-owned. Cyprus Airways flew 21·1m. km in 2000, carrying 1,452,608 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. The two main ports are Limassol and Larnaca. In 2000, 5,289 ships of 20,570,975 net registered tons entered Cyprus ports carrying 6,901,088 tonnes of cargo from, to and via Cyprus. In 2000 the merchant marine totalled 27·2m. GRT, including oil tankers 5·35m. GRT. The fleet consisted of 1,735 vessels (185 tankers). In 2000 vessels totalling 20,570,975 NRT entered ports. The port in Famagusta has been closed to international traffic since the Turkish invasion in 1974.

Telecommunications. Main telephone lines numbered 440,100 in 2000 (647·2 for every 1,000 inhabitants) and there were 150,000 PCs in use (220·6 per 1,000 persons). There were 218,000 mobile phone subscribers and 150,000 Internet users in Dec. 2001. In 1995 there were 7,000 fax machines. The Cyprus Telecommunications Authority provides telephone and data transmission services nationally, and to 253 countries automatically. The European Union is insisting on the privatization of the telecommunications sector as a condition of accession.

Postal Services. In 2000 there were 51 post offices and 992 postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court, Assize Courts and District Courts. The Supreme Court is composed of 13 judges, one of whom is the President of the Court. The Assize Courts have unlimited criminal jurisdiction, and may order the payment of compensation up to £C3,000. The District Courts exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction, the extent of which varies with the composition of the Bench.

A Supreme Council of Judicature, consisting of the President and Judges of the Supreme Court, is entrusted with the appointment, promotion, transfers, termination of appointment and disciplinary control over all judicial officers, other than the Judges of the Supreme Court. The Attorney-General (Alecos Markides) is head of the independent Law Office and legal advisor to the President and his Ministers.

The population in penal institutions in 1996 was 235 (35 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 2002.

Religion. The Greek Cypriots are Greek Orthodox Christians, and the Turkish Cypriots are Muslims (mostly Sunnis of the Hanafi sect). There are also small groups of the Armenian Apostolic Church, Roman Catholics (Maronites and Latin Rite) and Protestants (mainly Anglicans). See also CYPRUS: Territory and Population.

Education. Greek-Cypriot Education. Elementary education is compulsory and is provided free in six grades to children between 5 years 8 months and 11 years 8 months. There are also schools for the deaf and blind, and eight schools for handicapped children. In 1999–2000 the Ministry of Education and Culture ran 223 kindergartens for children in the age group 2½–5; there were also 115 communal and 89 private kindergartens. There were 366 primary schools with 63,715 pupils and 3,711 teachers in 1999–2000.

Secondary education is also free and attendance for the first cycle is compulsory. The secondary school is six years—three years at the gymnasium followed by three years at the lykeion (lyceum) or three years at one of the technical schools which provide technical and vocational education for industry. In 1999–2000 there were 130 secondary schools with 5,313 teachers and 69,043 pupils.

Post-secondary education is provided at seven public institutions: the University of Cyprus, which admitted its first students in Sept. 1992 and had 2,589 students by 1999–2000; the Higher Technical Institute, which provides courses lasting three to four years for technicians in civil, electrical, mechanical and marine engineering; a two-year Forestry College (administered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Natural Resources and Environment); the Higher Hotel Institute (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the Mediterranean Institute of Management (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the School of Nursing (Ministry of Health) which runs courses lasting two to three years; the Cyprus Police Academy which provides a three-year training programme.

There are also various public and private institutions which provide courses at various levels. These include the Apprenticeship Training Scheme and Evening Technical Classes, and other vocational and technical courses organized by the Industrial Training Authority.

In 1999 the adult literacy rate was 96·9% (98·7% among males, 95·1% among females). The percentage of the population aged 20 years and over that has attended school was 95·9% in 1997.

Health. In 2000 there were 1,800 doctors, 619 dentists, 2,931 nurses and 584 pharmacists. There were 115 hospitals and clinics (excluding psychiatric hospitals) in 2000.

Welfare. The administration of social security services is in the hands of the Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance, with the Ministry of Health providing medical services through public clinics and hospitals on a means test. The exception is for medical treatment for employment accidents, which is given free to all insured employees and financed by the Social Insurance Scheme.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation has three radio channels and broadcasts mainly in Greek, but also in Turkish, English and Armenian. The Corporation also broadcasts on two TV channels (colour by SECAM H). A law of June 1990 permits the operation of commercial radio and TV stations. In 1994 there were two independent radio stations broadcasting nationwide and numerous radio stations broadcasting locally. There were also two private TV stations operating and one private Pay-TV. There are also two foreign broadcasting stations. In 1997 there were 310,000 radio and 248,000 TV sets.

Cinema. In the government-controlled area there were 24 cinemas and 28 screens in 1999. In 1999 gross box office receipts came to £C2·6m.

Press. In 2000 there were eight daily newspapers with a circulation of 87,000; and 38 other newspapers with a circulation of 200,000.

Tourism. There were 2,696,732 tourist arrivals in 2001, an increase of 0·4% on 2000. Visitors from the UK account for some 50% of all tourist arrivals. Tourist spending in 2001 totalled £C1,277m.

Libraries. In 1995 there were 117 public libraries, 1 National library and 1 non-specialized library, holding a combined 454,000 volumes for 30,051 registered users.

Museums and Galleries. In 1999 there were 29 museums which received 764,319 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Czech tribe rose to dominance in Bohemia in the 8th century. In 1212 Otakar I received a hereditary kingship from the Holy Roman Emperor. Wenceslas II was elected king of Poland in 1300. Wenceslas was succeeded in 1310 by John of Luxemburg whose son, Charles (1346–78), became Holy Roman Emperor as Charles IV in 1355. Bohemia attained a high degree of prosperity and civilization at this time. In 1527 the diet elected the Hapsburg Ferdinand as king. The Hapsburgs gradually encroached upon Czech rights and religious freedom. The Czech nobility were replaced by German-speaking adventurers; the burgesses lost their rights; burdens were piled on to the peasantry; and Catholicism was enforced.

The increasingly political aspirations of Czech nationalists were not for the resuscitation of the old Bohemia but for the formation of a new Czechoslovakia, an idea fostered by Thomáš Masaryk. Male suffrage was granted in 1906 but the chamber of deputies was constantly bypassed by the emperor. The First World War brought a complete estrangement between Czech and German sectors of the population, the latter supporting the German war effort. Masaryk and other leaders went into exile. In 1918 he secured the support of US president Woodrow Wilson for Czech and Slovak unity (see Slovakia). Austria accepted President Wilson's terms on 27 Oct. 1918 and the next day a republic was proclaimed with Masaryk as president and Edvard Beneš as foreign minister. On 29 Oct. the Slovak leaders declared Slovakia part of the Czechoslovak nation. Czechoslovakia developed into a prosperous democracy but was hard hit by the economic depression of the 1930s. Nationalist agitation amongst the Sudeten Germans was fomented by Hitler. Czechoslovakia relied on France for her defence against German aggression but France sided with Britain in the Munich agreement of 29 Sept. 1938 which stipulated that all districts with a German population of more than 50% should be ceded to Germany. Beneš resigned the presidency and went into exile. On 14 March 1939 Slovakia declared itself independent under German hegemony, and the next day the German army occupied the rest of the country. Czechoslovaks who managed to escape joined Beneš to form a government in exile. Liberation by the Soviet Army and US Forces was completed by May 1945 and territories taken by Germans, Poles and Hungarians were restored to Czechoslovak sovereignty. Elections were held in May 1946, at which the Communist Party obtained about 38% of the votes. A coalition government under a Communist Prime Minister, Klement Gottwald, remained in power until 20 Feb. 1948, when a predominantly Communist government was formed by Gottwald. In May elections resulted in an 89% majority for the government, and President Beneš resigned.

In 1968 pressure for liberalization culminated in the overthrow of the Stalinist leader, Antonín Novotný. Under Alexander Dubček's leadership the 'Prague Spring' began to take shape, with an 'Action Programme' of far-reaching reforms. Soviet pressure to abandon this programme was exerted between May and Aug. 1968, when Warsaw Pact forces occupied Czechoslovakia.

Mass demonstrations demanding political reform began in Nov. 1989. On 30 Nov. the Federal Assembly abolished the Communist Party's sole right to govern. On 10 Dec. Gustáv Husák resigned as President and was replaced by Václav Havel.

On 25 Nov. 1992 the Federal Assembly voted the dissolution of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic. Economic property was divided in accordance with a federal law of 13 Nov. 1992. Government real estate became the property of the republic in which it was located. Other property was divided by specially constituted commissions in the proportion of two (Czech Republic) to one (Slovakia) on the basis of population size. Czechoslovakia split into the Czech Republic and Slovakia on 1 Jan. 1993.

In 1998 a new minority Social Democratic government was sworn in, headed by Miloš Zeman, the country's first left-wing prime minister since the fall of socialism. The Czech Republic joined NATO in 1999 and is scheduled to join the EU in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Czech Republic is bounded in the west by Germany, north by Poland, east by Slovakia and south by Austria. Minor exchanges of territory to straighten their mutual border were agreed between the Czech Republic and Slovakia on 4 Jan. 1996, but the Czech parliament refused to ratify them on 24 April 1996. Its area is 78,864 sq. km. At the 2001 census (provisional) the population was 10,292,933 (51·2% female); density, 130·5 per sq. km. In 1999, 74·7% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 10·14m.

There are 14 administrative regions (Kraj), one of which is the capital, Prague (Praha).

Region	Chief city	Area in sq. km	Population 2001 census (provisional)
Brněnský	Brno	7,067	1,133,916

Olomouc	104	Pardubice	93	Jihlava	53

[1]2000 figure.

Prague: Dating back to 870 with the foundation of Prague Castle, Prague lies at the centre of Bohemia. Early in the 19th century it acquired the name of the 'City of 100 Spires', the latest estimate being 500 spires and towers. In 1784 Emperor Joseph II merged the four historic towns (Old Town, New Town, Lesser Town and Hradčany) into one unified Capital City of Prague.

At the 1991 census 81·2% of the population was Czech, 13·2% Moravian and 3·1% Slovak. There were also (in 1,000): Poles, 59; Germans, 48; Silesians, 44; Roma (Gypsies), 34; Hungarians, 21.

The official language is Czech.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 89,471; deaths, 109,768; marriages, 53,523; divorces, 23,657. Rates (per 1,000 population), 1999: birth, 8·7; death, 10·7; marriage, 5·2; divorce, 2·3. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 71·2 years for males and 78·0 years for females. In 1997 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·0%. Infant mortality, 1999, 4·6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A humid continental climate, with warm summers and cold winters. Precipitation is generally greater in summer, with thunderstorms. Autumn, with dry clear weather, and spring, which is damp, are each of short duration. Prague, Jan. 29·5°F (–1·5°C), July 67°F (19·4°C). Annual rainfall 19·3" (483 mm). Brno, Jan. 31°F (–0·6°C), July 67°F (19·4°C). Annual rainfall 21" (525 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1 Jan. 1993 provides for a parliament comprising a 200-member Chamber of Deputies, elected for four-year terms by proportional representation, and an 81-member Senate elected for six-year terms in single-member districts, 27 senators being elected every two years. The main function of the Senate is to scrutinize proposed legislation. Senators must be at least 40 years of age, and are elected on a first-past-the-post basis, with a run-off in constituencies where no candidate wins more than half the votes cast. For the House of Representatives there is a 5% threshold; votes for parties failing to surmount this are redistributed on the basis of results in each of the eight electoral districts.

There is a Constitutional Court at Brno, whose 15 members are nominated by the President and approved by the Senate for ten-year terms.

The President of the Republic is elected for a five-year term by both chambers of parliament. He or she must be at least 40 years of age. The President names the Prime Minister at the suggestion of the Speaker.

National Anthem. 'Kde domov můj?' ('Where is my homeland?'); words by J. K. Tyl, tune by F. J. Škroup.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Former prime minister Václav Klaus (Civic Democratic Party/ODS) was elected president on 28 Feb. 2003 by parliament. He won the lower house 115–81 over Jan Sokol (Czech Social Democratic Party), but Sokol won the Senate 47–32. A second round was also inconclusive. In the third round, in which votes from both chambers were counted together, Klaus won a majority with 142 votes against 124 for Sokol. Previous attempts to elect a president on 15 Jan. and 24 Jan. 2003 had both failed.

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 14 and 15 June 2002; turn-out was 58·0%. The Czech Social Democratic Party (ČSSD) gained 70 seats with 30·2% of votes cast; the Civic Democratic Party (ODS) gained 58 with 24·5%; the Communist Party of Bohemia and Moravia (KSČM), 41 with 18·5%; and Koalice, the coalition of the Christian and Democratic Union, the Czechoslovak People's Party, the Freedom Union and the Democratic Union, 31 with 14·3%.

Elections for the Senate were held on 25 and 26 Oct. 2002. As a result Čtyřkoalice (the coalition of four) had 31 seats in the Senate; ODS, 26; ČSSD, 11; KSČM, 3; and a number of parties held either one or two seats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Václav Klaus; b. 1941 (ODS; sworn in on 7 March 2003).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Vladimír Špidla; b. 1951 (ČSSD; sworn in 12 July 2002).

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Internal Affairs: Stanislav Gross. Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Justice: Pavel Rychetský. Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs: Cyril Svoboda. Deputy Prime Minister: Petr Mareš.

Minister of Agriculture: Jaroslav Palas. Culture: Pavel Dostál. Defence: Jaroslav Tvrdík. Education: Petra Buzková. Environment: Libor Ambrozek. Finance: Bohuslav Sobotka. Health: Marie Součková. Industry and Trade: Milan Urban. Labour and Social Affairs: Zdeněk Škromach. Local Development: Pavel Němec. Transport and Communications: Milan Šimonovský. Minister Without Portfolio for Information Technology: Vladimír Mlynář.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 12 months. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$1,133m. (US$111 per capita), representing 2·2% of GDP.

Army. Strength (1999) 25,300 (15,500 conscripts). There are also paramilitary Border Guards (4,000-strong) and Internal Security Forces (1,600).

Air Force. The Air Force has a strength of some 15,400 (including air defence troops) and operates a regiment of MiG-21s and MiG-23s. The Tactical Air Corps has a regiment of L-39, Su-22 and Su-25 strike aircraft, and a helicopter regiment. There are 94 combat aircraft and 34 attack helicopters in all.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In 1974 the Federal Republic of Germany and the then Czechoslovakia annulled the Munich agreement of 1938. On 14 Feb. 1997 the Czech parliament ratified a declaration of German–Czech reconciliation, with particular reference to the Sudeten German problems.

The Czech Republic is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO, OECD, Council of Europe, OSCE, CEFTA, CERN, CEI, IOM, and the Antarctic Treaty, and is an associate member of the EU and an associate partner of the WEU. The Czech Republic became a member of NATO on 12 March 1999. In Jan. 1996 the Czech Republic applied to join the EU and is scheduled to become a member on 1 May 2004. In 2000 a visa requirement for Russians entering the country was introduced as one of the conditions for EU membership.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4·2% of GDP in 1998, industry 39·2% and services 56·6%. In 1999 an estimated 80% of economic output was produced by the private sector.

Currency. The unit of currency is the koruna (CEK) or crown of 100 haler, introduced on 8 Feb. 1993 at parity with the former Czechoslovakian koruna. Gold reserves were 443,000 troy oz in June 2002; foreign currency reserves were US$21,136m. Inflation, which reached 10·6% in 1998, was brought down to 3·9% in 2000, before rising to 4·7% in 2001. The koruna became convertible on 1 Oct. 1995. In May 1997 the koruna was devalued 10% and allowed to float. Total money supply was Kč. 583,548m. in Dec. 2001.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure in Kč. 1m.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	486,347	536,135	560,146	594,027	624,630	649,388
Expenditure	500,109	556,269	591,839	637,413	670,717	730,012

Expenditure by category, 1996: defence, 30,604; education, 64,964; health, 95,416; social security and welfare, 139,433.

VAT, introduced on 1 Jan. 1993, is 22% (reduced rate, 5%).

Performance. The Czech Republic is coming out of a recession which saw three years of negative growth in 1997, 1998 and 1999. In 2000 growth was 2·9%, rising to 3·6% in 2001. Total GDP was US$56·4bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Czech National Bank (Governor, Zdeněk Tůma), which also acts as banking supervisor and regulator. Decentralization of the banking system began in 1991, and private banks began to operate. The Commercial Bank and Investment Bank are privatized nationwide networks with a significant government holding. Specialized banks include the Czech Savings Bank and the Czech Commercial Bank (for foreign trade payments). Private banks tend to be on a regional basis, many of them agricultural banks. There are also subsidiaries of foreign banks, joint ventures with foreign participation, and branches and representative offices of foreign banks. In Nov. 1997 the cabinet agreed to sell off large stakes in three of the largest state-held banks to individual foreign investors through tenders, in preparation for European Union entry. In June 2000 the country's 4th largest bank, Československá obchodní banka (CSOB), acquired the operations of the 3rd largest bank, Investiční a Poštovní banka (IPB). The newly-formed institution became the country's largest bank, with assets of US$16·6bn. in Dec. 1999. Other major banks are Komerční banka (assets of US$10·8bn. in Dec. 1999) and Česká Spořitelna (assets of US$9·6bn.). Foreign investors own 95% of bank assets.

Foreign direct investment, which was only US$1·3bn. in 1997, more than doubled to US$2·72bn. in 1998 and rose to US$5·11bn. in 1999.

Savings deposits were Kč. 289,163m. in 1993.

A stock exchange was founded in Prague in 1992.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas the Czech Republic's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 11·5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 13·96m. kW in 1998. Production in 1998 was 61·5bn. kWh. 75% of electricity was produced by thermal power stations (mainly using brown coal), 20% was nuclear and the rest was from hydro-electric generation and autoproduction. In 2001 there were five nuclear reactors in operation. Consumption per capita in 1998 was 5,331 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Natural gas reserves in 1997 totalled 4bn. cu. metres. Production in 1996 was eight petajoules. In 1997 crude petroleum reserves were 6m. bbls.

Minerals. There are hard coal and lignite reserves (chief fields: Most, Chomutov, Kladno, Ostrava and Sokolov). Lignite production in 1997 was 57·4m. tonnes; coal production in 1996 was 16·5m. tonnes.

Agriculture. In 1997 there were 4,282,000 ha of agricultural land. In 1998 there were 3·1m. ha of arable land and 0·24m. ha of permanent crops. Approximately 24,000 ha were irrigated in 1998. 31·1% of agricultural land was state-owned, 61% co-operative, 4·4% private and 2·2% public. Agriculture employs just 5% of the workforce—the smallest proportion of any of the ex-Communist countries in eastern Europe.

A law of May 1991 returned land seized by the Communist regime to its original owners, to a maximum of 150 ha of arable to a single owner.

Main agricultural production figures, 2000 (1,000 tonnes): wheat, 4,084; sugarbeets, 2,809; barley, 1,629; potatoes, 1,476; rapeseed, 844; apples, 339; maize, 304; rye, 150.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 1·57m.; pigs, 3·69m.; sheep, 84,000; chickens, 30m. In 2000 production of meat was 715,000 tonnes; milk, 2,708,000 tonnes; eggs, 176,000 tonnes; cheese, 146,000 tonnes.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 2,630,000 ha (34% of the total land area). Timber production in 1999 was 14·20m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Ponds created for fish-farming number 21,800 and cover about 101,311 acres, the largest of them being two lakes in southern Bohemia. Fish landings in 1999 amounted to 4,190 tonnes, entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in the Czech Republic, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Český Telecom a.s. (Kč. 111bn.); ČEZ (České Energetické Závody a.s.), Kč. 45bn.; and Philip Morris CR a.s. (Kč. 23bn.), a tobacco company.

In 1996 there were 1,123,804 small private businesses (of which 15,072 were incorporated), 117,040 companies (of which 8,002 were joint-stock companies), 6,332 co-operatives and 2,185 state enterprises. Output, 1998, included: crude steel, 6·49m. tonnes; pig iron, 4·98m. tonnes; cement, 4·61m. tonnes; motor cars (1997), 358,000; beer (1997), 1,854·4m. litres.

Labour. In 1997 the economically active population numbered 5,469,500. The major areas of activity were 1·47m. persons employed in mining and manufacturing; 822,500 in trade; 743,200 in services; 470,600 in construction; 384,700 in transport and communications; 345,500 in finance; and 317,500 in public administration and defence. In Jan. 2003 the unemployment rate was 6·8%. Workers in the Czech Republic put in among the longest hours of any country in the world. In 1996, 95% of male workers and 83% of female workers worked more than 40 hours a week. The average monthly wage was Kč. 8,500 in 1996. Pay increases are regulated in firms where wages grow faster than production. Fines are levied if wages rise by more than 15% over four years. In 1996, 11,500 employees were involved in industrial disputes resulting in a loss of 16,400 working days.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

A memorandum envisaging a customs union and close economic co-operation was signed with Slovakia in Oct. 1992. An agreement of Dec. 1992 with Hungary, Poland and Slovakia abolished tariffs on raw materials and goods, where exports do not compete directly with locally produced items, and envisaged tariff reductions on agricultural and industrial goods in 1995–97.

Foreign debt was US$21,299m. in 2000. There were 10,599 joint ventures in June 1993.

Imports and Exports. Trading with EU and EFTA countries has increased significantly while trading with all post-communist states has decreased.

Trade, 2000, in US$1m. (1999 in brackets): imports f.o.b., 32,115 (28,161); exports f.o.b., 29,019 (26,259). Main export markets, 1997: Germany, 35·7%; Slovakia, 12·9%; Austria, 6·4%; Poland, 5·7%; Italy, 3·7%. Main import suppliers: Germany, 31·9%; Slovakia, 8·4%; Russia, 6·8%; Austria, 6·1%; Italy 5·5%. The EU accounts for 69% of Czech exports and 62% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 498 km of motorways, 20,653 km of highways and main roads, 34,242 km of secondary roads and 72,300 km of other roads, forming a total network of 127,693 km. Passenger cars in use in 1998 numbered 3,687,451 (358 per 1,000 inhabitants), and there were also 423,434 trucks and vans and 20,505 buses and coaches. Motorcycles and mopeds numbered 1,092,272. In 1995 passenger transport totalled 16,777m. passenger-km and freight 8,713m. tonne-km. There were 1,360 deaths as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Rail. In 1998 Czech State Railways had a route length of 9,341 km (1,435 mm gauge), of which 2,946 km were electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 7·0bn. and freight tonne-km to 19·53bn. There is a metro (44 km) and tram/light rail system (496 km) in Prague, and tram/light rail networks in Brno, Liberec, Most, Olomouc, Ostrava, Plzeň and Teplice-Trecianské.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Prague (Ruzyné), Ostrava (Mosnov) and Brno (Turany). The national carrier is Czech Airlines, which is 68·1% state-owned. In 1999 it flew 36·2m. km and carried 1,852,600 passengers (all on international flights). In 2000 Prague handled 5,527,524 passengers (5,476,067 on international flights) and 30,284 tonnes of freight, Ostrava handled 107,387 passengers and Brno 106,009 passengers.

Shipping. 4·9m. tonnes of freight were carried by inland waterways in 1993. Merchant shipping totalled 16,000 GRT in 1997.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 3,871,700 telephone main lines in use, or 377·9 for every 1,000 inhabitants, and 1·3m. PCs (122·0 per 1,000 persons). Český Telecom and České Radiokomunikace, the two main telecommunications companies, are partly privatized. The government plans to privatize Český Telecom fully by 2005. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 1·9m. in 1999 and in 1997 there were 103,000 fax machines. There were 2·69m. Internet users in June 2001.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 3,511 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The post-Communist judicial system was established in July 1991. This provides for a unified system of civil, criminal, commercial and administrative courts. Commercial courts arbitrate in disputes arising from business activities. Administrative courts examine the legality of the decisions of state institutions when appealed by citizens. In addition, there are military courts which operate under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Defence. There is a Supreme Court, and a hierarchy of courts under the Ministry of Justice at republic, region and district level. District courts are courts of first instance. Cases are usually decided by senates comprising a judge and two associate judges, though occasionally by a single judge. (Associate judges are citizens in good standing over the age of 25 who are elected for four-year terms). Regional courts are courts of first instance in more serious cases and also courts of appeal for district courts. Cases are usually decided by a senate of two judges and three associate judges, although occasionally by a single judge. There is also a Supreme Administrative Court. The Supreme Court interprets law as a guide to other courts and functions also as a court of appeal. Decisions are made by senates of three judges. Judges are appointed for life by the National Council.

There is no death penalty. In 1993, 398,505 crimes were reported, of which 31·7% were solved. The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 22,138 (215 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 2003 there were 25 registered churches and religious societies. In 1997 church membership was estimated to be: Roman Catholic, 4,020,000; Evangelical Church of the Czech Brethren, 200,000; Hussites, 180,000; Silesian Evangelicals, 30,000; Eastern Orthodox, 20,000. 4,120,000 persons were classified as atheist or non-religious, and there were 1,740,000 adherents of other religions.

Miloslav Vlk (b. 1932) was installed as Archbishop of Prague and Primate of Czechoslovakia in 1991. The national Czech church, created in 1918, took the name 'Hussite' in 1972. In 1991 it had a patriarch, five bishops and 300 pastors (40% women). In 1991 there were also around a dozen other Protestant churches, the largest being the Evangelical which unites Calvinists and Lutherans, and numbered about 200,000.

Education. Elementary education up to age 15 is compulsory. 52% of children continue their education in vocational schools and 48% move on to secondary schools.

In 1997–98 there were 9 universities, 4 technical universities, 1 university for economics, 1 for agriculture, 1 for agriculture and forestry, 1 for veterinary and pharmaceutical sciences and 1 for chemical technology. There were also 4 academies (for performing arts, music and dramatic arts, fine arts and arts, architecture and industrial design) and a higher school of teacher training. Together, these 23 higher education institutions had 165,754 students in 1997–98 and 13,216 teaching staff.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to Kč. 80,079m., or 5·4% of GNP.

The adult literacy rate in 1999 was at least 99%.

Health. In 1997 there were 39,831 doctors (one per 259 persons); and in 1995, 6,267 dentists and 4,032 pharmacists. There were 299 hospitals in 1995, with a provision of 89 beds per 10,000 population.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the independent Board for Radio and Television. Czech Television (CTV, colour by SECAM H) and Czech Radio are public corporations. The former Czechoslovakian broadcasting stations in the Czech Republic have become a second service. There is also a nationwide private TV company and two radio companies as well as local private stations. There were 5·5m. TV receivers and 8·27m. radio receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 940 cinemas; attendance for the year was 9·3m.; gross box office receipts came to Kč. 255m. and 22 full-length films were made in 1995.

Press. There were 21 daily newspapers in 1996 with a total readership of 2,620,000 (256 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were also 181 non-dailies with total readership 4,200,000 (410 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Tourism. There were 16,031,000 foreign tourists in 1999; foreign currency income from tourism was US$3,035m. Tourism accounted for 6·5% of GDP in 1996.

Libraries. In 1997 there were 1,403 public libraries, 1 National library and 4,041 Higher Education libraries. They held a combined 68,534,000 volumes for 5,473,000 registered users.

Museums and Galleries. In 2000 there were 325 museums hosting a combined 7,851,000 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Denmark was first organized as a unified state in the 10th century with a Christian monarchy. King Canute was also King of England and King of Norway in the 11th century, but the union of the three countries was soon dissolved. In 1363 a royal marriage united Denmark and Norway and these two countries joined with Sweden in 1397. Sweden separated herself in 1523 and thereafter was in conflict with Denmark until the Peace of Copenhagen in 1660. Denmark acquired approximately its present boundaries in 1815 at the end of the Napoleonic Wars. Having supported Napoleon, it was forced to cede Norway to Sweden by the Treaty of Kiel (1814); it lost its north-German territory to Prussia 1864–66 and only in 1920 was North Schleswig returned to Denmark.

After 1815 there was much pressure for a more liberal form of government in preference to the traditional absolute monarchy, and on 5 June 1849 the royal assent was given to a new constitution. A parliament, the Rigsdag, was created, divided into an upper house, the Landsting, and a lower house, the Folketing. The franchise was granted to men over 30 years old.

During the First World War (1914–18) Denmark remained neutral and in 1939, at the commencement of the Second World War, it again declared its neutrality. On this occasion, however, it was soon overwhelmed by the German forces which invaded on 9 April 1940. Throughout the war there was a considerable Danish resistance movement to which the Germans responded by imposing direct rule. Immediately after the Second World War, Denmark recognized the independence of Iceland. Home rule was granted to the Faroes in 1948 and to Greenland in 1979. Denmark became a member of the European Union on 1 Jan. 1973.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Denmark is bounded in the west by the North Sea, northwest and north by the Skagerrak and Kattegat straits (separating it from Norway and Sweden), and south by Germany. A 16-km long fixed link with Sweden was opened in July 2000 when the Øresund motorway and railway bridge between Copenhagen and Malmö was completed.

Statistics Denmark gives a projected population for 2010 of 5·51m.

In 2002 an estimated 85·2% of the population lived in urban areas. In 2001, 93·1% of the inhabitants were born in Denmark, including the Faroe Islands and Greenland.

On 1 Jan. 2002 the population of the capital, Copenhagen (comprising Copenhagen, Frederiksberg and Gentofte municipalities), was 660,066; Aarhus, 220,217; Odense, 144,636; Aalborg, 120,359; Esbjerg, 72,665; Randers, 56,102; Kolding, 54,137; Vejle, 49,339; Horsens, 49,057; Roskilde, 43,343.

Copenhagen: Bishop Absalom built his ‘Castle at Havn’ (Harbour) in 1167 and from this salt marsh on the coast of Øresund (The Sound) the capital city of Copenhagen grew. Approximately 11% of the Danish population live in Copenhagen. The image most often associated with the city, ‘The Little Mermaid’, was based on the fairy-tale by Hans Christian Andersen. The sculptor was Edvard Eriksen and the model was his wife.

The official language is Danish.

2001 rates per 1,000 population: birth, 12·2; death, 10·9. Single-parent births: 1997, 45·1%; 1998, 44·8%; 1999, 44·9%; 2000, 44·6%; 2001, 44·6%. Denmark is the only west European country in which the percentage of births out of wedlock has declined in the past 10 years. Annual population growth rate, 1990–2001, 0·4%. Suicide rate, 1990–98 (per 100,000 population) was 19·3 (men, 26·4; women, 12·5). Life expectancy at birth, 2000–01, was 74·5 years for males and 79·2 years for females. In 2001 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 2001, 4·9 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2001, 1·7 births per woman. In 2001 Denmark received 8,535 asylum applications, equivalent to 1·93 per 1,000 inhabitants. In July 2002 a controversial new immigration law was introduced in an attempt to deter potential asylum seekers.

CLIMATE

The climate is much modified by marine influences and the effect of the Gulf Stream, to give winters that may be both cold or mild and often cloudy. Summers may be warm and sunny or chilly and rainy. Generally the east is drier than the west. Long periods of calm weather are exceptional and windy conditions are common. Copenhagen, Jan. 33°F (0·5°C), July 63°F (17°C). Annual rainfall 650 mm. Esbjerg, Jan. 33°F (0·5°C), July 61°F (16°C). Annual rainfall 800 mm. In general 10% of precipitation is snow.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution is founded upon the Basic Law of 5 June 1953. The legislative power lies with the Queen and the Folketing (parliament) jointly. The executive power is vested in the monarch, who exercises authority through the ministers.

The reigning Queen is Margrethe II, b. 16 April 1940; married 10 June 1967 to Prince Henrik, b. Count de Monpezat. She succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, King Frederik IX, on 14 Jan. 1972. Offspring: Crown Prince Frederik, b. 26 May 1968; Prince Joachim, b. 7 June 1969; married 18 Nov. 1995 Alexandra Manley, b. 30 June 1964 (Offspring: Prince Nikolai William Alexander Frederik, b. 28 Aug. 1999; Prince Felix Henrik Valdemar Christian, b. 22 July 2002).

Sisters of the Queen; Princess Benedikte, b. 29 April 1944; married 3 Feb. 1968 to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg; Princess Anne-Marie, b. 30 Aug. 1946; married 18 Sept. 1964 to King Constantine of Greece.

The crown was elective from the earliest times but became hereditary by right in 1660. The direct male line of the house of Oldenburg became extinct with King Frederik VII on 15 Nov. 1863. In view of the death of the king, without direct heirs, the Great Powers signed a treaty at London on 8 May 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse-Cassel. This became law on 31 July 1853. Linked to the constitution of 5 June 1953, a new law of succession, dated 27 March 1953, has come into force, which restricts the right of succession to the descendants of King Christian X and Queen Alexandrine, and admits the sovereign's daughters to the line of succession, ranking after the sovereign's sons.

The Queen receives a tax-free annual sum of 57·0m. kroner from the state (2002).

The judicial power is with the courts. The monarch must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State, and may not assume major international obligations without the consent of the Folketing. The Folketing consists of one chamber. All men and women of Danish nationality of more than 18 years of age and permanently resident in Denmark possess the franchise, and are eligible for election to the Folketing, which is at present composed of 179 members; 135 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 17 constituencies. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 40 additional seats are divided among such parties which have not obtained sufficient returns at the constituency elections. Two members are elected for the Faroe Islands and two for Greenland. The term of the legislature is four years, but a general election may be called at any time. The Folketing convenes every year on the first Tuesday in Oct. Besides its legislative functions, every six years it appoints judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Supreme Court, form the Rigsret, a tribunal which can alone try parliamentary impeachments.

National Anthem. 'Kong Kristian stod ved højen mast' ('King Christian stood by the lofty mast'); words by J. Ewald, tune by J. E. Hartmann.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 20 Nov. 2001; turn-out was 89·3%. The Liberal Party won 56 seats, with 31·3% of votes cast (42 seats with 24% in 1998); the Social Democratic Party 52 with 29·1% (63 with 35·9%); the Danish People's Party 22 with 12·0% (13 with 7·4%); the Conservative Party 16 with 9·1% (16 with 8·9%); and the Socialist People's Party 12 with 6·4% (13 with 7·6%). The 21 remaining seats went to the Radical Left-Social Liberal Party (9); the Unity List (4); the Christian People's Party (4); and four seats to representative parties from the Faroe Islands and Greenland. The election was the first since 1920 at which a party other than the Social Democrats won the highest number of seats. In Feb. 2000, 37·4% of the seats in parliament were held by women.

European Parliament. Denmark has 16 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 49·9%. The Liberal Party won 5 seats with 23·3% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); the SD, 3 with 16·5% (Party of European Socialists); the June Movement, 3 with 16·1% (Independents for a Europe of Nations); the Radical Liberal Party, 1 with 9·1% (Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); the Conservative Party, 1 with 8·6% (European People's Party); the People's Anti-EU Movement, 1 with 7·3% (Independents for a Europe of Nations); the Socialist People's Party, 1 with 7·1% (Greens); DF (Danish People's Party), 1 with 5·8% (Union for a Europe of Nations Group).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Following the 2001 election a coalition government of the Liberal Party (V) and Conservatives (KF) was formed. The government relies on the support of the far-right, anti-immigrant Danish People's Party, although it is not represented in the cabinet. In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Anders Fogh Rasmussen; b. 1953 (V; sworn in 27 Nov. 2001).

DEFENCE

The Danish military defence is organized in accordance with 'The Act on the Aims, Tasks and Organization etc. of the Armed Forces' from 27 Feb. 2001. According to the Act the Danish Armed Forces shall (1) as an integral part of NATO in co-operation with allied forces be able to participate in the prevention of conflicts, crisis management and the defence of NATO's territory in accordance with the strategy of the Alliance; (2) be able to ascertain and repulse violations of Danish sovereignty and to exercise authority in the Danish sovereign area; (3) be able to participate in confidence-building and stability-promoting tasks as well as dialogues and co-operation in the defence-related area with countries outside NATO, with a particular emphasis on the countries of Central and Eastern Europe; (4) by military means be able to contribute to conflict prevention, peace-keeping, peace-enforcement, humanitarian and other similar tasks; (5) in accordance with the Minister of Defence's more detailed determination and negotiations with the Ministers concerned, be able to perform other tasks.

The overall organization of the Danish Armed Forces includes the Ministry of Defence (MoD), the Danish Defence Command, the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and several joint service institutions and authorities; to this should be added the Home Guard, which is an integral part of Danish military defence. The Chief of Defence (CHOD), answering to the Minister of Defence, is in full command of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force.

Denmark has a compulsory military service with mobilization based on The Constitution of 1849. This states that it is the duty of every fit man to contribute to the national defence. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$2,394m. (US$448 per capita), representing 1·5% of GDP.

Army. The Danish Army is comprised of field army formations and local defence forces. The peacetime strength of the Danish Army is approximately 15,800 (including about 5,100 conscripts and 3,300 civilians). The Army's military wartime establishment would be about 46,000. The Danish Army is organized in one division, four brigades, and two regimental combat groups, headquarters units and support elements.

Navy. The peacetime strength of the Royal Danish Navy is approximately 5,400 (including some 500 conscripts and 1,500 civilians). The naval wartime establishment would be about 7,300. The two main naval bases are located at Frederikshavn and Korsør.

Air Force. The peacetime strength of the Royal Danish Air Force is approximately 6,500 (including approximately 125 conscripts and 2,000 civilians). The wartime establishment would be about 11,600. The Royal Danish Air Force consists of Tactical Air Command Denmark and the Danish Air Materiel Command.

Home Guard (Hjemmeværnet). The overall Home Guard organization comprises the Home Guard Command, the Army Home Guard, the Naval Home Guard, the Air Force Home Guard and supporting institutions. The personnel are recruited on a voluntary basis. The personnel establishment of the Home Guard is approximately 61,000 soldiers.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In a referendum in June 1992 the electorate voted against ratifying the Maastricht Treaty for closer political union within the EU. Turn-out was 82%. 50·7% of votes were against ratification, 49·3% in favour. However, a second referendum on 18 May 1993 reversed this result, with 56·8% of votes cast in favour of ratification and 43·2% against. Turn-out was 86·2%. In a referendum held on 28 Sept. 2000 Danish voters rejected their country's entry into the common European currency, 53·2% opposing membership of the euro against 46·8% voting in favour. Turn-out was 87·6%.

Denmark gave US$1·7bn. in international aid in 2000, which at 1·06% of GNP made it the world's most generous country as a percentage of its gross national product.

Denmark is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO, OECD, the EU, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, Nordic Council, Council of the Baltic Sea States, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. On 19 Dec. 1996 Denmark acceded to the Schengen Accord of June 1990 which abolishes border controls between Denmark, Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

In 1997 services accounted for 69% of GDP, industry 27% and agriculture 4%.

According to the Berlin-based organization Transparency International, in 2002 Denmark ranked equal second behind Finland in having the least corruption in business and government of any country in the world. It received 9·5 out of 10 in a corruption perceptions index.

Overview. Consumer prices and wage rates have risen slightly faster than the EU average. The size of the public sector is falling but the state sector is one of the most efficient and transparent in the world and there is little public pressure for reducing the role of the state. The EU Commission, the IMF and the OECD all urge Denmark to lower its tax level to stimulate labour supply. Generous student grants, early retirement benefits and disability compensation have resulted in 25% of the working age population living on some form of social welfare assistance. Monetary policy for the euro area has been appropriate for the Danish economy.

Currency. The monetary unit is the Danish krone (DKK) of 100 øre. Inflation was 2·5% in 1999 and 2·8% in 2000. Foreign exchange reserves were US$22,565m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 2·14m. troy oz. In June 2000 the money supply was 387,135m. kroner.

While not participating directly in EMU, the Danish krone is pegged to the new currency in ERM-2, the successor to the exchange rate mechanism.

Budget. The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure in central government accounts for the calendar years 2000 and 2001, the approved budget figures for 2002 and the budget for 2003 (in 1,000 kroner):

	2000	2001	2002	2003
Revenue[1]	432,865,000	436,231,900	432,748,000	440,131,100
Expenditure[1]	398,012,300	409,968,300	412,310,600	424,678,100

[1]Receipts and expenditures of special government funds and expenditures on public works are included.

The 2003 budget envisaged revenue of 119,093·5m. kroner from income and property taxes and 220,857·5m. from consumer taxes. The central government debt on 31 Dec. 2001 amounted to 545,688m. kroner.

VAT is 25%.

Performance. Real GDP growth averaged 3% in the period 1995–97. For 1998 a growth rate of 2·8% was recorded, followed by 2·1% in 1999 and 3·2% in 2000. For 2001 growth of 1·8% was forecast. The current account has moved into deficit and was unlikely to return to surplus before 2000. As stated in the OECD's Economic Survey of Denmark (1998–99), assessing recent economic performance as a whole, it is evident that fiscal consolidation, monetary policy credibility and the structural reform programme have together been highly successful in creating the conditions for long-term growth. Total GDP in 2001 was US$162·8bn.

Banking and Finance. On 31 Dec. 2001 the accounts of the National Bank (Chairman of the Board of Governors, Bodil Nyboe Andersen) balanced at 295,286m. kroner. The assets included official net foreign reserves of 148,427m. kroner. The liabilities included notes and coins totalling 47,299m. kroner. On 31 Dec. 2000 there were 97 commercial banks and savings banks, with deposits of 757,625m. kroner.

The two largest commercial banks are Den Danske Bank and Unibank, which merged with MeritaNordbanken in 2000 and now forms part of the Stockholm-based Nordea group.

There is a stock exchange in Copenhagen.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Denmark's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 10·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity is 13·08m. kW. Production (2000), 36,005m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2000 was 6,707 kWh. In 2001 some 6,445 wind turbines produced 12% of output.

Oil and Gas. Oil production was (2000) 17·4m. tonnes with 184m. tonnes of proven reserves. Production of natural gas was (2001) 8·2bn. cu. metres with 94bn. cu. metres of proven reserves.

Wind. Denmark is one of the world's largest wind-power producers, with an installed capacity of 2,556 MW at the end of 2001. Denmark generates 18% of its electricity from wind, the highest proportion of any country.

Minerals. 23,000 tonnes of hard coal were produced in 1997.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounted for 11·0% of exports and 2·6% of imports in 2001. Land ownership is widely distributed. In May 2001 there were 53,489 holdings with at least 5 ha of agricultural area (or at least a production equivalent to that from 5 ha of barley). There were 10,421 small holdings (with less than 10 ha), 25,405 medium-sized holdings (10–50 ha) and 17,663 holdings with more than 50 ha. Approximately 5·0% of all agricultural land is used for organic farming. There were 25,596 agricultural workers in 1999.

In 2001 the cultivated area was (in 1,000 ha): grain, 1,537; green fodder and grass, 611; set aside, 202; root crops, 108; other crops, 186; pulses, 32; total cultivated area, 2,676.

	Area (1,000 ha)				Production (in 1,000 tonnes)
Chief crops	1998	1999	2000	2001	1998	1999	2000	2001
Wheat	680	619	619	633	4,928	4,471	4,693	4,886

Other root crops	98	86	77	69	5,606	5,042	4,498	4,048

Livestock, 2001 (in 1,000): pigs, 12,608; cattle, 1,907; sheep, 152; horses, 43; poultry, 21,237.

Production (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2001: pork and bacon, 1,836; beef, 169; milk, 4,418; cheese, 315; eggs, 77; butter, 36.

In 2000 tractors numbered 123,221 and combine harvesters 23,272.

Forestry. The area under forests in 2000 was 486,000 ha, or 11·3% of the total land area. Timber production in 2001 was 1·79m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total value of the fish caught was (in 1m. kroner): 1950, 156; 1955, 252; 1960, 376; 1965, 650; 1970, 854; 1975, 1,442; 1980, 2,888; 1985, 3,542; 1990, 3,485; 1995, 3,020; 2000, 3,141.

In 2000 the total catch was 1,421,164 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing. Denmark is the leading fishing nation in the EU.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Denmark, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Novo Nordisk A/S (116bn. kroner), a healthcare company; the A.P. Møller Group companies D/S 1912 and D/S Svendborg (54 bn. kroner and 49 bn. kroner respectively in mid-2002), which trade as the shipping company Mærsk; and TDC A/S (58bn. kroner), formerly Tele Danmark.

The following table is of gross value added by kind of activity (in 1m. kroner; 1995 constant prices):

	1999[1]	2000[1]	2001[1]

Labour. In 2001 the labour force was 2,891,388. 34·6% of the working population in 2001 worked in public and personal services; 18·0% in wholesale and retail trade, hotels and restaurants; 16·7% in manufacturing; 13·0% in financial intermediation, commerce etc.; 6·6% in transport, storage and telecommunications; 6·3% in construction; 3·8% in agriculture, fisheries and quarrying; and 0·5% in electricity, gas and water supply. In 2001, 464,098 persons were employed in manufacturing. Retirement age is 67. In Dec. 2002 the unemployment rate was 4·7%. In 2001 Denmark lost 23 working days to strikes per 1,000 employees.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2001 imports totalled 336,337·69m. kroner and exports 421,744·88m. kroner.

Imports and exports (in 1m. kroner) for calendar years:

	2000[1]		2001[1]

In 2001 other European Union member countries accounted for 65·3% of exports and 70·5% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Denmark proper had (1 Jan. 2002) 971 km of motorways, 701 km of other state roads, 9,976 km of other provincial roads and 60,240 km of commercial roads. Motor vehicles registered at 1 Jan. 2002 comprised 1,872,631 passenger cars, 36,801 trucks, 343,450 vans, 16,181 taxi cabs (including 10,085 for private hire), 13,954 buses and 78,390 motorcycles. There were 6,861 road accidents in 2001, resulting in 431 fatalities.

Rail. In 2001 there were 2,273 km of State railways of 1,435 mm gauge (624 km electrified), which carried 156m. passengers and 7·29m. tonnes of freight. There were also 495 km of private railways.

Civil Aviation. The main international airport is at Copenhagen (Kastrup), and there are also international flights from Aalborg, Aarhus, Billund and Esbjerg. The Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) resulted from the 1950 merger of the three former Scandinavian airlines.

On 1 Jan. 2001 Denmark had 1,089 aircraft with a capacity of 23,110 seats. In 2001 there were 305,636 take-offs and landings to and from abroad, and 335,392 to and from Danish airports, including local flights. Copenhagen (Kastrup) handled 9,124,447 departing passengers in 2001, Billund 849,761, Aalborg 348,390 and Aarhus 327,399.

Shipping. On 1 Jan. 2002 the merchant fleet consisted of 705 vessels (above 20 GRT) totalling 6·6m. GRT. In 2001, 40m. tonnes of cargo were unloaded and 31m. tonnes were loaded in Danish ports; traffic by passenger ships and ferries is not included.

Telecommunications. On 31 Dec. 2001 there were 3·86m. telephone subscribers (720 per 1,000 persons). On 31 Dec. 2001 there were 3·96m. mobile phone subscribers (630 per 1,000 persons). In June 2002 there were 3·37m. Internet users (62·73% of the population) and approximately 70% of Danish households had access to PCs.

Postal Services. In 2001 there were 1,083 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The lowest courts of justice are organized in 82 tribunals (byretter), where minor cases are dealt with by a single judge. The tribunal at Copenhagen has one president and 49 other judges; and Aarhus one president and 15 other judges; the other tribunals have one to 11 judges. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the two High Courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for minor cases. The Eastern High Court in Copenhagen has one president and 63 other judges; and the Western in Viborg one president and 38 other judges. From these an appeal lies to the Supreme Court in Copenhagen, composed of a president and 15 other judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 2001, 20,344 men and 2,144 women were convicted of violations of the criminal code, fines not included. In 2001 the daily average population in penal institutions was 3,236·1 (60·5 per 100,000 of national population), of whom 849·1 were on remand.

Religion. There is complete religious liberty. The state church is the Evangelical-Lutheran to which about 85% of the population belong. It is divided into ten dioceses, each with a Bishop. The Bishop together with the Chief Administrative Officer of the county make up the diocesan-governing body, responsible for all matters of ecclesiastical local finance and general administration. Bishops are appointed by the Crown after an election by the clergy and parish council members. Each diocese is divided into a number of deaneries (111 in the whole country), each with its Dean and Deanery Committee, who have certain financial powers.

Education. Education has been compulsory since 1814. The first stage of the Danish education system is the basic school (education at first level). This starts with an optional pre-school year (education preceding the first level) and continues up to and including the optional 10th year in the folkeskole (municipal primary and lower secondary school). In 2000, 671,634 pupils attended education at first level and second level, first stage. Of this group, 69,983 began their education at pre-school, while 145,075 attended grades 8 to 10. Owing to the changes in the age distribution in the population, the number of pupils attending pre-school has increased by 4% since 1999, whereas the number of students attending grades 8 to 10 (education at second level, first stage) has fallen by 19% since 1991.

Of all students leaving basic school in 1997–98, 76·1% had commenced further education after a period of three months. Almost half the students had elected to attend general upper-secondary education (general programmes of education at secondary level, second stage), while 27% opted for a vocational education at secondary level, second stage.

Education that qualifies students for education at third level is called general upper-secondary education and comprises general upper-secondary education (general programmes of education at second level, second stage), such as gymnasium (upper-secondary school), higher preparatory examination, and adult upper-secondary level courses as well as general/vocational upper secondary education at the vocational education institutions. In 2000, 63,972 students attended general upper-secondary education.

Higher education is divided into three levels: short-cycle higher education involves two years of training, sometimes practical, after completion of upper-secondary education (23,521 students in 2000); medium-cycle higher education involves two–four years of mainly theoretical training (67,122 students in 2000); long-cycle higher education requires more than four years of education, mainly theoretical, divided between a bachelors' degree and a candidate programme (44,535 students in bachelors' programmes in 2000 and 53,667 in the candidate programme). Universities, 1997–98: the University of Copenhagen (founded 1479), 29,389 students; the University of Aarhus (founded in 1928), 17,901 students; the University of Odense (founded in 1964), 9,127 students; the University of Aalborg (founded in 1974), 8,927 students; Roskilde University Centre (founded in 1972), 5,719 students. The Technical University of Denmark had 6,372 students in 1997–98. 8 engineering colleges had 6,126 students.

Other types of post-secondary education (1996–97): the Royal Veterinary and Agricultural University has 3,054 students; The Danish School of Pharmacy, 1,137 students; 7 colleges of economics, business administration and modern languages, 22,276 students; 2 schools of architecture, 2,065 students; 7 academies of music, 1,291 students; 2 schools of librarianship, 929 students; The Royal Danish School of Educational Studies, 3,024 students; 5 schools of social work, 1,733 students; The Danish School of Journalism, 998 students; 10 colleges of physical therapy, 2,768 students; 2 schools of Midwifery Education, 255 students; 2 colleges of home economics, 537 students; The School of Visual Arts, 196 students; 27 schools of nursing, 9,402 students; 3 military academies, 601 students.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 8·1% of GNP.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. In 1999 there were 15,102 doctors (284 per 100,000 persons), 4,629 dentists, 74,106 nurses and 1,032 midwives. There were 76 hospitals in 2000 (provision of 1 bed per 210 population in 1996).

In 2000 an estimated 37% of men and 34% of women smoked. The rate among women is one of the highest in the world.

Welfare. The main body of Danish social welfare legislation is consolidated in seven acts concerning: (1) public health security, (2) sick-day benefits, (3) social pensions (for early retirement and old age), (4) employment injuries insurance, (5) employment services, unemployment insurance and activation measures, (6) social assistance including assistance to handicapped, rehabilitation, child and juvenile guidance, daycare institutions, care of the aged and sick, and (7) family allowances.

Public health security, covering the entire population, provides free medical care, substantial subsidies for certain essential medicines together with some dental care, and a funeral allowance. Hospitals are primarily municipal and treatment is normally free. All employed workers are granted daily sickness allowances; others can have limited daily sickness allowances. Daily cash benefits are granted in the case of temporary incapacity because of illness, injury or childbirth to all persons in paid employment. The benefit is paid up to the rate of 100% of the average weekly earnings. There is, however, a maximum rate of 3,016 kroner a week.

Social pensions cover the entire population. Entitlement to the old-age pension at the full rate is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been ordinarily resident in Denmark for 40 years. For a shorter period of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. The basic amount of the old-age pension in Jan. 2002 was 154,392 kroner a year to married couples and 105,396 to single persons. Various supplementary allowances, depending on age and income, may be payable with the basic amount. Depending on health and income, persons aged 60–66 may apply for an early retirement pension. Persons over 67 years of age are entitled to the basic amount. The pensions to a married couple are calculated and paid to the husband and the wife separately. Early retirement pension to a disabled person is payable at ages 18–66 years, having regard to the degree of disability (physical as well as otherwise), at a rate of up to 166,212 kroner to a single person. Early retirement pensions may be subject to income regulation. The same applies to the basic amount of the old-age pension to persons aged 67–69.

Employment injuries insurance provides for disability or survivors' pensions and compensations. The scheme covers practically all employees.

Employment services are provided by regional public employment agencies. Insurance against unemployment provides daily allowances and covers about 85% of the unemployed. The unemployment insurance system is based on state subsidized insurance funds linked to the trade unions. The unemployment insurance funds had a membership of 2,170,853 in Aug. 2002.

The Social Assistance Act applies to individual benefits in contrast to the other fields of social legislation which apply to fixed benefits. Total social expenditure, including hospital and health services, statutory pensions, etc. amounted in the financial year 2001 to 370,661·9m. kroner.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Danmarks Radio is the government broadcasting station and is financed by household licence fees. Television is broadcast by Danmarks Radio and TV2 with colour programmes by PAL system. Number of licences (2001): TV, 2·16m., including 2·15m. colour sets. Denmark had 1·26m. cable TV subscribers in 1997. There were 6·02m. radio receivers and 3·1m. television receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 2001 there were 361 auditoria. Total attendance in 2001 was 11·9m.; in 2001 net box office receipts came to 517m. kroner. 24 full-length films were made in 2001.

Press. In 2001 there were 32 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1·45m. THE FAROE ISLANDS

Føroyar/Færøerne

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Norwegian province till the peace treaty of 14 Jan. 1814, the islands have been represented by two members in the Danish parliament since 1851. In 1852 they obtained an elected parliament of their own which in 1948 secured a certain degree of home-rule. The islands are not included in the EU but left EFTA together with Denmark on 31 Dec. 1972. Recently, negotiations for independence were given a push by the prospect of exploiting offshore oil and gas.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago is situated due north of Scotland, 300 km from the Shetland Islands, 675 km from Norway and 450 km from Iceland, with a total land area of 1,399 sq.

km (540 sq. miles). There are 17 inhabited islands (the main ones being Streymoy, Eysturoy, Vágoy, Suðuroy, Sandoy and Borðoy) and numerous islets, all mountainous and of volcanic origin. Population in Jan. 2000 was 45,409; density, 32 per sq. km. In 1995 an estimated 67·9% of the population lived in rural areas. The capital is Tórshavn (16,000 residents in 1999) on Streymoy.

The official languages are Faroese and Danish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate per 1,000 inhabitants (1996 est.), 13·91; death rate, 8·69. Life expectancy at birth for total population (1996 est.), 77·83.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The parliament comprises 32 members elected by proportional representation by universal suffrage at age 18. Parliament elects a government of at least three members which administers home rule. Denmark is represented in parliament by the chief administrator. A referendum was to be held on 26 May 2001 on the government's plan to move towards full sovereignty, but it was called off after the Danish prime minister at the time Poul Nyrup Rasmussen stated that subsidies would cease after four years if the islanders voted for independence.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 30 April 2002. The Union Party (SF) and the Party for People's Government (TF) each won 8 seats with 26·0% and 23·7% respectively, the Equality Party (JF) 7 seats with 20·9%, the People's Party (FF) 7 seats with 20·8%, the Self Government Party (SSF) 1 seat with 4·4%, and the Centre Party 1 seat with 4·2%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Prime Minister: Anfinn Kallsberg (FF).

Following the 1998 elections, a coalition government was formed comprising FF, TF and SSF members.

High Commissioner: Birgit Kleis (appointed 2001).

ECONOMY

Currency. Since 1940 the currency has been the Faroese króna (kr.) which remains freely interchangeable with the Danish krone.

Budget. The 1995 budget balanced at 2,805m. kr. As a result of an economic crash in the early 1990s, Denmark restructured the banks and lent money to the government to meet its international obligations. Since then the economy has improved, but 5·5bn. Danish kroner (£480m.) is still owed to the Danish state. Meanwhile, subsidies from Copenhagen are worth at least 1bn. Danish kroner a year.

Banking and Finance. The largest bank is the state-owned Føroya Banki.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 91,000 kW. Total production in 1998 was 180m. kWh, of which approximately 50% was hydro-electric. There are five hydro-electric stations at Vestmanna on Streymoy and one at Eiði on Eysturoy. Consumption per capita was 4,043 kWh in 1995.

Agriculture. Only 2% of the surface is cultivated; it is chiefly used for sheep and cattle grazing. Potatoes are grown for home consumption. Livestock (1996): sheep, 68,000; cattle, 2,000.

Fisheries. Deep-sea fishing now forms the most important sector (90%) of the economy, primarily in the 200-mile exclusive zone, but also off Greenland, Iceland, Svalbard and Newfoundland and in the Barents Sea. Total catch (1999) 358,044 tonnes, primarily cod, coalfish, redfish, mackerel, blue whiting, capelin, prawns and herring.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Exports, mainly fresh, frozen, filleted and salted fish, amounted to 2,026m. kr. in 1995; imports to 1,776m. kr. In 1995 Denmark supplied 35% of imports, Norway 16% and UK 8%; exports were mainly to UK (26%), Denmark (22%), Germany (10%), France (8%) and Spain (5%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995 there were 458 km of highways, 11,528 passenger cars and 2,901 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. The airport is on Vágoy, from which there are regular services to Aberdeen, Billund, Copenhagen, Reykjavík and Glasgow (in summer).

Shipping. The chief port is Tórshavn, with smaller ports at Klaksvik, Vestmanna, Skálafjørður, Tvøroyri, Vágur and Fuglafjørður. In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 103,000 GRT, including oil tankers 2,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 25,000 telephone main lines in use (554·5 for every 1,000 inhabitants). There were 10,300 mobile phone subscribers in Dec. 1999 and 3,000 Internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 80% are Evangelical Lutherans and 20% are Plymouth Brethren, or belong to small communities of Roman Catholics, Pentecostal, Adventists, Jehovah's Witnesses and Bahai.

Education. In 1994–95 there were 4,898 primary and 3,041 secondary school pupils with 554 teachers.

Health. In 1994 there were 90 doctors, 38 dentists, 10 pharmacists, 17 midwives and 355 nursing personnel. In 1994 there were three hospitals with 297 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio and TV broadcasting (colour by PAL) are provided by Utvarp Føroya and Sjónvarp Føroya respectively. In 1997 there were 26,000 radio and 15,000 TV receivers registered.

Press. In 1996 there was one daily newspaper with a circulation of 6,000.

DJIBOUTI

Jumhouriyya Djibouti
(Republic of Djibouti)

Capital: Djibouti
Population estimate, 2000: 632,000
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 2,377
HDI/world rank: 0·445/149

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At a referendum held on 19 March 1967, 60% of the electorate voted for continued association with France rather than independence. France affirmed that the Territory of the Afars and the Issas was destined for independence but no date was fixed. Independence as the Republic of Djibouti was achieved on 27 June 1977. Afar rebels in the north, belonging to the Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy (FRUD), signed a 'Peace and National Reconciliation Agreement' with the government on 26 Dec. 1994, envisaging the formation of a national coalition government, the redrafting of the electoral roll and the integration of FRUD militants into the armed forces and civil service.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Djibouti is in effect a city-state surrounded by a semi-desert hinterland. It is bounded in the northwest by Eritrea, northeast by the Gulf of Aden, southeast by Somalia and southwest by Ethiopia. The area is 23,200 sq. km (8,958 sq. miles). The population was estimated in 1995 at 601,000 (83·0% urban in 1999), of whom about half were Somali (Issa, Gadaboursi and Issaq), 35% Afar, and some Europeans (mainly French) and Arabs. 1995 density, 26 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 679,000.

There are five administrative districts (areas in sq. km): Ali-Sabieh (2,600); Dikhil (7,800); Djibouti (600); Obock (5,700); Tadjoura (7,300). The capital is Djibouti (1999 population, 523,000).

French and Arabic are official languages; Somali and Afar are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 23,500; deaths, 9,500. Birth rate in 1995, 38·8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 15·6. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·2%. Infant mortality, 1999, 104 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life, 1999: 42·6 years for men, 45·3 for women. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Conditions are hot throughout the year, with very little rain. Djibouti, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 96°F (35·6°C). Annual rainfall 5" (130 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After a referendum at which turn-out was 70%, a new constitution was approved on 4 Sept. 1992 by 96·63% of votes cast, which permits the existence of up to four political parties. Parties are required to maintain an ethnic balance in their membership. The President is directly elected for a renewable six-year term. Parliament is a 65-member Chamber of Deputies elected for five-year terms.

National Anthem. 'Hinjinne u sara kaca' ('Arise with strength'); words by A. Elmi, tune by A. Robleh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential election on 9 April 1999 Ismail Omar Guelleh won with 74·1% of the votes cast against one opponent.

At the parliamentary elections of 10 Jan. 2003—the first free multi-party general elections since independence—the Union for a Presidential Majority, a coalition of RPP (People's Rally for Progress) and FRUD (Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy), won all 65 seats with 62·2% of votes cast, against 36·9% for the Union for a Democratic Alternative. Turn-out was 48%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Ismail Omar Guelleh; b. 1947 (RPP; sworn in 8 May 1999).

In March 2003 the Council of Ministers comprised:

Population estimate, 2000: 72,000
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 5,880
HDI/world rank: 0·779/61

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Dominica was discovered by Columbus on Sunday (hence the island's name), 3 Nov. 1493. But it was French settlers who began to create plantations on the island. Recognizing the island's strategic position, control was contested between the British and French until it was awarded to the British in 1783. In March 1967 Dominica became an Associated State of the UK, with internal self-government, and an independent republic as the Commonwealth of Dominica on 3 Nov. 1978.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Dominica is an island in the Windward group of the West Indies situated between Martinique and Guadeloupe. It has an area of 748·5 sq. km (289·5 sq. miles) and a provisional population at the 2001 census of 71,727, down from 71,794 in 1991 (mainly as a result of overseas migration). The population density in 2001 was 95·8 per sq. km.

In 1998, 70·3% of the population were urban. The chief town, Roseau, had 24,000 inhabitants in 1999.

The population is mainly of African and mixed origins, with small white and Asian minorities. There is a Carib settlement of about 500, almost entirely of mixed blood.

The official language is English, although 95% of the population speak a French Creole.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

República Dominicana

Capital: Santo Domingo
Population estimate, 2000: 8·37m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 6,033
HDI/world rank: 0·727/94

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Columbus discovered the island of Santo Domingo, which he called La Isla Española, and which for a time was also known as Hispaniola. The city of Santo Domingo, founded by his brother, Bartholomew, in 1496, is the oldest city in the Americas. The western third of the island—now the Republic of Haiti—was later occupied and colonized by the French, to whom the Spanish colony of Santo Domingo was also ceded in 1795. In 1808 the Dominican population routed the French at the battle of Palo Hincado. Eventually, with the aid of a British naval squadron, the French were forced to return the colony to Spanish rule, from which it declared its independence in 1821. It was invaded and held by the Haitians from 1822 to 1844, when the Dominican Republic was founded and a constitution adopted.

Thereafter the rule was dictatorship interspersed with brief democratic interludes. Between 1916 and 1924 the country was under US military occupation. From 1930 until his assassination in 1961, Rafael Trujillo was one of Latin America's legendary dictators. The conservative pro-American Joaquin Balaguer was president from 1966 to 1978. In 1986 Balaguer returned to power at the head of the Socialist Christian Reform Party, leading the way to economic reforms. But there was violent opposition to spending cuts and general austerity. The 1996 elections brought in a reforming government pledged to act against corruption.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hispaniola, the western division forming the Republic of Haiti. The frontier with Haiti is closed. The area is 48,671 sq. km (18,800 sq. miles). The area and 1993 census populations of the 29 provinces and National District (Santo Domingo area) were:

	Area (in sq. km)	Population
